The Whippoorwill's Call.

By AUGUSTA LARNED.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

As the sound of his horse's hoofs clicked on the stony path that led from the barn down to the road Elsie dropped into Uncle Si's old armchair, and putting her head down on her arms as she rested them on the table sobbed like a child. Paul, too, hid in the old shop with his tame creatures around him, had heard the sounds of departure; had spied, in fact, on Arthur's movements through a knothole in the barn, and now, finding the coast clear, he crept round to the kitchen door, where an old white hen had led her downy brood to pick up the dinner crumbs. Elsie's eyes were suspiciously red, and he knew in a moment she had been crying.

"Did that fellow say anything insulting to you, Elsie? If he did, I will punch his head for him."

"I can take care of myself," said Elsie, drawing herself up with girlish dignity, "and will not allow you to lay a finger on him. If you pick a quarrel with him, I am not sure I shall ever speak to you again."

"You have got to let me take care of you, Elsie, for you have promised yourself to me. I am just spoiling for a fight, but I will try to keep my hands off him. Now, I'll tell you what my plan is. I am going to hide up in the woods in the old abandoned hut left by the charcoal burners. It is just over the crest of the hill in a thicket of hemlocks that hides it from sight, and not so far away but I can hear you if you come up to the top of the lane and make the whippoorwill call I taught you a long time ago. Now, try, Elsie, and let me see if you have forgotten how."

Elsie circled her mouth with her two hands, and standing erect let out the long, melancholy cry of the whippoorwill.

"Excellent," said Paul, smiling on her. "I shall know that call if I am fast asleep at any hour of the day or night. I shall know that you need me, and I shall come quickly."

"You can stay here until tomorrow morning," said Elsie as she began to take the butter out of the churn, placing it in a large wooden bowl. "He has business in Littlefield that may keep him until tomorrow noon, and possibly he may stay away all day."

"Good!" said Paul as he flung himself down in Uncle Si's great chair. "I wouldn't wish him to break his neck or even his leg, but if anything should happen to detain him a week or a year don't expect me to cry."

"I am so glad to have a little talk with you, Paul," said Elsie, kneading away at the golden butter with her little brown hands, "for last night I had a very strange dream. I suppose it came from the thoughts I have had in my mind about Uncle Si."

Standing erect, Elsie let out the long, melancholy cry of the whippoorwill.

"What was the dream?" said Paul, leaning back in his chair and studying Elsie's face with his bright blue eyes.

"It was last night, Paul, and the moon was shining brightly into my room as I lay down in bed. I heard old Whitefoot stamping in his stall, and Hiram Meade's dog barking down by the pond, and the clock striking 11. Then I fell asleep, but was suddenly awakened with a start, for it seemed to me that I heard Uncle Si knocking briskly on the wall at the head of his bed with his oak stick to call me, just as he used to when he wanted me to come and turn him over in the night or to shift the pillows. I sat up in bed and listened, with my heart beating violently, but all was still. Only the leaves on the old poplar tree were whispering together. I lay down again and was off in a minute, but suddenly it seemed to me that I was broad awake. I thought I had put my little shawl around me, and had taken a candle in my hand, and had stepped across the hall into Uncle Si's room. He was up and dressed in his brown clothes, with his broad brimmed hat on his head. I saw him plain as day.

"A wide streak of moonlight lay on the floor, coming in at the west window. His back was toward me, and he was standing in the corner of the room opposite the bed, where the mourning piece hangs on the wall, and, just as plainly as I see you now, I saw him open a closet door and take out a bundle of papers. He turned and looked at me and smiled, and then I awoke and found myself in bed, but very cold and with my teeth chattering. The dream made such an impression on my mind I got up, frightened as I was, lighted my lamp and went into Uncle Si's room. The bed was white and smooth, just as I had made it up after the funeral, and his oak stick stood by the headboard. A broad streak of moonlight lay across the floor exactly as I had seen it in my dream. Uncle Si's brown clothes and his hat hung on the wall, the same he had worn in the dream. I shivered, half expecting to see Uncle Si standing there in the corner, with the closet door open. But the place was empty and vacant. There was no closet there, only a solid wall. I passed my hand over it. It was smoothly papered with old blue paper sprigged with red, and I crept to bed again wondering what it could all mean."

"It was the action of your own mind," said Paul decidedly, who thought he knew a good deal about visioned appearances and dreams. "It was all made out of your thoughts about Uncle Si, impressed as pictures on the sensitive brain tissue"——

"But I never had thought of that closet," said Elsie as she made up the butter into firm yellow balls and stamped them with a rose stamp. "I could not have imagined the closet because I know well enough there never was a closet in that place."

"That was queer," said Paul musingly as he leaned back in the chair and half closed his eyes, "but things get badly mixed in dreams."

"It did not seem like a dream, but like something I had witnessed with my bodily eyes; but, of course, I know there never was a closet in that corner of Uncle Si's room. I remember a good many years ago a red worsted curtain hung across that end to keep Uncle Si's Sunday clothes from the dust. But that was long since taken away. I can't help thinking that Uncle Si wanted to say something to me that weighed on his mind when he was dying."

Paul moved uneasily in his chair. He had no belief in such things. "Don't you think," said he, "you ought to speak to the old ladies and try to make them understand the situation. It will come on them like a clap of thunder when they learn they are to be turned out."

Elsie washed her hands and smoothed her apron with a sigh. "I will do my best to make them understand," said she, "but they are so old and childish and deaf and blind and so set in their own ideas I don't know how it is ever to be done. However, as you think best, Paul, I will go and speak to them and you watch over that third hive of bees on the hill, for I think from the way they have been buzzing and hanging outside the hive they will soon swarm."

"Why don't you let them get off to the woods," said Paul, going to the window. "They belong now to that fellow, and I should not put myself out for him."

Elsie looked at Paul with a glance of rather severe disapproval. "I'm not doing it for him," she said. "I am doing it for Uncle Si, out of respect for his feelings. He taught me how to save swarms, and I can handle them without fear. I am sure, if Uncle Si knows what is taking place here on the farm, he would be sorry to have his swarm lost. Maybe he is not quite as dead as you think he is."

Paul whistled softly to himself. He could not argue against Elsie's sentiment, and she left the kitchen, and passing through the little hall opened the door of the room where the old ladies lived. The low afternoon sun was streaming through the western window, and the white curtains were stirred by a gentle breeze. Aunt Hetty, soothed by the warmth of the room, the buzzing of flies, the purring of the cats, had let the knitting work drop out of her fingers, and with her cap somewhat awry was indulging in a gentle doze as she sat with her head resting against the stuffed chintz back of her high rocking chair. Miss Prissy, however, was awake and winding yarn from a large gray skein stretched over her knee.

Elsie took a seat in a low chair by Miss Prissy's side, her good side both for hearing and seeing, for Miss Prissy was quicker of apprehension and altogether of a livelier mind than poor Miss Hetty, who was much sunk into herself unless roused by some unusual excitement. Now Elsie took the pretty old hand that gallants had kissed in days long gone by, and gently pressing it she said:

"Did Mr. Hapgood speak to you of his plans, Aunt Prissy, before he went away?"

"No, dear," returned Miss Prissy, who was in a dream of self satisfaction over the praise Arthur had adroitly bestowed on her old family relics, "he said nothing at all about them. He is a remarkably civil young man, with very good manners, considering how he is connected. Sister and I both thought so. We showed him the governor's autographs, and the shoe buckles, and the snuffbox, and he was very much impressed."

"But don't you know," said Elsie, with a slight touch of impatience in her voice, "that poor Uncle Si left no will, and that the farm and this house and everything in it belongs to Arthur Hapgood?" She had raised her voice slightly and applied her lips to Miss Prissy's ear, that her words might find their way the more easily to the very penetralia of the old woman's understanding.

"Of course," said Miss Prissy cheerfully as she resumed her winding, "I suppose the property will go in the end to brother Simon's own people. It is but right it should. But things will go on just as they are while we live. Brother Simon told us so often. 'Girls,' he said—he always called us girls—'there will never be any change while you live,' and brother Simon was a man of his word."

"Indeed he was," piped up Miss Hetty, who had just waked out of her nap and caught the last words of her sister's confident speech. "Brother Simon never went back of what he promised, though he was a plain man with no pretensions to breeding. His word was as good as his bond," and the old sisters wagged their heads in unison in perfect childlike confidence.

"But have you any writing to show your claim on the place?" asked Elsie—"any scratch of Uncle Si's pen?"

"Writing?" repeated Miss Prissy in calm contempt. "Why should we need a writing when we have brother Simon's word? Elsie, you are a perfect child."

"But," cried Elsie in despair, hitching nearer and shouting into the old woman's ear, "don't you know he means to tear down this house?"

Miss Prissy had made a trumpet with her hand, and now she laughed a little weak, foolish laugh.

"Why, he wouldn't tear down this house for the world, child. He has a veneration for everything that is old. You ought to have heard him talk about our chairs and tables, and the governor's picture, and the Hingham coat of arms!"

"He has dismissed Paul Rayno," screamed Elsie, quite in despair, feeling that she would like to shake the poor old woman into some comprehension of the precipice on which she stood.

"Dismissed Paul? What do you say, child? There must have been some misunderstanding. We will speak to him about it, Elsie. Paul is a good boy, and we wish him to stay with us, and you, too, little Elsie. We look upon you both as brother Simon's legacy to us. Never fear; we will protect you." And she gently patted Elsie's back as if soothing a fretful child.

Just at that moment Paul put his head in at the door and shouted, "The bees are swarming!"

A VAIN BETRAYAL.

HOW THE NEW YORK CUSTOM HOUSE INSPECTORS MADE $4,000.

How an Old German's Effort to Smuggle In a Lot of Diamonds Was Frustrated. Conditions Which the Son-in-law Informer Had Not the Nerve to Face.

"Years ago," said an old secret service man, "I was in business in New York. Men at my trade as a detective hear all sorts of stories, some of them long after the knowledge will do any good. Nevertheless now and then these yarns form curious bits of history. Not long ago a gentleman from the inside was telling me a bit of the unwritten history of the New York custom house. What he related took place over 20 years ago—in fact, not long after the war. He was explaining how money was made inside the customs lines.

"'A friend of mine,' said that gentleman, 'was one of the inspectors in the New York office. His business was to go aboard boats, ransack the trunks of passengers and overhaul the effects of immigrants. In other words, he was to look out for smugglers. This was in 1869.

"'One day his chief came to him and said: "You meet such and such a ship when she comes in. She's at the Narrows now. Take with you one of the women of our office, because you will have to search a German girl who is aboard the boat. This girl will be with her father, whose name is Schmidt, and who comes from Bremen. He has nothing on him or about him that is wrong, but the girl has a whole handful of diamonds done up in her back hair. You have the inspectress who is with you to search the girl and have her finally find the diamonds in her chignon. Don't bungle the job nor go straight to the diamonds as if you knew where they were. I want the discovery to come along in a regular way and nothing done to indicate that we have had any pointer as to the folks and their diamonds."

"'There was no time,' continued my friend, 'to ask any questions as to how my chief knew of the whereabouts of this plant of diamonds. I took the woman inspector, as he directed me, and we went aboard the boat and quickly found our passengers from Bremen. This Schmidt had been further described to me by my chief as having only one eye, so he was easy to pick out. I searched the old man in a careful way, and the woman with me took the girl into a stateroom, and after fooling away ten minutes in a pretended search finally discovered the diamonds in her waterfall, as the peculiar coiffure of that day was termed.

"'Of course we took possession of the diamonds and put the old German and his daughter under arrest. It was a sore blow, and they wailed and wept and beat their bosoms mightily.

"'As we always did at that time, we contented ourselves with confiscating the diamonds. Of course I made a bluff. I told the old man and his daughter they were under arrest, but that I would let them go for the night. The next day they must return at 10 o'clock to the customs office, when we would send them to the penitentiary for anywhere from 10 to 20 years.

"'This last, I say, was only a bluff, however, and the people never came back, as we had every reason to suppose would be the case. We had no time to try criminals and usually contented ourselves with confiscating the goods which they attempted to smuggle, and as these were generally very valuable it was punishment enough.

"'When I found my chief, I told him I had the diamonds all safe enough and had given the old German and his daughter such a scare that none of us need expect to see either of them again. Then I asked him how he knew so accurately about the diamonds.

"'My chief told me that his information came from the son-in-law of the old man. It seems that the old German had two daughters. The elder one was married and already in this country, living in New York city. The younger girl, when she and her father got ready to come over, wrote the other how they had turned all of their property into diamonds, which could be bought at a low figure in Europe, and on account of the tariff sold for double the money here, and how she proposed to conceal them in her hair in order to smuggle them ashore.

"'Naturally the elder sister told her husband, and it was he who informed my chief. What was his object? Why, the infernal rascal expected to get 45 per cent of the proceeds of the confiscated property when sold, being the amount which, in that day, went to the informer.

"'I couldn't for the life of me see where my chief and myself and the other boys in the custom house were going to get any part of the proceeds of these diamonds. They were of course reported to the office as confiscated, and their sale would duly take place, but with the reptile son-in-law getting 45 per cent as informer and Uncle Sam the other 55 per cent as confiscator, I couldn't see where we'd get in. But my chief, who was a very intelligent man, bade me be of good cheer. He had a plan which he was confident would work.

"'At one of the sales which the custom house periodically holds the old German's diamonds were duly hawked off. We had not seen either him or his daughter since I turned them loose on the wharf, although we knew from the son-in-law that they were at the house in New York, very much overcome with their loss and the fear of being punished as smugglers, a fear which he very much fed, by the way, by telling them some awful stories of what happened to people who were caught trying to beat the custom house. The diamonds, when sold, if I remember correctly, were taken by Tiffany and brought between $9,600 and $10,000. The share due the informer was over $4,000.

"'The amount due to the government was turned over, and shortly following the faithless son-in-law came skulking in to get his share of the money.

"'"Certainly," replied my chief, "you're the informer, and the money's yours. There is something over $4,000 coming to you. But I propose to have witnesses when it is paid over. I will pay it to you any time when you bring your wife and her sister and your father-in-law with you to see it done. I intend that they shall witness this transaction and learn just exactly what sort of a cur you are."

"'The son-in-law informer crept away and never returned. He couldn't face the conditions which made his obtaining the money possible. It was not lost, however. You may be sure it went to good people, who knew how to use it.'"—Washington Post.

Clown was at first a tattooed person. In Britain and France the country people retained the habit of tattooing or of painting the faces in imitation of tattooing long after it had been abandoned in the cities.

A Dangerous Cut.

A piece of bark proved quite disastrous to Nathan R. Browell, of the New York College of Pharmacy. He was walking along when some one threw a piece of bark at him, striking him in the eye and cutting the eye ball. The doctors hope, with care, to save the eyesight of the young man. Mr. Browell is spending the winter with his uncle, S. G. Smith, of Central avenue.

A New Building.

Work has been commenced on a brick building to be erected by Boice & Runyon on Park avenue just above Van Zandt's feed store. The cellar is now being dug. The building will be occupied by Curtis M. Thorpe, dealer in mantels and tiling, who is now located at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Operation On His Eyes.

Dr. Gidney, the veternary surgeon, of Orchard place, had another operation performed on his eyes at the hospital yesterday afternoon.

—Ground was broken today at the corner of Duer street and Park place for the erection of a parsonage for Rev. George Hauser, pastor of the German Reformed church.

—A sumptuous dinner was served at Emery's Hotel, Scotch Plains, last evening. About forty Plainfielders were present. Jubilee singers entertained the guests after the dinner.

—The Saturday Sewing School of Reform Hall, will meet at 2 o'clock sharp, as there will be a woman's prayer meeting at 3:30 p. m. led by Miss Sara May. Every one invited.

—A large audience listened to the concert at Bethel chapel last evening and greatly enjoyed it. The programme consisted of vocal selections, most of which were old negro melodies, guitar and a cornet solo.

THE VILLAGE OF CANA.

A Pen Picture of Life There During the Lifetime of Christ.

Cana was a thriving village on the great highway through the hills west of the sea of Galilee. From the main road a number of narrow, irregular streets wandered up and along a low hillside and were bordered by houses that were built mostly of stone. The inhabitants had need for thrift and industry if it were only because of the tax gatherers, for Herod Antipas was building palaces, fortresses and cities. He was living in magnificence, as were his many officers. All the people of his dominions paid taxes and bribes to him and them.

While the consequences were often painful enough, there were no signs of actual poverty in the vicinity of the well. It stood several paces in front of a dwelling, two stories in height, which seemed somewhat better than its neighbors. The porch along its lower story was thickly clad with vines, and from under these the girl had come to bring her jar to the well. A Jewish maiden of nearly 15 was accounted a full grown woman, and the slightness of her graceful figure did not interfere with an air of maturity which her present state of mind much increased. Her simple dress, that became her so well, was of good materials.

Ranged on either side of the well were six large, cumbrous looking water pots of stoneware, partly filled, for the convenience of any person wishing to perform the foot or hand ablutions required by the exacting ceremonial law of the Jews.

The vine clad porch was a pleasant place. It was provided with wooden benches, and on one of these sat a man who seemed to consider himself a person of importance. Every movement, and even his attitude when sitting still, might be said to accord with a conviction that he, Rabbi Isaac Ben Nassur, was the wisest, the most learned man in Cana.

He was very tall as well as broad and heavy, and his thick, gray beard came down to the voluminous sash that was folded around his waist. His eyebrows were black and projecting, his nose was prominent, his black eyes were piercing. He was dressed, as became a rabbi, or any other highly respectable Jew, in a long linen tunic with sleeves, that was belted by the sash. Over this he wore a long, loosely flowing robe, called an "abba," also of linen. Around his shoulders, with ends falling in front, was a broad white woolen scarf, with narrow bars of red and purple and blue, and with blue tassels at the corners of each of its two ends. This was the "tallith" and was worn as a reminder that the wearer must remember all the commandments of the law and faithfully perform them.—"The Swordmaker's Sons," by William O. Stoddard, in St. Nicholas.

Pasteur's Talent as a Painter.

Those who knew Pasteur best have always averred that if he had abandoned chemistry he would have made a great name for himself as a painter. Bonnat, to whom Pasteur sat for that portrait which has been so frequently reproduced in black and white, is said to have held this opinion. A few years ago the private apartments of the Rue d'Ulm were adorned with a picture of Pasteur's mother by her famous son which went far to justify the contention of Pasteur's friends. It reminded one of the work of Bastien Lepage. At Arvois, where Pasteur spent his childhood and youth, there are about a dozen sketches in various houses of Pasteur's companions in his earlier life, all of which show talent. Though science claimed Pasteur as her own, a good deal of that leisure which he so grudgingly allowed himself was spent in the galleries of the Luxembourg close to his home, and he showed special interest in the work of his countryman and protege, Auguste Pointelin. But for Pasteur, Pointelin would have found the beginning of his career beset with innumerable difficulties. The great savant made him come to Paris and held out a helping hand. "I have had a triple reward," said Pasteur. "I have helped a good fellow and a great artist, and I have experienced the purest of pleasure in the contemplation of his pictures. He has brought the Jura, as it were, to my very door."—Saturday Review.

Bought Them Back.

A New York man bought his own despised horse back at an auction sale not many moons ago, and now a tale to match it comes from London. A man with a passion for good bargains in secondhand furniture failed to secure a wife who shared it. When the house got so full of relics that there was no room for more, she selected a few pieces which she thought would not be missed and sent them to an auction room to be sold. The evening of the day of the sale came, and with it a return of all those pieces and a few more. Her husband had happened in on the sale and, not recognizing his own furniture, bought it over again at a bargain which made the terms of the original purchase sink out of sight.

Where Her Butter Came From.

There is a woman here—quite a prominent woman, too—who has lots of money and a kind heart. That's really about all she has to recommend her. She gave a luncheon recently. The cream for the berries and the butter were so unusually good that one of her guests remarked it.

"Yes," said the hostess complacently, "we have all our milk and butter sent in from our farm every day. They make butter out there—have a regular creamatory, you know."—Washington Post.

Casey; Treasurer, J. J. Praed; Chaplain, John Allen; Senior woodward, Jas. McClinton; Junior woodward, Albert Jaeger; Junior beadle, T. Fitzgerald; Representatives to High Court, Dr. H. H. Lowrie, John Allen, John Risberg, Chas. Jaeger; Finance Committee, John Allen, H. Hansen; Trustees, H. H. Lowrie, D. Nuttal.

Installation services by the High Chief Ranger the second Friday in January, when a collation and reception will be tendered the High Court officers.

MR. MARTINE FAVORS ANNEXATION.

The Farmer Orator Thinks Borough and City Should Be Governed Together.

In answer to a question of a Press reporter as to what he thought of the North Plainfield annexation project Mr. Martine said he felt that every advantage to North Plainfield demanded annexation. "Our interests are identical," said he. "It would advance the progress and welfare of both city and borough. Sanitary questions demand this. Extension of streets would advance the interests of both."

What!

One of the most trying problems of this holiday season is to know what to give to our loved ones, and yet, this problem is easy of solution if you look around and learn what is new in the line of gifts: we are sure that if you take a look at Collier's extensive display of novelties your only puzzle will then be—"which of these many appropriate, beautiful and yet not costly souvenirs shall I select?" 101 Park avenue.

Getting Their Manual Ready.

The letter carriers of this city are working hard to make their yearly manual more interesting this year than its predecessors. Besides giving all postal information, it will contain a history of the Plainfield post office, from its origin to the present date. The manual will be issued about January 1st.

An Unexpected Tumble.

While skating on Hyde's pond last evening, Arthur Horton of Westervelt avenue, did not notice a large hole in the ice and skated into it. He caught hold of the ice as he was going down and Alvah Davis, of East Fifth street, speedily came to the rescue and pulled him out.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Louise Snediker, of Grove street, is home from Brooklyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Miller, of East Third street, are entertaining their nephew, Will J. Irvin, of the "Tin the Tinker" company.

Rev. Mr. James, of the New England conference, is visiting Prof. C. A. Leveridge. He was formerly a member of the Newark conference.

Miss Frances Landon Cochran, of Lexington, Va., returned home yesterday after a very pleasant visit with her sister, Mrs. Millard F. Elderton, of Front and Washington streets.

Door Mats Disappearing.

The residents of West Seventh and Eighth streets have been troubled lately by the sudden disappearance of their door mats. The evening is the time of the theft and, in several cases, the mats have been stolen almost directly before their owners.

CAMPAIGN OF CHRISTIANS.

SERIAL OF REVIVAL MEETINGS TO BE COMMENCED TOMORROW.

The Meeting to Be Led by Col. Hadley, Miss Sara Wray and Mr. Leo—Particular Effort to Save Men From Drink.

The meetings which begin tomorrow morning in the Trinity Reformed church and the Park Avenue Baptist church, at the former of which Col. Hadley will speak; the latter to be addressed by Miss Sara Wray, singing evangelist, and Mr. Leo, "The Christian Athlete," will continue throughout the entire week, except Wednesday night, at Reform Hall, and it is earnestly requested by Col. Hadley and those associated with him in this work, that the Christian people tomorrow in their various churches should earnestly pray for God's blessing upon all these meetings, which will be devoted entirely to the subject of reaching the non-church-goer, especially the habitue of the saloon.

The meetings are in no sense temperance meetings, but are rescue meetings such as are held in St. Bartholomew's Rescue Mission and in the old Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, New York, every night in the year.

The rescue-one plan, by which every Christian who will, is asked to pray for and as far as possible, to save one person during the year 1896, will be fully explained and urged.

Miss Wray, the singing evangelist, who assists Col. Wray at these meetings is famous throughout the world as the leading woman in such work. Her audiences are usually limited to the size of the hall, and it is believed that those who come to the mass-meeting tomorrow afternoon in Reform Hall at 3 o'clock, must come early in order to secure seats. The public is especially notified that this meeting is for both sexes.

Ministers, who have at heart the salvation of the drunkard or non-church-goer, are earnestly and cordially invited to be present upon the platform at the meeting tomorrow afternoon with their wives.

Col. Hadley will lead the meeting and make a statement of the plans and objects of the campaign, which will then formally open. These meetings, however, are largely for the purpose of instructing Christians, who may volunteer each to save one during the year, how to do the work and to receive suggestions from them, so that at the close of the campaign, December 22d, some feasible methods, agreeable to all the Christians, may be adopted by which the numerous saloons in Plainfield may be offset to some extent by the work of the Christian people who, with God's help, may be able to counteract the evil influences of drink.

The meeting Sunday evening will be held in Grace Episcopal church, Rev. Dean Rodman, rector, at which Col. Hadley, Miss Wray and Mr. Leo will speak.

The Monday night meeting, which will be held in Reform Hall, will be led by Col. Hadley, assisted by Miss Wray and Mr. Leo and several of the converts of the famous St. Bartholomew's Rescue Mission, who will come for the occasion and give their thrilling testimonies.

On Tuesday night, Miss Wray will relate incidents from her thrilling experience in the slums of New York and London, especially in the dreaded Whitechapel district, where she labored for seven months.

Further announcements will appear in the public press from time to time. The book known as "Rescue Songs," which is used at all the Rescue Missions throughout the country, will be used at these meetings in Reform Hall.

Owing to the fact that Wednesday evening is the prayer meeting night in the churches, there will be no meeting held at Reform Hall on that evening, since it is one of the iron-clad rules of the Christian Men's Union, under whose auspices these meetings are held, not to interfere with any of the regular meetings of the churches, the object of the Union being to strengthen and recruit for the churches, instead of interfering with them or set up a counter-attraction.

The prayer meetings throughout the city are earnestly requested, next Wednesday night, to pray for God's blessing upon these meetings and that the result may mean the salvation of many of the slaves to drink in Plainfield and vicinity.

—The public schools will open Jan. 2d, instead of Jan. 6th, as reported yesterday.

—There will be Danish Lutheran services at St. Peter's German Lutheran church on Monday evening at 8 o'clock. Rev. P. Nielson, of Philadelphia, will preach.

RESPECTED MAN DEAD.

Peter Wyckoff, Seventy Years Old, Passed Away Last Night.

After a lingering illness, Peter Wyckoff passed quietly away last evening at his residence on Park avenue. The cause of his death was heart trouble. Mr. Wyckoff was in his seventieth year and has resided in Plainfield for a long time. He has been residing with his wife and two unmarried daughters. A married daughter, Mrs. L. Ross, lives on LaGrande avenue, and at her home the funeral will be held Monday morning at 11 o'clock. Robert Wyckoff, his son, is the salesman at the Columbia Cycle Academy, and lives on Arlington avenue. Burt Wyckoff, another son, is engaged in business in New York, but makes his home in Plainfield. Mr. Wyckoff was a prominent member of the Park Avenue Baptist church. A large circle of friends mourn his death.

UNION COUNTY BIBLE SOCIETY.

The Thirty-seventh Annual Meeting to be Held at Cranford.

The Union County Bible Society will hold its thirty-seventh annual meeting on Tuesday evening next in the First Presbyterian church at Cranford. Each church in the county is expected and urged to be represented by its pastor and one or more delegates.

The exercises will include reports of the officers, and address of welcome by Rev. George F. Greene, and Dr. Glazebrook will respond. The greetings from the American Bible Society will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Moffett, and there will be an address by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., of Plainfield.

Death of Ernest VanZandt.

The many friends of Ernest VanZaudt will be shocked to learn of his death which occurred this morning at his home on Crescent avenue. He went to Texas about two years ago for his health, and returned early last summer, and since then he has gradually grown worse. Death resulted from consumption. The notice of the funeral will be given later.

A Consulting Engineer.

Charles K. Moore, who is well known in this city, and who lately was deputy street commissioner to Col. Waring, of New York city, is one of the consulting engineers of the New York and New Jersey bridge that is soon to be built across the Hudson river.

An Expert Among Horses.

A trained horse, the property of Mr. Greenwood, which has been ill for the last three months at Roberts' stable, has gradually recovered, thanks to the wonderful care of its owner, and has been shoed the first time since its illness.

Park Club Festivities.

The house committee of the Park Club has arranged for an informal entertainment to be given at the club house on Wednesday evening, December 18th. It will consist of music and recitations by the members.

Express Lines Consolidated.

Captain William Hand & Son have purchased the business of Rickert, the city expressman, and began today running a city express in connection with their other business.

A Generous Act.

The ton of coal, which was voted Abner Bartlett at the Firemen's Fair last evening, was donated by Mr. Bartlett to the Children's Home.

—Pargiter invites your inspection of iron toys, games, ect., for holiday gifts.

—Two extra stoves have been placed in Reform Hall, and it promises to be comfortable at the Hadley meetings tomorrow.

A Christmas day shoot will take place on the Climax Club grounds between William Terry and John Benner. The match will be twenty-five live birds at $25 a side. There will be sweepstakes before and after the match.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

HING COMES; TOI GOES.

Almon-Eyed Denizens Go and Come From Their Birthplace.

Hing, direct from Hong Kong, is in town. Hing has been here before and is no less a personage than the Celestial proprietor of the North Avenue laundry. He is in partnership with Sing Toi, his cousin, in the laundry business, and fourteen months ago left for the land of his birthplace to renew acquaintances with his almond-eyed relatives. During his absence Sing Toi faithfully looked after the business of washing and ironing, and now that Hing is here, Toi has left on a visit to China. Toi took $2,000 with him for pocket-money.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

Brief Bits of News Gathered From All Over the City and Borough.

—The work of putting the roof on the Jackson building is progressing favorably.

—Rev. D. Blow, of Waverly, Va., preached last night at the Liberty Street mission.

—Miss Beatrice Doane Craig will give lessons in painting at her studio at 815 College place.

—D. M. Moore, of East Fifth street, has just received a lightwood sleigh, the only one in Plainfield.

—A reception is to be given at the residence of W. E. Lowe, of Park avenue, on Thursday, Dec. 19th.

—The evidence of your own eyes cannot be resisted when you see the new holiday goods at Peck's.

—George Squires and family, of Harmony street, have moved to the Lewis flat on Somerset street.

—All dolls to be repaired before Christmas must be at Rand's tonight. None will be received next week.

—Dontcher wanter getcher room papered for Christmas? Goter Edward Love, the North avenue wall paper dealer and decorator.

—Hedden's livery stable is the only one in town that is fully equipped with cork shoes for its horses, all ready for snow and ice.

—No nicer Christmas present can be made than a piece of furniture. Packer has any quantity of stock suitable for these purposes.

—After the week of prayer which is the first week in January, the local Christian Endeavor societies will continue the meetings for a time.

—Wm. Canning and family, of Stone street, willl move about Dec. 15th to Kingston, N. Y., where Mr. Canning will engage in business.

—Jacob Bird died yesterday, aged forty-six years. His funeral will be held from his late residence on Dunham place tomorrow at 12:15 o'clock.

—The Asbestos Club are enlarging the photographs of their deceased members, which will be placed in their rooms in the Dime Savings Bank building.

—Children's fair for the benefit of the Sunshine Mission Band will be held in the parlors of the Crescent Avenue church, December 16th, afternoon and evening.

—The proposed loop of the Lehigh Valley railroad will start from New Market instead of South Plainfield, running parallel with Sherman avenue, this city, and connecting with the main line at Marconnier.

—The Alfred Dolge all-wool felt shoes and slippers have a world wide reputation. They are worth their weight in gold, these cold nights. Doane & Edsall are the selling agents for this city and vicinity.

—Justice Newcorn has issued a summons in the contract case of Tobin against Chandler, which is returnable December 18th. The case of Hand against Branambian, on contract, was adjourned yesterday for one week.

—Application has been made to Justice Newcorn for a jury to try the right of property in the case of David Angerbauer against Walter Hetfield, on execution. Justice Newcorn set Tuesday, Dec. 17th, at two o'clock, as the time to try the case.

—Fred Adams, of Netherwood, left his wheel standing in front of the Salvation Army Hall last night for several hours. About 12 o'clock he started to go home, but he walked, for someone had stolen his wheel. Adams notified the police of the disappearance of his wheel and was informed that it was waiting for him at the station house. It had been found under the Madison avenue bridge by one of the officers, where it had been left by some unknown practical joker.

A LOVING CUP PRESENTED.

MADAME MENZELLI BARTLETT GIVEN A TOKEN OF ESTEEM.

The Firemen Show Appreciation of Her Efforts to Make Their Fair a Success—The Event Closes This Evening.

The last night of the Firemen's Fair is here and those who have not attended so far should make a special effort to attend this evening. The programme is one of the best of the week and includes the popular firemen's drill.

The attendance at the fair last evening was not as large as it should have been, but was about the same as on Thursday night.

The programme included another recitation by Will J. Irvin. After the curtain had been drawn on the last tableau in the firemen's drill it was suddenly opened again ere the dancers had left their positions and Auguste L. Saltzman led Madame Bartlett to the front of the stage where, with a few well-chosen words, he presented her with a handsome silver loving cup bearing the inscription "Presented to Mrs. A Bartlett by the firemen of Plainfield, N. J, December, 1895," and while she bowed her thanks the crowd wildly applauded and the curtain was again drawn.

During the performance a woman in the audience feinted and was taken to her home on LaGrande avenue in a hack.

A ton of coal, which was presented to the fair by George O. Stevens, was voted upon last evening. It was voted to Abner Bartlett, who presented it to the Children's Home.

The programme this evening will include the flower dance and several other new dancers.

Ex Chief Hendricks, the present Mayor of New Haven, Conn., has written a letter to ex Chief Saltzman, containing an order for a gilt bronze statuette of the "American Fireman" for the fair. Mr. Saltzman brought the statuette this morning and placed it on exhibition at the fair where it will be sold.

The attendance at the Firemen's Fair during the week has been essentially an American throng. All classes were represented, the humble laborer was there with his family while quite a number of the Four Hundred of this city have been in attendance.

More About the Skulls.

To the Editor of the Daily Press:—Noticing the skull which was unearthed on the Stelle farm and on exhibition in your window, marked, "Supposed to be of an Indian," will say, while not up in skullology, that I've noticed many skulls known to be Indians, and they all distinctly showed the sutures, or lines of juncture, which are not visible on the skull referred to, and in way of a solution to the query about these skulls and skeletons, will say I remember the late W. B. T. Lane, my father-in-law, telling that the original size of the farm was over 7000 acres, extending from Dog Corners on the east, to Long pond, where French's mill now is in Plainfield, on the west, included all the properties between these points, the original deeds being dated 1684, and also of his showing me the location of the houses used for the slaves, and of him saying the burying ground for the slaves was near the house occupied by Manning Stelle's farmer, which is, as I understand, about where the bones have been found, so being sure they are not Indians, I think they are the remains of the negroes. Percy C. Ohl.

Republican Hypocrisy.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Well, Elmore D. Moffett, Deputy County Clerk, is to be bounced. This is the honesty of the Republican party on the Civil Service question. The partisan Republican majority in this county have insisted upon this. Their demand is to be heeded. An old soldier, who defended his country's cause, must be removed to give place to a partisan of Republican faith, for he has rallied the boys on election day. And all this in face of the fact that the Republicans are preaching Civil Service Reform. Well, well, I find no fault with your partisanship, but stop and hush your pretenses. J. E. Martine.

A Peanut Spree.

A very pleasant stag party was given last Thursday evening by Arthur B. Crane, of East Second street. The evening passed very pleasantly with music and games and closed with a very amusing "peanut spree."

Chancellor McGill's Appointment.

Lawyer J. P. D. Kirch, who was admitted to the bar about a month ago, has just received from Chancellor McGill the appointment of Master in Chancery of New Jersey.

THE SOLONS DINE.

Jolly Time at Councilman Fisk's Dinner to Fellow Officers.

The members of the outgoing and of the incoming city council were delightfully entertained at the Union County Country Club house last evening by Councilman Charles J. Fisk. The party met at seven o'clock and ate, talked and smoked until after eleven. The dinner was an excellent one and was greatly enjoyed by the guests. Max Wiertz, who prepared the dinner, was greatly complimented on all sides.

After the dinner, short informal speeches were made and a very pleasant evening was spent by all. All the invited guests were present except Councilman Vincent L. Frazee. Besides the genial host there were present:

Mayor Alex. Gilbert, Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh, Councilmen Stephen A. Ginna, J. B. Dumont, E. N. Erickson, William H. Moore, George H. Frost, H. M. Stockton, E. H. Bird, W. A. Westphal and W.G.E. See, and Councilmen-elect Tolles, E. T. Barrows and Harold Serrell.

A Christmas Gift.

Parents and others should consider what a suitable and valuable Christmas gift to a young man or a boy would be a full educational or junior membership in the Y. M. C. A., worth $8, $5, and $3. respectively. The privileges of the educational membership are as follows: Admission to the educational classes and star courses of entertainments. The full membership includes all the above, and full use of the physical department, including gymnasium, bowling alleys, shower baths, swimming pool, etc., all under the direction of a competent physical director. The junior membership includes use of the physical department two days in the week and other privileges. Membership tickets issued now will be good until January 1st, 1897. If desired, tickets may be purchased on the installment plan.

High School Notes.

The Class of '96 held a meeting Thursday afternoon and finished all their work in preparation for the class spread which will be held on Wednesday evening, December 18th, at 7 o'clock, in the Franklin School building.

Yesterday morning Stephen A. Krom delivered a very instructive lecture on "Bacterology."

The Geometry Class have finished the first book of geometry and will enter upon the second book Monday morning.

The Cicero Class have finished the second oration of that great orator and are now studying the third.

The Kappa Delta Phi meeting was held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 in the High School building.

The meeting was called to order by Charles M. Dolliver, vice-president of the society. After the regular business had been properly attended to, the society entered into a very pleasing programme, entitled "The Great Cities of the World." Some very interesting descriptions of the large and beautiful cities of the globe were given by members of the society. There will be no meeting of the society next week.

Syphon of Vichy Explodes.

A man started from Leggett's drug store this morning on his wheel carrying a syphon of vichy. In attempting to cross the car tracks his wheel slipped, causing him to fall. The syphon exploded, startling passers-by very much. Street Cleaner McFadden was on hand, as usual, and removed the glass, thus removing the possibility of cyclers cutting their tires.

Relief Corps Officers.

The Woman's Relief Corps, No. 10, Auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., met last evening and elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Mrs. Isaac Brokaw; senior vice-president, Mrs. Andrew Cox; junior vice-president, Mrs. W. R. Mattox; chaplain, Mrs. Corwin; conductor, Mrs. I. L. McVoy; guard, Mrs. Tee Nise.

—The handsome residence of Ezra Loomis on Mountain avenue is being beautified by a fresh coat of paint.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it. Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

MRS. HOWELL IS FREE

Jury Acquits Her of the Charge of Murder.

Only an Hour in Reaching a Decision and the Announcement Received with Applause—No Emotion Betrayed by the Prisoner—Miss Knapp's Murder Still a Mystery.

Wellsboro, Pa., Dec. 14.—Mrs. Chauncey Howell is a free woman, the jury having rendered a verdict, at exactly 6 o'clock last night, of not guilty. There was great applause in the court room when the verdict was reached. The prisoner was immediately discharged from custody. Mrs. Howell manifested no emotion at the outcome of the trial beyond what the close observer was able to discove in the filling of her eyes with tears when the verdict was announced. Two sweeps of her handkerchief to her eyes and that was all; the tears were cleared away. She then stood up and drew a long sigh of relief, and her brothers and two sisters and children clustered about her, while a few friends gathered near to congratulate her upon the outcome of her twenty days' trial. She shook hands with those who offered their hands, in a dignified manner, and when some of the jurymen asked to be presented to her she met them in the same quiet, modest way. Mrs. Powell went back to the jail and remained there long enough to pack up a few of her belongings, and then with her family, she went to the home of her counsel, Major Herrick, where she had been invited to take tea and remain during the night. The jury went out at about 5 o'clock, and in just one hour returned with a verdict. So the murder of Miss Elizabeth Knapp is still a mystery.

SHATTERED WITH DYNAMITE.

Desperate Attempt To Break Jail at Springfield, Ill.

Sprinfield, Ill., Dec. 14.—At 6:30 last evening a desperate attempt at jail-breaking was made by the prisoners in the county jail. James Conway, alias Conners, alias Seckle, alias Seckloran, a desperate criminal, who has been indicted by the United States grand jury for robbing the postoffice at Riggston, Ill., and John Rogers, who is known as "Blackey," a criminal who is being held pending the action of the United States grand jury for robbing the postoffice at Rockport, Ill., sawed the iron railing which joins the south wall of the jail, charged it with dynamite, and then ignited the fuse. The explosion was terrific and was heard a mile away. After the explosion they snatched up the iron pipe and began beating against the wall to knock out the remaining wall, as the dynamite failed to do its work. None of the prisoners escaped. The damage to the jail will be very heavy, as almost every bar, brick and stone was loosened by the explosion.

STRANDED AT TERRE HAUTE.

The Digby Bell Opera Company Goes to Pieces—Members Penniless.

Terre Haute, Ind., Dec. 14.—The Digby Bell opera company of eighty persons went to pieces here last night. The company had barely made its way out of a disastrous trip in the south when it ran against a court injunction at Evansville secured by the author of the operetta "Nancy Lee." He had received no royalties. Freed of this they came here last Saturday night and then laid off until last night, when a benefit performance was given, but the mire of debt was too great. Bell and his wife, Laura Joyce, left last night for New York. The members of the company are absolutely penniless.

ANTI-TOXINE IN MONTREAL.

Death Rate 16 Per Cent. Without the Treatment and 11 Per Cent. With.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The report of the Protestant section of the Contagious Diseases hospital for the last six months gives the result of the anti-toxine treatment as follows: Out of thirty-four cases of diphtheria treated with anti-toxine there were four deaths, while out of twelve which did not receive the treatment two deaths occurred, thus showing the death-rate to be 16 per cent. without the treatment and 11 per cent. with it.

$25,000 for American University.

Washington, Dec. 14.—The board of trustees of the American university has been informed that Mrs. Frances H. Root of Buffalo, N. Y., has bequeathed $25,000 to the new university. Mrs. Root was the mother of Mrs. Bishop Hurst of this city.

An African Traveler Decorated.

London, Dec. 14.—The Daily News says that Prime Minister Salisbury has bestowed the post of queen's messenger on A. M. Jephson, who was one of the Stanley expedition that brought Emin Pasha from lake Nyanza.

Gale at Vineyard Haven.

Vineyard Haven, Mass., Dec. 14.—A northeast gale prevailed here all last night. The steamer Manhattan and all other vessels before reported here are still in port.

Gen. Miles at Fort Monroe.

Fort Monroe, Va., Dec. 14.—Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commanding the army, arrived here last night from the south. He will inspect the artillery school and post.

Parliament To Meet Feb. 11.

London, Dec. 14.—The Official Gazette contains a notice summoning parliament to meet on Feb. 11.

TO EXCLUDE IMMIGRANTS.

Mr. Walker Speaks on His Bill in the House.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Mr. Walker of Massachusetts, speaking of the bill he has introduced in the house to amend the immigration laws, said "the feeling was unaminous that a certain class of immigrants should be excluded. We have a very large population from Canada of French origin, many of them, and also a large population from Ireland, who make good citizens; and their children, in the first and second generations, are Americans of Americans in their skill and patriotism. We do not wish to exclude the friends and relatives of these people whom they have left behind and who wish to come to the United States. This is also true of the Germans and Scandinavians. Therefore I have drawn my bill to amend existing provisions of law which prohibit the coming here of disreputable people with the additional provision that only persons born on this continent or who can speak the English language, or read and write some other language, shall be permitted to enter this country. These provisions, added to the existing law, would prevent the coming to this country of that class of people to which American and foreign-born citizens object.

TWO CHINAMEN ILL-TREATED.

Taken to Court in Chains, Though They Were Only Witnesses.

Portland, Ore., Dec. 14.—Chan Fee Law and Sin Tong, two Chinese witnesses held to appear against Sin You, an alleged Chinese murderer, were taken before a coroner's jury recently through the public streets in irons. The Chinese here are very indignant over what they deem to be an outrage, and say they will endeavor, through the Chinese minister at Washington, to secure damage from the government. The two men were not criminals, simply witnesses to a murder in which one of their countrymen shot another. To insure their appearance when wanted, they were held at the central police station under bonds. On Monday the sheriff, who had possession of the prisoner and the two witnesses, took them to the coroner's office heavily chained.

THE NEWFOUNDLAND STORM.

Reports Tell of Widespread Devastation—Steamers Overdue.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 14.—Reports of Thursday's storm show widespread devastation. The whole coast was swept. Full details will not be received for some days yet. The steamer Ulunda, from Liverpool, arrived last night. She encountered the most frightful weather ever experienced by any of her officers. It was feared that she would never survive. The steamer Carthaginian has not yet arrived, and the steamer Portia is over three days from Halifax, the longest passage she has ever made. It is feared that she is damaged.

Terrell Praises Turkish Troops.

London, Dec. 14.—A dispatch from Constantinople says that Hon. A. W. Terrell, the American minister, will make a report in which he will highly praise the battalion of troops which recently protected the missionaries and their property at Aintab. Mr. Terrell recently wrote a note to the porte commending the caimakam of Aintab for his heroic and humane conduct during the disorders there.

Cretans Greatly Excited.

Athens, Dec. 14.—The Cretans here are greatly excited by the reports of fighting between the Christians and Turkish troops on the island of Crete, but they advise the Christians on the island to be calm, hoping that the sultan will redress their grievances.

Situation in Syria.

Vienna, Dec. 14.—The Politische Correspondenz says that the situation in Syria has greatly improved since the arrival of reinforcements at Beyrout and Damascus. A severe commercial crisis prevails throughout Syria.

For Indeterminate Sentences.

Trenton, Dec. 14.—The commissioners appointed by Gov. Werts to select a site and provide for the erection of a reformatory will urge the adoption of the indeterminate sentence system.

BUSINESS IS VERY QUIET

Indications of Activity After the Holidays.

Prices of Manufactured Products Slowly Receding from the High Water Mark of Speculation—Retail Trade More Active Since Wintry Weather Arrived.

New York, Dec. 14.—Dun's weekly review of the state of trade will to-day say: It has been a very quiet week without any disturbance. Prices of manufactured products slowly recede from the high water mark of speculation, and no material increase in demand is now expected until after the holidays, but there is general confidence that greater activity will then appear, and that works which have stopped a little earlier than usual will again be called into operation. Clearings are 10.4 per cent. more than last year, though 16.8 per cent. less than in September. Distribution of products makes little progress, retail trade being more active since wintry weather came, and the decline in the wholesale prices, though general, has at no point been so great as to cause alarm. The nearness of the new year has strong supporting influence.

Boots and Shoes and Men's Goods.

The shoe manufacturer is getting rather more new business, mainly in cheaper goods, by a reduction in prices which has averaged nearly 4 per cent. since the last week of November. For split shoes, men's and women's, there is considerable demand, and for brogans, while orders for wax and kip boots are more frequent, though small. Shipments for December are 12½ per cent. more than last year. The demand for leather is a little better, with prices averaging 2 per cent. lower for the week, though unchanged as to hemlock sole. In men's goods there is little business as yet, at about last year's prices in low grades, and the largest manufacturer of Clay worsteds has reduced prices to last year's since the opening. Business in cotton has not gained, and print cloths are lower at 3⅛ cents, while a few more reductions are noted in prices of other goods. The manufacturer has had a highly prosperous season, though dull now.

Iron Market Dull.

Iron furnaces in blast Dec. 1 turned out 216,797 tons weekly, against 217,306 Nov. 1, with increase of 8,000 tons in stocks unsold. But actual consumption is much smaller than the output at present, and prices again decline. Finished products are weak and sell below quotations, though quoted prices average at about half of one per cent. lower for the week. Heavy orders by the Rockefeller interest for plates and other material to build vessels for transportation of Mesabi ore next year have strengthened the market somewhat, but the demand in the east is very light, and most of the works have shortened force considerably, while at Pittsburg structural forms, plates, sheets and pipe are in light demand, and some bar mills in the valley have shut down for want of orders. Higher prices are expected for ore and coke, and it is believe that this will cause an upward turn in iron.

An Abundance of Wheat.

Wheat continues to come forward so rapidly that past estimates of yield, whether official or unofficial, are discredited. Western receipts were 6,003,404 bushels for the week, against 3,403,611 last year. Failures for the first week of December show liabilities of $3,104,831, against $4,036,866 last year and $4,761,409 in 1893; in manufacturing $1,157,760, against $1,427,415 last year and $1,730,044 in 1893, and in trading $1,892,821, against $2,401,451 last year and $2,591,365 in 1893. Failures for the week have been 338 in the United States against 349 last year, and 54 in Canada against 40 last year.

OLD EMPLOYES MUST GO.

Ohio's Governor-elect Wishes To Give Others a Show.

Springfield, O., Dec. 14.—In an interview Gov.-elect Bushnell said: "I shall not make public any further appointments for a few days, and then only my executive force. I will not announce the remaining appointments until after my inauguration on January 13. I think the present officeholders appointed by Gov. McKinley will upon due consideration see the point that it will be impossible for me to retain them when there are other good faithful men that deserve to be remembered. They have had two terms of office, and now others would like to occupy their places. It is only just and right that they should."

Scribner's for Christmas

Frank R. Stockton has a Christmas love story, which bears a characteristic title—"The Staying Power of Sir Rohan." Its illustrations are quaint and exactly suitable. A thrilling detective story by C. E. Carryll, entitled "The River Syndicate," perhaps equalling Sherlock Holmes' best work. Illustrated.

Joel Chandler Harris' characteristic tale of a faithful slave—"The Colonel's Nigger-Dog." Other Christmas stories are, "A White Blot," by Henry VanDyke, a poetic and imaginative tale of a picture (illustrated); "Heroism of Landers," by A. S. Pier (illustrated), and "Hopper's Old Man," by R. C. V. Meyers.

Sentimental Tommy,

By J. M. Barrie.

Those who have read (and who has not?) "The Little Minister" and "A Window in Thrums" can anticipate what Mr. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" will be. It is to be the chief serial in Scribner's for 1896, beginning in the January number.

Two Years for $4.50.

Scribner's Magazine costs $3 a year, but new subscribers can have all the numbers for 1895 and a year's subscription for 18 6 for $4.50.

Scribner's Magazine is going to be better next year ever. It is going to have new features. Its publishers are not satisfied with past successes. It purposes to more thoroughly deserve the confidence of the reading public. The History Serial—"Last Quarter Century in the United States"—will be continued. Just now it is approaching a period of absorbing interest to the present generation—the first administration of President Cleveland.

Scribner's Magazine ought to get careful consideration as a Christmas gift. The $4.50 offer ought to get double circulation.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

THE CUBAN REVOLUTION.

Oliver Said To Have Routed Gomez and Maceo.

Insurgents Enter the Town of Siguanca Followed by the Government Troops—President Palma To Join Queseda in Washington When a Legation Will Be Established.

Havana, Dec. 14.—A dispatch from Santa Clara says that the troops commanded by Gen. Oliver have met and routed the insurgent forces commanded by Maximo Gomez and Antonio Maceo at Manacas. The dispatch also says that the insurgents have entered the town of Siguanca, not far from the battlefield, and that the column of troops commanded by Gen. Oliver and two other columns are in pursuit. No further details of the fighting are given.

Insurgents Fire on a Train.

Madrid, Dec. 14.—The minister of works, Senor Bosch has resigned from the cabinet to clear himself of charges connected with the municipal scandals over the misgovernment of Madrid. A dispatch from Havana states that a reconnoitering train was fired into by insurgents yesterday, who compelled the train to stop. A passenger train following ran into the reconnoitering train, killing one soldier and injuring six. The Spanish government will devote 257,000 pesetas subscribed by Spaniards in Mexico towards meeting the expenses of the Cuban campaign to the purchase of a cruiser, which will be sent to Cuban waters.

Legation Opened in Washington.

Washington, Dec. 14.—President Palma, head of the Cuban movement in the United States, will join Mr. Quesada here about next Monday. They will establish a legation, and Mr. Palma will exercise the functions of minister for the Cubans, with Mr. Quesada as secretary of legation. It is probable that efforts will be made to establish relations with the government authorities here. In diplomatic circles here it is said that the crisis in Spain will have no effect on the policy of Spain toward Cuba, nor in any way affect diplomatic or other general questions.

DENIED USE OF THE MAILS.

A Florida Woman Who Was Reaping a Harvest Through Fraud.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Postmaster-General Wilson has denied the privileges of the mails to Mrs. F. A. Warner of Jacksonville, Fla., for conducting a fraudulent business. Mrs. Warner adopted a novel method, by which she reaped considerable profit. She advertised in the newspapers throughout the country glowing descriptions of flowers, shells, etc., to be obtained in Florida during the winter months, and stated that upon receipt of a certain amount in postage stamps she would send these articles. She failed to keep her part of the contract. The postmaster at Jacksonville reported to the department that her mail averaged a thousand letters a day, each containing probably from ten to twenty-five cents in stamps.

ANOTHER GALE AT NANTUCKET.

People Still Without Mails and the Yeast Cake Famine Unbroken.

Nantucket, Mass., Dec. 14.—The northeast gale of the past three days had just begun to die out when the second storm, now coming up the Atlantic coast, has caused it to spring up with increased violence. Although Nantucketers are anxious to read about Tuesday's elections, and the usual yeast cake famine prevails, every one is enjoying himself. A ship's rail and other wreckage floated past last night.

A Knife Found in Lambert's Cell.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 14.—Sheriff Barrett for the third time has placed the death watch over the murderer Theodore Lambert who is to be hanged next Thursday. In searching the jail night before last Constable Gardiner found a blade of a table knife hidden between the stones in the wall of the cell. It is supposed that Lambert intended to commit suicide.

Joseph B. Hall Dead.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 14.—Joseph B. Hall, of the Daily Advertiser, died yesterday of pneumonia. He was a son of the late George Hall, who was with Horace Greeley on the New York Tribune in 1840 and ran off the issues of the famous "Log Cabin" from the Tribune press in the memorable Tippecanoe campaign.

Modern Language Association

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 14.—The thirteenth annual meeting of the Modern Language association of America will be held at Yale university on Dec. 26, 27 and 28. The presiding officer will be James Morgan Hart of Cornell university, president of the executive council.

War Minister To Resign.

Brussels, Dec. 14.—Gen. Brassine, minister of war, will resign his office, owing to the fact that his colleagues refuse to discuss at the present session of parliament a bill to reorganize the army.

TROUBLE BREWING AT ALEPPO

Troops Only Can Prevent a Massacre of Christians.

Constantinople, Dec. 14.—Dispatches from Aleppo predict that a massacre of Christians there is certain unless the powers intervene to prevent it. Troops are hemming in the Armenians at Zeitoun, where the latter some time ago revolted against the Turks and captured the fortifications. The object of the Turks is to starve the Armenians into surrendering. No fighting has been reported. The Armenians are holding out because they place no reliance upon the official promises that security will be granted them if they surrender. The sultan has dismissed his first chamberlain, Hadji Ali Bey, and has appointed Izzet Bey to succeed him. Emin Bey, the second chamberlain, has been ordered to explain charges that have been made against him by ex-Grand Vizier Said Pasha. The chief equerry, Izzet Pasha, recently addressed a long report to the sultan on the deplorable situation in the country. His majesty refused to read the report. Since then Izzet Pasha has tendered his resignation five times to the sultan, but his majesty has each time refused to accept. Nevertheless, Izzet Pasha persists in his intention to retire from office.

TO MEET JANUARY 16.

Call for Democratic Executive Committee To Select Convention City.

Philadelphia, Dec. 14.—Chairman W. F. Harrity has issued a call for a meeting of the democratic national committee, to be held at the Arlington hotel, Washington, on Thursday, January 16, 1896, at 11 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of fixing the time and place for the meeting of the democratic national convention of 1896 and for the transaction of other business. The resolution offered by Gen. P. A. Collins of Massachusetts in the democratic national convention of 1892, requesting the democratic national committee to provide accommodations only for the delegates, the alternates, the members of the democratic national committee and the members of the press, will be acted upon. The resolution is now in the hands of a sub-committee of the national committee, composed of William F. Harrity of Pennsylvania, who is chairman of the committee; Stanley B. Smalley of Vermont, Arthur P. Gorman of Maryland, Ben T. Cable of Illinois, and E. C. Wall of Wisconsin.

HUNTING TERRITORIES.

A Legislative Provision for Erecting and Leasing Them in Quebec.

Montreal, Dec. 14.—The Quebec legislature has passed resolutions authorizing the government to erect hunting territories out of such lands in the province as are remote from settlement and unfit for cultivation, the territories not to exceed 400 square miles each, to be leased at an annual rent of not less than $1 per mile for periods of not more than ten years. Persons not domiciled in the province shall not be permitted to hunt therin unless provided with a permit, and shall also pay for permits authorizing them to take eggs of birds, etc., for scientific purposes.

RIOTING IN MADAGASCAR.

Results of the Anti-European Feeling Among the Natives.

London, Dec. 14.—Advices received here from Antananarivo, capital of the island of Madagascar, under date of Nov. 30, confirm the report that an anti-European mob, numbering 6,000 persons, destroyed the mission station at Ramainandra. The Rev. Mr. MacMahon, a missionary, and his family escaped a few hours before the rioting took place. All the Europeans residing in the country districts were ordered to the capital, and 600 French troops were sent to subdue them.

THE POWERS TO JAPAN.

The Evacuation of Corea Peremptorially Demanded.

London, Dec. 14.—The Standard publishes a dispatch from Berlin saying that the powers have addressed a note to Japan peremptorially demanding the evacuation of Corea by the Japanese.

Illinois Railway Statistics.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 14.—The report of the Illinois railroad and warehouse commission for the current year shows that the total railway capital of the roads entering and operating in this state is $2,265,703,169, or $60.39 a mile. The average dividends amounted to 5½ per cent. Gross earnings were $59,699,102, and net $21,707,544. The net earnings in 1894 were $23,749,972.

Pennsylvania's Finances.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 14.—At the state treasury a summary of the receipts and payments for the fiscal year ending November 30 has just been completed. The total receipts were $11,746,411.10 as against $12,322,734.57 last year. There was referred to the sinking fund $360,371.50, leaving $11,386,039.60 for general expenses of the commonwealth.

Port Arthur Again Chinese.

London, Dec. 14.—The Globe publishes a dispatch furnished by a news agency saying that the Chinese officials resumed possession of Port Arthur on Dec. 14, Gen. Sum, on behalf of China, taking over the station from the Japanese officers.

Wesleyan's Football Captain.

Middletown, Conn., Dec. 14.—Robert Wilson of Middletown, a member of the class of '97, has been elected captain of the Wesleyan university football eleven for the coming year.

School Superintendent at Chicopee.

Chicopee, Mass., Dec. 14.—The school committee last night elected Giles A. Stuart of Lewiston, Me., superintendent of schools at a salary of $1,800.

WHERE IS CLEVELAND?

Worst Storm of the Season Now Raging at Hatteras.

The Whereabouts of the Violet, with the Presidential Party on Board, Unknown—May Have To Land at Elizabeth City and Travel to Norfolk by Rail.

Norfolk, Va., Dec. 14. — President Cleveland and his party have succeeded in thoroughly losing themselves to the outside world, for no one knew where he was this morning. The Violet was to have left Hatteras yesterday, but whether she did so or not was unknown this morning, for a gale has been raging over the North Carolina sounds and the wires between Kitty Hawk and Hatteras are down. At Kitty Hawk the wind blew at a rate of sixty-eight miles an hour and was probably much heavier at Hatteras. No vessels have arrived from North Carolina waters, and it is the opinion of sailing masters that the Violet could not have made the run up Pemlico sound under the heavy winds prevailing. Another obstacle presents the president on his return. The water in the Albemarle and Chesapeake canal, through which the Violet must pass on her way to Norfolk, now measures only five and a half feet, the lowest ever known in that connecting link between Virginia and North Carolina. It is probable that the presidential party will have to go to Elizabeth City, N. C., and come to Norfolk by rail. The storm to-day around Hatteras is the worst so far this season.

THIRTEEN CLUB DINE.

Walk Under a Stepladder and Do Other "Unlucky" Things.

New York, Dec. 14.—The Thirteen club sat down to an Irish dinner last night at 8:13 o'clock in the dining room of the Stevens house. The meal was served by Lansing G. Roake of the hotel, because his name contains thirteen letters. There were five tables, at each of which sat thirteen diners, while at an overflow table sat Capt. William Fowler, the founder of the club and its custodian. On entering the dining room every member was compelled to walk under a stepladder and as he sat down and lifted his napkin from the table he upset his salt cellar. Col. Fred C. Hamilton, the club's chief ruler, presided. Citizen George Francis Train was on his right. After the covers were removed a social time was enjoyed, during which songs were sung and speeches made. Citizen Train, who, as usual on such occasions, was bedecked with an immense bouquet and a broad red sash, made the principal address in the "brogue."

JUDGE THURMAN'S FUNERAL.

Business Generally Suspended in Columbus and the Courts Closed.

Columbus, O., Dec. 14.—There is a general suspension of business here today as a mark of respect to ex-Senator Thurman, whose funeral occurs at 10 o'clock. He was universally loved and respected by the citizens of Columbus, who, without regard to party, vie in showing respect to his memory. All the courts, federal, state and county, adjourned yesterday afternoon to Monday, and public officers generally gave notice that their offices would be closed to-day. The state officers met in the office of Gov. McKinley last evening and appointed a committee to draft suitable resolutions and resolved to attend the funeral in a body. The family desired that the funeral be as simple and unostentatious as possible, and all who are in attendance come as citizens only. The Thurman club arrived at the house in a body, but the burial service will be private.

CHRISTMAS AT ATLANTA.

Children's Festival To Be Held at the Exposition.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 14.—On Wednesday next, Dec. 18, there will be a children's Christmas festival at the exposition. The fifteen public schools will each contribute twenty boys and girls, each school representing a nationality. The boys will represent soldiers and the girls will be dressed in the costumes of the country. The parade will terminate at an immense Christmas tree, where presents will be distributed to all the orphan children in the asylums about Atlanta.

A Reporter Punished for Contempt

St. Louis, Dec. 14.—James E. Espey, a reporter for a morning paper, was fined $100 and sent to jail for twenty-four hours yesterday by Judge Peabody of the first district police court for contempt of court. Espey's paper has been singeing the judge for some time for alleged departure from judicial practice and the judge had his first inning.

Capt. Harry Jackson Dead.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 14.—Capt. Harry Jackson, one of the best known lawyers in the south, and a social leader, died last night of appendicitis. He was a son of Gen. Henry N. Jackson, who was once minister to Austria. Capt. Jackson received his early training in Vienna and London, and entered the confederate army at 16.

Herr Ahlwardt and the A. P. A. fanatics are about on a par.

The cider joints are closed today in order that they become inebriating incubators tomorrow.

When Editor Runyon wants to be mean he can be just too mean for anything. When he wants to be serious, though, he is funny.

About 63 per cent. of the Representatives and about 68 per cent. of the Senators in Congress are lawyers. In the House there are 173 college men and 183 who are not college men, and in the Senate the college graduates number 38 out of the total of 88.

Though defeated in the municipal elections in Georgia, the undeterred American Protective Association sent a committee to Gov. Atkinson to ask that he refrain from appointing Catholics to office. As in immediate rebuke the Governor appointed James O'Neil, a Catholic, to be City Solicitor of Atlanta at $10,000 a year.

After sixteen years of service in the County Clerk's office Elmore D. Moffett, of this city, will on January first retire from the position of Deputy Clerk. The reasons for Mr. Moffett's retirement can be summed up in two sentences: Mr. Moffett is a Democrat. County Clerk Howard is a Republican. Ever since Mr. Howard assumed office there has been a strong effort among Republicans to displace Mr. Moffett in order that B. Frank Corriell, of this city, could secure the position. County Clerk Howard has been reluctant to take any such action, from the fact that the long experience and careful attention to duties had eminently fitted Mr. Moffett to perform the exact work which devolved on him. But such political pressure has finally been brought that Mr. Moffett will retire to be succeeded by Mr. Corriell. There is little doubt, however, that if Mr. Moffett really desired to retain his position, he could make it very embarrassing for Mr. Howard to effect his removal. Under section 2 of chapter 155 of the Laws of 1895 no soldier can be dismissed from any position held by him in any department of the government of this State or of any department of the government of any county or city, without charges first being preferred against him and an opportunity given him to reply to the accusations. Mr. Moffett was a soldier, and inasmuch as his removal is brought for partisan purposes only, and not by any reason of incompetence, his retirement can only be accomplished by his own volition to do so. Of B. Frank Coriell, who will succeed Mr. Moffett, the Daily Press feels sure that he will rapidly acquaint himself with the duties of his position by reason of his natural aptitude for clerical work and eventually prove a valued attache for the office.

CAUGHT IN THE ACT.

FRENCH OFFICIALS NABBED THE DANGEROUS SMUGGLER.

A Man Has a Right to His Favorite Brand of Smoking Tobacco, but He Must Keep It Out of France—A Narrow Escape From a Heavy Fine.

The career of a criminal is always interesting, especially if the criminal be oneself. Then a person, knowing all the circumstances of the case, can trace the career of the wrongdoer from the first false step until the final catastrophe, when he is laid by the heels. If a man enters into a career of crime, he is reasonably sure to be caught at last, and as a warning to others I set down here the particulars of how, after deluding the customs officials of France for years and years, I was at last trapped and, curiously enough, when I was innocent. I am a little mixed as to what the moral should be.

For years and years I have deluded the French customs officials in the matter of tobacco. I think, of course, that it is wrong to smuggle as a general rule, but I cannot imagine it wrong to bring into an unenlightened country like France tobacco that a white man can smoke. I always calculate the number of days I shall be in any part of France, and then I take a two ounce package for each day and a couple extra in case I should meet a friend famishing for a good smoke, and this quantity I have never had any difficulty in smuggling into the great European republic. As the tobacco is entirely for my own consumption, and as I am not a citizen of France, and as I shall be swindled enough by the hotel keepers in whatever part I chance to be, I ease my conscience by pointing out these facts to it, and I must say that my conscience, being a reasonable one, does not judge me harshly in the matter. It is needless perhaps to add that the French government does not agree with me in all this; so, therefore, in order not to trouble the government more than is necessary, I place these packages about my person in such a way that on passing the French frontier I give the government as little bother as possible.

The other day I was on my way to Switzerland. I expected to be able to register my trunk clear through to Bern, and although I knew tobacco was cheap and good in Switzerland I thought I would take the precaution of putting a few packages of my own particular brand at the top of the trunk. It was a foolish thing to do, knowing that I had to pass through France, and when I got to the railway station in London and found I could only register the trunk as far as Paris I should then have taken the tobacco out if I had thought about it. We arrived in Paris a little after 6 o'clock in the evening, and the train left for Bern from a station on the other side of the city at 8:30, so there was just time enough to get a comfortable dinner and cab it across Paris from one station to the other, but it allowed no great margin for customs examination.

When the villain who acts for the French government asked me if I had anything to declare, I said I didn't exactly know. I had some tobacco, but it was not intended for use in France. I was going to take the night train to Bern if I could get the luggage across Paris in time. I opened the trunk and showed him the packages of tobacco. He shook his head, and gathering the packages in his hands he departed, leaving me there with the open trunk. He returned after awhile with a man who was evidently a higher official, and behind the higher official came another of the same rank as the first.

"Why didn't you declare this tobacco?" said the official to me.

"I did declare it," I answered. "I told him I was going through to Switzerland with it and none of it was to be opened in France."

The official said nothing, but the two understrappers attacked the box and turned out every mortal thing that was in it. I don't carry much luggage when I travel alone, but this trunk contained the various articles of wearing apparel that belonged to my family. It had been packed with much care, and the heap it made on the bench where they examine luggage in Paris was something appalling. It didn't seem to me possible that any human being could ever get all those things back in the trunk again. They found no more tobacco, but they all retired to an office and seemed to consult about the matter. Then the main official came out and said that this was a case for the chief inspector.

"Very well, then, get the chief inspector here as quickly as possible."

"But he has gone for the night," said the official.

"Do you mean to tell me," I said, "that you are going to make me miss my train for Bern all on account of a few packages of tobacco? Keep them, for heaven's sake, and present them with my compliments to the inspector tomorrow, but let me pass through Paris and catch my train."

He shook his head, and the two understrappers began putting the things helter skelter back in the trunk, and finding they could not squeeze down the lid again they took the trunk and the rest of my baggage and locked it up for the night. I learned that the inspector would not be there until 10 o'clock in the morning, and that would make me miss the morning train for Switzerland also. I again offered the pompous official the tobacco, but he said that it was not a question of the tobacco at all, but of a fine. I should be probably fined 2,000 francs, he added. A man who had concealed two boxes of cigars, a Cuban, had that week been fined 2,000 francs, and probably my fate would be the same as his. It all would depend on the inspector.

"But," I urged, "I did not conceal the tobacco at all. I told the man it was there before the trunk was opened."

The official shook his head.

"You did not declare it," he said.

There was nothing for it, then, but to go to a hotel, which we did. I consulted the hotel proprietor, who advised me to curb my naturally ugly temper and to be exceedingly deferential in the morning. He said that if the inspector chose to put a 2,000 franc fine upon me I should have to pay it or leave my baggage there forever.

In the morning I was taken before a very dignified official, who scrutinized me with some severity. He listened to what I had to say, and, luckily for me, the first inspector did not tell any lies about it, but admitted that I had said I had tobacco and had said that I was going through to Switzerland and mentioned that the tobacco was not concealed, but lay on the top of the trunk. The official then asked me to show my ticket to Switzerland, which I did. He finally came to a decision, which was that I should pay for a man to go across Paris with me and see my trunk registered through to Bern, and that I should pay 15 francs duty on the tobacco, and that I should remember I was getting off very easily.—Detroit Free Press.

WHEN DICKY HAD THE MEASLES.

We found we had to hide his shoes,
His stockings, trousers, waistcoat, coat,
And then he vowed he'd put on Sue's
Pink gingham, and he'd find his boat
And have a lark. He wouldn't stay
In bed and swallow nasty stuff!
And thus he'd fret and toss all day.
Oh, there was interest quite enough
When Dicky had the measles!

On Monday he was eloquent:
"I say, now, mother, since I'm sick,
I must live like a nobby gent.
What if Old Spectacles does kick?
See, here's the lunch list—five cream tarts,
Three red bananas and some dates,
A coffee cake and walnut hearts!"
We sadly thought of pearly gates
When Dicky had the measles.

On Wednesday 'twas he called for Bess.
"Hello! Come in and read a story.
That's it. The page is turned, I guess.
Now give us fights and men all gory.
Lie still, Don Carlo—sh—h—you'd best!
Was that a Cossack rode the horse?
All right, go on—oh, skip the rest!
That's only love." This was, of course,
When Dicky had the measles.

On Sunday, in a steamer chair,
We left him and we went to church.
The service over, in the glare
Of sunlight, on a wooden perch,
Sat freckled Dicky with his chums.
His tongue was running like a streak.
We're thankful now whatever comes
It can't surpass that awful week
When Dicky had the measles.

THEIR PET MEANNESS.

Traits of the Miser That Sometimes Show In Wealthy Persons.

Shoes were the pet meanness of a distinguished English nobleman whose ground rents in London alone would have shod all its inhabitants for centuries to come. It is related of him that he once took his favorite pair in person to a cobbler, and that after carefully examining them the man said to him: "I never saw the like since I've been at the business. You are either the greatest pauper in England or the Marquis of"—

"I am the marquis, not the pauper," said his lordship, and far from being offended seemed greatly amused. To mount a new pair of shoestrings even is pain and grief to him, and a new pair of shoes always brings on a violent fit of gout, so vehemently is he opposed to the sad necessity of donning them at all.

Lord Eldon was a peer of this pattern, only he proceeded to the other extremity and would never allow his wife and daughters but one bonnet between them. One wonders what pretty Betty Surtees saw in him to induce her to elope with him, cost what it might.

There is a Frenchman whose eccentricity in respect of a pet meanness is very often commented upon in Paris, for, though he has a model establishment and positively rolls in money, he cannot bear to use towels freely—his own or his neighbors'. It is said that upon staying at one of the old castles of Brittany for a week he took his hostess aside privately and showed her over three dozen towels that he had been gloating over for days. "All these, madam, I have saved," he remarked with great delight. "Your servants put them in my room, it is true, but I and my wife have only used one between us. Servants are careless, wasteful creatures. I return the rest."—Lippincott's.

The Electrician at Play.

An electrician who amuses himself by devising odd applications of electricity, which may or may not have practical value, tells chemists that he has a much better plan for removing the glass stopper from a bottle than the usual holding of the bottle neck for awhile over a Bunsen burner. This method is open to the drawback that the bottle must be held in a horizontal position, and the fluid may easily be spilled out of the bottle. The up to date improvement is an adjustable clamp with coils of platinum wire imbedded in a strip of asbestus attached. The clamp, which is connected to a battery, is put on the neck of the bottle, the current is turned on and the glass is brought to any desired heat. This is, in fact, an adaptation of the electrotherm, or heating pad, which is now used in hospitals in lieu of hot water pads formerly in vogue.

Another novelty of this resourceful electrical trifler is an electric annihilator of moths, flies and mosquitoes. It consists of an incandescent electric lamp placed inside a large globe, which is coated externally with a mixture of honey and wine, or any other seductive sticky mass. The windows and doors are to be closed, the blinds pulled down and the room is to be made as dark as possible. The current is then turned on, and in an hour the insect life of the room will be found sticking to the glass globe. The final instructions are to "remove the victims with hot water and set the trap afresh."

Artistic Taste.

All efforts to popularize art are commendable and worthy to be greatly extended. The tendency, however, is to extend away from rather than toward the masses. Art exhibits are always held under direction of artists, and they generally make special effort to get high class works, or such as suit their cultured tastes, which are far, far enough beyond those who are expected to patronize the shows. Then, because the less cultured than the artist managers do not enthuse over the exhibit they are written down as unppreciative dumb heads.

As well say that the masses ought to appreciate high class literature and books by great authors. You know yourself that while you patronize high class journals and buy the best books you really enjoy them less than juvenile books and papers or simple stories. You may be ashamed to confess this in the presence of those whom you suspect of being cultured or who make loud pretensions. And if you were to drop into their reading rooms unexpectedly you might find them reading the same kind of stuff that you hunger for.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Men Cooks.

The greatest, best and most famous cooks have always been men. There have also been men great and famous out of cookery who were skilled in it. We do not know of any one of them who was a first class all around cook, but we could name a good lot of them who won glory by the invention of special dishes, particular sauces or novelties in composition. Few women cooks have the audacity that is needed for originality in the work of cookery. It seems to require genius of a high order to do things or suggest things in the batterie de cuisine that at once command the approval of the best wits in gastronomy.—New York Sun.

Man never fastened one end of a chain around the neck of his brother that God did not fasten the other end round the neck of the oppressor.—Lamartine.

A CRAYON PORTRAIT.

IT RECALLED TO ELIZABETH CADY STANTON HER GIRLHOOD.

Reminiscences of a Child Not Like Other Children, Who Grew Into a Woman Not Like Other Women—Stories of Her Early Impressions and Aspirations.

I presented myself at the door of Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton's home on Sixty-first street. I was met by the statement, made with an air of sympathy and regret by the negro servant, that his mistress would see no visitors, as she was "writing a piece." But I sent up my card with a request for an appointment. The man returned directly to say that his mistress would receive me at once. I was ushered into a room full of suggestions of the pursuits and tastes of the woman who occupied it—books, pictures, a piano, newspapers, periodicals, a large desk with neat piles of manuscript and files of correspondence and a small writing table with the pretty appointments and trifles which belong to one's social letter writing.

I had hardly settled myself when a maid entered with a large crayon portrait of a young girl, which Mrs. Stanton directed her to place in a good light before the visitor.

"What do you think of it?" was the question after a moment's pause.

"It is a charming face—brimful of character and determination and courage. I also discover a strong family likeness."

"That is not strange," replied my hostess, evidently much amused, "for it is my own portrait at the age of 20. You can trace all the features, but the short, curly hair was brown then, though even at that age I had a number of gray hairs.

"I was married at 24. During our engagement my fiance wrote begging me for a lock of hair, when one of my girl friends, in a pure spirit of mischief, pulled out of my head enough white hairs to form a very respectable little curl, which I tied up with a blue ribbon and sent to my sweetheart."

She was silent a moment, and a little slow smile crept over her countenance, as she gazed at the youthful face in the picture. Then she said softly:

"I love to look at that girl—I like to study her and to think how she has fulfilled herself."

"Had she any distinct idea then of what her career would be?"

"Yes. She had resolved upon that long years before. I was only a little child when my attention was drawn to those conditions of women which I have spent my life seeking to improve. It happened in this way:

"My father was a lawyer, Judge Cady, and had a great many young men in his office who came to him as students. They used to sit at their books in a large room adjoining the office and library. I was a child of 8 or 9 years, brimful of mischief, life and activity, with three sisters younger than myself who readily followed my lead. Often when our noise and fun and pranks became unendurable in the house, my mother restored peace by banishing the ringleader to the office. There I always became perfectly quiet, but it was because I took the keenest interest in what I heard. It gradually dawned upon me that of all the clients who came there the women alone got no comfort. When they took down the law books and read from them what related to each particular case, the women went away sorrowful. My evident interest in the legal rights of my sex greatly entertained those students, and they let me pore over the laws myself, thinking it one of the funniest of sights to see such a young child so occupied. I was taking it all much more seriously than any one imagined.

"By and by I had a birthday, and my father gave me a set of corals—necklace, bracelets and earrings. I was enchanted, and that day I loved those corals better than anything else in the world. Of course I rushed to show them to my student friends, among whom was a young man from Delaware, named Bayard, an uncle of Minister Bayard. He was always inclined to tease me and discerned an opportunity on this occasion. So he said, 'If you were my wife, those would belong to me.'

"'What!' I gasped.

"'Yes, they would be mine. You could not even wear them unless I gave you leave, and I could take them from you altogether and give them to some one else if I chose.'

"This nearly finished me. But one straw more remained to be added. There was an old Scotchwoman, Flora Campbell, who used to come to our house every Saturday to bring chickens, eggs, sweet flag, maple sugar and herbs. We children were all very fond of Flora. She had been in good circumstances once and was a superior woman. Her husband had died, leaving all he possessed to his son. Then the son's wife came into Flora's house and turned her out. There was no redress. This story came to my ears, and I resolved to act.

"The next Saturday I followed Flora to the gate and bade her be of good cheer, as those wicked laws were about to be abolished and she would soon be able to enter upon a life of peace and plenty. The plan I unfolded to her was to avail myself of the absence of the family at church the next morning, to go to the library and there to cut from the books every line of those dreadful laws against women. I assured Flora that I could do this in a very short time, as I had already put a mark upon the back of each doomed volume in order that I might lay my hands on it readily.

"Of course Flora told my father. But he did not betray her. That evening he took me on his knee and explained the enactment of laws, remarking quite casually that even if his library chanced to take fire and every volume was consumed it would not make the slightest difference in the condition of anybody beyond the loss to himself. The only way to remedy unsatisfactory laws was to go before the legislature and get new ones passed to replace them. 'That is what I will do!' I cried.

"I was only 10 years old, but from that moment I never forgot my purpose—never abandoned it for an instant until it was carried out. When I went before the legislature with the woman's property bill, women I had known well before crossed the street to avoid meeting me. I suppose their sense of propriety was outraged. They cried out that it was preposterous not to trust their property rights in the hands of the men to whom they did not hesitate to intrust themselves. A pretty argument! But I lived to see that a good many of those same women afterward owed all their comfort and prosperity to the efforts which they had reviled."—New York Sun.

Delicate Dress Goods,
Some gowns are so dainty in the weave, so delicate in tint, that they seem to soil by being look at—one or two wearings making them unpresentable—not useless. We make a specialty of cleaning fine fabrics—the more delicate the material, the better the results. Sometimes an accident will ruin a gown, without injuring the texture. We dye them then, sometimes we get a prettier effect than the original color. Fine goods stand re-dying. The finer the material, the better the new color. We charge so little for cleaning or dyeing, that even if you are in doubt as to the results, it's worth while to experiment.

CASTORIA

for Infants and Children.

MOTHERS, Do You Know that Paregoric, Bateman's Drops, Godfrey's Cordial, many so-called Soothing Syrups, and most remedies for children are composed of opium or morphine?

Do You Know that opium and morphine are stupefying narcotic poisons?

Do You Know that in most countries druggists are not permitted to sell narcotics without labeling them poisons?

Do You Know that you should not permit any medicine to be given your child unless you or your physician know of what it is composed?

Do You Know that Castoria is a purely vegetable preparation, and that a list of its ingredients is published with every bottle?

Do You Know that Castoria is the prescription of the famous Dr. Samuel Pitcher. That it has been in use for nearly thirty years, and that more Castoria is now sold than of all other remedies for children combined?

Do You Know that the Patent Office Department of the United States, and of other countries, have issued exclusive right to Dr. Pitcher and his assigns to use the word "Castoria" and its formula, and that to imitate them is a state prison offense?

Do You Know that one of the reasons for granting this government protection was because Castoria had been proven to be absolutely harmless?

Do You Know that 35 average doses of Castoria are furnished for 35 cents, or one cent a dose?

Do You Know that when possessed of this perfect preparation, your children may be kept well, and that you may have unbroken rest?

Well, these things are worth knowing. They are facts.

CHAPTER IV.

The south wind blew blandly that morning, and the scent of new made hay was in the air. The wheatfields wore a pale gold color, and the corn lands rustled their broad green leaves. Arthur Hapgood was driving back from Littlefield with a stableboy beside him. A satisfied and complacent smile curled his well cut lips, for he had prospered in all his undertakings. No obstacle would be put in the way of his taking out letters of administration as the late Simon Hapgood's heir, and the old man's bank account had proved to be larger than he had any right to expect.

Manifestly Mr. A. Hapgood had been born with a gold spoon in his mouth. The very sound of his name seemed to betoken a happy and prosperous future. As he drove along at a good pace over the winding country road, under great trees and past quiet fields, with glimpses of blue hills coming in to fill all the vistas, he built some pretty castles in the air. He saw how he could make a fine country place of the old farm by remodeling the ancient homestead, building new stables and turning the whole into grazing for sheep and cattle. He intended gradually to acquire a number of fine horses and to go into scientific breeding The homestead would thus become his residence during the summer months. There was good fishing in the neighborhood, and he felt within him the exultation of holding his head high among the best families of that part of the country.

Then his thoughts turned to Elsie—bright, bewitching, saucy little Elsie. He meant to do something handsome for the girl—something that would win her gratitude and make her look up to him as a benefactor and friend. The plan was still hazy in his mind, but he dwelt upon its dim outlines with pleasure. His intention was and always had been to marry a wealthy woman above him in position, who could help him cleverly to climb the social ladder. How little Elsie was to fit into this ambitious scheme he did not care to explain even to himself.

But what gave Arthur a peculiar glow of satisfaction was the discovery of an old ladies' home in Littlefield. The house was on a back street, rather unattractive in appearance and surrounded by dank, close growing evergreens. It had been given to the town by a miserly old woman, who had willed away all her property for charitable purposes to spite her relatives. Arthur went over the establishment with the matron. There were only four decrepit old women at that moment sharing its benefits, and they looked as cheerless and depressed as old women generally do when shut up together to talk over their diseases and find fault with their keeping. He made inquiries as to the terms of admission. A hundred dollars paid the entrance fee, and a yearly stipend of $50 paid for board and lodging. Where two shared the same room the entrance fee was cut down one quarter.

Arthur made a rapid mental calculation. The old Hingham sisters possessed furniture and family relics that at any sale of antiques would bring several hundreds if not thousands of dollars. Arthur decided to take these precious old things as indemnity for keeping them in comfort as long as they lived in the old ladies' home. He even chose a sunny room for them on the second floor. It was but sparsely furnished with decrepit chairs and other odd bits sent by the lady patrons of the home from their garrets, but beggars cannot be choosers. The old creatures ought to feel thankful to him for any kind of shelter for their few remaining days. He was not under the slightest obligation to do anything for them. They actually owed the estate for many years' board and lodging, and it was out of his sheer good nature that he had made this provision, although, of course, the furniture would be some slight compensation. Happily no one in the neighborhood knew the actual value of these things. Arthur had, therefore, every right to feel virtuous as he briskly jumped down from the wagon, paid the young man from the livery stable and dismissed him on his way back to town.

The two old women had seen him arrive, each from her own window, and they kept nodding and bobbing their heads, their faces wreathed with smiles to welcome his return. But he did not even pause at the parlor door to inquire after their health. He was master of the house now, and he flung the front door open with a bang and strode through to the sitting room, where he deposited his luggage, and not finding Elsie he wandered into the great kitchen, where a gentle wood fire was burning in the stove and a great Maltese cat sat licking her chops and stretching herself lazily on the hearth. The place was empty, swept and garnished. He opened the chamber door—not a sound. He peered down the cellar stairs listening for the trip of Elsie's light feet, but all was silent save the slow tick of the clock in the corner. Had the little witch taken French leave and left those old women on his hands? He flushed and grew angry as it flashed upon him that she might have gone away with Paul Raynor.

He stepped out of the back kitchen door on his way toward the barn, where the bawling of a calf could be heard in the quiet air and the cawing of crows as they flapped their great black wings over a cornfield. He stopped to look in at the old shop where Paul had kept his pets and saw the door open and the place quite empty. Even Paul's old hats and coats, that had hung there on pegs, had been taken away, and the few books he kept on a rude shelf in the corner. A grim smile of satisfaction curled Arthur's lips as he looked about the deserted place. Paul's white pigeons were still flying in and out of the high window in the peak, clapping their wings as they rose in air. He went on to the barn, where the great doors were closed, making a semitwilight in the large area that smelled of hay and dried clover. He pushed them open and stepped in on the thrashing floor. Old Whitefoot was munching his feed in the stall, and he turned his head and looked at the intruder. A slight rustling in the haymow near a tall ladder caused Arthur to glance up toward the roof of the barn, where the daylight in misty streaks was coming in through the cracks and knotholes.

"You witch!" he cried. "What are you doing up there in the hay?"

"Hunting fresh eggs for Aunt Prissy's omelet," Elsie answered up aloft. "She is rather poorly this morning."

In a moment she had skipped down the ladder with a few pearly eggs in her apron. Arthur put out his hand, but Elsie did not seem to see it.

"Do you know you were quite fascinating," said he, "as you peeped just now with your bright eyes over the edge of the haymow—so fascinating, in fact, little girl, I have half a mind to steal a kiss?"

"Better keep your distance," said Elsie, picking up a pitchfork and menacing him.

Arthur laughed incredulously. "You couldn't hurt a flea, but are very bewitching all the same. Most women are ugly when they are at work, but it is not so with you. I don't know whether I like you best stabling a horse or kneading bread or hunting hens' eggs or feeding calves."

Elsie looked coldly resentful. "I don't like compliments," said she, "and I wish you would keep yours to yourself."

"Doesn't Raynor pay you compliments?" he said, peering in her face.

Elsie blushed a little in spite of herself. "No, he does not," she said, with perfect frankness. "He has more sense."

"I'll be bound he does, though, little Elsie. He would be a greater fool than he looks if he did not. I'll wager he's kissed you dozens of times, and you ought to give me the same privilege. It's a relief to get that fellow off the place. He was a kind of incubus. I have been thinking up a plan for you, Elsie. You ought to go to school for a year or two, for you have in you the making of a splendid woman."

"Why do you concern yourself about me, Mr. Hapgood?"

"Because you have no other protector—no other friend."

"Then the Lord have mercy upon me."

"I like to see you look like that, Elsie, for I wouldn't give a snap of my finger for a girl who hasn't a little spice of the devil in her. I intend to make you believe in me and trust me. Now I want you to do me a service, an easy little thing that will not take 10 minutes of your time. I want you to go and tell those old women that I have engaged a pleasant room for them in the Old Ladies' home at Littlefield, a most comfortable place, where they will be far jollier than they can be out here, where I dare say they are dull enough at times. You can arrange it all without a scene. I have a constitutional dislike to scenes, and I want them to know how generous my intentions really are."

Elsie drew herself up, and a look of scorn and contempt came into her mobile face. Her eyes flashed fire. She clinched her little hand until the nails hurt her palm. "Go and do your cruel work yourself," she cried desperately. "You are a perfectly heartless and cold blooded man to ask me to stab my old friends and give them their deathblow. I hate and detest you, and I will never speak to you again if I can help it." The hot tears nearly blinded her. She turned on her heel and walked slowly out of the barn.

An angry red spot burned on Hapgood's cheek. He gnawed his nether lip with suppressed rage and vowed he would get the whip hand of the proud little beggar who had defied him and refused to do his bidding. Elsie walked away to the house with her head up and defiant. She left the kitchen work undone and went to her own room, where she sat gazing from the window up the high pasture toward the woods where Paul was in hiding. In the hollow of the great oak tree at the top of the lane she had hidden a store of provisions for his use. An awful silence brooded over the house, as if some one lay dying. She bent her ear to listen and heard Arthur Hapgood go up into the attic and prowl about among Uncle Si's old dusty trunks. After a time he descended to the kitchen. She heard his footsteps and the opening and shutting of doors. Then she knew by instinct he had gone to the parlor, where the old ladies sat at their morning game of cribbage, all unconscious in the sunshine. She felt oppressed and could hardly breathe as she stole out to the landing and hung over the banister, while a murmur of voices went on in the parlor. It seemed an eternity before Arthur Hapgood came out and closed the door with a slam. Elsie crept down the stairs and paused in the hall. There was a sound of sobbing and of dull, low moaning, as of a child that has lost its way and is crying itself to sleep. She hesitated a moment, listening with her ear to the crack, then softly pushed open the door.

The two old women, in their haste to retreat to their last earthly stronghold, had huddled themselves in bed with their clothes on. Miss Hetty had gone into complete eclipse under the album quilt and presented the appearance of an amorphous bundle, while Miss Prissy still kept her head above the sheets, with her day cap all awry and her false puffs sadly out of place. They were moaning in concert, though neither of them could hear the sounds made by the other. Elsie threw her arms round Miss Prissy's neck and laid her warm young face against the withered cheek wet with bitter tears.

"He's a wicked man," sobbed Miss Prissy, all of a tremble, "a wolf in sheep's clothing. He was against us all the time while he appeared so good but ter wouldn't melt in his mouth. He came creeping round pretending to be a friend, while his heart was black with malignity. He wants to take us to that dreadful charity place old Marm Brittan gave to the town because her niece, Malviny Rogers, didn't marry to please her"— Here the poor old creature's voice faded away, and her face twitched with unutterable misery.

"But we won't go," she began again, mustering her courage. "Brother Simon would turn right over in his coffin to think of our going to such a place. Wild horses can't draw us. Sister and I will stay in bed and let him get officers if he can to set us and our things out by the side of the road. He may starve us if he wants to. We won't go and be inmates of Marm Brittan's old house," and Miss Prissy clutched the bedpost with nervous vigor. "We know better what belongs to us as Hinghams."

Elsie patted and kissed her old friend, who was like an obstinate, self willed baby, impossible to reason with. Miss Hetty was still extinguished under the bedclothes, and Elsie heard her saying her prayers: "Lord, have mercy! O Lord, have mercy!" When she tried to go away, Miss Prissy caught hold of her gown as a last defense, but at last she had caressed and coaxed her into a little quietness. She found Hapgood in the kitchen, where the fire had died away, standing before the great empty fireplace.

"I am hungry as a bear," said he, looking at his watch. "Are we to have no dinner?"

Elsie glanced at him meditatively as if examining him from head to foot. "Not unless you leave me to do my work in peace. I will not lift a hand if you stay around here."

"So we have not made up our little quarrel, it seems. You are still disposed to be cross and ill natured. You ought to know, Elsie, that it does not improve your beauty."

"My beauty is nothing to you," said Elsie, tossing her head.

"What has got into all the women? They are behaving like the very deuce," muttered Arthur as he betook himself to the sitting room, where he whistled, drummed on the pane and looked out at the blowing trees and drifting clouds. In silence Elsie prepared the meal and made ready the tray for the poor old women, who were still crying and strengthening each other in the determination not to rise. It was a slow, wretched, heavy day, as distorted and unnatural as a nightmare. In the afternoon, to escape from Hapgood, Elsie took refuge with the calves and sheep on the hill, where her pet lamb Topsey thrust her black nose into her hand and looked at her with sympathetic eyes. Arthur Hapgood meantime wandered over the house from garret to cellar, calculating the changes he would make and the probable cost and jotting down figures in a pocket diary.

Elsie waited upon Mr. Hapgood at supper in almost total silence. She placed a lamp in the sitting room, attended to the old ladies' wants for the night and saw them drop off and lose their troubles in a quiet sleep, washed the tea things, put out the fire and closed the kitchen and then went to her own room. She could hear Arthur Hapgood still wandering restlessly about the premises, and once he came to the stair foot and called her, but she kept still as a little mouse and did not answer. She sat by the window of her room, where the moonlight began to steal in across the uncarpeted floor. Her few gowns, hung on nails against the low sloping wall behind her little bed, made a dark shadowy corner, but the chest of drawers, with its rustic ornaments, the small looking glass and a picture or two, all were clear as day in the splendor of the unclouded moon just at the full.

Elsie's view was up the high pasture toward the way of the woods. As she sat there she thought of Paul lurking in the tall ferns under the hemlocks waiting to hear the whippoorwill's call. Her curly head rested against the wall by the side of the window. Her fingers were locked together, and her heart was disgusted within her. She remembered a little prayer her mother had taught her long years ago and whispered it for Paul and the poor old women and herself. The night was warm and profoundly still. Not a leaf moved on the trees; not a bird chirped in the bushes. There was a faint twinkle of cowbells and the bleating of lambs in a distant pasture.

Suddenly, as if by magic, the scene changed. She was no longer gazing up the steep moonlighted pastures listening to the cattle bells in the dewy grass and thinking of Paul. She was not even in her familiar little room under the sloping roof, but was in Uncle Si's chamber, just as she had seen it the other night in her dream, with the white bed, and the coverlid drawn over the pillows, and the streak of moonlight stretching across the floor, with its braided rugs. On the chimney piece lay Uncle Si's great silver watch and the well thumbed family Bible. As she looked quite spellbound with surprise she saw Uncle Si dressed precisely as in life, in his brown clothes and broad brimmed hat. She saw him turn toward her a pale, deathlike countenance, the mouth drawn with pain, the eyes very sad. He motioned to her to come nearer, but she stood transfixed with fear, cold and clammy in every limb. Slowly again he opened that closet door in the corner of the room where the mourning piece hung, and where Elsie knew there was only solid wall took out a bundle of papers which he held toward her.

Then the strange picture vanished. Elsie came to herself, with a gasp and stifled cry of fright. She had been asleep she knew not how long, with her head resting against the wall. Her neck felt stiff and sore from the constrained position. The moonlight had disappeared from her little chamber. A cold night wind blew in at the window. The house was buried in darkness and silence. Elsie rubbed her eyes vigorously, wondering what had happened. She listened to the old clock in the kitchen striking its slow and solemn 12. More than two hours had passed since she sat looking out at the lane and the moon illumined hill and thinking of Paul, and yet it seemed hardly a moment. She remembered vividly the vision of Uncle Si holding out to her the packet of papers. Elsie was not more superstitious than other healthy minded young girls of her age, but now her nerves were slightly shaken, and the dream, or whatever it was, took powerful hold on her mind. Uncle Si's sad and solemn face brought the conviction that he was not at rest in the grave and that he called upon her to take some decisive step.

The closet door opening in the solid wall was as inexplicable to Elsie as ever, but as she sat there in the dark, shivering, trying to think calmly of these strange things, it suddenly occurred to her that the moment had come for calling Paul out of the woods with the whippoorwill's cry. All were fast asleep in the old farmhouse. Not a mouse rustled in the wall. She was fully dressed, and it was but the work of a moment to take a little plaid shawl from among the garments hanging on the wall, throw it over her head, open the door and creep out into the passage. She stole along through the slumbrous house like a spirit, crouched at the door of the spare chamber and heard within the regular breathing of Arthur Hapgood, glided down the back stairs, avoiding the creaking step, and softly undid the kitchen door. It was chill and dewy without, and the melancholy moon sloped toward the west, casting long beams across the grass, where a rabbit, sitting on his haunches, pricked up his sensitive ears.

Elsie knew every stick and stone and bush in the home fields as well by night as by day. She ran through the farmyard, crept between the bars into the lane, sped up the steep cowpath and over another fence to a grassy knoll, where near a pile of stones grew the great branchy hollow oak. Here she stopped to take breath, putting her hand to her side, for the climb was steep and rugged. The low moon looked at her solemnly. There was a stirring of young birds in the bushes Some small creature, perhaps a snake, flittered away through the grass. Elsie, half frightened at what she was doing, let out her voice in the long, low, melancholy call of the whippoorwill. The sound seemed to divide the country silence like a sword thrust. Then it fell again more profound than before, and the night held its breath in the low moonlight. Again she let out her voice louder and longer in the strange bird call, and putting her ear to the ground she listened, with beating heart. Yes, he was coming now. The light snapping of twigs, the crunch of a heel on the stones, told her so. In a moment she saw his tall, dark outline looming over her, and they had clasped hands.

"What is it, Elsie? Has that fellow been annoying you again?"

"Don't speak of him," said Elsie in an agitated whisper, and she laid hold of his arm. "I have seen Uncle Si again tonight in my sleep, and he opened the same closet door in the corner of his room and showed me that bundle of papers. He looked so sad, so awful, I was frozen with terror, and I had to get out of the house to breathe. What do you think it means?"

Paul saw that Elsie was wrought up to the highest pitch of excited feeling, and skeptic as he was about supernatural appearances he tried to soothe her instead of making light of her delusion.

"It is very strange, Elsie. Do you think we could creep into the house without being heard?"

"I am sure we could, Paul. Do come with me, and let us try to probe this mystery."

"I know Hapgood has come back, Elsie, for I have been spying on the house all day from the top of the hill. I would like to take a look at that wall in the corner of Uncle Si's chamber. Now I remember the attic stairs go up near that place, and there must be a cavity underneath. Perhaps years ago, when you came here as a child, there was a closet door there, and it has been walled up. You may have forgotten all about it, and it has come back to you now in a dream. At any rate, we will go down and see what we can find."

The moon had set, and a moaning wind bowed the tops of the trees, and dark clouds rolled up from the west, obscuring the stars. They crept down the lane and into the house like two conspirators and presently found themselves in the dark room where Uncle Si died and where he had slept for more than half a century. Elsie groped her way to the chimney piece, where stood the night lamp she had used in the old man's long sickness, with matches. Stealthily she kindled the wick and looked at Paul, who was quite pale, and he, too, remarked that Elsie also looked pale and wide eyed with suppressed excitement.

They gazed furtively around the room, as if expecting to see something strange and uncanny, but it was just the same plain, familiar, homely place they had always known. Paul had taken off his shoes, and now he approached the corner where Elsie had seen the closet door open in the wall. He passed his hand over what appeared to be a solid surface, but he noticed that the wall paper looked brighter and fresher in that part of the room than elsewhere and seemed to have been put on by an unpracticed hand, for it was streaked and wrinkled. He stooped down and examined the baseboard where it appeared to have sprung away from the wall. He gently inserted his fingers just there, and an old rusty nail fell out, and suddenly a section of the board came away in his hand. Then he tapped upon the wall gently, and it gave forth a hollow sound. They looked at each other with frightened eyes. Elsie put her lamp down on the floor, and a slight space was revealed between the wall and the floor. As the light flickered upon the wall it showed a long, straight, slightly depressed ridge in the blue and red paper. Paul took out his jackknife and passed the point of it gently along this line. It sank into a crack.

"Good heavens, Elsie, there is a door here!" he said, and for a moment they neither spoke nor moved, so awestruck were they by this ange discovery.

Elsie got up from the place where she had sat crouching on the floor. "Let us tear off the wall paper," she whispered, and she took the rusty nail and set to work, while Paul followed her example with his jackknife. They tore it off bit by bit until at last the whole form of the low door was revealed. It was under the attic stairs, just as Paul had surmised. "Here is a lock," whispered Paul as he worked away with a will, peeling off paper and paste, "but where in the name of goodness is the key?" Elsie stood with a puzzled face for a moment trying to call something to mind; then she stepped softly to the bureau where Uncle Si kept his underclothes, his odds and ends of belongings, and opening the top drawer took out a big bunch of keys of all sorts and sizes strung on a steel ring. Paul, in silence, tried more than 20 of them, one by one, with ill success. Some were too large, others too small to fit the lock. At last the rustiest and dullest of the lot fell into his hand. He thrust it into the hole. It was stiff and difficult to turn, needing oil. But Paul was strong and vigorous, with a wrist like steel. He gave it a mighty turn. The lock clicked, and with a strong pull a dark cavity in the wall revealed itself, one whose very existence had never been suspected by the two young people.

A moldy, dusty, indescribable odor of decaying cloth and leather came from the open door. Paul stooped down to peer into the black hole, and Elsie bent over his shoulder, holding the lamp, with curiosity and terror painted on her face. In a corner lay a heap of Uncle Si's moldy boots. Some moth eaten trousers and waistcoats, slowly dropping to pieces, hung on pegs. His castoff shirts of former years encumbered a couple of rude shelves, for Uncle Si had a mania for hoarding old clothes. The dust was more than half an inch thick over everything, and long gray cobwebs festooned the corners. The aspect of this dark dust hole was anything but reassuring. They looked at each other involuntarily and smiled as if they had been tricked by a ghost. To discover the mysterious closet in the smooth wall and yet to find nothing but Uncle Si's castoff clothes was certainly a wry joke.

She drew it out and held it up triumphantly in the lamplight.

Presently Elsie pushed past Paul, and with a girl's wit and persistence began to rummage among the heaped up rubbish on the shelf. She thrust her little hand well under the mass of molding shirts, and her small nervous fingers closed involuntarily on a packet of papers. She drew it out and held it up triumphantly in the lamplight.

"Let us get out of here," she whispered to the bewildered Paul. "I feel faint, and I can't breathe."

She blew out the lamp, and they tiptoed to the door, locked it, and Elsie put the key in her pocket. They hardly drew breath until they were out of the house, and then like two swallows they sped to the top of the lane, the hollow oak and the great pile of stones. The early summer dawn had come with cloudy red splendor behind the line of dark fire on the eastern hills, and the catbirds were singing fitfully in the young maple tops. It was by the dawnlight, seated together behind the great oak tree, that Elsie and Paul examined the packet of papers. The first one was the deed of the old farm, a very ancient document, yellowed by time and with a great seal that weighed several ounces. The second they came upon was Uncle Si's will, written by his own hand on a sheet of common foolscap. Being of sound and disposing mind and memory, he had left everything of which he died possessed to Elsie Ray in case she married Paul Raynor by the time she came of age; otherwise the estate was to pay $2,000 to Paul for his education, and the spinsters, Prissy and Hetty Hingham, were recommended to the kind care of both the young people for life. There was a clear statement of all the personal property left by Uncle Si and a legacy of the family Bible to Arthur Hapgood. The will was dated six years back and was witnessed by Reuben and Dorothy Dick, two plain friends and distant cousins of Uncle Si, who had paid him infrequent visits during the time Elsie had lived at the farm.

She well remembered these placid old people, the sweet thees and thys with which they were wont to sprinkle their conversation, but it was a long time since she had heard Uncle Si speak of the Dicks. They might be dead and in their graves. Both Paul and Elsie, ignorant as they were of the world, knew the will was irregular in form. How could it hold good against the interests of the direct heir without the testimony of those old people? By dint of probing her memory Elsie recalled the fact that they lived more than a hundred miles away in quite another part of the country. She remembered the name of their village, but had forgotten the state and county. If the will were produced at once, its genuineness might be questioned. She and Paul would find themselves in an awkward position if, without proof, they were accused of forging the paper. In their whispered talk under the oak tree, in that wild red dawn, they decided to conceal its existence for the present to gain time—above all, to hunt up the Dicks. Moreover, they must take advice of older and wiser heads than their own.

Arthur Hapgood did not awake until late that morning, for it was near midnight before he had fallen into his first heavy slumber. The old ladies' obstinate resistance to his wishes had nettled him not a little, and he was also anxious to punish Elsie for the part she had played. His mind had been at work on a plan altogether feasible and proper and calculated to avoid scandal. As the old women had retreated to their beds and refused to arise, it was to be inferred that they were helpless invalids—bedridden and half imbecile and to be dealt with accordingly. He therefore determined to drive old Whitefoot in the chaise to the town, early in the morning, to engage an ambulance at the hospital to remove the old ladies to the home, where they could have care and medical attendance that could not be given them on the farm. After concocting this clever plan he fell asleep, with conscience void of offense, and slept the sleep of the just.

When Arthur came down stairs at 9 o'clock, he heard Elsie singing as she stepped briskly about at her work. He wondered at the change that had come over the little witch, who the day before had been as gloomy and unsocial as a tombstone. As Elsie grew more cheerful and light hearted Arthur became glum and silent. No morning salutations passed between them. She served him, however, at breakfast, and while she smiled at the sugar bowl he frowned at the milk jug enough to turn the sweet cream sour. Elsie had been in to wait on the old ladies, had petted and patted them and breathed comforting words into their ears. The more Arthur Hapgood seemed sunk in gloom the more light hearted Elsie became, the more trippingly sounded her little feet about the old kitchen. Breakfast was just over, and Arthur had drawn out his watch to calculate the time it would take him to drive to Littlefield, when a light carriage, drawn by a single horse, stopped at the farmhouse door. A pale old gentleman, tall and thin, with a straight bodied coat and gray broadbrim, stepped out of the carriage to give his hand to a lovely, tranquil old lady in Quaker drab, with a scoop bonnet and little shawl of the same color

Elsie had been drawn to the window by the sound of wheels, and as soon as her eye fell on the old couple she rushed to the front door, flung it wide open, skipped down the walk and seized the old lady in her arms.

"We are glad to see thee, Elsie Ray; glad to see thee," said Reuben Dick, shaking her hand.

He took off his hat and looked solemnly up at the front of the old farmhouse.

"I only heard of friend Simon Hapgood's departure two days ago, and I said to my wife, 'Let us set off at once, for something tells me we shall be needed in the house of sorrow.' Friend Simon was a just man, and surely thee has grieved for him, for he was a good friend to thee."

Tears of joy were running down Elsie's cheeks. She felt that God had raised up friends in the hour of need. She led the old people in to the sitting room, where from the open window Arthur Hapgood had been a bewildered spectator of their arrival and Elsie's greeting.

"Is thee a friend of Simon Hapgood?" said the old man politely, taking off his hat.

"I am his nephew, sir," said Arthur, drawing himself up, "and I happen to be master here now. As my uncle's direct heir I have come into the property."

Is thee quite sure of that?" said old Reuben, eying him keenly. "Has more than one will been found drawn by the hand of thy late uncle?"

"Not even one," said Arthur with cheerful positiveness. "My uncle, as it happened, never made a will."

"Thee is mistaken," said the old man impressively. "Thy uncle did make a will, as both my wife Dorothy and I can testify, for we were witnesses to the same, and he spoke to us of its provisions. Thy uncle was not the man to leave those who had been dependent on him in poverty and unfriended. He knew thee to be the son of an opulent father, an only child, and he left thee the family Bible, hoping the perusal might profit thee to edification."

A skeptical smile wreathed Arthur's well cut lips. "You must produce the document," said he, "before you can expect me to credit your story. If my uncle ever made such a will, he doubtless had good reason for destroying it."

"Here it is," said Elsie, and she came forward, pale and trembling, and drew the paper out of her pocket. "Uncle Si revealed to me the place where it was hidden in a dream."

"God be praised, who takes care of the fatherless and the widow," exclaimed the old man piously. "I felt that I had a call to come to this place today, and I doubt not the Lord's hand was in it."

Arthur examined the will, biting his lips with vexation and rage, pale and red by turns. He pronounced the paper a clever forgery and declared loudly that he would show up its true nature in a court of justice. There was an exciting scene between him and old Reuben, who declared emphatically that the law of the land would sustain the will of Simon Hapgood. So it proved in the end.

Old Miss Prissy and Miss Hetty meantime, hearing loud and excited talk in the next room, had hastily jumped out of bed and huddled on their clothes under the impression that the house was on fire. Elsie ran to the top of the lane and gave the whippoorwill call to summon Paul out of the woods, and when at last Arthur Hapgood drove away to the town in the hired carriage that had brought Reuben and Dorothy Dick to the door he looked back, with a cloud on his face, and saw a curious group gathered in front of the old farmhouse to speed the parting guest. There were Aunt Prissy and Aunt Hetty in their hastily improvised toilets, looking joyfully triumphant, the tall, spare form of the old Quaker and the placid face of his wife, and behind them all Elsie and Paul, who had clasped hands like two loving children.

Elsie and Paul have been married now two years, and whenever Paul refers to the finding of Uncle Si's will and broaches his favorite theory that she must some time, when a child, have known of the existence of the closet under the attic stairs, Elsie says nothing, but she looks very thoughtful.

THE END.

Her Art Environment.

Environment from an art standpoint is one-third of correct living. Edmund Russell advises that migratory people—those who have shifting homes and who have to manufacture ease and comfort in hotels and boarding houses—devote at least one tray of a trunk to the requisite for creating an art atmosphere in whatever apartment they may occupy.

The traveler who wishes an art background should carry in that tray three pieces of handsome drapery, oriental, if possible, with which to transfer an ugly couch or a commonplace table or to obliterate a hideous chair. On the little table place a few bits of personal belongings, a tiny bonbon dish of candied violets, a curious old silver dagger and other bits of bric-a-brac or choice volumes. To the wall affix several good unframed water colors or etchings, and about the mirror or the mantel frame dispose photographs of indispensable friends or of favorite actors, artists or authors.

Relieve the barrenness of mantelshelf and dressing case with a rare bit of china, and there, too, if fortunate enough to possess the essentials, show forth old time art in the ivory portrait of maiden aunt set in pearls or the jeweled snuffbox or lorgnette of other courtly ancestor.

Every beauty loving woman, Russell thinks, owes it to herself to collect and carry with her the necessary properties for a congenial and harmonious environment.

In a World Famous Shop.

In Worth's shops in Paris, says a London print, there are dignity and severity almost classical. Everything is strict, correct, comme il faut. Clients occupy one of the many simply decorated rooms en suite, all of which open upon the long corridor whose windows overlook the Rue de la Paix. They are spectators rather than customers, while graceful creatures in a long procession, each appareled in the newest fashion.

Nothing is seen of the seamy side, all the machinery of manufacture, workrooms, patterns, untidiness, are relegated to back premises, and, save for the fitting by of a harried "runner" or "matcher" or "fitter," nothing of the inner life is visible except when at rare intervals the prince of dressmakers strolls, solemn and abstracted, through the rooms from his "studio" to the "ateliers," from the study where he composes to the workrooms where his ideas take practical shape.

M. Worth is a somewhat amusing figure when seen deshabille, wearing a strange robe de chambre of the gabardine class and a quaint headdress, which is something between a Scotch bonnet and a black nightcap.

CAPTURED A BRIGAND.

An Outlaw Who Relied Upon the Word of a Gentleman.

The last survivor of a wealthy Greek family, Skilizzi by name, was in Naples overseeing the erection of a magnificent mausoleum to the memory of his brother, recently deceased. The mausoleum was at some distance from the city and a wilderness separated the building from the nearest road. In this wilderness Skilizzi had one evening a strange adventure which he related afterward to Rudolph Lehmann, who prints it in his "Reminiscences."

Skilizzi was on his way to his carriage when he was accosted by a notorious armed brigand who infested the neighborhood and had baffled all attempts to capture him.

"Your purse or your life!" called the brigand, at the same time leveling his gun. Skilizzi, instead of being frightened, answered quietly:

"Put down that gun and let us have a talk."

The man obeyed.

"I can give you my purse," Skilizzi continued, "and should not feel the loss of it, but would you gain much by its contents? They will not go far and you will then have to continue a brigand until you are caught and beheaded."

"Quite true," said the man, "but then I have a wife and children. I cannot let them starve."

"Suppose one promised to take care of them, would you give up this infamous life?"

"If I were sure of it," said the man, staggered, "I would give it up tomorrow."

"I give you," said Skilizzi, "a gentleman's word of honor that I will take care of your wife and children. Will you come with me, give yourself up, work out your sentence—which will be infinitely more lenient than if you were captured—and begin an honest life afterward?"

After some moments of hesitation the man accepted the offer. They entered the carriage together and drove to the nearest police station, where the man gave himself up, to the unspeakable surprise of the authorities.

Through the iron grating which now separated the two the brigand shook hands with his captor and said, "God bless you!" —San Francisco Examiner.

A Monocle.

Mr. Hubly—I saw a man making a regular monocle of himself in the street just now.

Mr. Westby—A what?

"A monocle."

"Ha, ha! You mean spectacle, don't you?"

"No, sir, I do not. There was not a pair of him, and therefore he was a monocle. Thank goodness, I can speak the English language correctly."—Pearson's Weekly.

In all evils which admit a remedy, impatience should be avoided, because it wastes that time and attention in complaints which, if properly applied, might remove the cause.—Johnson.

HUXLEY AS A LECTURER.

The Scientist Was Nervous and Always Fearful of a Breakdown.

It is very singular that, although, as admitted by all who heard him, he was one of the clearest and most eloquent of scientific lecturers of his time, he always disliked lecturing, and the nervousness from which he suffered in his early days was never entirely overcome, however little apparent it might be to his audience.

After his first public lecture at the Royal institution he received an anonymous letter telling him he had better not try anything of the kind again, as whatever he was fit for it was certainly not giving lectures. Instead of being discouraged he characteristically set to work to mend whatever faults he had of style and manner, with what success is well known. Nevertheless he often told me of the awful feeling of alarm which always came over him on entering the door of the lecture room of the Royal institution or even the College of Surgeons, where the subject was most familiar and the audience entirely sympathetic.

He had a feeling that he must break down before the lecture was over, and it was only by recalling to his memory the number of times he had lectured without anything of the kind happening and then drawing conclusions as to the improbability of its occurring now that he was able to brace himself up to the effort of beginning his discourse. When once fairly away on his subject, all such apprehensions were at an end. Such experiences are of course very common, but they were probably aggravated greatly in Huxley's case by the ill health, that miserable, hypochondriacal dyspepsia which, as he says himself, was his constant companion for the last half century of his life.—Sir W. H. Fowler in North American Review.

THE AMERICAN IN FRANCE.

Looked Upon as a Good Thing and Is a Privileged Character.

Although in France and one or two other countries there is a police regulation that every person arriving at a hotel shall fill out a blank and give a full account of himself, the rule is rarely enforced.

The waiter who follows the newly arrived guest to his apartment provides an official blank, but explains that the name and address will be sufficient. Usually the questions are as follows:

Date——.
What is your family name?
What is your first name?
How old are you?
What is your profession?
In what country were you born?
What state?
What is your permanent residence?
What was your last stopping place?
Have you a passport?

However strict the police regulations may be, these questions seldom have to be answered. Probably there are so many travelers from America that the police have no time to keep track of their long jumps, one night stands and quick flights.

"You are an American? Vair well. Your name—eet weel do."

The visitor says he is from the "U. S. A." and that settles it.

Usually customs inspectors are equally lax and chalk the American's baggage after the most cursory examination.

The American is a privileged character. He is among them to spend money.

He is neither friend nor enemy, but a business proposition.

He is a good thing, and they are glad to see him, and never suspect him of anything other than a desire to see all the sights and pay freely for the seeing.—Chicago Record.

Dignity Didn't Pay.

The postoffice at Grass Valley was at the back end of a "general" store, and the postmaster, who was also the proprietor of the store, was weighing me out some tobacco, when a solid, middle aged woman came and slammed a 2 cent piece down on the counter and exclaimed:

"Stamp—2 center!"

The postmaster handed her one, but she waved it away and pitched a letter at his head and said:

"Lick 'er on."

He promptly and humbly obeyed, and as the woman walked away I asked:

"Don't people out this way lick on their own postage stamps?"

"Yes, most of 'em, but that woman is rather particular, and I don't want to take chances again."

"Chances on what?"

"Well, she came in here about six months ago for the first time and bought a stamp and commanded me to lick. I laid back on my dignity and refused, and she turned around and kicked the head out of a bar'l of N. O. molasses, and I lost about 'leven dollars by the operation. As my salary as postmaster is only $23 a year, I can't take no more chances."—Detroit Free Press.

Napoleon at the Surrender of Ulm.

While the 23,000 Austrians went through the forms of surrender Napoleon, as one of their officers wrote in his journal, "in the simplest garb, surrounded by his embroidered marshals, chatted with Mack and several of our generals, who, after laying down their arms, had been summoned to him. The emperor in the uniform of a common soldier, with a gray coat singed on the elbows and tails, a slouch hat without any badge of distinction on his head, his arms crossed behind his back and warming himself at a campfire, conversed with vivacity and made himself agreeable."—"Life of Napoleon," by Professor W. M. Sloane, in Century.

Making Bargains.

"Everything marked down to the lowest possible point?" said the merchant inquiringly.

"Everything," replied the clerk. "I put the $1.50 silks at $1.25 and everything else in proportion."

"At $1.25!" exclaimed the merchant. "Are you crazy?"

"Why, no, sir. You told me to mark them down for a genuine bargain sale."

"Of course I did, but do you think a woman can ever see a bargain in even money? Make them either $1.24 or $1.26 at once."—Chicago Post.

A Generous Bequest.

A husband, feeling his end approach, sent for a solicitor to make his will.

"I leave my wife a life interest in 100,000 francs."

"Very good But if she marries again?"

"In that case I'll make it 200,000. It is not for her, however. I leave it to her husband. Poor fellow! It will be hard earned money."—Illustrazione Popolare.

Coughs,

 Consumption.

The greatest cause of terror of the present day, formerly considered hopeless, is now conceded by the best physicians as curable under proper conditions. Its cause—a depleted condition of the system; a mal-assimilation of food; a wasting away of the tissues; an impoverishment of the blood. The result—a diseased condition of all the organs of the body; a formation of eating ulcers; and the result death from collapse or hemorrhage. But the cure is that greatest concentration into the least possible bulk of the vital elements of lean, raw beef. It is absorbed and nourishes with the least possible effort on the part of the stomach. It creates new tissue, enriches the blood, makes flesh, and by strengthening the great vital centres of the body enables them to perform their functions in a natural manner, and dispel disease. Thousands owe their life to its use.

The toboggan of the Park Club bowlers started last evening on its downward trip and they dropped from the lead into second place, but they have decided it shall be a reversible toboggan and carry them back to the top again. The Park Club found its Waterloo at Westfield, and although the visitors bowled well especially in the second game. The Westfield men put up an extraordinary game and sent the pins flying around at a lively rate. The second game was the most exciting, and there was considerable excitement among the few spectators present. The individual scores were as follows:

CYCLING COMMENT.

Monte Scott, the famous cycle racer, is the guest of Plainfield friends.

An accidental collision with a large stone smashed the front forks to the wheel of Everett J. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, yesterday noon. He was just returning to his studies at Leal's School.

What is considered by the New Jersey cycling trade to be the strongest partnership in the State has just been formed between Frank L. C. Martin, of this city, and Frederick Kerr, of the art firm of Frederick Kerr's Sons, Newark, which is one of the oldest firms in that city, having been established by Mr. Kerr's father fifty-two years ago and upon his death was left to the sons. Mr. Kerr is probably the best-known wheelman in this section of the country, being a veteran in the L. A. W., and for twelve years a cyclist. He is a member of the executive committee of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., President of the Essex County Wheelmen, second oldest club in the L. A. W., President of the Associated Cycling Clubs of New Jersey, ex-president of the board of trustees of the Hudson County Wheelman, and a member of the New Jersey L. A. W. racing board. Mr. Kerr is a prominent figure at all the important race meets and is very popular. He has been in the art business sixteen years. The store will be located at 569 Broad street, Newark, and will be one of the handsomest in the State. Mr. Kerr will use his excellent taste in the arts to make it so, while Mr. Martin will supply an unlimited amount of good business tact, as well as hustling qualities, which has made him so popular in this city. Both are well known as enthusiastic wheelmen throughout the State. The firm name will be Kerr & Martin Cycle Co. Mr. Martin will be in Newark on Monday, Wednesday and Friday of each week and the balance of the time here. George M. Macintyre, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Co., will have charge of the Plainfield store.

In connection with the Newark store there will be a riding school, the largest in Newark.

WINTER SPORTS.

The skaters of the High School will meet on the New Brooklyn pond tomorrow and will endeavor to gain places on the hockey team which will be formed. Two years the High School had the crack team of the city and if possible the boys intend to make this year's team as good as the team which played in the winter of '93 and '94.

BASKET BALL.

There is considerable excitement over what the result of tonight's basket ball game will be. It is the first time this season that the local Y. M. C. A. team has had a chance to measure its strength with outside players this year. Last year the team from the Orange Y. M. C. A. came over and were defeated after a hard fought game. Although the Trenton Y. M. C. A. players that come here tonight are supposed to be veterans in the game, they may be disagreeably surprised when they meet the Plainfield boys. With Smith and Carroll as forwards it is going to be a strong team that will prevent them from scoring. The contest will be an exciting one, even if the visitors come out ahead.

WHIST.

The famous whist team of the Park Club will in all probability get a challenge early in next year for the National trophy, which they won and lost this year.

UNDER GRANT

Have Permitted the Celebrated Waters of Hot Springs, Arkansas, To Be Used in the Preparation of which has the merited reputation of being one of the wonders of the world, having received the highest indorsement from prominent physicians.

Rheumatism and Gout—For these troubles the waters of Hot Springs, Arkansas, are famous the world over. "Pura Blood" will absolutely cure rheumatism and gout. Neuralgia is one of the most painful affections. It may effect not only one nerve, but a whole set of nerves. "Pura Blood" cures Neuralgia. In the cure of skin diseases "Pura Blood" has no equal. Thousands who have heretofore found no relief have been cured by this remedy. Eczema, boils, pimples, old sores are all cured with "Pura Blood." It does not drive the eruptions in, but cures by the action on the blood, purifying it, and, in fact, renewing and invigorating the entire body. It will cure when all other remedies fail. Any person wishing to be permanently cured of a blood disease, ask your druggist for "Pura Blood," which is prepared with the curative waters of Hot Springs, Arkansas, under grant from the United States Government. Billups & Co., of 26 Cortlandt street, New York, are sole agents, and will send descriptive book free to any address.

AN ORDINANCE

Governing Plumbing, Drainage & Ventilation.

Be it ordained by the Board of Health of the City of Plainfield, as follows:

Section 1. Every person engaged as a master plumber or foreman plumber or building contractor in the city of Plainfield shall appear in person at the office of the Board of Health before beginning any work, and register his name, residence and place of business on blank forms furnished for the purpose, and in case of removal shall make change in said register accordingly.

Section 2. Before any portion of the plumbing and drainage system of any building shall be constructed or any existing system altered or added to, there shall be filed in the office of the Board of Health a plan thereof signed by the owner, showing the said plumbing and draining system entire, from its connection with the sewer, cesspool or vault throughout the entire building, together with the location of all fixtures, traps, ventilating pipes, etc. No portion of the work shall be executed until the plan has been approved by a representative of the Board of Health and the name of the plumber who is to do the work has been affixed to the said plan.

Section 3. When the plan of any plumbing and drainage system is filed in the office of the Board of Health a fee of three dollars shall be paid to said Board to defray the expenses of inspecting and filing the plans and superintending the testing of the work, as provided in section 31.

Section 4. The Board of Health shall be notified promptly by the plumber when the plumbing and drainage work of any building, or any portion thereof, is completed and ready for inspection and testing. All inspections and testings shall be made during business hours as soon as possible after such notification. Any such system put in and covered before inspection by a representative of the Boardof Health must be uncovered for examination.

Section 5. No privy, vault or cesspool shall be constructed until a written permission has been obtained from the Board of Health; and no permission will be given for a cesspool where sewerage is provided adjacent to the property.

Section 6. Before laying the drain from the building to the cesspool or vault, and after the trench is graded, the bottom of the trench must be carefully rammed to avoid unequal settling of the drain. After the pipe is laid, as the trench is filled the earth must be tightly rammed as near as possible to its original compactness. Tunneling is prohibited. When the ground is made or filled in, the drain, extending from the cesspool or vault to the foundation wall, must be of extra heavy cast-iron pipe, of such diameter as may be approved. Such pipes should be laid with the joints properly caulked with lead. Where the soil consists of a natural bed of loam, sand or rock, the drain may be of hard, salt-glazed and cylindrical earthenware pipe, laid on a smooth bottom, free from all projections of rock. The space between each hub and the small end of the next section must be completely and uniformly filled with the best hydraulic cement. Care must be taken to prevent any cement passing into the drain to become an obstruction. No tempered-up cement shall be used. A straight-edge must be used inside the pipe, and the different sections must be laid in perfect line on the bottom and sides.

Section 7. Where a building is to be connected with a cesspool or vault it must be connected by a drain not less than four inches in diameter, having a fall of not less than one-quarter of an inch to the foot. Old drains can be used for new work only when made to conform in all respects to the foregoing regulations governing new drains.

Section 8. All horizontal drains within and to a distance of not less than six feet from the wall of any building shall be of cast-iron, with caulked, leaden joints, or wrought-iron screwed joints, and shall be so located as to be readily accessible for inspection. The house drain within buildings shall be securely hung on the cellar wall or properly suspended from the cellar ceiling, unless this is impracticable, in which case it must be laid at a uniform grade, upon a bottom of hydraulic concrete. The house drain shall have a fall of at least one-quarter inch to the foot, and more, if possible. When a pipe passes under the wall of a building, there shall be a relieving support to prevent the pipe being broken by settling of the foundation. Said drains shall be provided with openings for cleansing purposes, the same to be closed by gas tight plugs.

Section 9. All iron pipes must be sound, free from holes, and when laid under ground shall have a uniform thickness of at least one-quarter of an inch. Where the building is over sixty feet high above the curb, pipes of the following weights shall be used, with extra heavy fittings:

2-inch	5-½	pounds	per	lineal foot.
3	" 9-½	"	"	"
4	" 13	"	"	"
5	" 17	"	"	"
6	" 20	"	"	"
7	" 27	"	"	"
8	" 33-½	"	"	"
10	" 45	"	"	"

Section 10. All drain, soil, waste, vent and supply pipes shall be as direct and concentrated as possible, protected from frost and readily accessible for inspection and convenience in repairing. When necessarily placed within partitions or in recesses in walls, soil and waste-pipes must never be covered except with woodwork, said woodwork to be fastened with screws (never with nails) so as to be readily removed.

Section 11. Every vertical soil and main waste-pipe must be of cast or wrought iron, and when it receives the discharge of fixtures on two or more floors, it must extend at least two feet above the highest part of the roof or coping, except in flat-roof houses, in which case it shall extend at least six feet above the roof, and in no case shall it be less than four inches in diameter above the roof, and a strong wire basket shall be provided and securely fastened to such pipe. Each length shall be securely fastened, and each line of soil or waste-pipe shall rest at its foot on a pier or foundation to prevent settling. All joints in cast-iron drain, soil or waste-pipes must be so filled with oakum and lead and hand-caulked as to make them gas-tight.

Section 12. Every plumbing system when connected with a cess-pool or sewer shall be provided with a ventilating pipe, which shall in every case extend at least four feet above the roof, and the upper opening must be at least eight feet above or twenty feet from any window or door of the building or adjoining building and this ventilating pipe shall be clear and not less than four inches in diameter throughout its entire length, from the cess-pool or street sewer. The vertical soil or waste pipe may be used as a ventilating pipe, but if so used it must be clear and unobstructed by trap or otherwise.

Section 13. All changes in direction in cast or wrought iron pipes shall be made with bends or curved pipes, and all connections with Y branches and one-sixteenth or one-eighth bends, if possible.

Section 14. Soil, waste and vent-pipes in an extension must be extended above the roof of the main building, when otherwise if not so extended they would open within twenty feet of the windows or doors of the main house, or the adjoining house.

Section 15. The least diameter of soil-pipe permitted is four inches. A vertical waste-pipe into which a line of kitchen sinks discharges must be at least three inches in diameter, if receiving the waste of five or more sinks, and shall have two-inch branches.

Section 16. Where lead pipe is used to connect fixtures with vertical soil or waste pipes, or to connect traps with vertical vent-pipes, it must not be lighter than—

1¼	inch	2½ pounds.
4	"	6 "

Section 17. All connections of lead with iron in soil, waste or vent pipes must be made with a brass sleeve or ferrule of the same size as the lead pipe, put in the hub of the branch of the iron pipe and caulked with lead. The lead pipe must be attached to the ferrule by a wiped or over-cast joint. All connections of lead waste and vent-pipes shall be made by means of wiped joint.

Section 18. Every water-closet, urinal, sink, basin, wash-tray, bath and every tub or set of tubs and hydrant waste-pipe must be separately and effectively trapped. Urinal platforms, if connected to drain-pipes, must also be properly trapped, and a supply of water so arranged as to always maintain the seal of said traps. In no case shall the waste from a bath-tub or other fixture be connected with a water-closet trap.

Section 19. Traps must be placed as near the fixtures as practicable, and in no case shall a trap be more than two feet from the fixture. Each and every trap shall be ventilated by a special vent-pipe of suitable size extending at least two feet above the highest part of the roof of the house, or into a special pipe erected for ventilating purposes only, in which case the area of the special vent must be increased as it passes upward so as to correspond to the combined area of all branch vents passing into it. Mechanical traps or vents may be substituted where it is necessary or advisable, but only after approval by the Board of Health.

Section 20. The vent-pipe for each water-closet trap shall be at least two inches in diameter, and for traps under other fixtures not less than one and one-half inches. In all cases vent pipes must be of lead, cast or wrought-metal, and have a continuous slope to avoid collecting water by condensation.

Section 21. Vent-pipes must extend two feet above the highest part of the roof or coping, the extension to be not less than four inches in diameter, to avoid obstruction from frost. No vent-pipe shall be used as a waste or soil pipe.

Section 22. Over-flow pipes from fixtures must in each case be connected on the inlet side of the trap of the same fixture.

Section 23. No safe under any fixture shall be provided with any drip, waste or notice-pipe. The waste-pipe from refrigerators shall in no case be connected directly with any soil or waste-pipe, or with any drain or sewer, or discharge upon the ground.

Section 24 The sediment-pipe from kitchen boilers if connected with sewer must be efficiently trapped.

Section 25. Water-closets must never be placed in an unventilated room or compartment. In every case the compartmet must be open to the outer air, or be ventilated by means of a shaft or air-duct. Water-closets will not be permitted in cellars except under special permit.

Section 26. All water-closets within the house must be supplied with water from separate tanks or cisterns, the water of which is used for no other purpose. Provision shall be made for amply flushing each closet whenever used. A group of closets on the same floor may be supplied from one tank. Pan-closets and hollow plunger-closets are prohibited.

Section 27. Water-closets, when placed in the yard, must be so arranged as to be conveniently and adequately flushed, and their water supply pipes and traps must be protected from freezing. The compartment of such water-closets must be properly ventilated.

Section 28. All waste, overflow or vent-pipes shall be of lead, cast or wrought metal.

Section 29. Rain-water leaders must never be connected with the sewer pipe nor used as soil, waste or vent-pipes, nor shall any soil, waste or vent-pipe be used as a leader.

Section 30. No steam-exhaust, blow-off or drip-pipe from a steam boiler or engine shall connect either directly or indirectly with the sewer.

Section 31. Every new plumbing system, including those altered, must be tested by the plumber in the presence and to the satisfaction of the officer designated by the Board of Health; all defective joints must be made tight and other openings made impervious to gases. Defective pipe must be removed and replaced by sound pipe.

Section 32. In cases where a building is found to be in an unsanitary condition through defective plumbing or otherwise, the directions of the Board of Health concerning changes and repairs shall be complied with within such reasonable time as may be designated under penalty of ten dollars per day thereafter until such work is done, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one conviction.

Section 33. No person shall place or deposit in any water closet or waste, soil or ventilating pipe, refuse materials, large pieces of paper or other substances liable to clog the pipe or trap.

Section 34. Any person or persons or corporation violating any of the provisions of sections 1, 2, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, 27, 28,29, 30, 31, or 33 of this ordinance, shall on conviction thereof, pay a penalty not less than twenty-five dollars nor more than one hundred dollars for each and every offense.

Adopted June 25, 1895, by the Board of Health of the city of Plainfield.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 5th, 1895.

J. T. MACMURRAY, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE

TO CREATE THE OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS AND TO DEFINE HIS POWERS, DUTIES AND COMPENSATION.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That there shall be appointed by the Common Council within thirty days after the approval or final adoption of this ordinance, and annually thereafter, on the first Monday of February in each year, an officer to be known as Inspector of Buildings, who shall be either an architect, carpenter, mason or other mechanic. The term of office of every person so appointed shall expire on the first Monday of February following the month of his appointment. His duties shall be such as devolve upon him as Inspector of Buildings by the laws of this State, and this and other ordinances of the City of Plainfield, and his compensation shall be the sum of five hundred dollars per annum. For brevity, said officer is hereinafter designated as Inspector.

Section 2. That the said Inspector is hereby charged with the performance of all services necessary to ensure the strict enforcement of the ordinances of the City now existing or that may be hereafter adopted, relating to the erection, construction or alteration of buildings therein. He shall keep a record of all applications for permits and preserve and properly index such drawings as may be filed of all plans on which permits shall be granted.

Section 3. That after any permit shall have been granted as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the said Inspector diligently to inspect said building while in course of erection, and to see that it is constructed in conformity with the ordinances of the City relating thereto. The said Inspector shall also keep a full and complete record of all buildings in course of erection or alteration, their style and proposed uses, and make a report of the same in writing once a month to the Common Council.

Section 4. That for the purpose of ascertaining all violations of ordinances designed for the more effectual prevention of fires, it shall be lawful for him, the said Inspector, whenever he shall have good and sufficient reason to believe that any of such ordinances are being violated, to enter into or upon any lands or building for the examination of holdstways, trapdoors, fire-places, hearths, chimneys, stoves and pipes thereto, receptacles for ashes, ovens, boilers, heaters and chemical apparatus, which may be dangerous as tending to cause or promote fires; and it shall be his duty to direct the owner or occupant of any defective building, by notice signed by said Inspector, to alter the same in such manner and within such reasonable time as he may deem necessary. He shall also examine, at reasonable hours in the daytime, and it shall be lawful for him for that purpose to enter into and upon all buildings and places where any gunpowder, saltpetre, hemp, flax, tow, hay, rushes, firewood, boards, shingles, shavings, or other combustible materials may be lodged; and whenever he shall discover any violation of any of such ordinances, or anything that is detrimental to public safety, he shall notify in writing the owner or occupants of the building wherein such unlawful or unsafe conditions exist to immediately cause the same to be corrected, and it shall be the duty of the person so notified to comply with such notice. And in case of the neglect or refusal of the owner or occupant of such building, or the possessor of such combustible materials to correct said unlawful and unsafe conditions and to alter, remove or secure the same within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the person offending shall on conviction thereof pay a penalty of five dollars for each and every day after the expiration of the time in such notice stated he shall neglect or refuse to comply, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one suit.

Section 5. That in case the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department of said City shall be either an architect, carpenter, mason or other mechanic, he may be appointed to said office of Inspector of Buildings, and hold both offices at the same time, and in that case, he shall devote all his time to the performance of the duties of said offices.

Section 6. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are herby repealed.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 5th, 1895.

AN ORDINANCE

RELATING TO THE CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Before the erection, construction, removal or alteration of any building or structure, or any part thereof, or any platform, staging or flooring to be used for seating or standing purposes is commenced within the City limits, the owner or his agent or architect shall obtain a permit therefor from the Inspector of Buildings, and unless such permit shall expressly waive the same, shall submit to the Inspector of Buildings such drawings as may be necessary to show the construction of the building or structure, and a detailed statement, in duplicate, of the specifications, on appropriate blanks to be furnished by the Inspector, giving also the location, the proposed use of the building or structure, which shall be accompanied with a statement in writing, sworn to before any person authorized by law to administer an oath, giving the full name and residence of the owner or of each of the owners of said building or proposed building, staging or flooring.

If such operation is proposed to be made by any other person than the owner or owners in fee, the person or persons intending to make such erection or alteration shall accompany the application for permit with sworn affidavit, giving the full name of the owner or owners of the land, and also of every person interested in said building or proposed building, either as owner, lessee or in any representative capacity.

Such statement may be made by the agent or architect of the persons or persons hereinbefore required to make the same, and any notice served upon such agent or architect shall be binding upon the principals.

Said sworn statement and copy of application and plans shall be kept on file in the office of the Inspector, and the said operation or any part thereof shall not be commenced or proceeded with until said statement and plans shall have been so filed and approved by the Inspector in writing.

A permit may be granted for the erection or construction of any part of a building, when accompanied by a statement and plans of said portion, before the entire plans and detailed statements of said building have been submitted.

Ordinary repairs may be made without notice to the Inspector, but such repairs shall not be construed to include the cutting away of any constructional support, whether wall, pier, column, girder or beams, or the removal, change or closing of any staircase or exit.

All applicants for permits shall be passed upon by the Inspector within ten (10) days from dates of receiving the same respectively.

All permits to construct or alter any building shall be valid for one year from the date thereof and no longer.

Permits for removal shall specify the time within which the removal shall be made.

As herein used, the term "removal" means to change the location of building or structure. To take down or remove shall be termed "demolition."

Section 2. Outside of the fire limits prescribed herein, buildings of frame or wood may be erected, subject to conditions hereinafter prescribed for chimneys, flues, hearths, steam or heating flues, electric wiring or any fire-causing factor of construction.

Frame buildings to be occupied or used as a stable, workshop or manufactory shall not be built or so used if more than thirty (30) feet in total height.

No frame or wood dwelling house hereafter erected shall exceed fifty (50) feet in height to highest point on main roof.

In no case shall a wooden building be erected within three (3) feet of any inside line of a lot, unless the space between the studs of any and every such side be filled in solidly with not less than two (2) inches of brick or other hard fireproof material.

When three (3) or more frame houses are built continuous the dividing wall between each house is to be of brick not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundation wall to a point up to the under part of the roof.

No spire or tower of wood shall be built or rebuilt within the City limits to a greater height than sixty (60) feet.

Section 3. All excavations to be made and protected as per Section 13.

Section 4. All cellar or basement walls for frame buildings, outside of the fire limits, shall be not less than eight (8) inches thick; if of brick, to a depth of eight (8) feet below grade on street; and to be not less than eighteen (18) inches thick and well bonded if of stone. If of greater depth than above, or if carried up eight (8) feet or more above grade to frame, the foundation wall is to be not less than twelve (12) inches thick if of brick, and not less than twenty (20) inches thick and well bonded if of stone.

All foundations below grade to be laid in good lime or cement mortar mixed with sharp sand.

Section 5. All frame or wooden buildings exceeding a height of fifteen (15) feet shall be built with sills, posts, inter-ties or ribbon strips, plates and rafters, all of suitable and sufficient size, to be properly braced and framed, and with suitable studs set at proper distances apart, with fire cut-off at each floor. The floor beams shall not be less than two (2) inches in thickness and ten (10) inches in depth, except third story or attic beams which may be two (2) inches in thickness and eight (8) inches in depth, well bridged.

Whenever frame construction is of wood, even if partially or wholly covered with veneer of brick or stone, it shall be deemed a frame building.

Section 6. The removal of any wooden building or structure from without to within the fire limits is absolutely prohibited, and if accomplished before discovery the Common Council may, at its discretion, order its return or demoliiton within twenty-four hours after notice, at the expense of owner or owners of said building.

Section 7. The fire limits of the City of Plainfield are hereby established so as to include all that district of said city contained within the following boundaries, and also within the space of one hundred and fifty (150) feet beyond and parallel to the centre lines of the streets or avenues constituting the said boundaries: Beginning at the point of intersection of the centre line of Washington Avenue with the City line in Green Brook; thence along the centre line of Washington Avenue to the centre line of West Front Street; thence along the centre line of West Front Street to the centre line of New Street; thence along the centre line of New Street to the centre line of West Fifth Street; thence along the centre line of West Fifth Street and East Fifth Street to the centre line of Washington Street; thence along the centre line of Washington Street to the centre line of East Front Street; thence along the centre line of East Front Street to the centre line of Elm Place; thence along the centre line of Elm Place to its intersection with the City line in Green Brook; thence along the City line in Green Brook to the place of beginning.

Section 8. Every wooden or frame building, with a brick or other front within the fire limits, which may hereafter be damaged by fire, the elements or otherwise, to an amount not greater than three-fourths the total immediately previous value thereof, may be repaired or rebuilt pursuant to the provisions of this ordinance.

But, if such damage shall amount to more than three-fourths such value, then such building shall not be repaired or rebuilt, but shall be demolished.

Section 9. Should the decision of the Inspector or of Appraiser as hereinafter prescribed permit of the repair or restoration of any building, every damaged wall or part thereof shall be repaired or restored to its full original strength, but only within the limits of its original height and other dimensions and uses.

Section 10. The previous value of such building and the proportion of such damage, the extent of re-use of any wall or walls or parts without repair, and the amount of repairs or restoration may be determined by the Inspector, or, subject to appeal as hereinafter provided.

Upon the written demand of the owner or owners of such premises, to be sent to the Mayor, he shall appoint one appraiser and one appraiser shall be selected by said owner or owners.

They shall at once examine the said premises, and if they agree their decision is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to, and shall be final and conclusive.

Should these two appraisers not agree, they shall select a third appraiser or umpire to take part in such impartial and disinterested examination and verdict.

The joint decision of any two of them is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to, and shall be final and conclusive.

Each appraiser is to receive ten ($10) dollars for such service, to be paid by the owner or owners of said building before said report is filed, and no repairs or alterations except to the extent necessary to make safe as directed by the Inspector, shall be made or begun until said report is filed and permit obtained.

Said report is also to include a separate detailed statement in writing as to causes or probable causes of damage, and of the general or special conditions making favorable thereto in each case, and may also include the suggestions of the appraisers as to effective future remedy and prevention.

These reports are to be kept carefully filed by the Inspector in a special docket, to be known as the Fire Inquest docket.

Section 11. Temporary one-story frame buildings within the fire limits may be erected for the use of builders within the limits of lots whereon or adjacent to where buildings are in course of erection, upon permit of Inspector, said structure to be used only for the purpose specified.

Temporary stagings, platforms or floorings for seating or standing purposes may be constructed of wood, upon filing of plans and permit from Inspector.

All temporary structures of wood are to be demolished by owners upon the completion of purpose specified.

Fences of wood shall not be over ten (10) feet in total height.

Signs of wood shall not be erected over two (2) feet high on any building.

Piazzas or balconies of wood, not to extend in height more than three (3) feet above the second story floor beams, may be erected upon any detached dwelling house, occupied by not more than three (3) families.

One wooden bay or orjel window may be built of wood upon any face or front of any building, if but one (1) story in height and not more than one-third of the width of said face or front.

If but two stories in height and of said proportionate width, it may be constructed of wood, but shall be covered with metal, slate or tile.

If of any greater height or dimensions, or more than one is desired on any one side or face of it or they shall be wholly built of fireproof material.

The roofs of all permanent new wooden constructions are to be covered with metal, clay tile or slate.

Existing shingle roofs may only be repaired or renewed on old lines and heights.

If altered or reconstructed in any way, a metal, clay tile or slate roofing is to be substituted.

Sheds of wood not over fifteen (15) feet to highest point of roof, and constantly open on at least one side, with the closed sides and roof thereof covered with metal, clay tile or slate, may be built on permits from the Inspector, but no fence shall be used as any side of such shed.

Exterior privies, wood or coal houses not exceeding one hundred and fifty (150) square feet in superficial area and not over eight (8) feet in heigh, may be built upon permit from the Inspector, with roofs only, covered with metal, clay tile or slate.

Section 12. The walls of all buildings within the fire limits other than frame buildings and constructions herein authorized, shall be constructed of stone, brick, iron or other hard incombustible material, and the several component parts of such buildings shall be as hereinafter provided.

The height of all walls shall be measured from the curb level at the centre of the building, to the top of the highest point of roof beams on flat roofs, or to the average or middle height of gable for all high pitched ridge roofs having no deck.

When the walls of a structure are twenty-five feet or more distant from every street line, then the average level of the grades at walls may be taken instead of curb.

If the wall is practically entirely carried on iron girders supported by masonry piers or iron columns, the measurements as to height may be taken from the top of such girder, for such wall only.

The width of buildings for the purposes of this ordinance shall be construed by the direction in which the beams are placed, lengthwise of the beams to mean the width wise of the building, and the bearing walls are those on which the beams are carried.

Section 13. All excavations shall be properly guarded and protected by the person or persons causing the excavation to be made, so as to prevent the same from becoming dangerous to life or limb; and shall be sheet piled where necessary to prevent caving in of adjoining earth.

Whenever an excavation for building or other purposes shall be intended to be, or shall be, carried to a depth of more than ten (10) feet below the street curb, the person or persons causing such excavation to be made shall at all times, from the beginning to the completion thereof, at his or their expense, preserve any adjoining or contiguous wall or walls from injury and support the same by proper foundations, so that the said wall or walls shall be, and remain practically as safe as before such excavation was begun, whether the said adjoining or contiguous wall or walls are down more or less than ten feet below the street curb.

If such excavation shall not be intended to be, or shall not be, carried to a depth of more than ten (10) feet below the street curb, the owner or owners of such adjoining or contiguous wall or walls shall preserve the same from injury and so support the same by proper foundations to full depth of such excavation, that it or they shall be and remain practically as safe as before such excavation was begun, and for that purpose shall be permitted to enter upon the premises where such excavation is being made, when necessary, and shall complete the same within reasonable time.

If in either case entry at reasonable times is refused, the Inspector may determine such difference, or prescribe the best and most practicable way of making safe as herein required.

If an adjoining party wall is intended to be used by the person or persons causing the excavation to be made, and the use of such wall is approved by the Inspector, then the said person or persons causing the excavation to be made shall at his or their expense amply protect and secure such party wall by proper foundations as before described.

If the person or persons whose duty it shall be to preserve or protect any wall or walls from injury shall neglect or fail so to do, after having had twenty-four hours' notice from the Inspector, then the Inspector may enter upon the premises and make same secure and safe at the expense of the person or persons last herein referred to.

Section 14.—Except on rock bottom all foundations shall have footing courses, and all footing or base courses under foundation walls shall be laid not less than three (3) feet below the permanent surface of the ground, on a good solid bottom; and in case the nature of the earth and the character of the building should require it, on a bottom of driven piles or laid timber, of proper kind and sufficient size and thickness, or such other approved foundation as the Inspector and the nature of the case may require, to keep and maintain the walls firm and secure.

All piers, columns or posts, resting on the earth, shall be set upon a solid bottom, in the same manner as required for the foundation walls.

Except in the case of adjacent excavations as hereinbefore provided, should any grade be lowered the foundational supports shall be also carried down to the depth above prescribed.

The footing or base course under all the foundation walls, and under all piers, columns or posts resting on the earth shall be of stone or concrete, and if under a foundation wall shall be at least six (6) inches wider than the bottom width of the wall; and if under piers, columns or posts, shall be at least six (6) inches wider on all sides than the outside bottom lines of said piers, columns or posts.

Except that in case of dwellings, where a good gravel bottom exists, the footing or base course may be only four (4) inches wider instead of six (6) inches wider, as hereinbefore provided.

The thickness of all footing courses shall be not less than one-third their width, but no concrete footing course shall be less than six (6) inches thick.

All base stones shall be well bedded and laid crosswise, edge to edge.

Section 15.—In buildings, where the space under the sidewalk is utilized, a sufficient stone or brick wall shall be built to retain the roadway of the street, and the side, end or party walls of such building shall extend under the sidewalk, of sufficient thickness, to such walls.

The roofs of all vaults shall be of incombustible material.

Openings in the roofs of vaults for the admission of coal or light shall be covered with lights of glass in iron frames, or with iron covers having a rough surface, and rabbeted flush with the sidewalk; these lights shall not be more than four inches square.

When areas are covered, iron, or iron and glass combined, stone or other incombustible materials shall be used, and sufficient strength in such covering shall be provided to insure safety to persons walking on the same, and to carry the loads which may be placed thereon.

Open areas shall be properly protected with suitable railings.

Section 16.—Foundation walls shall be construed to include all walls and piers below the curb level or tier of beams nearest to the curb level intended to serve as supports for all superimposed weights.

All foundation walls shall be built of stone or brick.

If built of stone they shall be at least eight (8) inches thicker than the wall resting upon it, to a depth of not more than ten (10) feet below curb.

If built of brick, they shall be at least four (4) inches thicker than the wall resting upon it, to a depth of not more than ten (10) feet below curb.

All stone walls shall have at least one header extending through the wall in every three (3) feet each way, of good flat stones.

All stone to be laid on its natural bed, to be built flush and true with struck joints, on inside, and all foundations below grade to be laid in good lime or cement mortar.

Section 17.—When walls herein prescribed are of diminishing thickness upwards, the said decrease of thickness shall be construed to mean at the top line of tier of beams nearest to the height specified.

The ends of all wooden beams in all walls, especially in all party walls, are to be separated by at least four (4) inches of brick work.

And in eight (8) inch walls, to be strapped together on the tops of every fourth beam strongly spiked, for cross tie.

As many stories as desired may be placed within the given total heights.

If a greater height than seventy-five (75) feet is desired for the walls of any building, the entire building must be built of approved fireproof construction.

If any tower, or part of any building or structure is to be built of a greater height than seventy-five (75) feet above curb, it shall be built of fireproof materials as approved by the Inspector.

Section 18.—All outside walls of dwelling houses within the city limits shall not be less than eight (8) inches thick, if under and not more than twenty-four (24) feet above curb level.

If over twenty-four (24) feet and not over fifty (50) feet above curb level, the walls shall not be less than twelve (12) inches thick.

If over fifty (50) feet and not over sixty (60) feet high, the walls shall be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of fifteen (15) feet above curb level, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

If over sixty (60) feet and not over seventy-five (75) feet high, the walls shall be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of twenty-five (25) feet above curb level, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

Section 19.—All party and interior brick walls twenty-five (25) feet or less in height shall be not less than eight (8) inches thick.

All party and interior walls over twenty-five (25) feet high, and not over forty (40) feet high, shall be not less than twelve (12) inches thick to the height of fifteen (15) feet above curb level, and not less than eight (8) inches thick from thence to top.

All party and interior walls over forty (40) feet high, and not over fifty (50) feet in height above curb level, may be built twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches thick more than twenty-five (25) feet in height.

All party and interior walls over fifty (50) feet high, and not over sixty (60) feet in height, may be built twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches thick more than twenty-five (25) feet in height.

All party and interior walls over sixty (60) feet high, and not over seventy-five (75) feet in height, shall be not less than sixteen (16) inches in thickness to the height of fifteen (15) feet, and from thence upward twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches in thickness more than fifteen (15) feet in height.

Section 20.—Excepted from the requirements of previous sections are all dwelling houses built in continuous blocks of three (3) or more, when each is not more than twenty-two (22) feet wide, forty-five (45) feet deep, and thirty-five (35) feet in height, which may have interior and party walls only, of brick, not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundations. And also:

All the walls of dwellings not more than twenty-two (22) feet wide, forty-five (45) feet deep, and not more than twenty-five (25) feet or two (2) stories in height may be built not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundation.

One-story structures not over twenty (20) feet wide, thirty-five (35) feet deep, and fifteen (15) feet in height, may be built with all the walls not less than eight (8) inches in thickness.

Section 21.—In dwellings where the distance between the bearing walls is not over thirty-three (33) feet, and no clear span is over twenty-six (26) feet, brick partition walls not less than eight (8) inches thick, nor more than thirty (30) feet high, may be built to support the floors.

Over any room with a clear span of more than twenty-six (26) feet, proper supports of iron or masonry, of approved sizes and strength, may be used to support walls or floors, inclusive of support from overhead trusses or girders, but in every such case the bearing walls shall be increased four (4) inches in thickness for every twelve and one-half (12½) feet or part thereof that said span is over twenty-six (26) feet.

Where dimensions of buildings are given in the preceding sections, the width or depth may be changed, providing the area is not increased and additional inside walls are added if deemed necessary by the Inspector.

Section 22.—The outside or party walls of warehouses, stores and factories shall not be less than twelve (12) inches thick, if under and not more than forty (40) feet in height.

If over forty (40) feet and not over sixty (60) feet in height, the walls are to be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of twenty-five (25) feet, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

If over sixty (60) feet and not over seventy-five (75) feet in height, the walls are to be twenty (20) inches thick to the height of twenty-five feet, and from thence sixteen (16) inches thick to a height of fifty (50) feet above curb, and from thence twelve inches thick to top.

Front and rear non-bearing and intermediate bearing walls may be four (4) inches less in thickness than is above given, in buildings not more than twenty-five (25) feet clear span between walls, provided none are less than twelve (12) inches thick, and piers or columns supporting ends of girders are of sufficient strength.

When bearing walls are less than twenty-five (25) feet apart, or are intersected by cross walls, or strengthened by piers of sufficient size, the Inspector may permit the reduction of thickness of interior walls in just proportion to such added strength, except on walls less than forty (40) feet in height.

Where the clear span exceeds twenty-five (25) feet in any part of a building the walls supporting said span shall be four (4) inches more in thickness than is in this section specified, for every twelve and one-half (12½) feet or fraction thereof, that said span exceeds twenty-five (25) feet.

Where any bearing wall or part thereof shall, in its horizontal section or plan be weakened by excess of flues or openings, or at any other point not herein provided for, the Inspector shall require its amendment to a sufficient total bearing thickness.

Section 23. In all warehouses, stores and factories over twenty-five (25) feet in width between walls, in which there shall be brick partition walls, or girders supported on iron or wooden columns or piers of masonry, the said partition walls or girders shall be spaced not more than twenty-five (25) feet apart on longitudinal centres, and the columns, girders or piers shall be of sufficient strength and size to bear safely the weight and any strain to be imposed upon them.

Section 24. The walls of churches, theatres, foundries, machine shops and other buildings of a public character, shall in no case be less than is in this ordinance specified for warehouses; and said buildings shall have in addition thereto such piers or buttresses as in the judgment of the Inspector may be necessary to make a safe and substantial building for its purpose.

Section 25. In all walls the same amount of materials herein required for walls, may be in part used in piers or buttresses, provided the wall or bars between shall be of a thickness approved by the Inspector.

The inside four (4) inches of all walls may be built of hard burnt hollow clay or porous terra cotta blocks, if laid at the same time with brick work and properly bonded into the walls and of the same dimensions as the brick used.

In all walls that are built hollow, the separating space shall not be counted in the total thickness of wall, but the same quantity of material shall be used as if it were built solid as herein provided. No such hollow space shall exceed four (4) inches in width, nor shall such wall be built unless the parts of same are strongly bonded together by proper ties either of brick, stone or iron placed not over twenty-four (24) inches apart each way.

Recesses may be left in the foundation for walls of lower stories, but in no case shall these walls be of less thickness than the walls of third story, or less than eight (8) inches.

No recess for alcoves, water or other pipes shall reduce to less than eight (8) inches in thickness at that point.

If it is desired to increase the height of any existing party or independent wall, when said wall is less in thickness than is herein required, it shall be done by a lining of brick work to form a combined thickness with the old wall of not less than four (4) inches more than is required for a new wall at total height desired, and no lining shall be four (4) inches thick for more than one story or fifteen (15) feet.

Said lining is to be supported on proper foundations, and whenever four (4) inches thick is to be applied only to firm, cleaned wall and thoroughly anchored by wrought iron anchors driven into the old wall.

No existing wall shall be used for party wall or other purposes unless approved by the Inspector, and all supports of walls shall be only of brick, stone or iron.

The walls of each story shall be built up to the full thickness to top of beams.

All walls shall be carried up to all roof sheathings, and to top lines of all cornices, and all party walls shall be built twelve (12) inches above the roof and coped with stone, iron or terra cotta.

No coping wall shall be less than eight (8) inches thick.

In all buildings occupied by three (3) or more families over a lower portion used for any other purpose than a dwelling, the half partitions of first story and basement shall be of brick or other fireproof material and underside of staircases covered with metal lathing and plaster.

All walls shall be properly bonded together, or anchored to each other by tie anchors built not less than sixteen (16) inches into side walls every six (6) feet in height, anchors to be not less than one and a half by three-eighths of an inch in size.

All walls shall be anchored to each tier of beams with iron anchors not more than eight (8) feet apart, and extending to within at least four (4) inches of the outside face of the wall; between all openings there shall be at least one anchor, and where beams with anchors rest on partition or girders, in two or more lengths across the building they shall be strongly bolted or strapped together to obtain cross tie.

All walls to be strongly braced during their construction from the beams of each story, and when required and necessary shall also be braced from the outside until the building is enclosed.

All piers shall be built of stone or brick laid in cement mortar; all isolated stone piers to carry girders supporting walls, or columns or posts over, shall be well bonded and well covered on all exposed sides.

Isolated brick piers shall not, in height, exceed twelve (12) times their least dimensions.

Every brick pier less than nine (9) superficial feet in area at its base, supporting any beam, girder, arch or column on which a wall rests, or lintel spanning an opening over ten (10) feet and supporting a wall, shall at not greater intervals than thirty (30) inches apart have built into it a bond stone not less than four (4) inches thick, or a cast iron plate of sufficient strength, and of the full size of pier.

Under all iron beams, girders, trusses, columns of posts there shall be a cap or template of sufficient size and thickness, of stone or iron.

Ashlar shall not be counted as a part of the thickness of walls as herein provided, unless built and bonded as prescribed for foundations, and the walls so faced laid with, and ashlar bedded in, cement mortar.

All stone used for the facing of any building or part thereof, shall not be less than four (4) inches in thickness, to be strongly bonded or anchored to the backing.

Section 26. The brick used in all buildings shall be good, hard, well burnt brick, every sixth course to be a header course; all to be lly filled joints, to be built to true lines and carried up plumb.

Where walls are faced with brick in running bond every sixth course shall be bonded with whole brick diagonal bonders, or by splitting the face brick into halves and backing the same with a continuous row of headers.

The sand used in all buildings shall be clean, sharp grit sand.

All mortars to be thoroughly mixed by careful and persistent working.

Cement mortar shall be made of sand and cement in the proportion of not more than three (3) parts of sand to one (1) part of cement, and shall only be used immediately after being mixed.

Lime mortar shall be made of not more than four (4) parts of sand to one (1) part of lime, and shall not be used until throughly slaked.

Cement and lime mortar shall be made of three (3) parts of sand, one (1) part of cement, and one (1) part of lime.

Concrete for foundations shall be made of two (2) parts of sand, one (1) part of cement, and not more than five (5) parts of small, clean broken stone or good sharp gravel, all to be carefully mixed immediately before using.

Section 27. All openings for doors and windows in all buildings shall have a good and sufficient arch of stone or brick, well built and keyed and with sufficient abutments, or a lintel of iron of sufficient strength, or of stone not less than four (4) inches thick, with a bearing not less than four (4) inches at each end.

When the lintel is of less thickness than the wall to be supported, there shall also be a good timber lintel with bearings of not less than three (3) inches, and a double rowlock or bonded arch turned over same.

Section 28. In computing the weight of walls: Brick work shall be estimated at 115 lbs. per cubic foot; facing stones shall be estimated at 160 lbs. per cubic foot.

The safe bearing load for good brick work shall be estimated at 8 tons per su. ft. when laid in good lime mortar; 11½ tons per su. ft. when laid in good cement and lime mortar; 15 tons per su. ft. when laid in good cement mortar.

The strength of floors to be estimated for in buildings, in addition to the weight of materials, is to be not less than: For dwellings, 75 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for office purposes, 100 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for public assembly, 120 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for stores, warehouses, etc., 150 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for all roofs, 50 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface.

Section 29. Every iron column, post or other vertical support, and all trusses, beams and girders shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely its intended total load, and if of iron, the manufacturer or contractor shall cause to be plainly marked upon said girder or column, the weight it will safely sustain, and no greater weight shall be imposed thereon. All beams and girders to have ample bearings upon sufficient capstone or templates of stone or iron.

Iron supports to walls, whether beam, girder or column shall, if required, be thoroughly incased with brick or other approved fireproof material.

Section 30. No wooden floor beam shall be less than two (2) inches in thickness and ten (10) inches in depth. Except third story or attic beams which may be two (2) inches in thickness and eight (8) inches in depth.

All header and trimmer beams shall be double or one inch thicker than the beams, and where more than six (6) feet long shall be hung in stirrup irons.

All floor and roof beams to have bearings of not less than four (4) inches at ends, and where they rest upon brick or stone walls, shall be cut to a bevel of three (3) inches on their depth.

All wooden beams shall be framed away from all and every kind of flue in walls and chimneys, the trimmer beam to be at least eight (8) inches from the inside of any flue in a straight way, and four (4) inches away from the outside of a chimney breast, and the header not less than two (2) inches from brickwork.

All tiers to be strongly bridged with sufficient rows of continuous herringbone bridging well nailed for every ten foot span.

Each tier of beams to be anchored to all walls every six (6) feet with one and one-half by three-eighths inch wrought iron anchors well secured to side of beams.

All timbers and wooden beams to be free from weakening imperfections, and of full strength of dimension and kind.

Stud partitions are to be continuous wherever practicable, that is, to run down between the beams and rest on the plate of the partition below.

All wooden girders supporting beams shall be carried by brick piers, or iron, locust or other suitable hard wood posts of sufficient strength, on proper foundation.

Section 31. Every hoistway opening is to be provided on each story with a substantial railing, and strong battened trap door securely hinged, such railings and doors to be kept closed at all practical times, except when in actual use by occupants of builings, but especially to be carefully closed each and every day at the completion of business.

Any failure to provide such trap doors, and for every neglect to close the same as herein prescribed, the owner or occupant of said building shall be respectively liable for the violation of this ordinance.

The interior of all elevator or dumb-waiter shafts to be lined with metal or covered with metal lathing and plaster. The doors at each story to be covered with metal on the inside.

Section 32. In the fire limits, all roofs and cornices, the tops and sides of all dormers and gables, all balustrades, pediments and details generally, both constructional and ornamental, shall be of slate, metal or terra cotta. All cornices and other metal features to be secured to brick work with iron anchors.

The roof sheathing of every building shall in no case be extended across the front, side or end of any party wall.

All buildings shall be provided with metallic gutters and water leaders, the latter in no case to discharge upon the sidewalk.

The roofs of all buildings within the fire limits shall have a scuttle or bulkhead, covered with approved fireproof material, with fixed ladders or stairs of iron leading thereto. No scuttle is to be less than two by three feet in size, and the frames of all bulkheads are to be filled with brick or fireproof block.

All skylights shall be made only of metal and glass.

Section 33.—No chimney shall be built upon any floor, or be supported in whole or part with wood, but shall be wholly supported on stone, brick or iron.

Corbelling out a chimney shall not exceed eight (8) inches, in not less than six (6) courses of brick, and if supported by piers, said piers shall not be less than twelve (12) inches on the face, and be properly bonded into the wall.

All fireplaces shall have hearths of brick, stone, slate, or tile, not less than eighteen inches in width, to be supported on arches of brick or stone, and under all portable ranges such hearths shall be at least sixteen (16) inches wider on front than depth of range.

All floors under kitchen cook stoves and other stoves shall be covered with metal the same to extend at least one (1) foot, on all sides, beyond base of said stoves.

All stud partitions back of portable kitchen ranges shall be framed sixteen (16) inches higher than smoke pipe opening and one (1) foot wider each side of range, and the opening filled in with brick or fireproof blocks. No stove shall come within two (2) feet of any wooden partition. No wood work shall cross the brick breast of any portable range.

All ash holes, ash houses or ash depositories of any kind shall be built wholly of brick, stone, iron or fireproof material.

All smoke flues with walls less than 8 inches thick shall be lined on the inside with cast iron or fireproof terra cotta pipe, to be built in with brick work, from the bottom of the flue or from the throat of the fireplace, and shall be carried up continuously to the extreme top of chimney, which is to be not less than three (3) feet above the roof, to be coped with stone, terra cotta or iron.

All smoke flues for manufacturing or steam power boilers shall be built with double walls, with an air space between, the inside four (4) inches to be of fire brick or fire clay slabs or blocks laid in fire mortar, to the height of twenty-five (25) feet from the bottom.

All such flues to extend at least ten (10) feet above the highest point of any roof within a radius of fifty (50) feet, and be covered on top with a heavy wire netting.

The fire backs of all fireplaces shall not be less than eight (8) inches thick of solid masonry.

The brickwork on outside faces of all fireplace flues shall not be less than eight (8) inches, unless lined with tile.

All blind and dead flues to be shut off at the underside of the beams of each story.

Section 34. No wooden casing, furring or lath shall be placed against or cover any smoke flue or metal pipe used to convey hot air or steam.

All such flues to be covered with metal lathing, and all flues to be left smooth and clean on the completion of building.

No stovepipe shall pass through any floor or roof of any building or through any woodwork or partitions, unless protected by a double collar of metal or terra cotta with holes for ventilation, and not less than three (3) inches of air space between.

All stovepipes shall in all cases be kept twelve (12) inches away from all beams or unprotected woodwork; if protected by metal work the least distance from woodwork shall be six (6) inches.

All smokepipes from laundry stoves or any kind of heating furnace or boiler must be kept at all points not less than eighteen (18) inches from all unprotected woodwork.

If protected by metal the least distance from the woodwork shall be six (6) inches.

Where such pipe passes through any woodwork or partition it shall be protected by an iron thimble with at least eight inches of brick work around it, or a double collar of metal or terra cotta with holes for ventilation and not less than six (6) inches of air space between.

Section 35. All brick set hot air furnaces shall have two covers, with an air space of at least four (4) inches between, the top to be of brick or metal supported by iron bars, to be made perfectly tight, and there shall not be less than four (4) inches of space between the ceiling or floor beams and top.

All brick set furnaces except hot water furnaces shall have two four (4) inch well bonded brick walls with a not less than three (3) inch air space between. In every case to be built at least four (4) inches from all woodwork.

All portable hot air furnaces shall be kept at least two (2) feet away from any unprotected woodwork or ceilings (plaster not inclusive), and when protected by metal lining the distance shall not be less than one (1) foot.

No furnace shall be placed upon a wooden floor, but if such floor is adjacent thereto, the furnace must in every case be set upon brick or stone base of full size of furnace and to extend not less than two (2) feet beyond the furnace in front of the ash-pan.

Section 36. All hot air flues or shafts in stone or brick work to be lined with metal or burnt clay pipe.

All hot air flues in stud partitions shall be made double, with not less than one-half inch air space between, the back and sides of said channel and all other contiguous beams or woodwork to be lined with metal.

The outer faces of all hot air flues to be covered with metal lathing.

Horizontal hot air pipes shall not be less than three (3) inches below plaster ceilings, and where carried through wood partitions or floors they shall be guarded by either a double collar of metal with two (2) inches of air space and with ventilating holes, or be surrounded by brickwork at least four (4) inches in thickness.

Section 37. Registers shall not be located within four (4) feet distant horizontally from the furnace. When registers for hot air furnaces are placed in any woodwork or combustible floors the sides shall be lined with tin. All register boxes to be made of tin plate with flange, the register to rest upon the same, the sides of boxes to be not less than two (2) inches from all woodwork.

All indirect radiator boxes and all wooden boxes and casings enclosing steam pipes shall be lined with iron or tin.

Section 38. No steam pipe shall be placed within two (2) inches of any timber or woodwork unless same is protected by a metal covering, when the distance shall not be less than one inch.

All steam or hot water pipes passing through floors and ceilings and plastered partitions shall be fully protected by a metal tube one (1) inch larger in diameter than the pipe, and the space filled in with mineral wool, asbestos or other approved non-combustible material.

All cutting of beams for gas, water or other pipes shall be not more than three (3) feet from bearing of beams, and shall be not more than two (2) inches in depth in any case.

Section 39. Every electric wire for furnishing light, heat or power, led into any building from the outside thereof, shall have proper and sufficient appliances to cut off the current where it enters the building.

All inside wires shall be properly insulated and all work throughout be in accordance with the rules and requirements of the Underwriters' Association of this Department, a copy of which said rules and requirements shall be kept on file in the office of said Inspector.

Section 40. No gas burner, unless protected by a bell, shall be placed less than three (3) feet below any ceiling or woodwork, and all side lights and swinging brackets shall be so placed as not to endanger any woodwork, curtains or other combustible material.

Section 41. Every dwelling house occupied by three or more families above the first story, and every building already, or to be erected, occupied or used as a hotel, lodging or boarding house, school, theatre, or place of public assembly, and every factory, mill, manufactory or workshop, hospital, asylum, or institution, or office building shall be provided with suitable strong iron fire escapes as may be determined by the Inspector, to be constructed in such manner as he may direct and approve.

The owner or owners of any building upon which any fire escape may be erected is to keep the same in good repair, and no person shall at any time place

GEROME'S PERSONALITY.

An Affable Man, With a Military Manner and a Distinguished Air.

In person M. Gerome is a wiry, medium sized man, with a fine presence and very soldierlike in his erect carriage. His face is strong and full of character, his snapping eyes are searching and stern, and his fine head of gray hair and military mustache give him quite the appearance of a cavalry officer. Courteous manners, great affability and a most distinguished air make him an ideal type of gentleman. At a most absurdly early hour, when only milkmen, bakers and laborers are stirring, he may be seen in the Bois de Boulogne, or on the Champs Elysees, astride of a handsome horse, taking his morning exercise, but long before the gay world of Paris is idling over its morning cup of coffee the artist has returned and is busily engaged before his easel or with his modeling tools.

Twice each week he gives his forenoon to his pupils at the Government School of Fine Arts on the Rue Bonaparte. His presence is eagerly awaited, and his arrival is the signal for absolute silence. On his entrance and after his hat and coat have been taken by one of the scholars, without loss of time he at once goes at the work of criticism, in which he is a model of brevity and conciseness. His unerring eye at once detects the faults and wrong tendencies of each student, and nothing whatsoever escapes him. A pupil may deceive himself, but not the master. Kindly advice to the serious, stinging rebukes to triflers, pleasant encouragement to hard workers and useful counsel to progressive men—such are the results of his visits. He is very liberal in his ideas and gladly welcomes any style of work so long as it is healthy, honest and sincere. He takes great pride in the efforts of the pupils under him and does not hesitate to climb many pairs of stairs to the most humble little studio to correct and advise some poor, struggling chap at work on a picture, and Gerome will sit and chat with him and give him the benefit of his years of experience. His kindness and consideration to Americans in his studio are proverbial. —"A Famous French Painter," by Arthur Hoeber, in St. Nicholas.

THE ARMENIANS.

A Gifted People Who Have Played a Considerable Part In History.

The Armenians are a civilized people, a people of great natural gifts, and a people who have played a considerable part in history. Since their ancient monarchy, which had suffered severely in the long and desolating wars between the Roman and Persian empires from the third to the seventh century of our era, was finally destroyed by the Seljukian Turks, a large part of the race has been forced to migrate from its ancient seats at the headwaters of the Euphrates, Tigris and Aras. Some of them went southwest to the mountain fastnesses of Cilicia, where another Armenian kingdom grew up in the twelfth century. Others drifted into Persia. Others moved northeastward and now form a large, industrious and prosperous population in Russian Transcaucasia, where many have entered the military or civil service of the czar and risen, as the Armenians used to rise long ago in the Byzantine empire, to posts of distinction and power. Russia's three best generals in her last Asiatic campaigns against the Turks were Armenians.

Others again have scattered themselves over the cities of Asia Minor and southeastern Europe, where much of the local trade is in their hands. But a large number, roughly estimated at from 1,300,000 to 1,700,000, remain in the old fatherland around the great lake of Van, and on the plateaus and elevated valleys which stretch westward from Mount Ararat to Erzerum and Erzinghian. Here they are an agricultural and, to a less extent, a pastoral population, leading a simple, primitive life and desiring nothing more than to be permitted to lead it in peace and in fidelity to that ancient church which has been to them the symbol of nationality as well as the guide of life for 16 centuries.—Hon. James Bryce, M. P., in Century.

Choosing a Sweetheart.

A lady who has the credit of being versed in matters of the heart gives these few hints for the novice in love—they are applicable to both sexes:

Do not, if you have always admired fair people more than dark, fall in love with a dark person. The fact that you have always preferred fair people shows that your best chance of happiness would be with a fair life partner.

For instance, the man who has always admired small, slim girls should not choose for his wife a tall and well developed girl. Neither should the girl who thinks that a man should be tall and broad be persuaded to accept a man who possesses neither of these qualities.

People of different complexions and physiques will act in totally different ways under identically the same circumstances, and it is easy to believe that every man and every woman knows instinctively with what style of helpmate he or she is most likely to live in happiness.

Happy marriages have undoubtedly been known when these rules have not been followed; but, generally speaking, it is unwise for any one, in such a serious matter as marriage, to disregard in a moment of passion the fixed ideas and instincts of a lifetime.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

Why "Timothy" Grass Is So Called.

The forage grass known to the farmers of the United States as timothy is so called because first introduced and extensively cultivated in this country by one Timothy Hanson, a farmer of Maryland. This species of grass is well known in England and all over western continental Europe, where it is grown extensively by most farmers between the Mediterranean and the North sea. The botanical name of this grass is Phleum pratense. Timothy is known in the British isles as cat's tall grass and in several of our eastern states as herd, or herd's, grass. It was grown in large quantities in Maryland and Pennsylvania long before a spear of it had ever been seen in England, the first seed of it ever seen in the last named country being imported from America.—St. Louis Republic.

The Claims of Long Descent.

In a notice of a recent wedding the bride was described as "a lineal descendant of Edward III." A poetical friend, sending his congratulations, wrote:

From my earliest days I was led to believe
That we all were descended from Adam and Eve;
But poor Mrs. Brown-Jones—'tis very absurd—
Was only descended from Edward the Third.

Why Not Try Paine's Celery Compound?

The loss of a single night's sleep tells in the drawn expression on the face and the sluggish powers of the mind. When this unfortunate privation continues night after night, no one can shut his eyes to the disastrous ontcome.

Debility, neuralgia, headache, dyspepsia, melancholia and that dread paresis follow.

Physicians know the peril of sleeplessness. In every case brought under their care narcotics are rigidly kept away, because momentary relief leaves matters worse in the end. A permanent cure that looks to a rapid nourishment of the nervous system is found in Paine's celery compound. Nothing performs the needed service so surely and so rapidly.

It is the greatest nerve and brain restorative the world has ever known. The wonderful formula for Paine's celery compound is no secret to the medical profession. It is not a patent medicine. Its absolute freedom from any deleterious substance is an assured fact vouched for by the ablest physicians in the country, and by the eminent Prof. Edward E. Phelps, M. D., L. L. D., of Darmouth college, who first prepared it.

Sufferers from neuralgia, neuralgic headaches and rheumatism should stop short their morphine, quinine and such pain-killing drugs. No cure can be hoped for from these temporizers. There is one way of getting rid forever of the causes of all this suffering that is by taking Paine's celery compound. In this great modern remedy the real means of health is attended to; sleep is made sound and refreshing the appetite improves and the nerves stop complaining, because they get the nutriment that nature requires. This is the fundamental, rational way that Paine's celery compound takes to be able to cope successfully with diseases of the liver kidneys and stomach, and to guarantee a complete return of sound sleep, good digestion and a quiet, well regulated nervous system.

Paine's celery compound permanently cures diseases of nervous origin. It makes the sick well again.

MIGRATION OF BIRDS.

They Fly at Great Altitudes and Attain Speed Well Nigh Incredible.

The investigations of the celebrated artist and savant, Heinrich Gootke, have thrown an interesting light on many facts hitherto unknown concerning the migrations of birds. It has been noticed that when the time of departure comes the birds vanish as if by magic. This is explained in various ways. The migration flight is always at an extremely lofty altitude, and it also takes place generally at night.

The structure of birds renders them capable of existing at an incredible height. They can ascend to an elevation of from 35,000 to 40,000 feet, and at such heights sustain great muscular efforts for considerable lengths of time. At this altitude birds attain to astonishing speed, a speed which seems to come to them simply for the purpose of migration.

While the swallow is supposed to fly with the speed of the fastest train, the northern blue throat, a bird which under normal conditions only hops, makes the journey from central Africa to Helgoland in a spring night of scarcely nine hours. Its average rate is therefore 180 geographical miles an hour.

The Virginia plover, according to Mr. Gootke, travels at the rate of four miles a minute—that is 240 miles an hour. This incredible speed is of course only attained at great altitudes, where the extreme rarity of the air causes less loss of muscular power in overcoming friction and there is no wind to act as an impediment to progress.

What guides birds in their migration? After 50 years' study Mr. Gootke refuses even to attempt an answer of this question from a scientific point of view. What adds to the mystery is that young birds of the year—their age not exceeding 6 or 8 weeks—perform this first journey of their lives with the same unerring certainty as the old individuals which follow a month or so later.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

COL. HADLEY'S MEETINGS START IN AN ENTHUSIASTIC MANNER.

Three Services Held Yesterday, in Which the General Line of Attack for Christian Workers Was Described.

Large audiences greeted Col. H. H. Hadley, of New York, and his co-workers, yesterday, upon the opening day of their novel campaign of rescue for the slaves of drink in this city. Col. Hadley spoke yesterday morning at Trinity Reformed church, being warmly introduced by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, the pastor.

He stated the object of the series of meetings to be held at Reform Hall every night this week (excepting Wednesday) as being an effort to secure volunteers of Christians from the various churches who will try by personal effort, directed at some one drinking man, who they may select, for one year, to win him to a Christian life and into the church of his choice. The address was full of pertinent and interesting stories and experiences, illustrating the work and the truth of the Scripture.

The Colonel illustrated the verse 2 Cor. 5:17, "Therefore if a man be in Christ he is a new creature—old things have passed away, behold all things have become new," by the remarkable conversion of William Potter, who is to speak at the meeting tonight at Reform Hall; also the verse, "Though ye have lain among the pots yet shall ye be as a dove with wings of silver and feathers of yellow gold," by the thrilling story of the conversion of John McCabe, who will also relate his experience tonight, together with Chris. Rickert, the converted policeman, all from New York. Col. Hadley will also give a chapter of his own miraculous conversion. Miss Wray will speak and sing, William Runyon will sing a solo, and Mr. Leo will sing "Down in the Gilded Saloon."

In Reform Hall yesterday afternoon Col. Hadley spoke at some length, giving a description of the plan upon which the meetings will be conducted for the next eight days. He hoped there would be a hearty support on the part of all Christians in a strong effort to redeem lost souls, not alone from intemperance, but from all forms of vice and sin.

Upon the conclusion of his remarks Miss Wray sang an affecting solo, the audience joining in the chorus. She then gave a short practical talk to the unsaved, using forcible arguments to convince all that what she said was true and something to be desired by everyone.

The collection was then taken up, after which Mr. Leo, the Christian athlete, sang a beautiful solo, "The Bird with a Broken Wing."

It was announced that this evening there would be speakers from New York, in addition to Col. Hadley giving a chapter from his life on "How He was Saved." Wm. N. Runyon will also sing at the meeting this evening.

The meeting last evening was held at Grace Episcopal church, Rev. Dean Rodman, rector, presiding. Short addresses were made Col. Hadley, Miss Wray and Mr. Leo.

The meetings so far are marked with deep spirituality and absence of "cant" and are exceedingly direct in their application to the needs and plans of the work. Plainfield cannot but be benefited by them.

Tuesday evening Miss Wray will sing and speak, relating some of her experiences in the slums of New York and London, especially in the Whitechapel district. Mr. Leo will also speak and sing.

Thursday evening will be of great interest. Not only will Col. Hadley lead, but a number of the converts from the famous Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, New York, will come and relate thrilling experiences, and the famous soloist, Mrs. Isabelle Sparks Kress, will sing four of her best pieces.

The meetings during the week will begin at 7:30 p. m., and next Sunday at 4:30.

A Skating Club.

A skating club is being organized among the young people of Plainfield, Somerville and Westfield.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A TALK TO ODD FELLOWS.

One Hundred and Fifty Attend the Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

The regular Sunday afternoon meeting held at the Y. M. C. A. Hall yesterday was specially for the Plainfield and Queen City Lodges, Independent Order of Odd Fellows. There were nearly one hundred and fifty Odd Fellows present. Special music was given by a male quartette and L. H. Bigelow, Jr., rendered two vocal solos very effectively.

Rev. D. A. MacPhie made the address. He introduced his talk by giving a resume of the objects of the order and urging them to stand fast to their principles. He said that the order was in no way opposed to other organizations of like character or religious denominations, in fact the principles of the order were based entirely upon Scriptural teaching. He took for the points in his discourse the three links, the symbol of the order, viz: Friendship, Love and Truth, but dwelt more at length on Love. H said that the parable of the Good Samaritan is a good type of what should be expected of a loyal Odd Fellow.

TWO MEN WOUNDED.

One Stabbed in the Head, and the Other Shot in the Side.

Michael Zenick, and Charles Zavanta, of Bound Brook, were taken to the Somerset County jail at one o'clock yesterday morning. Zenick was suffering from stab wounds about the head and face.

Zenick had attempted to break up a christening party by beating in the windows and doors of the residence of George Verda with an axe. George Wheelock came out and, it is alleged, attacked Zenick with a knife. Fellow-countrymen interfered. Wheelock fled and has not been arrested.

Zavanta was shot in the side. Al Sanderson, of South Bound Brook, is accused. Zavanta was walking along Main street shortly after midnight, when he staggered against Sanderson. A fight ensued. Zavanta fell to the sidewalk and Sanderson escaped.

A Splendid Sermon.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, preached a very interesting sermon yesterday morning, contrasting Christianity with Mohammedanism. He showed that the characters of the founders, Christ and Mahomet, were not more different than the spirit of the two religions as illustrated by their doctrines and fruits. He paid a tribute to the moral influence of Admiral Farragut and the power of American war ships when he quoted the reason given by the Grand Vizier when asked why he allowed the establishment of Robert College at Constantinople. The Grand Vizier's reply was simply two words, "Farragut! Monitor!"

The Rev. D. Dewolf, of Newark, corresponding secretary of the New Jersey Baptist convention and superintendent of missions, occupied the pulpit in the First Baptist church for a brief time yesterday morning, presenting a claim of the State committee.

Attempted Robbery.

A bold attempt was made to burglarize the grocery store of Neuman Brothers at an early hour this morning. At half past one o'clock this morning Officer Mattox was walking down East Fifth street, and as he neared the store of Neuman Brothers, he saw a man run away from the side door leading to the store. The disappearing man had too much start for the officer to catch him and so the latter went to the store and made an investigation of the door. He found that it had been opened with a skeleton key besides the inside bolt having been broken off. The approach of the officer, however, frightened the would-be burglar away before he committed any theft.

Cut Prices on His Holiday Stock.

Edsall says in his new ad today that his house has already begun to cut prices on his immense stock holiday goods in order to close all out before Christmas. This means a great saving to purchasers, and a golden opportunity to make selections from the most complete assortment in this part of the State.

Blind Boy to Sing and Speak.

Percy Cannon, the blind boy, will speak and sing, and play upon the autoharp at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church tonight at 8 o'clock. An offering will be taken and presented to him at the close of the meeting. Everybody welcome.

—The Bible class taught by Wm. D. Murray, to which all young men are invited, will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building this evening at 8 o'clock.

THE LAST NIGHT OF THE FAIR.

NAMES OF THOSE WHO WERE THE PRIZE WINNERS IN CONTESTS.

No Competition for the Firemen's Trumpet, and it Will be Disposed Of by the Fair Committee—Profits Amount to $500

The Firemen's Fair is over and nothing is left but the pleasant memories of that week of excitement. Saturday night was the last, and as is usually the case, the best. Over fifteen hundred people gathered in the Columbia Cycle Academy to witness the dances. Then when they were over the crowd either danced in the space that was cleared in the centre of the academy, or gathered in groups for a friendly chat. The articles at the various booths that had not been sold were next auctioned off to the highest bidder, while the different contests were closed. Abner Bartlett won the trumpet for the most popular fireman. The lady's Keating bicycle to be given to the girl securing the most money was won by Miss Beula Waters. Frank Denecklau won the men's Keating wheel in a like contest.

Charles Smith was victor in the contest for a handsome badge to the one turning in the most money in subscriptions and selling the most tickets. A ring was the prize in another contest for securing money for the fair and was won by George Schaeffer. Miss Lottie Chamberlin did the best in another contest for a watch. A silver trumpet, which was to have been contested for by the firemen of Scotch Plains and Westfield, was not awarded as there was no competition for it. The committee will make arrangements for its presentation in some other contest.

The exact amount of the money that will be turned over to the joint treasury of the fire companies is not yet known, but it is estimated at about $500.

A Place for Holiday Shoppers.

Of all the big dry goods houses in New York there is none better known in Plainfield than the firm of O'Niels. While their patronage from Plainfielders is very large it is their desire to still increase it and it is this fact that prompted them to insert the big advertisement on the fourth page of today's Press, knowing the superior value of The Press as an advertising medium in Plainfield and this section. Their store in New York is an emporium for every thing that can be desired in the holiday line, and it is the wide variety and the low prices which abound there that has made them the leading department store in New York.

Dr. D. C. Adams Endorses It.

Supersentative and nervous persons have no fear of Dr. C. R. Thiers' method of extracting teeth. No gas, either, cocaine, or chloroform is contained in his anaesthetic. The patient retains all the senses, except the local nerve sense around the tooth. None need fear this anaesthetic, although to many all others may be dangerous. Thursdays are special price reduction days at his office, No. 13 Grove street. Dr. D. C. Adams says of it:

Suing the Soldiers.

A suit to recover $250 has been brought in the District Court, Elizabeth against Colonel Benjamin A. Lee and other officers of the 3d New Jersey Regiment. The suit is brought by Louis Newbane, a caterer, of Elizabeth, who alleges that he was engaged to furnish dinner by the regiment on the occasion of its recent field day, on October 30, at a price of $300. The caterer was paid $50 on account, but nothing since, as the Committee of Arrangements say the dinner was not what it ought to have been.

Methodists to Meet.

The quarterly conference of the First M. E. church will be held Wednesday evening after prayer meeting. Rev. C. S. Ryman, presiding elder of the Newark Conference, is expected to be present.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

WHAT PERSEVERANCE DOES.

SUCCESSFUL CAREER OF CITY JUDGE-ELECT GEORGE DEMEZA.

His Success Has Been Gained by His Personal Efforts Alone—Youngest City Judge Plainfield Has Ever Had.

The man who is to fill the office of City Judge after January 1st is a good example of a young man who has risen to a position of prominence by his own indefatigable efforts. George W. DeMeza is one of the prominent lawyers of Plainfield, and has now only begun his career which promises to be one which will be an honor to his city and to himself.

He was born at Hartford, Conn. on February 16th, 1871. When very young, his family moved to Plainfield where his father engaged in the furniture business. They afterwards removed to North Plainfield, where young DeMeza attended the public schools until twelve years of age. He then entered the employ of Schepflin, Baldwin, Tweedy & Co., where he remained for three years, continuing his studies outside of business hours. He afterwards studied for some time at private schools, taking up the higher branches of learning and the foreign languages. His father died when he was fifteen years old and he was thrown on his own resourses. He accepted a position with L. M. French where he remained for six months; then he entered the employ of A. L. Cadmus for about the same length of time. The study of law was his next choice, and he began to read law in the offices of Jackson & Codington. After he had been there a month he showed a natural taste for it and soon made his appearance in the justice's courts as the representative of Jackson & Codington. He won his first case against a prominent Newark lawyer.

GEORGE W. DEMEZA.

On November 3d he was admitted to the bar. The motion admitting him was made by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. He rented a small office in the old First National Bank building. His first case came the next day when he represented Jackson & Codington in the divorce case of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gable. He met with success. His first case in a high court was in the Supreme Court of New Jersey before Judge Lippincott, where he was also victorious.

Mr. De Meza has the reputation of being fearless in any court and has won the admiration of the members of the bar by his courtesy and his ever-ready arguments. He now has a handsome suite of offices in the Serrell building where he employs three clerks and a stenographer. He will be the youngest office-holder in Plainfield and the youngest City Judge that Plainfield has ever had. He is also the youngest lawyer known in the State. He has a flourishing practice and has had a large number of cases in the high courts. He also is settling up a number of estates. Of all the lawyers in Plainfield Mr. De Meza is the best known in the city court, the methods of which he has a thorough knowledge. He has always been a staunch Republican, and although having taken an active part in the last State election, this is the first time he has run for office. He is an unmarried man and resides with his mother on West Second street. Mr. De Meza is a hard worker and a thorough student. He is generally liked among the members of the bar. His popularity in this city was shown very plainly at the last election when he ran over 300 votes ahead of his ticket. He has one of the best and most complete law libraries in the State.

A Social Afternoon.

Mrs. C. L. Goodrich has invited all the women of the Congregational church to spend Thursday afternoon at her home on West Seventh street. From three o'clock until four will be a missionary hour when Mrs. M. E. Dwight will read a paper on the life and work of several missionaries.

FOREFATHERS' DAY ADDRESS.

Deeds and Misdeeds of Congregationalists, by Rev. C. L. Goodrich.

A Forefathers Day address on "Deeds and Misdeeds of Congregationalists," was delivered by Rev. C. L. Goodrich in the Congregational church yesterday morning.

In surveying history, said Mr. Goodrich, we come upon both good deeds and misdeeds, and we can learn from both.

The early Congregationalists have been much censured for their dealings with Roger Williams, Ann Hutchinson, and the Quakers. But before we condemn them, let us remember that these people were not punished so much for religious offences as for disturbing the public peace.

But nothing can justify the dark event that took place on Boston Common, when three men and one woman were "hanged by the neck until they were dead." At their death the religious spirit of the colony revolted, and the gates of religious intolerance were thrown down.

The history of the witchcraft delusion in New England seems terrible to us, but in reality it was very slight in America, in comparison with other countries. It was a very widespread delusion. A truer knowledge of God, more love to fellow-men, and more shrinking from anything like cruelty, have made a great difference in the world.

At first, only church members were allowed to vote in the new colony. After the division of religious and political privileges much of the earnestness of the churches died out. But God had not raised up His church to have it die. Jonathan Edwards became a great instrument in God's hand; Whitfield came over from England and a great religious awakening took place, 50,000 people being added to the churches.

At the time of the Revolutionary War the Congregational ministers were a strong factor in arousing patriotic sentiment. And by them was repeatedly urged the plan of a government of the people, by the people, and for the people. Congregationalism and patriotism have always been inseparable.

PRIZE WINNERS AT EUCHRE.

The Young People's Club of Dunellen and North Plainfield Meet.

The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club of North Plainfield and Dunellen, met at the home of Miss Sallie Gray, of Dunellen, Friday evening. The first feminine prize was won by Miss Mattie Barrett, while Charles Boice and Robert Carpenter tied for the men's prize. Mr. Boice won on the playoff. Miss Janie Churchill and Miss Bessie Benton tied for second prize, and Miss Churchill won the deciding game. William Terry won the other prize. After the game had been concluded, the evening was spent very pleasantly in dancing. Dainty refreshments were served at the close. The club meets again on December 27th.

Why They Are Christians.

The service at Trinity Reformed church last evening was a novel one. During the past week the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, had written about a dozen letters to prominent Plainfield lawyers, physicians and business men, asking them why they were Christians and what benefits they derived. They all replied, including one woman and a little girl. Mr. Schenck read the letters last evening and they proved to be most convincing arguments why a person should become a Christian and all were thoroughly practical. The pastor made an earnest appeal at the close for all to give up their life of sin and live for God.

Flames in the Nursery.

A servant girl in the employ of Mr. Rice, of Webster place, discovered the nursery in the home full of smoke yesterday morning, and gave the alarm immediately. A man living next door rendered his assistance, while an alarm was sent in from Box 27, about 9:30. The department responded at once, but when they arrived the fire had been extinguished. Chief Doane is unable to tell how the fire originated. It was discovered, however, to be in a box of toys in the nursery. The total loss will not exceed $12.

Cyclers Collided.

While Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, was riding his wheel on West Second street, near Liberty, Saturday evening, he collided with a cyclist going in the opposite direction. The unknown rider sustained several bruises and had a small quantity of flesh scraped from his leg. Mr. Conover escaped without injury, and the wheels were not damaged.

FREIGHT HOUSE TO BE BUILT.

THE CONTRACT FOR THE WORK AWARDED TO JOHN ABBOTT.

The New Building Will Be Located at Richmond Street and North Avenue—North Avenue Station Improvements.

After years of agitation the act which will give Plainfield a new freight house was consummated this morning by the signing of a contract between the Central Railroad of New Jersey and John Abbott, the contractor, for the construction of the building. The announcement that this improvement was an assured fact was published exclusively in The Daily Press some weeks ago, when a letter from President Maxwell, to a prominent Plainfielder was printed, in which it was stated that the improvements at the North avenue station had been decided upon by the officials of the road.

The new freight house will be located at the corner of Richmond street and North avenue, the property necessary for which was purchased in 1893 when the new building was first contemplated. Station Agent Haynes this morning told a Daily Press reporter that work would be commenced immediately by the contractor and that it would be pushed as fast as possible, though the winter weather would doubtless interfere somewhat with its rapid progress. However, it is calculated that the building will be finished and ready for occupancy by the first of next April. The structure will be 153 feet long and 45 feet wide, two stories high and built of brick. There will be ample room for the storing and handling of all freight and a handsome suite of offices for the clerical force will be built in one end of the structure. The roof will be of iron and slate.

The architecture of the house will be such as to make its erection an improvement to the section which it will occupy.

As soon as the freight business is moved to the new building in the spring, the improvements at the passenger station will be commenced, which will include the demolition of the old freight house, the laying out of a prettv park on that side of the track and the construction of a ticket office and waiting room on the present site of the freight house. A fence will doubtless divide the two stations and underground passages from one side to the other for the use of passengers will be built so as to avoid the risk to life and limb in crossing tracks to board trains. The improvements altogether will cost a good many thousand dollars.

Plainfield is one of the most profitable stations along the line of the Central Railroad and the thousands of patrons who now use the superb service of this road from this city will be more than pleased to hear of the consummation of the improvements so long under consideration.

How to Give Charity.

Five cents to a beggar in nine cases out of ten is either a contribution to the grog-shop or a means by which mendicancy is encouraged. Even the charity societies are imposed upon and the same person, sometimes unworthy, is helped by a half dozen different societies at once. On Thanksgiving day, in a city where there was no Organized Aid Association, a poor woman received eleven turkeys. The Organized Aid Association prevents this overlapping of relief.

A Secret Marriage.

A very quiet marriage took place at Rahway on October 16th, when Miss Nellie A. VanDeventer, of Central avenue, and Joel P. Ryno, of West Front street, were united in marriage at the home of Mrs. Ryno's aunt, Mrs. Sarah Pearson. Rev. T. C. Mayham, of the new Second M. E. church, performed the ceremony. The marriage was a secret one, and was not announced until Saturday when Mr. and Mrs. Ryno moved into their new home at 123 West Front street, which Mr. Ryno had already furnished.

Christmas Is Coming.

There was the largest attendance at the Sunday-school of the East Third street mission yesterday than there has been since its organization. There were one hundred and one scholars present.

An Elevator Selected.

Powlison & Jones have closed a contract with G. A. Weber, of Newark, for a double drum hand power freight elevator to be placed in position in their new building. The elevator will cost $350.

—The work of lathing was begun at Powlison & Jones' new building this morning.

20,000 PERSONS IDLE

New York Tailors Fighting for Their Union.

Efforts of the Employers To Return to the Sweating System—Contracts Backed with Heavy Bonds Repudiated—Schoenfeld May Again Lead the Struggling Workpeople.

New York, Dec. 16.—By to-night probably 20,000 persons will be idle as a result of the tailors' lockout. Ten thousand garment workers are directly involved in the fight against a return to the sweat system and 10,000 men, women and children who work in the less skilled branches of the clothing trade are idle because there is no work for them to do when the tailors are on strike. The men are members of the United Brotherhood of Tailors, the organization which succeeded by two great strikes, one in July last and one a year previous, in abolishing the sweating system. The cause of the strike is alleged to be that the contractors who employ them have determined to restore the sweating system and force them back into their former miserable condition. There are 600 contractors in New York and Brooklyn. Verbal notice of the proposed change was given by most of them to their employes when work was stopped on Friday night. Printed notices were then posted in the shops.

Fight Against Unions.

The notices read: "This is not a union shop. Pay day will be on Monday and not on Friday, as called for in the agreement. Employers will reserve to themselves the power to engage or discharge men as they please, whether union or non-union, union men not necessarily to be discriminated against. No shop delegates, business agents, walking delegates or other disturbers will be permitted to enter the shops for the purpose of examing the books, as the agreement calls for. Employes are to work ten hours a day on the piece-work or task-work system. If they do not accomplish the allotted day's work in ten hours they will finish it at such time as they please." This is a specific declaration that the agreement obtained by the brotherhood after the strike last year is to be violated in every clause, and that the old task system, by which a man had often to work three days to earn one day's pay, is to be restored.

Schoenfeld May Again Lead Them.

Perhaps it is a coincidence that the determination to repudiate the agreement was taken by the contractors the day after Meyer Schoenfeld, who led the workmen during the last strike to a successful end, resigned his leadership. Schoenfeld resigned on Wednesday. Four hundred contractors met at Apollo hall, in Clinton street, on Thursday and resolved to reorganize their association. They met and reorganized it at Roberts' hall, in East Broadway, Saturday, and were confronted with the set of rules printed above. Excited meetings of the workers were being held throughout the whole day yesterday at the headquarters of the union. The executive committee sat all day hearing reports from the shops. At a late hour last evening they had heard from 100 shops where notice of the new rules had been given, and at least 400 shop delegates were waiting their turn to be heard. Schoenfeld, it is said, will return if his services are needed to lead the new strike.

Contractors Under Heavy Bond.

The brotherhood has in its safe at No. 30 Suffolk street bonds representing $240,000 given by contractors after the last strike as a guarantee that they would observe the agreement. The contractors say that they have legal advice that they are not collectible. Herman Robinson, secretary of the brotherhood, says that that question will be decided shortly by the general term of the supreme court. Whether the bonds are forfeited or not the fight will be made for the abolition of the contract system. The tailors will demand that the large manufacturers employ them directly. They have come to the conclusion that there will never be peace in the trade while the middleman exists. The whole strength of the United Garment Worker, a national organization with 50,000 members in other cities, will be exerted to win the fight for the tailors, for a relapse to the sweating system in New York means a similar relapse all over the country. All the money at the command of the national organization will be used, and the American Federation of Labor, now holding its annual convention in Madison Square garden, will be appealed to to help in the most practical way.

Ambrose's Shortage Grows.

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 16.—It was announced in a semi-official way this morning that the audit of the accounts of W. A. Ambrose, the defaulting city treasurer, has been almost completed and that a shortage of over $7,000 has been found. It is said it will reach $10,000 when the audit is completed.

Gift to Catholic University.

Waterbury, Conn., Dec. 16.—The ecclesiastical library of the late Rev. John H. Duggan of St. Patrick's parish, has been shipped to the Catholic university in Washington, in accordance with the will of the dead priest.

To Incorporate West Troy.

Troy, N. Y., Dec. 16.—A bill will be introduced in the legislature in January next providing for the incorporation of West Troy as a city. The proposed new city has a population of about 12,000.

RETURN OF THE PRESIDENT.

He Divides the Game Killed Among Members of the Cabinet.

Washington, Dec. 16. — President Cleveland and his shooting companions returned to Washington yesterday afternoon on the lighthouse tender Maple, laden with ducks and a deep brown color. At the wharf there was the same little crowd of loungers, the same wagon to carry away the slaughtered game, the same Mr. Thurber summoned to meet the president by a telephone message from the Indian Head Proving ground, and the same Sinclair, the White House steward. Sinclair, his assistant, and the sailors of the Maple at once set to work carrying to the White House wagon the president's guns and traps and the game that had been shot. Altogether there were sixty ducks, thirty-two partridges, five geese and four brant. There were no swans in the presidential gamebag this year. The president and his companions kept a small portion of the game killed, and the rest was delivered last night at the homes of the members of the cabinet, Assistant Secretary Hamlin of the treasury department and Mr. Thurber.

PRATT'S BODY STOLEN.

He Was the Most Completely Ossified Man in the World.

Wichita, Kan., Dec. 16.—A message received here from Douglas states that the body of Edgar Pratt, said to be the most completely ossified man in the world and who died recently, has been stolen from its grave. Some time before Pratt died he was taken before a medical society in New York, where his case was pronounced wonderful. He lived nine years as rigid as the dead, being kept alive by soup fed through the set teeth. The society offered him a pension of $1,000 a year while he lived and his widow $5,000 at his death if he would consent to give his body to the society after death, which was refused. The offers so alarmed the family that when Mr. Pratt died the body was buried under a flower bed in front of his father's chamber window as a precaution against thieves. The message says the father was called as a juror to the county seat the other day and in his absence the grave was robbed.

BUILT BY ONE MAN.

Dedication of a Unique Presbyterian Church at Hepburnville, Pa.

Williamsport, Pa., Dec. 16.—There was dedicated yesterday afternoon as unique a Presbyterian church as exists anywhere in Pennsylvania. It is a beautiful stone structure, and the walls were not only built by one man, but he also hewed out the stones from great boulders on Brobat mountain. He labored more than six years, never drawing pay for his work, and when he died recently he bequeathed his unpaid wages to the church. This heroic stone mason was named George Taylor. In the church he reared, is a pretty memorial window erected by a grateful congregation for the aged and untiring builder. About a year ago, when he had just about finished the tower and his long labor seemed about to end, Taylor grew ill. His hammer and chisel were laid aside and they were never again taken up by him. He was about 70 years old and died of cancer.

KILLED OR TAKEN PRISONERS.

A Detachment of Spanish Soldiers Completely Crushed by Rebels.

Madrid, Dec. 16.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that 800 insurgents surprised seventy-two Spanish troops who were foraging near Minas, between Nueitas and Pueto Principe. The insurgents fired a volley into the Spaniards and charged them with machetes. The Spaniards made a heroic resistance, killing many insurgents, but were themselves utterly crushed. A lieutenant and twenty-three privates were killed, while the rest of the Spanish force, except four men, were either wounded or taken prisoners. A Spanish column has started in pursuit of the rebels.

Survivor of the Belle O'Brien.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—Capt. Dunn of the British steamship Lord Erne, from Swansea, yesterday brought into port a survivor of the American ship Belle O'Brien, which foundered off the English coast. Another seaman, who was picked up at the same time, died and was buried at sea. A third man went crazy from hunger and thirst and jumped overboard. The survivor brought to port is delirious and will die. Nothing can be gleaned from him about the wreck.

Advancing on the Italians.

Rome, Dec. 16.—The Capitale prints a dispatch saying that the Abyssinians are advancing on the Italians in two heavy columns. The total number of the enemy is over 100,000 men. Gen. Baratieri has ordered Gen. Arimonde to hold Asmara at all hazards.

Found Dead in Bed.

North Adams, Mass., Dec. 16.—John Frazier, aged 43 years, of Notch, was found dead in bed yesterday by his wife. A bottle labeled alcohol was found in his room. An autopsy will be held, as the medical examiner thinks his death was mysterious.

Minister Yang Yu's Return.

Washington, Dec. 16.—After an absence of several months in Spain, to which country, with Peru, he is also accredited as the representative of China, Minister Yang Yu returned to Washington last night.

Not To Be Recalled.

Rome, Dec. 16.—The report that Gen. Baratieri, the commander of the Italian forces in Abyssinia, was to be recalled is untrue.

France's Second Guardship.

Constantinople, Dec. 16.—The torpedo cruiser Faucon, which is to act as the second French guardship, has arrived here.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

Little Work To Be Done Until After Jan. 1.

First Silver Speech of This Session in the Senate—Senator Hill May Reply to Cullom's Monroe Doctrine Address—Announcement of the House Committees Expected.

Washington, Dec. 16.—The third week of the senate opened this morning with that body no better equipped than on the day congress first assembled, although it is more than probable that before the week is over the caucus committees will have agreed and senate committees will have passed into the hands of republicans. If the suggestions of some of the younger senators are followed it is not impossible that this week may find the senate testing the strength of the two parties over the subject of the reorganization of the elective officers. To-day Mr. Stewart will make his first silver speech of this session. Senator Hill takes issue with Senator Cullom on his conclusions relative to the Monroe doctrine and may address the senate on the resolution now on the table early in the week, possibly to-morrow. Senator White of California, who last week offered an amendment that all debate shall be relevant and confined to the subject directly before the senate, will speak to the resolution to-morrow. It is one of the many propositions now pending to change the rules of the senate with a view to limiting debate. The receipt of Secretary Carlisle's report to-day will be the signal for the floodgates of financial debate to open. Several senators, among them Mr. Sherman, are preparing to discuss the monetary portions of the president's message, but have kept silent pending the report of the secretary of the treasury, which is supplemental to the recommendations of the president. Mr. Sherman will hardly be prepared to speak this week, but it would not cause surprise if a discussion were precipitated at any time.

House of Representatives.

The only thing that is expected in the house this week is the announcement of the committees by Speaker Reed, and when that is made adjournment for the holidays is anticipated. It may be that the committees on rules and elections will be announced to-day, and in case that should be done a report from the former committee will probably be presented and discussed before the week closes. The house is at present operating under the rules of the fifty-first congress, and if the proposition to make two or three committees on elections which has been under discussion is to be carried out a change in the rules to that effect must be made. One change in the rules that is looked for in view of Speaker Reed's expressions of opinion thereon, is a reduction of the number constituting a quorum of the committee of the whole house from a majority of the full membership of the house. What figure will be fixed upon cannot be stated, but it is believed that it will not exceed 100 and may be considerably less. Speaker Reed is satisfied that such a change will materially aid in the dispatch of business.

Japanese Goods for This Country.

San Francisco, Dec. 16.—The steamer City of Peking, which has arrived here, brought a large lot of Japanese goods for all parts of the country, the principal places being New York, Chicago, Baltimore, Denver, Omaha and San Francisco. The shipments were much larger than those by the last steamer from Japan.

Fears for an Overdue Steamer.

Victoria, B. C., Dec. 16.—Great anxiety is now felt for the safety of the coasting steamer Maude. She left Albernd, Vancouver island, Dec. 4, and should have reached this port in forty-eight hours, but has not been heard of since. Search for her will be commenced to-day.

Reading Clerk of the House.

Washington, Dec. 16.—Robert Stockwell Hatcher of Lafayette, Ind., will to-day be appointed reading clerk of the house of representatives, dividing the duties of that onerous position with ex-Lieut.-Gov. Lampson of Ohio, whose appointment was made a day or two ago.

Irish National Alliance.

Columbus, O., Dec. 16.—A branch of the National Irish alliance was formed here last night. The meeting was held at the High Street theatre, and ninety-five well known Irishmen became members. Michael Barry, sergeant of police, was elected president.

Justice Morton's Wife Dead.

Newton, Mass., Dec. 16.—Abby Bowler Hoppin Morton, wife of Chief Justice Marcus Morton of the Massachusetts supreme court, died at her home on Lake avenue, Newton Highlands, Saturday night of a complication of diseases. She was 76 years old.

Rev. Dr. Phelps Resigns.

Newport, R. I., Dec. 16.—Rev. Isaac Newton Phelps yesterday announced his resignation as pastor of the First Baptist church to take effect Feb. 1. There have been differences between the pastor and his congregation for several weeks.

Methodist Church Burned.

Little Rock, Ark., Dec. 16.—The First Methodist Episcopal church, one of the handsomest in the city, together with its contents, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday.

A CRY FOR HELP

RESULT OF A PROMPT REPLY.

Two Open Letters that Should Suggest to Thousands of American Women to go and do Likewise.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

LITTLE FALLS, MINN., May 11, 1894.

"I am suffering, and need your aid. I have terrible pains in both sides of my womb, extending down the front of my limbs and lower part of my back, attended by backache and pains in the back of the neck and ears.

The doctors have given me opiates to quiet the pain. I have a very high fever nearly all the time. I am nervous, and cannot stand. My doctor says I must keep in bed. Now I place myself under your care. I am only twenty-one years old, and too young to suffer so much." — MRS. CHAS. PARKER.

The above letter was received by Mrs. Pinkham at Lynn, Mass., May 15, 1894, which received a prompt reply.

The following letter reached Mrs. Pinkham about five months later. Note the result.

LITTLE FALLS, MINN., Sept. 21, 1894.

"I deem it my duty to announce the fact to my fellow-sufferers of all female complaints, that Lydia E. Pinkham's treatment and Vegetable Compound have entirely cured me of all the pains and suffering I was enduring when I wrote you last May. I followed your advice to the letter, and the result is simply wonderful. May Heaven bless you and the good work you are doing for your sex!" — MRS. CHAS. PARKER.

All the druggists in town say there is a tremendous demand for Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound; and it is doing lots of good among the women.

If you are sick and in trouble write to Mrs. Pinkham. Relief awaits you.

Scribner's for Christmas

Frank R. Stockton has a Christmas love story, which bears a characteristic title—"The Staying Power of Sir Rohan." Its illustrations are quaint and exactly suitable. A thrilling detective story by C. E. Carryll, entitled "The River Syndicate," perhaps equalling Sherlock Holmes' best work. Illustrated.

Joel Chandler Harris' characteristic tale of a faithful slave—"The Colonel's Nigger-Dog." Other Christmas stories are, "A White Blot," by Henry VanDyke, a poetic and imaginative tale of a picture (illustrated); "Heroism of Landers," by A. S. Pier (illustrated), and "Hopper's Old Man," by R. C. V. Meyers.

Sentimental Tommy,

By J. M. Barrie.

Those who have read (and who has not?) "The Little Minister" and "A Window in Thrums" can anticipate what Mr. Barrie's "Sentimental Tommy" will be. It is to be the chief serial in Scribner's for 1896, beginning in the January number.

Two Years for $4.50.

Scribner's Magazine costs $3 a year, but new subscribers can have all the numbers for 1895 and a year's subscription for 1896 for $4.50.

Scribner's Magazine is going to be better next year ever. It is going to have new features. Its publishers are not satisfied with past successes. It purposes to more thoroughly deserve the confidence of the reading public. The History Serial—"Last Quarter Century in the United States"—will be continued. Just now it is approaching a period of absorbing interest to the present generation—the first administration of President Cleveland.

Scribner's Magazine ought to get careful consideration as a Christmas gift. The $4.50 offer ought to get double circulation.

TO SAVE LIFE AND HONOR

Women Forced by Turks To Accept Islamism.

Van and Trebizonde Rapidly Filling with Starving Refugees — Large Numbers of the Women Barefooted and Clad Only in Their Chemises To Protect Them from the Cold.

London, Dec. 16.—The representative in Constantinople of the United Press, telegraphing under yesterday's date, says that advices from the interior showed that forced conversions from Christianity to Mohammedism are occurring everywhere. Women and children whose husbands and fathers have been killed, and whose homes have been destroyed, have, rather than lead the lives of vagabonds, accepted Islamism, whereupon they were housed and fed by Turks. The sincerity of these conversions may be judged from what has occurred in Kaisarea. In this place many women, whose protectors had fallen in the massacres, were offered their choice between embracing the tenets of the Koran or being either hacked to pieces or meeting the worse fate of being kidnapped. Ostensibly the women accepted Islamism and thus rendered their lives and, perhaps, their honor secure. It is now known that perhaps 1,000 persons were killed in the massacres in Kaisarea. The fury of the Kurds was not satisfied with the death of its victims, but vented itself upon the inanimate bodies. The mutilation of the corpses was frightful, and in many cases was of a nature that cannot be described.

Killed Them One by One.

In Harpoot sixty Christians fled to a church in the vain hope that its walls would furnish them a shelter against those who were crying for the blood of Armenians. They were permitted for a time to believe themselves secure, but suddenly the church was surrounded by a great number of Kurds. The doors were blown in, and the Christians thought that they would be massacred within the sacred structure. They were not. Their captors took them one at a time outside the church, and there, heedless of the pitiable cries for mercy from the women and children, killed them, either by shooting or stabbing. The first victim was the protestant pastor of the church, who, as he was dragged out, bade the others, if they had to die, to die as Christians. He met his death like a martyr. Some of the refugees in a very agony of terror offered to abjure their faith and accept Islamism, thinking thus to save their lives. The offers availed them nothing, for their insatiable enemies, after accepting them, dragged the converts out and killed them one by one.

Church Turned into a Stable.

The Armenian church has been turned into a mosque and the Protestant church into a stable. In Kaisarea the soldiers joined in the looting that accompanied the massacre. Van and Trebizond are rapidly filling with refugees from the pillaged villages adjacent to those places. Hundreds of women, almost completely exhausted from fear and lack of food, have reached Van and Trebizond. Their condition is most deplorable. They have been robbed of about every thing they possessed. Large numbers of them were barefooted, and the only covering they had for their bodies were thin chemises, which furnished no protection against the inclement weather. There is no doubt that many of those who escaped death at the hands of the Kurds will die from the effects of the exposure they have undergone, while many others will fall victims of starvation. The promptest aid that can reach the sufferers from foreign countries will not avail to prevent an enormous death from these causes, but unless aid is promptly furnised from some quarter the deaths from famine will reach an appalling number.

Cape May Shore Line Damaged.

Cape May, N. J., Dec. 16.—The continued beating of the heavy surf accompanying the unusual run of high tides has damaged the entire shore line here at weak places. Near the foot of Madison avenue the trolley companies' loss will reach $1,500. Near ex-President Harrison's house the board walk was carried away and the drive encroached upon by the sea.

Her Body Identified at Last.

Buffalo, Dec. 16.—The young woman who committed suicide in a Main street boarding house on Dec. 2 has been finally identified as Miss Edith Yerke of Waterford, Canada. She was a dressmaker by trade and came here to look for work. It is supposed that despondency over her failure to find employment was the cause.

Swindler Arrested.

Altoona, Pa., Dec. 16.—A swindler who has been victimizing merchants in many cities throughout the state by forged checks was arrested at Irwin and brought here Saturday night. He says his name is James Black. Many Pittsburg merchants were taken in by the sharper before he came east.

Counter Revolution in Ecuador.

Buenos Ayres, Dec. 16.—Advices have been received here from Quito that a counter revolution has broken out in Ecuador against the successful insurgent Gen. Alfar.

Died in an Insane Asylum.

Omaha, Dec. 16.—Hon William A. McKeighan, populist ex-congressman from the fifth Nebraska district, died yesterday in the insane asylum at Hastings.

BITTEN BY MAD DOGS.

Awful Result of Two Boys Entering a Kennel.

Media, Pa., Dec. 16.—Two young sons of Charles Geary of Lower Providence, master of the hounds of the South Media Fox Hunting club, were the victims Saturday night of the most shocking catastrophe, as a result of which both lads are being treated for hydrophobia. They went into a kennel where seven mad foxhounds were confined to feed them, and both were severely bitten. One of the dogs died of rabies later in the night, and when the others were killed yesterday a post mortem showed that beyond the least doubt they had hydrophobia. Charles L. Geary, 14 years of age, was bitten on the arm, and his little brother, Howard, 7 years of age, was bitten on the cheek. It is hoped that prompt treatment will prevent any serious results to the Geary boys. Dr. J. K. Fronefield has made arrangements to have the boys undergo treatment at the Pasteur institute.

MRS. YOUNGS STILL ALIVE.

The Wounds, However, Inflicted by Her Husband May Prove Fatal.

Fort Hunter, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Mrs. Alice Youngs, wife of William Youngs, who was Saturday afternoon shot twice by her husband, was still alive this morning, but the chances are against her recovery. One of the bullets is lodged in her spinal column, and her body is becoming rigid. The attending surgeons have been unable to locate the ball. Youngs has been committed to jail to await the action of the grand jury. After shooting his wife, who had a baby in her arms at the time, Youngs drank a quantity of laudanum, but the amount was too great to cause death. Mrs. Youngs is still at the home of Archibald A. McLaughlin, whom Youngs charges with having shown attentions to his wife. McLaughlin has a wife and daughter. The only witness to the shooting is said to be Mrs. McLaughlin, who has been and invalid for years.

SATOLLI'S ELEVATION.

Marquis Sacripanti, with the Insignia of Office, Due Thursday.

Baltimore, Dec. 16.—Marquis Sacripanti, the member of the Noble guard who has been commissioned as the pope's envoy to bring to this country the insignia of office and the briefs for the elevation of Mgr. Francis Satolli to the cardinalate, is on board the steamship Fulda due in New York next Thursday. The marquis will be escorted from New York to Washington in a special car. At Washington Marquis Sacripanti will be Mgr. Satolli's guest, and after recovering from the fatigue of his long journey will be brought over to Baltimore and presented to Cardinal Gibbons, whose associate he will be in the ceremony investing the papal delegate with his new dignity on the first Sunday in January at the Baltimore cathedral.

DUEL EXPECTED TO-DAY.

Efforts To Settle the Difficulty Between Hearsey and Boatner Fail.

New Orleans, Dec. 16.—There are no new developments in the difficulty between Major Hearsey and Congressman Boatner. It is understood that all efforts of mutual friends to effect an amicable settlement have proven futile and that a hostile meeting with pistols at twelve paces will probably take place somewhere to-day. Particulars, however, are not obtainable.

Murdered by Robbers.

Central City, W. Va., Dec. 16.—In Pike county, Ky., at 2 o'clock yesterday morning two men went to the residence of William Creemean, a wealthy farmer, and calling him out demanded his money. Mr. Creemean refused to give it to them, whereupon they pulled their revolvers and shot him to death.

Niagara Falls a Wicked City.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Dec. 16.—Notwithstanding the orders of the police commissioners the music halls of this city were again running full blast last night. Arrests will probably be made to-day. Prayers were offered in nearly all the churches for the success of the Sunday closing movement.

Death of Joseph C. Lindsley.

Orange, N. J., Dec. 16.—Joseph C. Lindsley, a well-known business man of Boston a decade ago, died on Saturday night at the home of his son-in-law, Everett Frazer, in Orange. Mr. Lindsley was born in South Orange in 1812, and when quite a lad left for Boston, Mass., to make his fortune.

Heir To a Vast Fortune.

New York, Dec. 16.—Daniel De Grasse, engineer of the Great South Bay Water company, of Patchogue, L. I., says he is one of the heirs to $32,000,000 in Paris, which was left by the Comte de Paris in 1878 to his brother, Antone, who was an officer in the French army.

Sail Cloth for Yachts of '96.

Pawtucket, R. I., Dec. 16.—The Berkley Manufacturing company of Berkley, four miles from here, has closed a contract with the Herreshoffs of Bristol to furnish all sail cloth and light sails for yachts built in 1896, large orders having been received.

Another Newfoundland Storm.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 16.—Another storm raged last night and shipping in port has been considerably damaged. Steamers are unable to leave, and there is no prospect of vessels off the coast making land while the storm continues.

Fitz-Maher Fight Certain.

Dallas, Tex., Dec. 16.—Bob Fitzsimmons and Peter Maher will surely fight near El Paso February 14, unless a hitch occurs within twelve hours.

ANTI-AMERICAN BIAS

Prussia's War on Our Insurance Companies.

The Home Office Open in Its Fight Against Them—The Emperor and the Sultan—Prince Regent Luitpold To Be Declared King of Bavaria.

Berlin, Dec. 16.—The ministerial references which have been made in the reichstag to the barring out of American insurance companies from transacting any further business in Prussia have lacked that strict accuracy which an honest statement ought to give. The assertion of Freiherr Marschall von Bieberstein, minister of foreign affairs, that the companies were suppressed solely because they did not choose to comply with the regulations affecting home and foreign insurance companies alike totally ignored the fact that the rules which were enforced against the American companies were drawn up in 1891 by the Prussian minister of the interior purposely to wipe out American insurance companies. At the time these regulations were concocted their strong anti-American bias was frankly avowed by the officials of the home office. It can further be stated upon authority that Geheimrath Knibel Dokeritz of the home office openly admitted to the manager of an American insurance company that the home office was searching for a way to block out the American insurance business from Prussia and that he himself could not rest until he had succeeded in doing so.

Germany and the Sultan.

At the climax of the strain between the sultan and the European powers the sultan's assent to the issuance of firmans permitting the entrance of extra guardships into the Dardanelles was obtained under the influence of his knowledge that Germany's support would be withdrawn if he refused. According to official information here the emperor saw no necessity for having a second guardship at Constantinople and was strongly opposed to the project of forcing the passage through the Dardanelles. Finally, however, under pressure brought to bear by Austria and Italy the German ambassador was instructed to advise the sultan that Germany must go with the allied powers in the event that strong measures should be required. At the same time the sultan received the assurance of Germany that when the guardboat difficulty should be removed ample time would be accorded to the porte to re-establish order in Asia Minor. It is probable that reliance upon the kaiser's promise that no untimely pressure upon Turkey for reforms would have the assent of Germany had more influence upon the sultan than did the insistence of M. Nelidoff, Russian ambassador, and Sir Philip Currie, British ambassador, that the firmans must be granted. A great deal more confidence exists in Berlin in the sultan's intention to carry out the promised reforms in Asia Minor than seems to prevail in other and especially in English official quarters.

The Kaiser at Altona.

The emperor, after attending the ceremony of swearing in the naval recruits at Kiel yesterday, went to Altona, where to-day he will inspect the new German ironclad Konig Wilhelm. He will take luncheon with Count von Waldersee and return to Berlin to-morrow. The empress has been in Dresden during the week to see her mother, the dowager Duchess Adelaide of Holstein, and while there paid a short courtesy visit to the queen of Saxony. Since her return to Berlin she has renewed her activity in Christmas shopping. Diplomatic dinners are now frequent, in accordance with the requirements of the season, and the receptions given at the Austrian, Italian and Russian embassies have added to the burdens of the officials, but the members of the imperial family until the court season opens after Christmas will take no part in society functions.

To Declare Luitpold King.

The Munich Generalanzeiger, which journal is in touch with the Bavarian cabinet, announces the decision of the ministry to declare Prince Regent Luitpold king upon the tenth anniversary of his regency, June 10, 1896. The paper adds that the people are unanimous in their approval of such a step. Prince Luitpold is an uncle of the present hopelessly insane King Otto. The Lokal Anzeiger says it is convinced that President Cleveland is not animated by any positive ill feeling toward Germany, although there is much in his recent message to congress that is unpleasant, but he was obliged to do something to increase his following in view of the coming president elections, so he thought it good politics to attack Germany. Chancellor von Hohenlohe will give a dinner to the new British ambassador, Sir Frank Lascelles, on Tuesday. Theodore Runyon, United States ambassador, will be one of the guests. The Hamburg shipping house of H. Vegemann will inaugurate on January 18 a regular steamship line between Hamburg and New York.

Campos Has Not Resigned.

Madrid, Dec. 16.—An official denial is made of the report published in the Paris Figaro that Captain-General Martinez Campos had resigned his command in Cuba.

Miss Phoebe Lincoln Dead.

Laharpe, Ill., Dec. 16.—Miss Phoebe Lincoln, the favorite cousin of the martyred president of the United States, died at her home in this city at the age of 67.

Advertisers, Attention.

Changes of advertisements for The Daily Press must be received not later than 9:30 o'clock in the morning to ensure insertion the same day.

It cost just $50 a year to keep the first common road in New Jersey in order. There is difference between then and now.

The State Road Commissioner in his annual report urges the adoption of convict labor for stone road making, very much in the spirit as it was adopted at the Good Road Tournament in Atlanta. He thinks that this would be one of the ways of solving the problem that has for years irritated the labor organizations, of bringing convict labor in competition with honest labor in the production of commodities. There is not a county in the State but could organize to utilize convicts in jail for road building, and those in prison for preparing the material for roads. He urges the adoption by township committees of ordinances to allow rebates for the use of broad tires on wheels. He suggests the rebate of $1 on each wheel instead of fifty cents, as the law reads now, and to make it compulsory that vehicles of 1,500 pounds or more to have broad tires. On the question of taxing bicycles in the interest of good roads, he is silent, but personally has expressed the opinion that he doubts whether a bicycle could be discriminated against and be made the subject of a special tax; that if the bicycle be taxed, all other vehicles that use public highways would be subject to the tax; that there are other vehicles that do positive damage to roads, while the bicyclist is disposed to improve it. He, however, does touch upon the wisdom, in suburban communities of having steel roads, so that vehicles of all kinds, as well as bicycles, shall have the advantage of trackage.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Leggett, the druggist, has a choice supply of porcelain puff and jewell boxes which are great sellers. He found it necessary to get three supplies to meet the demand.

—The Christmas festival for the Sunday-school of the Heavenly Rest will take place in the parish house on Clinton avenue Monday evening, December 23d, at 8 o'clock. Parents and friends of the children are cordially invited.

Guinea Club's Game Supper.

The Guinea Club will meet next Friday at the home of its president, Thomas Parker, of Park avenue. The Guinea Club was organized about two months ago and has for its officers Mr. Parker, president, and Edward Mundy, vice-president. The insignia is a guinea hen's feather stuck in the band of the hat. A guinea hen supper is being prepared for next Thursday evening.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Miss Talmadge, of Belvidere avenue, is very ill.

Mrs. D. M. Miller is confined to her home on Orchard place by illness.

Miss Ball, of Newark, was the guest yesterday of Miss Grace Yerkes, of West Seventh street.

Fred H. Andrews, of Central avenue, entertained a few friends at his home Thursday night.

Joseph L. Wiseman, manager of the Columbia Cycle Academy, spent yesterday at Asbury Park.

B. Kohn, of Indianapolis, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. J. A. Karet, of Craig place, yesterday.

George A. Moore, of East Front street, has gone to Camden to engage in the retail meat business.

George Scribner and Charles Pearson, both of East Fifth street, visited friends at Westfield yesterday.

Will Goff and family, of Pennsylvania, are visiting at the home of Dudley Miller, of Orchard place.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. Crawford, of East Fifth street, have gone to New York. They will be at "The Gerlach" for the winter.

L. A. Hummer and his brother, Charles Hummer, of the borough, returned this morning from Hunterdon county, where they spent Sunday.

Frank Drake, pianist, and Milton Gruett, violinist, of Newark, will assist in the rendition of the Christmas music at the First Baptist church.

The Misses Tracy, of West Eighth street, entertained the Cotillion Club at their home on Friday evening. There were about twenty couple present and an exceedingly pleasant evening was passed.

Messrs. J. A. Moore and Henry Wise, who for some time have been associated with R. W. Rice & Co., will be found at the store of J. A. Smith & Brother, where they will be pleased to serve their friends and customers.

Roy. C. James, who has been acting as machinist and electrician for the Eldridge Bicycle Company in this city, leaves this afternoon for Asbury Park, where he will resume control of his flourishing electrical business at that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Battison, of New Bsunswick, who have been spending their honeymoon in Scotland, returned home last week by the steamship Campania and were the guests yerterday of Councilman and Mrs. E. H. Bird. The captain said the voyage over was the roughest he had ever made.

A Coming Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Buckley, of Newburgh, N. Y., have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Rachael Buckley, to Harry Ellis Green, of this city. The ceremony will take place Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 1st, at two o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, 52 Chambers street, Newburgh. Mr. and Mrs. Green will reside on Manning avenue, North Plainfield.

Queen City Nominates Tonight.

Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I.O.O.F., meet tonight and will initiate five candidates in the mysteries of the second degree. The officers will also be nominated. Next month District Deputy Grand Master Pocock and his staff will make their rounds through this district, initiating the officers in the different lodges.

Policemen at Church.

Officer Giese and State Detective Blackford were on duty at the First Presbyterian church last evening to keep order. A number of young men have been making it their habit to hang around the church and smoke during the services, and the officers were sent there to prevent the loafing.

—The Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel will elect officers next Friday evening.

—John C. Whiting, of East Sixth street, begins his duties today as secretary of the Westfield Y. M. C. A.

—The grand lodge officers of the Knights of Honor will visit Senate lodge next Thursday evening. Matters of interest will be transacted.

—J. Fred MacDonald, the up town groces, is selling 10 pounds of California prunes for 45 cents. Call early and purchase, for they will not last long.

—Garrett Q. Packer is offering inducements as great as he will at any time before removal. Practical and pleasing presents may be procured at his store.

—The report published in The News that the Columbia Cycle Academy is to close is erroneous. The academy will be open for bicycle riding the same as in the past.

177 NORTH AVENUE.

While riding down Madison avenue this morning Webster Littell, of West Seventh street, had the rear wheel of his safety nearly wrecked. A farmer's wagon was standing on the right hand side of the street and Littell had to turn to the left to pass it. Just as he passed by the horse started and struck the rear wheel with its hoof, bending it out of shape. The driver was somewhat worried over what his horse had done, but refused to tell his name or where he lived.

BASKET BALL.

The basket ball champions of four States, the Trenton Y. M. C. A., came to Plainfield Saturday evening and defeated the local Y. M. C. A team by a score of 14 goals to 3. The game was something of a disappointment to the Plainfield boys as the Trentons played by an entire different set of rules and refused to contest unless they were followed out in every particular. Rather than disappoint the crowd, the home team consented and played in a way that they knew nothing about. Considering that fact, the Plainfield boys put up a remarkably good game as the Trenton team has been playing against strong teams and are very seldom scored against. Three is the largest made by their opponents for sometime. The first half was fiercely contested and ended with the score 3 to 3. Then the Plainfielders lost their nerve and went to pieces, while the visitors rolled up a score of 10 goals. At the last Captain Smith rallied his men and the game began to grow exciting. The playing of the champions was certainly very fine, and they played together all the time, and at the start forced their opponents to play a strictly defensive game. Egan & Littell, guards for Plainfield, deserve great credit by their excellent work, preventing the score from going much higher. Captain Smith was very accurate in goal throwing. The make up of the two teams was as follows:

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A.		TRENTON Y. M. C. A.
Smith	right forward	Bratton
Jessup	right wing	Buckley
Koechli	centre	W. Clayton
G. Pike	left wing	Cooper, captain
Littell	right guard	S. Clayton

Goals from the field—Smith (1), Bratton (4), Cook, (2), Cooper (6), Buckley (1). Goals on fouls—Smith (2). Fouls—Smith (1), Pike (1), W. Clayton (2), Bates (1), S. Clayton (1), Cooper (2).

Referee—Victor Christoffersen, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A.

Umpires—M. Riley, of The Trenton True American, and C. B. Morse, of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A.

CYCLING COMMENT.

One of the prettiest wheels on the market for '96 is the Crescent, and the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company have received a sample. The wheel has the large tubing, barrel hubs, improved handle bars, and presents a very handsome appearance with its black and gold enamel.

Minstrel shows are becoming quite the thing for bicycle clubs to give during the winter. On Thursday evening the Asbury Park Wheelmen give a minstrel show and Roy C. James, who has been in the employ of the Eldridge Bicycle Company for some time, will take part.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The fourth annual contest between the Bachelors and the Benedicts of the Park Club will take place on Saturdays, December 21st and 28th, and on January 4th, if necessary. The captain for the Bachelors will be George C. Worth, and for the Benedicts, Dr. Charles R. Thiers.

—The borough fire, water and lamps committee will meet this evening and discuss the fire alarm matter.

—The officers of Trinity Commandery will confer the order of the red cross this evening. A New Elgland banquet will follow.

—Neuman Brothers, the Watchung avenue grocers, have just received a choice lot of Florida and Jamaica and California seedless oranges. Special prices for the holidays. 3

—A magic lantern entertainment will be held in the Sunday-school room of the Grace P. E. church on Friday afternoon, Junuary 3d, at 3:45, for the benefit of the Junior Auxiliary.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Resolutions of Condolence.

The following preamble and resolutions were adopted by Franklin Council, No. 41, Jr. O. U. A. M., at their meeting last Thursday evening:

Whereas, The great and Supreme Ruler of the universe has in His infinite wisdom removed from our midst one of our worthy and esteemed fellow-laborers, William C. Winckler, and, whereas, the long and intimate relation held with him in the faithful discharge of his duties in this society makes it eminently befitting that we record our appreciation of him; therefore be it

Resolved, That the wisdom and ability which he has exercised in the aid of our organization, by service and counsel, will be held in grateful remembrance.

Resolved, That the sudden removal of such a life from among our midst leaves a vacancy and a shadow that will be deeply realized by all the members and friends of this organization, and will prove a serious loss to the community.

Resolved, That with deep sympathy with the bereaved parents and relatives of the deceased, we express our sincere hope that even so great a loss to us all may be overruled by Him who doeth all things well.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the records of this organization, and printed in each of the local papers, and a copy be suitably engrossed and presented to our late brother's family.

Fanwood.

The cozy little hall in the Fanwood Club house was filled Saturday evening with an appreciative and cultured audience when the Young People's Association of Brooklyn presented a musical and dramatic entertainment for the benefit of All Saints church of Scotch Plains. Part first consisted of a piano duet by Mrs. Cameron and Miss Weber; a vocal solo, "Because I Love Thee," by Miss Edith Cameron; recitations by Miss E. Annette Ewart; vocal solo, "Soldier's Dream," E. J. Campbell, Jr.; piano duet, "Fascination," Mrs. Cameron and Miss Weber; and a quartette selection, "Good Night, Beloved," by Miss Edith Cameron, Miss G. Cameron, L. V. B. Camerom and E. J. Campbell, Jr. Part second was a play in one act by Jerome K. Jerome, entitled "Sunset." It was rendered in a delightful manner, and each one was particularly clever in the different parts. The entire entertainment was pleasing, and hearty applause was accorded the participants. A large number of Plainfielders were present and enjoyed the most excellent programme provided.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kellaway, of East Summit, will remove from there about Jan. 15th and reside permanently on an extensive farm recently purchased by Mrs. Kellaway between Fanwood and Plainfield.

The Christmas

SALE IS ON IN EARNEST.

From store opening to store closing time we are busy with seekers of useful and ornamental things for the holiday season. Every day finds us with more customers to handle—to wait on. You will help yourself and help us by coming early and as a special inducement a hundred pretty things step forward and proclaim their low prices. Come tomorrow before they are all carried off.

The Handkerchief Carnival.

Switzerland, Ireland and Japan contributed to this great handkerchief show. You might pay from five cents up to one dollar, but that's not the point. We are willing that you should go everywhere else and try to better them and then come here. Your better judgment will do the rest.

Christmas Gloves.

Not different from the good ones to be had here any other time, but assortments have been kept very complete for holiday buyers. Not a word about some very special values on extra good gloves that will greet you at the glove counter all next week.

Umbrellas.

Built extra good for Xmas gifts, and the handles and trimmings are the very latest. When a man has everything else, he usually thinks kindly of an umbrella. For instance one of these—26 inch Gloria silk, 79c, 28 inch Gloria silk, 89c, 26 inch Gloria silk, Dresden handles, $1.25.

A Word on Toys.

As long as children are children they will want pretty playthings. From far-off Germany came a multitude of them to make your children happy. Here they are side by side, waiting for Xmas shoppers who will carry everyone away.

Buy Blankets.

A note for the son or daughter who wants to remembers the guardian of the household with something she will appreciate. Fifty pairs of good wool blankets are easily priced for Christmas buyers. Can you imagine a more sensible gift? 10x4 all-wool blankets, $2.98, 11x4 all-wool blankets, $3.49, beautiful satine comfortables, $2.75.

Why not a Dress Pattern.

Several dozen novelty dress patterns, including every fashionable dress fabric of the season, ask for attention from gift buyers. You can't imagine what $3.00 will buy in a stylish serviceable gift until you see these dress patterns.

Men's Furnishing Department.

As fine an assortment as you find anywhere, only the prices are smaller. Men's heavy white shirts and drawers, 33c; Men's heavy natural wool shirts and drawers, 50c; Men's all-wool sweaters, $1.00; Men's seamless half-hose, fast black, 13c; Men's hemstitched handkerchiefs, 10c; Men's neckwear, four-in-hand and tecks. The 50c kind 25c. Men's silk initial handkerchiefs 25c and 50c.

CRAPE PAPER DECORATIONS.

Wonderfully Artistic Effects Wrought From the Pliable Fabric.

Very few people, I fancy, writes Emma H. Heath in The Ladies' Home Journal, have ever seen a paper party carried out in all its details, but those who have are unanimous in their expressions of delight and surprise at the wonderfully artistic effects which have been produced with that pliable material, crape paper, and the best part is the comparatively small expense and infinite variety of changes in color combinations.

First to be considered is the room, and perhaps a description of one which I helped decorate not long ago will suggest more ideas than I could give otherwise. It was a large room in a clubhouse, some 30 by 40 feet, with ceiling 16 feet high, crossed and encircled by big oak beams. On one side were three window seats, and opposite a big fireplace, with window seats on either side. Something entirely different from anything that had ever been seen was wanted, and this was how it was done: Morning glories in pink, purple and crimson made in vines, with large leaves of tissue paper, were everywhere. Before each of the window seats were hung curtains of morning glory vines, made by hanging lengths of the vines close together across the opening from the top of the archway, and then draped back each way and let to fall gracefully on either side. The beams were all hung with garlands of vines across and all around the room.

The doorways at either end of the room were hung with curtains, and long vines trailed down carelessly over the pictures.

The Gothic arches over the fireplace were outlined with the vines. The room was illuminated by a big circle of electric lights, and from this to each corner hung a long vine of lights. These were wound and hung with vines, and each light was shaded with a big morning glory, as were also the lights on the side chandeliers about the room. The fireplace was filled with palms and ferns, and the whole effect, when lighted, was a big bower of morning glories. Of course it took quantities of vines, but many hands made light work.

BRITONS IN INDIA.

A Visitor Tells How John Bull Holds His Own There.

Mr. Spenser Wilkinson gives the following account of his feelings in going through the streets of Peshawur, and how he discovered the spell by which we hold India:

"The town gate of Peshawur is a mile from the cantonment, and the morning after my arrival I drove in with no companion but a native interpreter. Peshawur, with its mud and wood houses, its lattice windows and its multitude of men, is infinitely picturesque. But the impression of the first visit upon an Englishman is not due to the quaint appearance of the houses nor to the eastern dress of the inhabitants.

"There are about 80,000 natives in the city. As soon as you are through the gate and inside the walls you are among them. Not another Englishman is to be seen, and possibly enough you are, at the moment, the only one in town. Every one looks at you. There is no staring or no rudeness, but you feel the eyes.

"The looks of the first half dozen men you pass, as they sit in their shops or stand in the streets, give you a new and strange sensation. You straighten yourself and hold your head up with a resolve, of which you are hardly conscious till afterward, that if a knife is plunged into your back you will not flinch. The eyes about you suggest that if there were no cantonment, no others to ask for an account of you, your throat would be cut and your corpse thrown away, and that the people in the street would look on without moving.

"You immediately feel that there is a responsibility in being an Englishman. You are a representative of your race, and all that you do or say must be worthy of the position. The first duty is not to mind the 80,000 people in Peshawur nor anything they may do. Those first five minutes in the Peshawur bazaar reveal to you the secret of British power in the east. It is impossible without utter fearlessness."—Spare Moments.

New York Hotels.

"The gorgeous new hotels of New York are not as homelike and comfortable as the old ones," said a frequent visitor to town. "The new palaces are so heaped and littered about with costly bric-a-brac, paintings and statues that the proprietors have to keep servants hanging around all the time to see that the pretty things are not damaged or stolen. One consequence is that no one feels at ease in them, and there is no such thing as privacy except you lock yourself in your bedroom. To hold a private consultation with a friend in one of the parlors is impossible, unless you do it in whispers, because there is always a maid or a detective loitering near you. And if you whisper you become a suspicious character at once." A wealthy westerner who dresses very carelessly made a scene in one of these luxurious lounging rooms the other day. Whenever he went into the parlors he was watched and followed. Either a maid or a man took turns in keeping eyes on him. At last he went up to the detective and ordered him out of the room. "I live here," said he, "and I don't propose to be shadowed another five minutes." The man went out to inquire whether the indignant person was a guest. But before he went to the office he sent a maid into the parlor to see that the angry man did not steal a statue or an onyx table.—New York Sun.

Jesse James' Bowie Knife.

Deputy Sheriff McClure has the bowie knife of the noted outlaw Jesse James. The relic is in a good state of preservation. It is about 8 inches in length, has the ordinary bowie knife blade and has a fine horn handle, with solid silver finishings.

On one side of the handle is a silver heart, while in the other there is a large silver star. Small stars also adorn the handle. On a silver bar the name of Jesse James appears, beautifully engraved.

The knife is incased in a horn scabbard that is mounted with solid silver. The weapon cost the desperado $50, but it would take several like amounts to buy it from McClure.

Ex-Sheriff Martin Aguirre once carried the dangerous instrument. It was secured years ago from Mrs. Samuels, mother of the James boys, who at one time resided here, and who perhaps still resides here.—Los Angeles Record.

Took Too Much For Granted.

"Have you sold that unruly horse that you had?"

"You bet I did!"

"How did you manage it?"

"Told the fellow that my mother-in-law could drive him anywhere."

"And—and—he"—

"Exactly. He had never seen her."—Chicago Record.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

SHERIFF'S SALE—In Chancery of New Jersey. Between George M. Phillips, complainant, and The Rising Sun Brewing Company, et. al., defendants. Fi. fa. for sale of mortgaged premises.

By virtue of the above stated writ of fieri facias to me directed, I shall expose for sale by public vendue, at the Court House in the city of Elizabeth, N. J., on at two o'clock in the afternoon of said day, all the tracts or parcels of land and premises hereinafter particularly described, situate, lying and being in the city of Plainfield, and the township of Fanwood, in the county of Union and State of New Jersey:

First Lot—Beginning at a point in the middle of Cherry street, and is a corner of Israel D. TenEyck's lot (formerly); thence running along Cherry street, in the middle thereof, north forty-seven degrees west twenty-four feet and two inches to a point in the centre of said street, and is a corner of lands of Sarah F. Randolph; thence along the line of that lot south forty-five degrees west one chain to a corner in George W. Force's line; thence along his line south forty-five degrees east thirty-one feet eleven inches to said Force's corner; thence along his line south forty-five degrees west twenty-two feet to a point in said Force's line; thence with said TenEyck's (formerly Cook's) line south forty-five degrees east five and one-half links to a stone, another of TenEyck's corners; thence with Cook's line north forty-five degrees east twenty-four feet ten inches to another of TenEyck's corners; thence with TenEyck's line north forty-seven degrees west ten feet and one inch, more or less, to a point in range with the southeasterly side of the brick building situate on the lands hereby conveyed; thence northeasterly along the southeasterly side of said brick building ninety-four links to the middle of Cherry street and place of beginning.

Second Lot (in township of Fanwood)—Beginning at a stake in the centre of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, formerly called the Elizabeth Town and Somerville Railroad, and in the middle of the Terrill road and running along the middle of the Terrill road south forty-seven and three-quarter degrees east sixteen chains and sixty links to a stone and now corner of Anthony Farley; thence along his line north forty-two and three-quarter degrees east ten chains and fifty three links to a stake and corner of John O. Stearns' land; thence along his line north forty-seven and a half degrees west fourteen chains and twenty-five links to a stake in the centre of the aforesaid railroad; thence along said railroad a southwesterly course and with the curve of said road to the place of beginning.

Containing by estimation sixteen acres and fifty-two hundredths, excepting and reserving a small lot as conveyed by Edward Green in his lifetime to the Central Railroad Company of N. J., by deed dated July 17, 1854, recorded in book 204 of deeds, pages, 555, etc.

To be sold in parcels and in the order and manner as directed in the writ.

ALL FOR LOVE

By WALTER BESANT.

I stood today beside the grave of my dear old friend Paul. His name will be known by his friends, and for those who were not his friends his name may remain unknown. The vicar read the funeral services while the birds were singing on the trees, the sun shone on the laburnum and the lilac, and from below the cliff came the roll of the waves along the shore. His remains were laid beside those of his wife, and while the words of the solemn service fell upon my ears I was thinking how it would have fared with Paul had it not been for his marriage. It will harm no one now to tell the story of that marriage.

When first he met his wife, in the year 1857, he was—well, he was 25 years of age, to begin with. It seems as if merely to be 25 is enough, but I suppose some other things are desirable as well. He had just been called to the bar, he was a fellow of his college, a hard headed reader and an athlete. He was popular because he possessed a pleasant voice, a pleasant face and a pleasant manner, because he was not small and petty in speech or thought and because he was strong. Nobody among undergraduates is so popular as the man who is strong. Further, in order to acquire facility in speaking, he spoke regularly at the union and learned to speak well. Whatever he attempted he either did well or abandoned altogether.

I have said that in the year 1857 Paul was 25 years of age. It was in that year that he took the step which subsequently led to his early retirement. And it happened in this way:

In the month of September we started together upon a walking expedition. In those days we had a project for walking round the coast of Great Britain, taking a fortnight here and another there, according to season and opportunity, and reckoning that we should complete the task—allowing for sinuosities and creeks—in 373 years exactly. We carried a white, round pebble. At the end of each walk we buried it and marked the place. At the beginning of a new walk we dug it up again. By this method one was quite sure of passing over the whole ground without possibility of self deception. We began very well, with capital weather and high spirits. On the afternoon of the third day an accident happened of a very common and uninteresting nature. Paul twisted his ankle on a loose stone. We were then about a mile and a half distant from a certain small village through which we had to pass, but we had not intended to rest a night there. When we reached it, however, the trouble of the ankle became so bad that it was absolutely necessary to stop. Fortunately we found a decent inn, with better accommodations than might have been expected. It was an old thatched and rustic village public house, to which had been built a new modern wing containing three or four bedrooms, a coffee room and a billiard room.

After laying my man upon the sofa in the coffee room I went out to explore the place. It was more considerable than I had expected. There was a single long street running up a gentle hill from the seashore. On the top of the hill was a church, with an ancient rubble tower and a square brick "temple" of the period of George II. Beyond the church were two roads, and beside them certain villas, which looked very pretty 'mid the woods and trees and gardens. At the lower end of the town was the port. Here the sea runs inland and makes a little creek for the reception of a stream. They have built out a brick jetty and constructed a wharf, along which are generally lying half a dozen small vessels. On the right of the creek there rose a bold headland, such as are so common on the white coasts of Albion. On the left the land was low for a mile or two, and then rose gradually, and there was a great bay with a sweep of cliff after cliff, very beautiful. As I looked there came swiftly round the headland a little boat—not a common dingy or fishermen's boat, but a miniature yacht—quite a dainty little craft, flying foresail and mainsail. A girl was steering her, and a boy sat beside the masthead to lower sail. The boat ran merrily up the creek alongside the jetty. The boy lowered sail, unshipped mast and rudder and tied the painter with the quickness of him who understands his work. Then both sprang out and ran up the steps of the jetty, and one of the fishermen touched his hat and went slowly down to take the boat to her moorings. The pair were clearly brother and sister—he a lad of 18; she a year or two older, perhaps 21. They were curiously alike, and the girl's face was her brother's glorified. There is no other word which can express the difference between the two faces. She had the same face as her brother, but glorified. Thus the boy's hair was light and curly. Hers was darker. His eyes were a light blue, and hers a dark blue and deeper. His mouth was weak, and hers was strong. In her walk and bearing there was more strength and character than seemed to belong to her brother. All these things I did not observe at the moment when she passed quickly up the pier, but I found them out afterward. As for her figure, she was nearly as tall as her brother, who was certainly 5 feet 8, and in shape she resembled the goddess Artemus, who was of thinner and slighter build and had a more slender waist than Aphrodite. Her admirers, in fact, invented the corset and the practice of tight lacing.

In the evening after dinner we took refuge in the billiard room, as there was nothing at all in the house to read. The only occupant of the room was the young fellow whom I had seen in the boat with the extraordinarily beautiful girl. He was knocking the balls about for amusement. There was no marker. I observed that he blushed violently when I invited him to play a game—more violently, that is, than a boy of 18 ought to blush. He accepted, however, and we played five games, Paul watching the play in a chair. Presently we began to talk about the village. The boy said that partly because it was eight miles from a station and partly because there were no lodgings except at the inn visitors very rarely found their way to the place. As for society, he said, blushing crimson—we could not say why—a few people lived in the villas beyond the church outside the little town—his own people among them, but it was a very dull and quiet place. For his own part—but here he blushed again and did not complete his sentence.

"For your own part," said Paul, "you desire to hear nothing but the beating of the waves on the shore and the cry of the sea birds all your life."

"And yet," the boy replied, with a touch of sadness in his voice, "I do not know how I am to get anything else. But that does not matter to you," he added quickly. Then, as if afraid of saying more than he desired to say, he wished us good night and went away.

"Why can't he expect anything else?" Paul asked. "The boy wants to go to sea, I suppose, or on the stage, or into the army, or to become a poet, or to do something which his father won't let him do. He's a pretty pink and white sort of boy; sometimes they turn out well, that sort of make. And he's a gentleman. Well, I shall go and put a compress on my ankle. Help me up stairs, old man."

He went up stairs, and I returned to the coffee room. It was then about 10 o'clock. The place was so quiet and still that the silence oppressed me.

Then I heard steps outside the house and in the hall, and a man appeared at the door. He peered round, saw me sitting beside a couple of candles, hesitated for a moment, and then came in. It was a public room, and I suppose he had a perfect right to use it if he pleased, but I resented his intrusion. When he took off his hat, I perceived by the light of my two candles that he was perfectly bald, that his whiskers and eyebrows were white, that his eyes were red, his lips thick, his cheeks as fiercely red as his eyes, and his nose swollen. I declare that the very first aspect of this man made me tremble and shiver. I cannot tell why—it may have been a presentiment of mischief, yet he did no harm to me. Sometimes I have thought that this natural loathing was caused by the inexpressible wickedness of the man's face.

"I think," he said—his voice was raspy and grating—"I think that I saw young Robert Reeve leave the inn a little while ago."

"There was a young gentleman here," I replied, "who played a game of billiards with me and is gone."

"Yes, the same, the same. Nice boy, sir, ain't he?"

"He appears to be so."

"Are you a friend of his—of the family, may I ask?" He leaned forward and grinned horribly. Why did he grin? "An old friend perhaps of former and happier times? Yet not quite old enough, I should say"——

"I have not the pleasure of knowing them."

"Ah!" He leaned back in his chair and breathed another sigh, apparently of satisfaction. "Ah! A thousand pities for him, poor boy; but, of course, it is worse, much worse, for the girl. But you do not know the family yet. You would be interested"——

"Not at all," I said. "Pray do not waste village scandals upon me."

"Village scandals? My dear sir you are greatly mistaken—greatly mistaken. It is a worldwide—why, I could tell scandals—why, I could tell you things about this village which"——

I perceived that the old fellow had been drinking, which was perhaps the cause of his familiarity and his strange confidences. However, I left him.

In the morning Paul's ankle was still swollen, and I agreed to leave him and go on with the walk alone. He, for his own part, thought he would send to town for some books and stay where he was. The place was quiet; the inn was comfortable; he should be neither lonely nor dull. I thought of the boy—this Robert Reeve, if that was the name—perhaps he would turn up at the inn, and then I thought of the girl. There was certainly one possibility which might make a stay at this place very far from dull. But I said nothing about her.

After breakfast I strapped my knapsack and started for the solitary walk of 25 miles a day for a fortnight or so. When one is young, so many friends are made at every halt that there is no time to feel lonely.

Three weeks later I found waiting for me on my arrival at a certain town which was on our proposed route a letter from Paul. It was short and without explanation begged me to get back to him as soon as I received the letter. This request gave me an uneasy feeling.

What should Paul—Paul, the self reliant—want with me or with any one? If a man wanted counsel, he generally went to Paul for it, but Paul himself asked no man's counsel. It could not be that Paul was in a scrape of any kind.

It was not till 9 in the evening that I reached the place. Paul was not in the inn. The landlord told me, however, that he was quite well and that he was most probably at Mr. Reeve's. This he said with a meaning smile and added that he would certainly be back again before 11 o'clock. I went into the coffee room and sat down to wait.

The old baldhead again, the man with the red eyes and the white eyebrows—he followed me into the coffee room.

"Back again, my dear sir?" he began cheerfully. "Back again? I hardly expected this. Yes, I saw you drive down the street. The horse and cart belong to old Poulton, the man who burned down his own hayricks for the insurance. The fellow who drove you is said to be reformed. A very violent character once and in prison many times."

I paid no attention to these revelations. He took a chair, however, called for some brandy and water and went on talking.

"Strange doings," he said. "Strange doings since you went away. Your friend, sir—ah, poor young man. Trapped, I am afraid, trapped." He drank half his glass of brandy and water and drummed the table with his fingers, repeating with great satisfaction that my poor young friend was trapped.

"Now"—I grew pretty hot at this interference—"if you have come here to tell me stories and made up scandal, walk out of the door, or, old as you are, I shall put you out."

"Don't be violent, young man. Pray don't be violent. Why, you are like your friend. I warned him a week ago—I thought it my duty to warn him—and what was the consequence? Language more rude than I thought possible for a barrister and a gentleman to employ."

"I dare say you deserved it."

"What? For warning a young man on the edge of a precipice? Oh, what a world is this! What an ungrateful world!"

"I think," I said, "that you are a very meddlesome and impertinent person. Why do you speak to me at all?"

"Because I must speak. Young man, if you have any friendship for your friend—the other young man who swears—drag him away."

He looked and spoke so much in earnest that I began to fear there might be some danger of an unknown and unsuspected kind.

"What danger?" I asked.

"The danger?" He leaned across the table and shook a warning forefinger 'n my face. "The danger of a most lamentable connection. You do not know—how should you?—the nature of this village and its residents."

He leaned across the table and shook a warning forefinger in my face.

PORPOISE FISHING.

CHIEF INDUSTRY OF THE RESIDENTS OF HATTERAS ISLANDS.

A Calling In Which There Is Always the Element of Danger—The Big Fish Driven Ashore and Killed With Knives—How the Catch Is "Worked Up."

The principal industry of the hardy residents of Hatteras islands, off the North Carolina coast, is porpoise fishing. Isolated from the outside world, braving the furious storms that sweep over the island, the inhabitants become accustomed to the energetic winds and maddening billows which occasionally sweep away their fences, gates and, in unusually severe weather, sometimes the lighter articles of household furniture fall a prey to seething, relentless waves and are strewn along the beach or carried far out to sea. Still, they murmur not, but the industry goes on with unabated energy.

Somewhere in the neighborhood of 66 rough, hardy fishermen are engaged in catching porpoises. This force of men is divided into three crews, or relays, of 22 men each, stationed on the Atlantic side of Hatteras, their field of operation comprising a stretch of ocean front of about five miles in length.

Each of these stations is designed as camps, and the boats, nets and other paraphernalia used in capturing the porpoise are kept in constant readiness, and can be "run out" with as much ease and facility at a moment's notice as can the apparatus of the life saving crews. A man is selected from each one of these crews who is known as a "spy," or "watcher," whose duty it is to be ever on the alert for the appearance of the porpoise. Up and down the beach with measured tread, like the soldier sentinel, at stated intervals, he patrols his "beat," his vigilant eye constantly turned seaward.

A high pole is planted in each camp, but instead of a flag, however, a bundle of dead brush is utilized, and when this "waif," as it is termed, is run up to the top of the pole, it is the signal to the crew at the extreme end of the camp limit that a school of porpoises is gyrating and frolicking in the surf and to keep a sharp lookout for it. The watcher keeps this school in sight, and follows it, walking along the shore, noting every movement. Should the pilot carry the school seaward, the watcher returns to camp, the signal is hauled down and the commotion in the distant camps quiets down, for they know that the school has disappeared in deep water.

In case, however, the school (numbering all the way from 150 to 200 fish) continues to advance on a line with the shore, off goes the distant crew, with their boat, silently but swiftly into the surf, and soon an immense wall of net is spread to cut off its further advance. In the meantime the first crew, discovering the school, are following close in its wake, widening the net as they advance, while the middle crew has gone beyond the surf and is now pulling energetically for the shore. Finding its advance disputed the school suddenly turns only to find itself confronted by a similar obstruction of net. Now ensues a scene of indescribable confusion. High out of the water they leap, lashing the water into foam with their tails and making frantic efforts to escape. Silently the crews close in upon them. They are surrounded by a great, strong wall of netting, and only the most agile succeed in overleaping the boundary and make good their escape.

Closer and closer the crews approach the beach, and once in shallow water the most skillful maneuvering is required to prevent the escape of the school. The average catch at one haul is 80 fish. Each fisherman is armed with a long, keen bladed knife, and as soon as the catch "strikes sand" (the beach) a certain number of men detailed for the purpose draw their knives and proceed to stab the floundering fish in the neck. This operation is attended with extreme hazard, for the tail of the porpoise wields great power, and a "whack" sometimes breaks an arm or leg.

The catch over, the boats and apparatus are made ready for another haul. If the haul has not been made too late in the day, in the presence of a great crowd of women and children the skinning process begins. The fat on the skins runs from 2 to 2½ inches in thickness. The skins are taken to the factory, where they are soaked in large reservoirs, from which, after a sufficient length of time, they are transferred to the splitting machine. Here the blubber or fat is shaved evenly and smoothly to a certain thickness, usually requiring two "runnings" to accomplish the desired result. The skins are next spread upon the floor and subjected to a thorough salting. After a few days, when the salt has permeated every pore, the skins are carefully packed in large boxes and shipped north to undergo the final process of tanning.

For days at a time a hog, the proverbial North Carolina razorback, is not visible about Hatteras, but he knows from instinct when a catch of porpoise is made, and, like hungry wolves in a Russian forest, these razorbacks emerge in great droves from the dense woods and feast upon the carcasses—that is, if they have not been hastily gathered up and carted off to the boiling house. Here they are subjected to a long and thorough steaming until the bones leave the flesh. The flesh is tried out into oil, while the bones, mixed with other ingredients, are ground up in the rolling mill, and so the porpoise eventually reaches the market in 200 pound sacks of phosphate.

A great deal depends upon the condition of the weather as to the number of catches during the week. Sometimes, in extremely rough weather, the crews must content themselves with watching the school disporting tantalizingly in the surf but a short distance from the shore. In favorable weather, however, from four to five catches will be made in a week. Catches are made through the winter months, but the severity of the weather off Hatteras renders the operation extremely dangerous. Sometimes the overturning of a boat precipitates the whole crew into the chilly, boiling surf, from which with great difficulty they extricate themselves.—Philadelphia Times

MAKING ONE TOWN OF TWO.

ARGUMENTS FAVORING CONSOLIDATION OF CITY AND BOROUGH.

A Correspondent Who Thinks The City Residents Are Unanimously in Favor of It—Only Borough Politicians Opposed.

The New York Evening Post last night published the following from Plainfield concerning the annexation of city and borough:

It is not unlikely that an effort will be made this winter to consolidate the city of Plainfield, with the contiguous borough of North Plainfield. All that separates the towns geographically is a tiny stream, but this waterway also constitutes the boundary line between Union and Somerset counties. So far as public opinion touching the desirability of uniting the city and borough is concerned, it is beyond question that the inhabitants of the city are unanimously in favor of consolidation. The borough residents, except possibly the officeholders, entertain the same views. The only strong opposition to the proposed union would emanate from Somerset county, which would thereby be shorn of its largest and wealthiest municipality. Assemblyman-elect William R. Codington, a resident and ex-City Judge of Plainfield, believes that the time is ripe for consolidation, and is heartily in favor of bringing it about. He has expressed his readiness to work for legislation that would extend the boundaries of Union County so as to include North Plainfield and merge the borough and city into one municipality. Judge Codington said today that he would introduce a bill for that purpose in Trenton this winter, if he received the assurance of support from his constituents. He cited some of the benefits that the citizens of the city and borough would derive by consolidation, and the existing disadvantages that would be abolished. The union, he said, would add greatly to the prestige of the city. At present the census credits Plainfield with but 13,623 population; ignoring a community of 4,245 persons that commercially, socially, in fact, in every respect, except politically, are already identified with the city.

Opinions of Plainfield's wealth and importance based on census figures and assessed valuations are therefore, it is said, misleading, and detrimental to the town's progress. It is asserted that the government of the consolidated city would be more economical, for one mayor, council, assessor, collector, etc., would perform the work now done by two governing bodies. The administration of justice is at present greatly hampered in each town by its isolation from the other. The authority of the Plainfield and North Plainfield police stops at the county line, and offenders are frequently able to escape capture by fleeing across the brook. The only magistrates in the borough are justices of the peace, hence every civil or criminal case of importance has to be referred to Somerville for disposition. Plainfield is slightly better off in having a city court, but its limitations are such that it comes far short of meeting the requirements of the city. Judge Coddington says that the consolidated city would have a population sufficient to entitle it to a district court, in which could be tried many of the cases now on the calendars of the county-seat tribunals, thus effecting a great saving in time, cost, and inconvenience. Municipal improvements are retarded by the lack of political union between the towns. Plainfield is engaged in constructing a system of sewers, in the building or benefits of which North Plainfield has no share, although the need of sewerage is as great on one side of the brook as on the other. Similarly the privileges of free instruction in the Plainfield High School and of the Plainfield Public Library are denied to North Plainfield residents. And whenever an additional bridge across the brook is needed, or an existing bridge is in need of repairs, nothing can be done until the proposed improvement has been favorably acted upon by two boards of chosen freeholders, one in Somerville and one in Elizabeth, who share the expense equally.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AN ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE.

Green Brook Pollution Matter Taken to the Courts Today.

Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed appeared before the Court of Chancery this morning at Trenton and made application to the Chancellor for an order to be served upon those who are using the North avenue sewer to show cause why they should not be restrained from using the sewer by an injunction.

The application was granted and the orders made answerable on December 31st at the Chancery chambers in Trenton.

The orders will be served on the property owners whose buildings are connected with sewers, and not on the tenants. If no answers are filed on December 31st, the injunction will be granted by default. The property owners will probably pool their issues.

The application was signed by Attorney General Stockton and the action is brought in the name of the State of New Jersey.

The evidence furnished was that gathered by William Pangborn, the method of which was told of exclusively in The Daily Press.

LOCAL SPORTSMEN TO MEET.

They Will Propose Steps for the Preservation of Game.

A meeting of local sportsmen is soon to be held in this city in the interest of true sport. The present game laws, the scarcity of game, and the hordes of irresponsible shooters from the large cities who tramp all over the State, suggest the necessity of some immediate steps. The men who are arranging for the meeting favor either the stopping of shooting altogether or a tax upon every gun used for hunting. The latter plan seems practicable and is much in favor as the funds so raised will be sufficient to restock the State. With such a law passed and the game laws modified it would amply repay the gunners in the good shooting that would result. It would also stop the numerous irresponsible city gunners in their unmerciful slaughter and would, in a measure, stop the use of the small calibre rifles in the hands of careless lads.

Another Operation.

Another operation has been performed upon the left arm of young eight-year-old Andrew Carney, of 33 Emily street, in the New York hospital at West Fifteenth street, where he now is. There is a strong probability that he will yet regain the entire use of that member. The little fellow has been very hopeful and patient during all his illness and appears bright as a new dollar. It will be remembered that this young boy while previously being treated in this same institution a few weeks ago, contracted a sleight attack of diphtheria from a patient who was brought into the hospital before the nature of the disease was known. He was removed to the contagious hospital, foot of East Sixteenth street, where he rapidly recovered.

Red Men Meet.

A district meeting of the Tribes of Red Men of Plainfield, Elizabeth, Rahway and Perth Amboy was held at the latter place last Thursday evening. Great Sachem W. J. Forsyth, Great Junior Sachem David Peterson, Great Sannah Smythe and District Deputy C. M. Ulrich, were present, as well as representatives from nearly all the tribes in the district. Reports were made showing that the order was never in a more flourishing condition than at present. After the meeting a fine collation was served by Perth Amboy Tribe, No. 65, of Perth Amboy.

A Rare Treat.

Midsummer Night's Dream is charming to read and delightful to hear read, or sung, or acted. Last winter many enjoyed Chas. F. Underhill's fine rendition of portions of the drama. A rare pleasure awaits those so fortunate as to hear the Choral Society sing and Mr. Underhill recite from this masterpiece of dramatic art, at Music Hall next Thursday evening.

Play Forty-three Instruments.

The DeMoss family lyric barde will give an entertainment in the Mt. Olive Baptist church Christmas evening for the benefit of the church. They play forty-three instruments and give a wonderful entertainment. At the World's Fair they gave daily concerts in the Horticultural building. This is their twenty-fourth annual tour.

GAIETY REIGNED SUPREME.

THE FIRST ASSEMBLY DANCED OUT LAST EVENING.

The Attendance Not Exceptionally Large, But Pleasure Was Enjoyed by Everyone—List of the Patronesses and Guests.

Beautiful gowns and inspiring music dazzled the beholder as he entered the Casino last evening, for all the light and gaiety betokened the fact that the social season was reaching its height and the first Assembly was in progress. The large hall presented a pretty appearance as the animated couples, the ladies in their charming and brilliant gowns and their escorts in the more sombre black, glided and whirled about the room. Rugs, cushions, scarfs and the like added to the beauty of the scene, while on the stage Elliott's orchestra, of New York, furnished the inspiring strains that kept the dancers in motion. In one of the ante-rooms a table, artistically decorated in pink and green, was bountifully laden with dainty refreshments, which were furnished by Max Wiertz in his usual excellent style.

The attendance was rather small as is usually the case with the first Assembly, but the evening passed off very pleasantly and it was long after the clock struck midnight that the guests departed.

The patronesses present were: Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Louis G. Timpson, Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. Orville T. Waring, Mrs. Frederick Wills, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. William J. Roome and Mrs. Arthur H. Atterbury.

Among those present at the Assembly were: Mr. and Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. H. Curtis, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Van-Buren, Mr. and Mrs. J. Frank Raymond, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Saunders, Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. M. S. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Roome, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Atterbury, the Misses Holly, Abbott, Shepard, Murphy, Vail, Sprague, Wilkinson, of Jersey City. Richardson, of Brooklyn, Emilie Reinhart, of New York, Reise, of New York, and the Messrs. Wright, Hutchins, Huntington, Frost, Van Boskerck, Murray, Murphy, Shepard, Abbott, West, Van-Buren, Bull, Henderson, Erickson, Waring, Caldwell, of Elizabeth, Stillman and Behlen, of New York.

BELL FOR THE BOROUGH.

The Fire Alarm Problem Across the Brook Finally Settled.

Councilmen Peck, Smith and Valiant of the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee of the Borough Council met last evening and decided to do away with the fire gong.

A sixty foot tower will be erected near the engine house, in the top of which will be hung a suitable bell which will be connected with the fire alarm system. Bids will be advertised for to erect the tower at an early date.

The Horse Came Home Alone.

J. M. Smalley, the Somerset street butcher, had a rather novel experience last night. He drove in the vicinity of Rahway for the purpose of buying some meat. While he was inside making his purchases the horse was left outside fastened to a post. When Mr. Smalley appeared his rig was gone and he thought someone had stolen it. In consequence he was obliged to secure a horse and he came home horseback. Upon inquiry after reaching home he learned that his rig was at Blair's stable. The only solution is that the horse became tired, broke loose and came home.

Engaged as City Nurse.

Miss Rendill, of New York, just graduated as a trained nurse, has been engaged by the King's Daughters, of Plainfield, as a city nurse. Miss Rendill arrived yesterday and will soon enter upon her duties.

Skating at Westfield.

The ponds at Westfield were thronged with skaters and several from this city took advantage of the bracing weather and the good roads to ride up there and enjoy the skating also.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE NEW CITY COLLECTOR.

A BRIEF BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCH OF ELIAS H. BIRD.

Born on a Farm, He Has Worked His Way Up in the World, Winning the Respect and Confidence of All.

Elias H. Bird, the youngest son of five children, was born near Millington, Somerset county, Feb. 26th, 1860. His father, Clarkson Bird, was a farmer and died when Mr. Bird was seven years old. On July 6th, 1870, the family moved to North Plainfield, where Mr. Bird attended public school, which was then taught by Charles Gause on Race street. After a few years schooling he went back to his birthplace where he remained till Nov. 8th, 1876, when he was engaged by R. MacDonald as a clerk in his grocery store, which is located opposite the Y.M.C.A. building, and has been there ever since, and in nineteen years service the longest time he has been absent from the store was two weeks. That was last summer, when he took a vacation.

Several years after Mr. MacDonald's death, while J. Fred MacDonald, his son, was proprietor of the store, Mr. Bird was made manager, which position he had honestly earned by strictly attending to business Mr. Bird is quiet and unassuming in his manner, and during his residence in this city has made a host of friends.

In December, 1891, he was chosen by the Republican party in the First ward to represent them in the City Council. He was placed on the fire and building committee, with E. N. Erickson as chairman, and also on the street committee the first two years, and when elected for a second term remained on the same committees and was also appointed a member of the sewer committee.

During his four years service in the Council he has served the people faithfully, and recognizing this they elected him City Collector at the last city election, which position he will no doubt fill with credit to himself and to his party.

Barbara Aub Came From Dunellen.

"It is a very rare day when New Brunswick or Middlesex county cannot connect with some famous case that is monopolizing space in the newspapers," said a man this morning. "Did you notice in the Sun this morning that Barbara Aub, the girl who nearly sent Walter Langerman to prison for twenty years, lived in Dunellen and went from there to school in Hornellsville, N. Y. ?"

The Sun said so, and according to a well defined tradition concerning what you see in the Sun, it is very likely the truth.—New Brunswick Home News.

A Railroad Agreement.

The Daily Press is informed that several years ago the New Jersey Central and the Lehigh Valley Railroad companies signed an agreement that the latter would not enter Plainfield with a loop or spur, providing the former would not enter a certain town in Pennsylvania. From this it would appear that Plainfield will not receive addiditional railroad facilities unless the agreement is broken.

A SUCCESSFUL SALE.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue Church Give One.

The Sunshine Mission Band of the Crescent Avenue church gave a successful cake and candy sale in the parlors of the church yesterday afternoon and evening. The attendance was very good. The various tables were in charge of the following:

Candy table—The Misses Brower, Elsie Goddard, Amea and Fanny Cahoone.

Cake table—The Misses Louise Bushnell, Grace Peck, Hannah Thayer and Margaret Teal.

Fancy table—The Misses Emily Lovell, Ellen Vandervort and Florence Morrison.

Ice Cream table—The Misses Lillian Demarest, Margaret Demarest, Bessie and Margarie Phillips, Anna Garrigues, Dorothy Langdon, Florence Stewart and Neta Freilly.

Miss Halloway presided over the bouillon table. A great attractien for the young people was a grab-bag which was presided over by Santa Claus, who was excellently impersonated for the ocasion by Bertram Rockwell.

The sale was entirely arranged by the members of the mission band, of which Miss Bonnell is chairman.

BALL GIVEN BY THE LADIES.

A Pleasant Affair In Saengerbund Hall Last Night.

The first ball given by the ladies of the Independent Scheutzen Corps, held in Saengerbund Hall, last evening, was a pleasant affair in every respect. A large number of their friends were present, and dancing to the strains of Prof. O'Reilly's orchestra was kept up until early morn. The grand march, which was led by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Meyer, was well performed by those taking part. Precisely at midnight an elaborate supper, which had been prepared by the lady members of the corps under the direction of Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, was served. After supper dancing was again resumed. Noticeable during the evening was the dancing by several of those present, the dances of their Fatherland. Charles Meyer, made an excellent floor manager, with M. Menzenbach as an efficient director.

The ladies of the corps are as follows: Mrs. Joseph A. Blatz, Mrs. M. Menzenbach, Mrs. F. E. Shaefer, Mrs. Charles Yaeger, Mrs. H. Rummel, Mrs. H. Weidemeyer, Mrs. G. Sutterlein, Mrs. A. Berry and Mrs. M. Weber.

Charity Association Incorporated.

The Organized Aid Association of Plainfield and North Plainfield filed articles of incorporation with the County Clerk yesterday morning. The officers are: President, Mason W. Tyler; vice-presidents, Charles W. McCutchen, Henry B. Newhall, William W. Opdyke; secretary, John Doull Miller; treasurer, Howard Prescott Reynolds. The objects of the society are to discourage intemperance and diffuse the principles of benevolence and charity. The society will also investigate and report on the character and fitness of people applying for or receiving municipal aid.

Meetings of Plumbers.

Tomorrow afternoon at five o'clock the legislative committee of the State Asssociation of Master Plumbers will be received by the local association in the Exempt Firemen's parlors. Many prominent plumbers will be present from Newark, Jersey City, Orange, Hoboken, Asbury Park, Paterson and other places. D. W. Littell is a member of the State Committee. The President of the local association is that popular plumber, John H. Carney, and E. H. Enander is the secretary.

Patriotic Sons Elect.

The following officers were elected last evening by the Patriotic Order, Sons of America: President, C. F. Stephens; recording secretary, H. F. Thatcher; financial secretary, C. J. Burham; treasurer, N. H. Saxton; chaplain, C. B. Stephens; outside sentinel, W. E. Koyer; trustee for eighteen months, W. W. Stratton.

Opening of Mt. Bethel Hotel.

The grand opening of the Mt. Bethel Hotel will take place on Monday evening, December 23d. Dancing will begin at 8 o'clock. Prof. O'Reilly, of this city, will furnish the music. Thomas McDonald is the proprietor of the hotel.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The contract case of Walton & Co., against Peebles was adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court today for one week as was also the case of David Anguerbauer, claimant, against Walter L. Hetfield, plaintiff, in execution, to try the right of property.

RECRUITING FOR CHURCHES.

THAT IS THE MISSION OF COL. H. H. HADLEY'S MEETINGS.

The Successful Mission Worker Tells How He Spent Three Fortunes Before Saved from a Life of Degredation.

The revival service held at Reform Hall last evening, under the direction of Col. H. H. Hadley, showed no abatement in attendance and interest.

Col. Hadley opened the service in his usual interesting manner and gave a brief outline of how wonderfully he was saved after having spent three fortunes. He said that he was bound hand and foot with that terrible monster, King Alcohol, and that nothing but the grace of God and His spirit gave him freedom.

Miss Wray followed the Colonel by singing a solo, and also made a few earnest remarks urging immediate decision and accepting Christ.

A touching solo was then rendered by William N. Runyon, which affected the audience deeply.

An interesting part of the service then followed, when William Potter, Christopher Rickert and Joseph McCabe, three converts of the Rescue Mission, New York, related their experience, telling how miraculously they were saved from a life of degradation and sin. Their testimony was listened to with great interest and each felt that the power of God had certainly worked a miracle.

After the annoucement of the meetings for the week were made a hymn was sung and the meeting came to a close.

Mr. Runyon has promised to sing again this evening, at which time Miss Wray and Mr. Leo will speak. A good time is expected and everyone is urged to be present at 7:30 o'clock and join in the service.

Happy in Christ.

Percy Cannon, the blind young man of Dunellen, was greeted with a very large attendance last evening at the meeting of the Young People's Society of Trinity Reformed church, and impressed all with his sincere Christian testimonies, and the story of his daily life in a New York institute for teaching the blind to read, and many left the meeting feeling more than ever before their thankfulness to their heavenly Father that they were not afflicted like the speaker. As an evidence of their sympathy for him, a collection was taken and a goodly sum of money presented to him.

Tickets for the Choral Concert.

The tickets for the subscribers to the Choral Society concerts were given out Saturday evening at Music Hall, the window opening at 6 o'clock, but early in the afternoon the crowd began to gather and a long line was formed several hours before the appointed time. This morning the tickets were distributed to the singers at Shaw's drug store. The distribution was supposed to begin at 7 o'clock, but when the time arrived over thirty were in line. Charles H. Angleman was number one having lined up at 2:30 in the morning.

Lost Two Fingers.

John Burke, of Colorado, the ex-driver of the famous Deadwood coach, whose hand was recently caught in the wheel of a horse power machine at Mr. Dickson's farm, near Dunellen, was in town today, it being found necessary to amputate two of his fingers, which was done by Dr. Zeglio. Burke said it seemed queer that in all his perilous driving of the coach he never was injured, but that a "darn" machine, which can be run by anyone, should get two of his fingers.

Public Meeting Arranged For.

At the meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union yesterday afternoon, in the Y. M. C. A. building, it was decided to hold the public meeting Monday evening, December 30th. An effort will be made to secure the First Baptist church. Everyone interested in the instruction of children are urged to attend the meetings held every Monday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A.

The Feature a Clog Dance.

An entertainment will be given at the Boys Club tomorrow evening. The programme will consist of speaking, singing and instrumental music. A feature of the entertainment will be a clog dance by Prof. W. J. O'Brien.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it. Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

DOINGS IN CONGRESS

The House Considering Enlargement of Committees.

Heated Debate Over Representative Flynn's Attack on Secretary Hoke Smith — Significant Statement of Senator Voorhees Anent Secretary Carlisle's Report.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary Carlisle's annual report to congress was laid before the senate by the vice-president a few minutes after noon, and at the same time printed copies were placed upon the desks of senators. The most significant statement drawn out by the report was, perhaps, that of Mr. Voorhees, the present chairman of the finance committee, who expressed the belief that a resolution declaring it to be inexpedient and unwise to retire the greenbacks would scarcely receive fifteen negative votes in the senate. Mr. Quay presented a petition of the Wool Merchants' association of Philadelphia and asked that it be read and inserted in the record. "That is a bad example," interposed Mr. Sherman. "What is the petition?" "It asks," responded Mr. Quay, "that section K of the tariff act of 1890, known as the wool schedule of the McKinley law, be re-enacted as law." Mr. Sherman joined in the general smile. "Certainly there could be no objection to that," said he, and the petition was thereupon read. Mr. Peffer offered a resolution calling on the postoffice department for information as to the practice of imposing fines on employes; also for information as to the restrictions placed on postal employes against conferring with senators and representatives regarding legislation. The resolution was referred. Mr. Gallinger, rep., N. H., offered a resolution calling for reports from all government departments as to the number of aliens employed, and it was referred to the committee on civil service reform. Mr. Stewart, pop., Nev., then addressed the senate on the pending resolution, for a committe to investigate the needs of labor and agriculture.

House of Representatives.

The most important matter before the house to-day is the consideration of amendments to the rules, so as to increase the membership of the leading committees from fifteen to seventeen (the number in the last house) and for the creation of an additional committee on elections. Quite a heated debate occurred yesterday afternoon over a resolution offered by Mr. Flynn, rep., Okla. The Oklahoma member asked unanimous consent for the consideration of a resolution which, after reciting the passage on March 2, 1895, of the joint resolution for the ratification of the agreement between the Wichita Indians and the United States commissioners for the allotment of lands, called upon the secretary of the interior to inform the house about the reason for the delay in the appointment of the alloting agents and whether any of the blood connections of the secretary of the interior were interested in delaying the opening of these lands to settlement. In explaining his resolution, Mr. Flynn said that the last congress had passed a law directing the opening of the reservation of the Wichita and affiliated bands of Indians, and the secretary of the interior, so far as he, Mr. Flynn, could learn, had done nothing in the matter. At least it had not been done, as the law plainly directed, and he wished to know the cause of the delay. It was a known fact in Oklahoma that Secretary Smith had a lot of relatives who were profiting by the delay. They were acting as attorneys for the Indians. He, Mr. Flynn, had seen a contract by which a man was to receive $2,700 if he could prevent Secretary Smith from ratifying the agreement. Mr. Cooper, dem., Fla., defended Secretary Smith, characterizing Mr. Flynn's remarks as extraordinary. Usually the gentleman from Oklahoma exhibited proper ideas of decency in addressing the house, but he had sadly failed to-day. Mr. Flynn, he thought, had indulged in language regarding a cabinet officer unbecoming a member of the house.

His Letters Unanswered.

Mr. Flynn, replying to Mr. Cooper, admitted that he had some feeling in the matter. Explaining this, he said that last summer he had come 1,700 miles to see the president to find out why Secretary Smith had not complied with the law. He made several attempts to see the president, but failed. He saw Private Secretary Thurber, who told him to drop the president a note. He did so and waited a week for a reply; received none, tried again to see the president, but failed. In his efforts to obtain information on the subject, he had written Secretary Smith several letters, to which he had received no reply. He had also written the commissioner of Indian affairs, who replied that the matter was in the hands of Secretary Smith, but could give no further information. He had made every effort to ascertain what delayed the carrying out of the law, and had now brought the matter to the attention of the house. Secretary Smith could and probably would reply to a resolution such as he offered. In conclusion, Mr. Flynn said that there had never been, since the foundation of the government, a secretary of the interior who had devoted less time to his public duties than had Secretary Smith, "who was parading around the country changing his mind on the money question." The resolution was agreed to.

HOUSE ELECTION CONTESTS.

There May Be Three Committees To Decide the Thirty-Odd Cases.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Shall there be one, two or three committees to decide the thirty-odd contested election cases now before the house? That is the question which Speaker Reed is now trying to settle, and in order to reach a conclusion he consulted last evening with the leading republican and democratic members. The conference lasted an hour. At the expiration of that time the democrats withdrew, and the republicans informally discussed the matter for an hour longer. The republicans were a unit in favor of three committees, to consist of nine members each. Ex-Speaker Crisp is reported to have done more listening than talking, but he was opposed to the general proposition. There is little doubt that the result of the conference will be the formation of three committees, which will be announced with the other committees on, possibly, Friday of this week, just before the adjournment for the holidays.

OPPOSED TO SUCH JOKES.

De Lome Wants the Perpetrators of the Bomb Hoax Punished.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The police are confident that the so-called "bomb" left on the Spanish minister's doorstep Sunday morning was a harmless affair, but they are searching for the perpetrators of the hoax. The package was a common pasteboard box partially filled with crushed coal, some granular substance like sugar and two worn out zinc sticks from a gravity battery. The fuse was merely a slip of twisted paper, which was not burning when the butler discovered the package, but which has apparently been ignited at one time. While Minister Dupuy De Lome had no idea the affair was explosive, he is opposed to such jokes and is anxious for the police to catch the offenders in order that there will be no repetition of the affair.

HANDSOME RESIDENCE BURNED

A Wine Vault and Over 12,000 Gallons of Wine Also Destroyed.

Egg Harbor City, N. J., Dec. 17.—The handsome residence and large wine vaults of Ernest A. Schmidt, a wine merchant, this city, was totally destroyed by fire yesterday. Over 12,000 gallons of various wines were destroyed in the vault, and all the furniture and household goods were also totally destroyed, including $2,000 worth of oil paintings and designs. Nothing was saved, and the family barely escaped with their lives. The loss is estimated at $18,000, partly covered by insurance. The origin of the fire cannot be ascertained.

Hoke Smith's Child Ill.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 17.—Secretary of the Interior Hoke Smith arrived here yesterday from Athens, where he had been to attend the funeral of his relative, Capt. Harry Jackson. Soon after his arrival he was suddenly summoned to Washington by telegrams announcing the serious illness of his little daughter.

Death of a Noted Indian Chief.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The Indian bureau has received advices from Agent Myer of the San Carlos, Ariz., reservation of the death of Eskimazin, a noted Apache chief. He was one of the oldest chiefs of this tribe and during the days of the Indian fights was a great warrior.

To Give 'Frisco Builders a Chance.

Washington, Dec. 17.—Secretary Herbert has decided to give the Union Iron works of San Francisco an opportunity to secure one of the two battleships, Nos. 5 and 6, for which bids were recently opened at the navy department.

A Postal Employe Sentenced.

Boston, Dec. 17.—Harry J. Files, subcarrier at the Boston postoffice, who was convicted of stealing letters from the mails, has been sentenced to serve three years at hard labor in the state prison at Charlestown.

American Apples in Liverpool.

Liverpool, Dec. 17.—Three thousand barrels of American apples were sold at auction here yesterday. There was a good demand for colored fruit. Last week's prices were obtained.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Wheat—Trade quiet; prices steady. December, 65⅛c.; March, 65½c.; May, 66⅝c.

Corn—Spot trade is dull and lifeless. December, 33¼c.; January, 33⅜c. May, 35½c.

Oats—Spot trade is dull; old prices. December, 25¼c.; January, 25c.; May, 28¾c.

Pork—Spot steady; moderat inquiry. Extra prime nominal, short clear, $10.75@$12.25; family, $10.00@$11.00; mess, $9.00@$9.50.

Lard—Contracts dull and firmer. December, $5.50.

Butter — Fancy fresh creamery in limited supply, and with a fair demand late figures are fully sustained. Creamery, state and Pennsylvania, seconds to best, 19@26c.; creamery, western extras, 27c.; creamery, western, seconds to firsts, 21@26½c.; state dairy, half-firkin tubs, fancy, 22c.; state dairy, half-firkin tubs, seconds to firsts, 15@20c.

Cheese—Fancy large full cream selling fairly, demand good. State, full cream, large size, September colored, choice, 10c.; September white fancy, 10@10½c.; large common to choice, 7¼@9¾c.

Eggs—Trade continues slow and largely supplied with refrigerators. The supply of fancy grades small and such hold steadily at 24c.

Gold Reserve Again at Low Water Mark.

Big Withdrawal for Shipment to Europe To-Day—Talk of Another Issue of Bonds Revived—No Action, However, Expected by the President at Present.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The treasury department is informed that $3,200,000 in gold has been withdrawn at the New York sub-treasury for export today. Most of the gold goes to Germany. Of the withdrawn gold $2,800,000 was in bars and $400,000 in coin. This reduces the treasury gold reserve to $72,804,766. Talk of another issue of bonds has naturally been revived by the heavy withdrawals, but at the treasury no preparations for that purpose are said to be in progress. As congress has not had time to indicate its intention in the matter it is probable that the president will not act at once in the matter, but delay as long as, in his judgment, such inaction will not cause uneasiness. There is said to be absolutely no doubt that should the gold reserve drop below what is regarded as the point of confidence, and in the absence of congressional action, either immediate or prospective, the president will direct an issue of $50,000,000 of bonds to rehabilitate the gold reserve.

DISABLED AT SEA.

The Claribel, for Some Unknown Reason, Abandons Assistance.

New York, Dec. 17.—The Pacific mail steamship Newport brings news that at 5:30 a. m. on Dec. 13 she fell in with the Atlas line steamer Claribel off the Carolina coast. She was burning distress signals, which demanded immediate assistance. The Newport stood by until daylight, when the Claribel signalled, "We are disabled; will you take us in tow?" On answering yes, the people on the Newport saw a small boat lowered, which brought a line, to which the Newport's hawser was attached, and after considerable difficulty was towed to the disabled vessel. The officer in the small boat said that during a heavy gale the Claribel's propellor was disabled. The steamer lay at the mercy of the waves until the Newport took her in tow. It was noticed that the foretopmast was broken, and after the boat returned on board the rail amidships was smashed and carried away, as a gale was blowing at the time. The Newport steamed carefully ahead with the Claribel in tow, but, to the astonishment of all on board, the hawser was let go and the Claribel signaled to proceed and report to her owners, at the same time dipping her colors goodby, which were answered, and at 9:20 the Newport continued on her voyage.

KAISER AT FRIEDRICHSRUHE.

His Majesty Makes an Unexpected Visit to Prince Bismarck.

Hamburg, Dec. 17.—Prior to Emperor William's departure from Altona yesterday afternoon, where he had gone to review the garrison, he telegraphed to Prince Bismarck at Friedrichsruhe announcing that he was going to visit him. When the train arrived at the Friedrichsruhe station, Prince Bismarck was waiting to receive the emperor. After greetings had been exchanged, the old ex-chancellor thanked the emperor for the unexpected honor he had conferred upon him. They then went to the prince's residence, where the emperor remained until 7 o'clock, when, after warmly bidding farewell, his majesty started on his return to Potsdam.

THE GERMAN SOCIALISTS.

Suspension of Sentence in Herr Lutgenau's Case.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—The reichstag has suspended sentence in the case of Herr Lutgenau, the socialist leader, who has returned to the reichstag after a ballot in the district of Dortmund, Westphalia, and who was sentenced to five months' imprisonment on the charge of treason for reproducing in his newspaper, the Arbeiter Zeitung, an article headed "Another of those imperial speeches."

THE BAYARD SPEECHES.

Contradiction of an Alleged Remark by the Ambassador.

London, Dec. 17.—The United States embassy has issued a contradiction to the press of the statement attributed to United States Ambassador Bayard on Saturday that the adverse comments upon his recent speeches which have appeared in the American newspapers were due to the fact that this was the "silly season" in America. The note says that Mr. Bayard has made no comment whatever on the subject.

TURKISH CAMPAIGN IN CRETE.

Several Killed in an Attack on Christians.

Syra, Dec. 17.—The situation in the island of Crete is serious. In the attack made on Tuesday last by a strong Turkish force on the positions occupied by the Christians at Vryse, twenty-four Turks were killed and thirty-six were wounded. The Christians had five killed and eight wounded. At Alicampo the Turks massacred three men, two women and five children.

Successful Herring Season.

St. Johns, N. F., Dec. 17.—Reports from the frozen herring fishery at Fortune bay show that the prospects are most favorable for a successful season. Thirteen American vessels will return with full cargoes.

Impoverished * Blood

whether due to the inheritance of some scrofulous disorder, or caused by a depleted condition of the system, is the cause of much agony. A terrible complexion, foul eruptions, and loathesome ulcers are but outward symptoms — the sufferer should remember that all of the great organs of the body are likewise diseased, and the day cannot be long distant when death must surely ensue.

Bovinine

when taken for this trouble, is a means of salvation. It creates new flesh tissue and pure red blood corpuscles, and by giving strength to the great vital centres of the body, it enables them to perform their functions naturally, and thus dispel the existing poisons by the natural channels. It is not a medicine, but a powerful food preparation and invigorant, and is endorsed by over 25,000 physicians.

SENATE COMMITTEES

Republicans Complete the Work of Filling Them.

Some of the Important Committee Chairmen Whose Names Will Be Submitted to the Caucus This Evening—Every Republican and Populist Member Taken Care Of.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The republican committee to fill the committees of the senate completed its labors last night and directed a call for a caucus immediately upon the adjournment of the senate to-day. When this caucus convenes Mr. Mitchell, chairman of the committee, will submit and the caucus will approve the list of chairmen as agreed upon. Every republican and populist member of the senate is taken care of. The chairmen of the important committees are:

Some of the Chairmen.

Agriculture: Proctor, Vermont. Appropriations: Allison, Iowa. Contigent expenses: Jones, Nevada (pop.). Census: Chandler, New Hampshire. Civil Service and Retrenchment: Pritchard, North Carolina. Claims: Teller, Colorado. Coast Defenses: Squire, Washington. Commerce: Frye, Maine. District of Columbia: McMillan, Michigan. Education and Labor; Shoup, Idaho. Enrolled Bills: Sewell, N. J. To examine the several branches of the civil service: Peffer, Kansas (pop.). Finance: Morrill, Vermont. Foreign relations: Sherman, Ohio. Immigration: Lodge, Massachusetts. Indian depredations: Wilson, Washington. Interstate commerce: Cullom, Illinois. Judiciary: Hoar, Massachusetts. Manufactures: Wetmore, Rhode Island. Military affairs: Hawley, Connecticut. Naval affairs: Cameron, Pennsylvania. Patents: Platt, Connecut. Pensions: Gallinger, New Hampshire. Postoffices and post roads: Wolcott, Colorado. Printing: Hale, Maine. Privileges and elections: Mitchell, Oregon. Public buildings and grounds: Quay, Pennsylvania. Rules: Aldrich, Rhode Island. National banks: Mantle, Montana.

Populists Taken Care Of.

Under the present democratic organization of the senate every member of the populist party holds a chairmanship, and the republicans, believing that they should deal equally as justly with the third party, have also given them chairmanships. Messrs. Jones of Nevada, Stewart, Allen and Peffer are left where they are now and Mr. Kyle, who is ranking member on the committee to establish the university of the United States, was transferred from the committee on education to the chairmanship of the first named committee. Mr. Butler of North Carolina, the new populist senator, is given a chairmanship equal to that of Mr. Peffer.

Anxious To Avoid Delay.

There is little doubt that the caucus will approve the work of the committee, although the assignments are necessarily unsatisfactory to some of them. A list of the senate committeess as thus reorganized will be at once handed to Mr. Gorman, chairman of the democratic caucus committee, and the republicans expect the democratic caucus to take action on their assignments by Thursday evening. The vote in the senate on the reorganization of the committees will be taken under the present programme the next day. But, if anything should intervene to prevent this action, the republicans will probably not agree to a holiday adjournment until a few days later. They insist that if they have, the votes, and they contend they have the committees should be reorganized before the senate adjourns over until January. No effort will be made to reorganize the elective officers of the senate until after the holidays.

THE FRENCH SCANDALS.

Another Report that President Faure Will Resign.

London, Dec. 17.—The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette telegraphs that he is in a position to state that M. Faure, president of the French republic, will resign before next March. He says that a fresh scandal has been unearthed in connection with the president's family, and that daily hundreds of newspapers express disgust at the campaign of slander. He intimates that the secret fund of 200,000 francs ($40,000), which the Elysee palace expended upon the press, was not wisely distributed.

THE VENEZUELA MATTER.

Lord Salisbury's Reply Ready for Transmission to Congress.

Washington, Dec. 17. — Copies of Lord Salisbury's note on the Venezuela matter have been made at the state department and are ready for transmission to congress at any time. The correspondence relating to the Armenian situation is also being prepared and will follow the Salisbury note in a very short time.

Refining Company Incorporated.

Trenton, Dec. 17.—The United States Sugar Refining company has filed papers of incorporation here. Branches of the business are to be established in Camden, Philadelphia, New York and Boston, and the capital stock is two million dollars.

Miss Cassel Dead, Aged 100.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 17.—Miss Margaret (Peggy) Cassel, the oldest resident of Dauphin county, died near this city Saturday night, aged 100 years, 2 months and 9 days.

TARRED AND FEATHERED.

Punishment Inflicted on a Student for Stealing.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 17.—Charles Durchek, a student at the Wyoming seminary in Kingston, a resident of Freeland, Luzerne county, where his father is a wealthy brewer, was tarred and feathered by about thirty students at 1 o'clock yesterday morning on the campus. The students had for the past few weeks missed articles from their rooms, and after quietly investigating the matter they found that Durchek was guilty. They resolved to punish him themselves, and not refer the matter to the faculty. On Sunday a ten-dollar bill was stolen and found in the toe of one of Durchek's shoes. In the evening a paper was sent around from room to room and signed by about thirty of the students. They decided to stand by each other in the affair they were about to undertake, and if any was expelled all were to go. At 1 o'clock in the morning, the door of Durchek's room was broken open and he was gagged and in his night shirt only was taken to the campus. There he confessed, was stripped naked and coated with tar. The feathers were then added by liberal handfuls and then he was released. The boys went back to bed and Durchek spent all night in his room crying. When he did not come down to breakfast in the morning, the faculty learned of the matter, and President Sprague, after having the boy cleansed as near as was possible, expelled him. It is thought he will not say anything to the boys who were engaged in the affair.

THEY ARE INFERNAL MACHINES

The Man Who Sent the Packages to Armour and Pullman Arrested.

Chicago, Dec. 17.—There is now little doubt that the contrivances sent through the mails yesterday to Messrs. Pullman and Armour are deadly infernal machines, and had not the postoffice officials' suspicions caused a warning to be sent to the two magnates serious results might have ensued. The man named Owens, who called at the residences of the two millionaires with the intention of, as he alleges, warning them of the plot he overheard to murder them, is believed to have sent the infernal machines. He is now under arrest. The theory of the postoffice officials is that the sender, who they believe is Owen, did not intend death for the recipients, but merely to reap a reward for warning them of their danger.

THE ROCKEFELLOW MYSTERY.

Reported That the Convict ex-Banker Has Made a Confession.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 17. — The Rockefellow mystery, which has baffled the efforts of detectives and the public generally since the remakable failure of his bank two years ago, by which over $400,000 completely disappeared, now promises to be unveiled. One of the depositors, who had lost a large amount, saw the banker in the Eastern penitentiary last Saturday, and the latter, it is claimed, made a full confession. He implicates, it is said, a number of people to whom he attributes his failure, and it is further stated that action will be commenced soon to recover some of the funds. Sheriff Walters, to whom, it is said, the confession was made, refuses to reveal anything until he has seen the defaulting banker again.

PLOT AGAINST THE CZAR.

A Prominent Nihilist and Several Other Persons Arrested.

Berlin, Dec. 17.—A dispatch received here from Moscow repeats the story that a conspiracy against the life of the czar has been discovered there. A number of bombs have been seized, and several men and women, including a prominent nihilist leader, have been arrested.

Coronet Making Good Time.

New York, Dec. 17.—The schooner yacht Coronet, which left Brooklyn on the 5th, en route to Yezo, Japan, via Cape Horn and San Francisco, was sighted on Dec. 10 about 925 miles southwest of Sandy Hook. This would indicate that the American schooner which is to convey the Amherst eclipse expedition from San Francisco to Yezo, has traveled since it left the Erie basin at the rate of 185 miles a day.

Two Drowned While Skating.

Easton, Pa., Dec. 17. — Howard Mood, aged 19 years, while skating, broke through the ice under the Delaware bridge, connecting Portland, Pa., and Columbia, N. J., yesterday afternoon. His nephew, Roy Carpenter, aged 11 years, went to his assistance. He also fell into the water and both were drowned.

To Build Pleasure Resorts.

Trenton, Dec. 17.—The Fairmount Park and Beach company of Buffalo has been incorporated, with a capital stock of $250,000. The incorporators are Abram Warner, John Kelderhouse and Henry Weill, all of Buffalo. The company's business will be the building of shore and pleasure resorts, improving properties, selling lands, etc.

No Strike Contemplated.

Mauch Chunk, Pa., Dec. 17.—Prominent Lehigh Valley railroad officials here strongly deny the report sent out from Hazleton regarding the mutterings of an inevitable strike on the road. The various brotherhoods here say that there is peace all along the line.

ECONOMY IS NECESSARY

Secretary Carlisle's Report to Congress.

Recommends the Strictest Curtailment of Appropriations and the Retirement of Legal Tender Notes—A Deficiency, But No More Revenue Is Needed.

Washington, Dec. 17.—The annual report of Hon. John G. Carlisle, secretary of the treasury, was sent to congress yesterday afternoon. The most important points contained in it are as follows: "If the income tax provision contained in the act of August 28, 1894, had been sustained by the courts, it is believed that the deficiency for the year would not have exceeded the total estimated in my last annual report. In that report the opinion was expressed that the laws then in force would not only yield an ample revenue during the fiscal year 1896, but that there would be a surplus of nearly $29,000,000.

No Cause for Alarm.

"The cash balance in the treasury on the 1st day of December, 1895, was $177,406,386.62, being $98,071,420.30 in excess of the actual gold reserve on that day, and $77,406,386.62 in excess of any sum that it would be necessary to use for replenishing that fund in case the secretary should at any time be able to exchange currency for gold. There is, therefore, no reason to doubt the ability of the government to discharge all its current obligations during the present fiscal year and have a large cash balance at its close without imposing any additional taxation in any form upon the people, but I adhere to the opinion, heretofore expressed, that the secretary of the treasury ought always to have authority to issue and sell or use in the payment of expenses short-time bonds, bearing a low rate of interest, to supply casual deficiencies in the revenue. Although former recommendations upon this subject cannot be strengthened by repetition, the subject is of such importance that I consider it my duty to present it again to the attention of congress and to express the hope that it will receive favorable consideration.

Strict Economy Recommended.

"While the situation does not require any legislation for raising additional revenue by taxation at this time, it is such as to require the strictest economy in appropriations and public expenditures. At a time when the people, upon whom the expense of sustaining the government is imposed, are compelled to practice the closest economy in their business and domestic affairs in order to meet their obligations and re-establish their trade and industries, it is more than ever the duty of public authorities to avoid waste and extravagance in the appropriation and disbursement of the revenues. Nearly every appropriation is in terms, or by necessary implication, a direction to the executive authorities to expend the money, and, therefore, the responsibility for an increase or reduction of expenditure rests primarily and mainly upon congress. It is certain that if appropriations are not made the money will not be expended, and, for the reason just stated, it is almost equally certain that if appropriations are made the money must be expended.

Retire Legal Tender Notes.

"There has never been a time since the close of the war when the gradual retirement and cancellation of the United States notes would not have been beneficial to the country, nor has there ever been a time when the issue of additional notes of the same character would not have been injurious to the country. If our legal tender notes were retired, there is abundant reason to believe that a very large amount of gold, which has been excluded from the country by the excessive use of silver and paper in our circulation, would promptly return to take its place in our currency and constitute a permanent part of our medium of exchange.

Bonds Payable in Gold.

"As a part of the plan for the retirement and cancellation of the legal tender notes, the treasury should be relieved from responsibility for the redemption of national bank notes except worn, mutilated and defaced notes, and the notes of failed banks, and each association should be required to redeem its own notes at its own offices and at agencies to be designated by the comptroller of the currency, or, if this is not considered expedient and the present system of current redemption by the treasury is continued, the secretary should have the power, after a future date, to be fixed in the law, to require the banks to keep their 5 per cent. redemption in gold coin and to deposit gold coin for the withdrawal of bonds whenever circulation is to be permanently surrendered or reduced. This can be most successfully and economically accomplished by authorizing the secretary of the treasury to issue from time to time bonds payable in gold, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 3 per centum per annum and having a long time to run.

No More National Bank Notes.

"It is not probable that any plan for the permanent retirement of the United States notes and treasury notes will be adopted that will not require considerable time for its complete execution, and I therefore respectfully urge upon congress the propriety of prohibiting any future issues of such notes or of national bank notes of less denominations than ten dollars. Such a policy would make room in the circulation for silver coins and silver certificates of small denominations."

As the legislative session approaches there is hope that some legislation will be enacted which will root out the cider joints.

The Populists went out of existence as a recognized political party in New York State at the last election. They failed to poll the necessary ten per cent. of the total vote cast to entitle them to have their tickets printed without a petition.

The appearance of a Paris music hall singer in this country at $4,000 per week following close on to the event which culminated in the Vanderbilt millions going abroad with a title, seems to indicate that American love and art are among the things that are below par.

Since many taxpayers have questioned the policy of the Common Council in purchasing a chemical engine, the following report of Fire Commissioner Sheffield, of New York, is opportune:

I desire to report as to the value of chemical engines in fire extinguishment, that the testimony of the Fire Department authorities of Boston, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Chicago, St. Louis, Buffalo and twenty other leading cities of whom inquiries have been made is to the effect that they are the most valuable of recent aids and expedients in arresting fire, their operations covering an absolute control of from 25 to 80 per cent of all the fires in those cities, reducing both the total of the losses by combustion and the sometimes equally serious and often unnecessary damage by water. There has not been one adverse criticism received.

Editor Runyon pirouetted around with the English language in his editorial columns last night. This is nothing new for Editor Runyon—only that last night he was unusually smart in his application of bitter sarcasm and scintillating wit. He was real Mephisto-like, was Editor Runyon. It is said that he graduated from a big institution of learning some years ago; it is proper that such a rumor should have gained currency. If not, how else would the populace know that he had ever been to college? Editor Runyon diffused soprano thoughts last night in a manner that could only have been conceived in a brain teeming with a superabundance of mighty conceptions of the eternal fitness of things. The attention of Mr. Charles A. Dana, editor of the New York Sun, is called to the fact that he must be beware of his laurels. In Mr. Runyon he has a competitor for eminating sagacious thoughts, solving ponderous problems, criticising sardonically, and originating burnished, limpid, lucid, sparkling, cheerful, shining and joyous phrases to be copied widespread and sent rolling down into the archieves of literature to be wondered and studied about by future generations. In abject humility and a desire to enlighten the community The Press pleads with Mr. Runyon to condescend to explain the sentence:

Hence the whatness of his how-you-come so, ness.

A NOON-DAY BLAZE.

Fire Department Called to Extinguish a Fire in a Barn.

A lively little blaze started in the the barn at the rear of J. P. Laire's home on East Fifth street at quarter to one this afternoon and partially consumed the barn before it was extinguished. The cause of the fire is not known. A neighbor on East Fourth street was burning brush in the vicinity of the barn.

The fire started in a shed at the side and was discovered by E. C. Mulford, who lives in the next house. He gave the alarm. The carriage and robes were saved, but two sets of harness were destroyed. A small amount of hay and feed were also burned.

The barn was the property of W. E. Dunn, and was insured through E. C. Mulford's agency for $200, in the Phenix and London Fire Insurance companies. The insurance will cover the loss.

Suit Over a Harness.

The case of the Bath Harness Company against Wolf and Burnett was tried before Justice Crosley yesterday afternoon. It appears that Burnett endorsed a blank note for Wolf, and the latter filled it out to the amount of $108 and gave it to the Bath Harness Company. When Burnett learned what had been done he refused to pay the amount, hence the suit. Lawyer Charles A. Reed represented the plaintiff through his brother, H. B. Reed, while Lawyer George W. DeMeza represented the defendants. Justice Crosley reserved his decision for one week. Wolf claims that there are two separate notes and the one in question was signed and filled out at the same time, and with the consent of both parties.

DIGESTION AND WORK.

How Sick People May Save Their Energy.

It is as hard work for some people to digest their dinner as it is for a normal man to walk ten miles.

"After dinner rest a while." This is an old saying. It means that if after eating a heavy meal you try to do hard work you will exhaust all your energy. There will be none left for your stomach. Your stomach needs energy to work just as your leg or arm does.

Sick people want energy. They seldom have enough for their stomach Their digestion is out of order and they want to know the reason. It's simple enough as we have told it.

What they ought to do is to save their stomachs from hard work until it is capable of doing it, just as they rest their tired backs by lying down.

This they can do by using artificially digested food. Shaker Digestive Cordial contains such food; not only this, but it is capable of digesting other foods in the stomach.

Shaker Digestive Cordial affords nourishment and creates new energy as soon as it is swallowed. Ordinary food first has to be digested. Shaker Digestive Cordial while creating new energy does not expend any. It gives the stomach no work to do. It will make thin people fat. Sick people are naturally thin. Getting thin is a sign of sickness. A person may be born thin, and naturally remain so. Such a one is not necessarily sick. All druggists keep it and a 10 cent sample bottle may first be tried.

No excuse for sleepless nights when you can procure One Minute Cough Cure. This will relieve all annoyances, cure the most severe cough and give you rest and health. Can you afford to do without it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

The Cranford bowling team will visit the Park Club this evening and bowl a game in the Standard league.

Although there is no game in the Central Journal Bowling League for the Crescent Wheelmen, the next two weeks promise to be very lively ones for the bowlers. A series of games are to be arranged between the first and second teams, while matches are being arranged with teams from Westfield, Rahway, and the Plainfield Catholic Club.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A decision, in which all wheelmen will be interested, was rendered by Civil Justice New in Brooklyn recently. Spencer C. Crane, who is to lecture here tonight, brought suit against Andrew Rehan for damaging his wheel by running into it with an ice wagon. Rehan urged contributory negligence in that Crane had no right to have his wheel in the gutter, where the accident occurred. Justice New ruled otherwise, declaring that the plaintiff was not bound to remove his wheel from the gutter, because, as the bicycle is a vehicle, it is entitled to the same rights as other vehicles.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Beginning on Thursday, the Elizabeth Rod and Gun Club will hold its fifth bi-monthly tournament. The shooting will be at clay birds.

S. B. Wheeler and A. I. Smalley left this morning for Forest City, N. C., where they will hunt game for the next two weeks. Two fine dogs accompanied them.

The Essex Gun Club will hold its regular monthly shoot on Erb's grounds next Thursday afternoon. The shoot will be at live birds, and promises to be an unusually interesting affair.

PUNTS AND KICKS.

The delightful weather of the last few days has awakened the football cranks and now there promises to be a game on Christmas afternoon. The eleven of the Spartan L. and A. S. has at last arranged another game with the Dunellen team to be played on that date at Dunellen.

BASKET BALL.

The members of the Y. M. C. A. football eleven are going to organize a basket ball team and have challenged the first team to a game. The challenge has been accepted and a game will be arranged for the near future.

—While at work on Saturday at the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company's store, Frank Woodruff, who is employed in the repair department, cut his knee with a knife which he was using. He was kept at home on Sunday but is now able to work again.

—For a nice variety of reasonable priced presents there is no place that holds out greater inducements than the Bee Hive Bazar of Louis Callman. The holiday shoppers will find it to their advantage to call there. New bargains are told of in the new ad in today's Press.

—A. E. Lincoln, the popular Park avenue florist, has for sale a fine assortment of floral holiday gifts, elegant palms, ferns, choice blooming plants, jardeniers, aquaria, etc., choice cut flowers of every variety, also holly boughs, wreaths, roping and mistletoe. Leave your order early at 226 Park avenue.

—The eighteen day-old child of Mrs. Delia Maughan, of Summit, died suddenly on Saturday. Dr. William H. Lawrence was applied to for a death certificate, but, deeming the circumstances of the death suspicious, refused to give it, but immediately notified County Physician O'Reilly, who will make an examination.

THEATRICAL.

J. C. Stewart and Paul Dresser, these two comedians have surrounded themselves with a great company who who are well known all over the country, and comprise some of the best artists in their lines. The comedy is replete with sparkling music and rare specialties, ludicrous situations and laugh-provoking perplexities, all of which tend to create fun both fast and furious. There is not a dull moment from the rise of the curtain till its fall, it is one continuous scene of uproarious laughter from start to finish. If you are threatened with a fit of the blues go and see "The Two Johns," there's a sure cure.—Cincinnati Inquirer. This play will appear at Music Hall, Saturday night.

SENSE AND NON-SENSE IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Gifts really beautiful and useful show SENSE: Gifts of "Gew-Gaws" and trinkets show NON-SENSE, and, the more costly they are the worse they are. Can you choose a more sensible gift than a fine HAIR BRUSH; A SHAVING BRUSH; a HAND MIRROR? Or a more beautiful one than an Elegant CUT GLASS BOTTLE, empty or filled, as you please? Of such goods and their like we have a big stock at lowest prices, and, because of changes in styles, we are selling many fine articles at half the cost of manufacture.

The Christmas

SALE IS ON IN EARNEST.

From store opening to store closing time we are busy with seekers of useful and ornamental things for the holiday season. Every day finds us with more customers to handle—to wait on. You will help yourself and help us by coming early and as a special inducement a hundred pretty things step forward and proclaim their low prices. Come tomorrow before they are all carried off.

The Handkerchief Carnival.

Switzerland, Ireland and Japan contributed to this great handkerchief show. You might pay from five cents up to one dollar, but that's not the point. We are willing that you should go everywhere else and try to better them and then come here. Your better judgment will do the rest.

Christmas Gloves.

Not different from the good ones to be had here any other time, but assortments have been kept very complete for holiday buyers. Not a word about some very special values on extra good gloves that will greet you at the glove counter all next week.

Umbrellas.

Built extra good for Xmas gifts, and the handles and trimmings are the very latest. When a man has everything else, he usually thinks kindly of an umbrella. For instance one of these—26 inch Gloria silk, 79c, 28 inch Gloria silk, 89c, 26 inch Gloria silk, Dresden handles, $1.25.

A Word on Toys.

As long as children are children they will want pretty playthings. From far-off Germany came a multitude of them to make your children happy. Here they are side by side, waiting for Xmas shoppers who will carry everyone away.

Buy Blankets.

A note for the son or daughter who wants to remembers the guardian of the household with something she will appreciate. Fifty pairs of good wool blankets are easily priced for Christmas buyers. Can you imagine a more sensible gift? 10x4 all-wool blankets, $2.98, 11x4 all-wool blankets, $3.49, beautiful satine comfortables, $2.75.

Why not a Dress Pattern.

Several dozen novelty dress patterns, including every fashionable dress fabric of the season, ask for attention from gift buyers. You can't imagine what $3.00 will buy in a stylish serviceable gift until you see these dress patterns.

Men's Furnishing Department.

As fine an assortment as you find anywhere, only the prices are smaller. Men's heavy white shirts and drawers, 33c; Men's heavy natural wool shirts and drawers, 50c; Men's all-wool sweaters, $1.00; Men's seamless half-hose, fast black, 13c; Men's hemstitched handkerchiefs, 10c; Men's neckwear, four-in-hand and tecks. The 50c kind 25c. Men's silk initial handkerchiefs 25c and 50c.

LINCOLN AS A BOY.

He Was Saved Once From a Watery Grave by a Companion.

However poor the Lincoln home may have been, it affected the new child but little. He was robust and active, and life is full of interest to the child happy enough to be born in the country. He had several companions. There was his sister Nancy, or Sarah—both names are given her—two years his senior; there was a cousin of his mother's, ten years older, Dennis Hanks, an active and ingenious leader in sports and mischief, and there were the neighbors' boys. One of the latter, Austin Gollaher, still tells with pleasure of how he hunted coons and ran the woods with young Lincoln and once even saved his life.

"Yes," said Mr. Gollaher, "the story that I once saved Abraham Lincoln's life is true, but it is not correct as generally related.

"Abraham Lincoln and I had been going to school together for a year or more and had become greatly attached to each other. Then school disbanded on account of there being so few scholars, and we did not see each other much for a long while. One Sunday my mother visited the Lincolns, and I was taken along. Abe and I played around all day. Finally we concluded to cross the creek to hunt for some partridges young Lincoln had seen the day before. The creek was swollen by a recent rain, and in crossing on the narrow footlog Abe fell in. Neither of us could swim. I got a long pole and held it out to Abe, who grabbed it. Then I pulled him ashore. He was almost dead, and I was badly scared. I rolled and pounded him in good earnest. Then I got him by the arms and shook him, the water meanwhile pouring out of his mouth. By this means I succeeded in bringing him to, and he was soon all right.

"Then a new difficulty confronted us. If our mothers discovered our wet clothes, they would whip us. This we dreaded from experience, and determined to avoid it. It was June, the sun was very warm, and we soon dried our clothing by spreading it on the rocks about us. We promised never to tell the story, and I never mentioned the incident to any one until after Lincoln's tragic end.

"Abraham Lincoln had a sister. Her name was Sallie, and she was a very pretty girl. She went to school when she could, which was not often.

"Yes, if you must know, Sallie Lincoln was my sweetheart. She was about my age. I loved her and claimed her, as boys do. I suppose that was one reason for my warm regard for Abe. When the Lincoln family moved to Indiana, I was prevented by circumstances from bidding goodby to either of the children. And I never saw them again."—Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine.

A Daybook and Ledger of Ideas.

One of the greatest elements in successful business management is method. The judgment of a rich and a poor man is not so widely apart as their wealth. Besides, often the smarter is the poorer business man. The whole world of commerce depends upon the practice of bookkeeping, and all that bookkeeping is can be reduced to this: A record of business transactions kept so that they can be readily grouped and understood as a concrete whole. Bookkeeping is usually confined to a record of money transactions. A friend of mine carries the method still further. He keeps books for his ideas and the information picked up at odd moments. In his vest pocket he carries a little book which he calls his daybook. In that he records everything he wishes to remember, whether it is to buy a bottle of liquid glue to mend his little girl's doll or a social engagement for the following week. Everything goes into the daybook from the name of a man who wants a job to a scheme to make a million that may go flitting through his head.

In addition to the daybook my friend keeps a "ledger of ideas." Into this are transferred all such matters as are likely to be needed for future reference, like addresses, suggestions in connection with his business, all grouped in such a way that they can be turned to in a moment. When a matter has been disposed of, a pencil mark is drawn through it, and that ends it except that it serves as a memorandum of the fact and the period of time when entered, for these items are divided by date lines indicating the period when entered.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Violins are adapted for the use of left handed players by reversing the order of the strings and the location of the bass bar and sounding post. Some left handed violinists, however, play upon instruments with the strings arranged in the usual manner.

There are no left handed pianos. Guitars are made left handed simply by reversing the strings. With the banjo it is necessary also to change the form of the neck on account of the short string. Left handed flutes are made, the location of the keyholes and keys being changed to the opposite side of the flute. There are made left handed cornets, and occasionally a larger brass instrument, which are so constructed as to bring the pistons as convenient to the player as they are to the right handed player in the instrument as ordinarily made.

The proportion of musical instruments made left handed is extremely small, very much less than 1 per cent.—New York Sun.

John Bull and His Pills.

Between 6,000,000 and 7,000,000 pills of one kind or another are estimated to be daily consumed in the United Kingdom. The estimates are based on the actual daily sales by druggists of ordinary pills, prescription pills and patent medicine pills. The average of these estimates, which came in from all parts of the country, showed that the daily consumption was considerably over 5,500,000, which would give one pill per week to every man, woman and child of the population. Taking the average pill to weigh three grains, the year's supply for the United Kingdom would weigh not less than 178 tons, or enough to fill 36 ordinary wagons, and making a trainload which would require two powerful engines to pull.—London Standard.

Glasgow and the Ticket Clerk.

Here is an anecdote of the late Lord Glasgow. His lordship was traveling by rail and tendered a "fiver" to the booking clerk for a ticket to Glasgow.

"Put your name on it," said the youth.

And Lord Glasgow indorsed it as requested and handed the note back.

"Here! Hi, you old idiot!" cried the clerk. "I want to know who you are, and not where you're going to."

We dare not print Lord Glasgow's reply.—Pearson's Weekly.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

ALL FOR LOVE

By WALTER BESANT.

I began to wonder if the man was mad or if there was method in his madness. "This place, sir, is the refuge of those who can no longer live among their fellow men. Here all alike have a disgraceful past and can meet on equal terms. In fact, it would be in the highest degree unmannerly to speak of what may have happened. Some words, such as detection, punishment, justice and the like, are never used here. Be careful not to use them."

"Good heavens!"

"Why not? People must live somewhere. Surely it is best, when a man comes out, to join a community of others who have either come out or been driven from society. Ah, my young friend, I have now been here six months and more, and I have as yet regarded the possession of this knowledge as a sacred secret, but to see a young gentleman trapped—I cannot longer remain silent. I cannot indeed."

I wanted to ask him if he had recently "come out," but I forbore.

"In the very first villa outside the town," this agreeable person went on, "there lives a lady who was once tried for her life in Scotland. She got off because the verdict was "not proved." But she did it, my dear sir, she did it. I have read the evidence, and I think I may be allowed some experience in evidence. She did it."

"Well?"

"And on the other side of my house lives a man who was cashiered—drummed out of the army, sir, and he a major—for cowardice. Oh, yes! My house is between them."

"And what have you done?" I asked impudently.

He shook his head sadly, as if I was greatly to blame for asking so indiscreet a question.

"Opposite to us there lives an aged clergyman. Ask him—I am not a libelous person—I say only ask him why he holds no benefice now—ask him that. To say of his neighbor that he is a fraudulent bankrupt and lives upon the profits would not surprise you, I suppose. And of the Hon. Mr. Arthur Mompesson, another of our neighbor residents, that he was expelled all his clubs for cheating at cards would not strike you perhaps as at all an unusual incident in a gentleman's career."

"But what did you do?" For the man was reeling out these accusations with a malignant joy which made one's brain turn. "What is it that you have done?"

He shook his head again.

"And there's another man, who made his fortune by wrecking ships, overinsuring them and then overloading them. He is a churchwarden now—ho, ho! And as for old Reeve, as he calls himself now, who wants to throw over his old friends, refuses to speak to me if he meets me and has forbidden me the house—why, I defended him, sir, I defended him, and this is his gratitude."

"You—you defended him? What were you then?"

"What was I, sir? I would have you know, sir, that I was a barrister, sir, and a queen's counsel, sir. What do you think of that?"

"You were a barrister and a queen's counsel? Then why are you no longer either? What did you do?" I asked again.

He shook his head no longer, but sprang to his feet, with a fierce gesture, and for a moment I thought he would have made for me.

"Why," I said, looking him steadily in the face, "if you are no longer a Q. C., what is it that you have done?"

He made no reply, but actually fled from the room. He ran out of it and down the street, and I saw him no more.

At 11 Paul came home. He was evidently in a state of high excitement. "I sent for you," he said, "because I must tell some one, and I know I can trust you. Sit down and listen to me without speaking one word."

As for the substance of his tale, it was what one might have expected. He was in love, madly in love, and with the very girl—the beautiful creature whom I had seen on the river. Her name was Isabel. The largest and finest house in the place belonged to her father, who was, it appeared, a man of considerable wealth. So far all seemed plain and easy sailing.

"You love her, Paul," I said. "No occasion to repeat it. And—if one may have the impertinence to ask—does the young lady"——

"She refuses me," he replied. All this time he had been walking about the room in a violent agitation. "She refuses me."

"Refuses you?"

"Refuses me. Mind, there is a reason. The dear girl owned today that if it were not for this reason—she—she"—Here he choked.

"Is the reason insurmountable?"

"Oh!" he replied. "The reason is unreasonable; it is a mere trick of the brain; it matters really nothing. I cannot tell you, though she has told me the whole, God bless her! Yet I cannot tell you all of it—only this, there is upon her past a cloud. Yes, I admit it is a very dreadful cloud. Through no fault of her own—none, mind. No one can blame her in the least; no one would dare throw it in her teeth. By heaven, I would kill such a man where he stood! It is on account of this cloud that she refuses. She says that she will never consent to bring her burden of shame to weigh down the life of a man she loves. Oh, Isabel, my dear!" Here again he choked.

"Yet, Paul, if you would take her—even with this—this"——

"Even with this?" he said solemnly. "Why, it would be nothing in the world to me. Less than nothing; just a secret between husband and wife; just a painful reminiscence of the past, never to be mentioned between us."

"Is there," I asked, "any one who knows the secret?"

"Her brother knows, of course, poor fellow! Well for him if he did not know, because the knowledge of it will poison his life wherever he goes. I am sorry, truly sorry for the boy. But, as for Isabel, I can take her away from all of it."

"And does no one else know?"

"There is a dreadful man who lives here—a most horrible beast. I threatened to cowhide him last week because he threw out hints that he knew something about the previous history of this family not alotgether to their credit. He is a man named Brundish; he was formerly in very good practice at the bar, was a Q. C. and a bencher of Lincoln's Inn and was then found to have appropriated, embezzled or made away with certain trust moneys. This was a horrible scandal, and they disbenched and disbarred him. He is a man of infamous private character and drinks, I believe. Probably he will drink himself into the grave before long. I am afraid he knows something, but I do not know how much. What does that creature signify?"

I thought it unnecessary to tell Paul of my experience with Mr. Brundish, but I felt relieved to think that he had not told me more. We went on talking of the young lady's perfection. In fact, we talked half through the night.

The next morning he took me to the house. It was a beautiful villa, furnished with admirable taste, heaped with books, pictures and all kinds of pretty things. Isabel herself—I have always called her, by gracious permission, by her Christian name—received us, and presently her brother joined us. There was some constraint upon the whole party, which was natural under the circumstances, and I was glad when we all went out together and climbed to the top of the headland. Here presently I found myself—whether by accident or design I know not—standing alone with Isabel, the other two slowly going on before us down the hill. She looked grave and anxious, her cheek rather pale. I knew that her mind was full of her lover and her refusal. I had no right to speak, yet I did speak to her about it. First, I told her what Paul had told me, that he loved her and that she would not accept him, for a reason.

"Did he tell you the reason?" she asked, her cheeks flushing suddenly.

"No; only in general terms. There is a cloud upon some part of your past."

"A cloud indeed," she replied.

"Which would not in any way affect the life of the man you married."

"But it would," she said; "oh, it would! You do not know what it is, or you would say that I am right."

"Nay, I cannot think, Miss Reeve, that you are right, for you make the man who loves you—the best man in the world—you do not know what a clever, brave and good hearted man he is—you make him wretched when you might make him happy." And so I continued, she shaking her head, though the tears came into her eyes, and murmuring, "Oh, I refuse him because I would not make him unhappy."

Then I said it all over again. I begged her to put this consideration out of her mind altogether, and if she could to make Paul happy.

She shook her head with less firmness than before, and I saw that she was shaken.

When we walked back to the house, the boy came with me, and Paul walked beside Isabel.

"I wish it may come off," he said, blushing as usual. "I say—I know I can talk freely with you, because Paul says so. He has told you something about us, hasn't he? Not much, he says, but I dare say it is quite enough. Isabel wrote it all down, so that he should not think he had been deceived—all, she says—everything. Good God!" here he gasped. "If Paul likes to show it to you, he may. But I hope he will not. As for me, I am done for. I can do nothing. The history is round my neck like a millstone. I must sit in the background all my life and make myself as little conspicuous as I can. I cannot go into the army or the university. I have not been to a public school. I have no friends, and I can make none. I can never marry." Here he stopped for awhile and walked on at a great rate, swinging his arms.

"As for Isabel," he went on, "it really cannot matter to her when once she is married. Paul will take her away. No one will trouble their heads to ask who she was. If she can once be got to think that it will not do him mischief, I think she will give in. And, oh! I cannot bear to think that she should stay on here, wasted, her life spoiled, living in vain."

She had already given in, though we did not know it. The word was spoken, and she was promised. I saw it in her blushing face and softened eyes when we reached the house. I saw it in Paul's absurdly triumphant air when we walked away.

"It is settled," he said, pressing my arm. "She has accepted me. My dear boy, I am the happiest man in the world!"

He went on to explain at great length how very happy he was already, and how very much happier he meant to be in the immediate future. They were to be married at once—in a few weeks—there was no need to wait, and so on. Meantime there was a small dinner party at the house that evening, and I was invited by Isabel.

In the nature of things it was impossible that I could avoid being interested not only in the love affair of my friend and the most beautiful girl, Isabel, but also in her father. From Paul I learned that something had been done which must be concealed; from the boy, that something had been done which would make it impossible for him to go into any kind of public life; from the wicked old man, Mr. Brundish, that he had himself "defended" the father of this interesting pair at a critical juncture when he himself had been a Q. C. All this put together did not inform one of much, yet it made me curious, not so much to know more as to see in the flesh the man who had caused this terrible cloud to hang over his children's lives, the man who had "done something."

Well, I was introduced to him. I saw him. He was a singularly handsome man, portly, dignified, well dressed and possessed of a manner perfectly charming, not only at ease with himself, but able to set his guests at their ease. He was apparently about 60 years of age. His abundant hair was of a splendid creamy white, his features were sharp and clear, his eyes singularly bright—they were of a deep blue, like those of his daughter—he not only looked, but he was a perfectly polished and delightful man. At the very sight of him all the injurious suspicion and doubts one had entertained of him vanished. As he talked one was lifted out of one's self and carried into circles and among people one had never thought to know. Perhaps he talked too continuously, but nobody else present could have talked half so well, and I, for one, was content to listen.

There were six or seven guests besides Paul and myself. It was an excellent dinner, admirably served, and with admirable wine. At first I gave myself up entirely to the enjoyment of the delightful talk and thought of nothing else. But a strange thing happened. In the very middle of the dinner I caught a sharp and curiously suggestive glance from Isabel. It seemed to ask me what I thought now of her father, and if I really knew that——

I felt myself blushing like her brother, and my mind suddenly went back to what I had heard. Of what nature was the "cloud?" Had the ex-Q. C. really defended our host, and if so on what occasion? And all the other scandalous statements returned to my brain. Why had the venerable clergyman opposite to me no longer a cure of souls? Why had the gallant major next to him left the army? Was it true that the Hon. Arthur Mompesson had been expelled his club for cheating at cards? And this middle aged lady, whom I had taken into dinner, could she really have poisoned her lover? And while I pondered these things our host's pleasant, genial voice went flowing on, so that one felt the strangest incongruity between these absurd questions and the place, the talk and the people.

Three weeks later the pair were quietly married, without any party, bridesmaids or ceremony at all. What Paul said to Isabel's father I know not, but at the wedding the old man seemed strangely shaken and agitated, trembling at every footfall. He had become aged, one knew not why. The bride and bridegroom drove from the church to the nearest station. Mr. Reeve went home, and I went back to the inn. I found there the man Brundish, who had been drinking already, though it was not yet noon.

"I told the old man I would interrupt the ceremony," he said, with a grin, "and make him marry the girl under her true name, but he begged me not. I am to dine with him tonight instead. Ha! Now that the girl is gone, he says, he does not care who comes to his house. Wanted to keep his own children from their father's old friends, you see. There's gratitude! Why, who defended him? Who made such a speech that all England rang with it—eh?"

"Well," I said, "now that Mr. Reeve's daughter has married, you have done with her, at any rate, and with me too."

"I don't know, young man, I don't know," he replied. "I am, it is true, a forgiving person, which is lucky for the happy bridegroom. But then he once shook a cane over my shoulders. I don't know if I have done with them. And I wasn't good enough to be invited to the house. Respectable company you met there, wasn't it? The man drummed out his regiment. The man expelled from the clubs. The woman tried"——

"Go to the devil!" I said and left him.

A month or two later I heard from Paul that his father-in-law had been found dead in his bed. It appeared that he had no money of his own, but was living on his late wife's fortune, which had been settled upon herself and was held in trust. The share of it which now came to Isabel put the newly married pair at once into a position of great material comfort if not wealth. But Paul was already making way in his profession.

THE WEALTH OF NATIONS.

We Lead the World, With England Second and France Third.

The United States is the richest country in the world, according to M. G. Francois, the eminent French statistician, who has been making a careful study of the wealth of 19 of the principal nations of the globe. It will interest penniless people to know that the calculator estimates the riches of this country at 313,000,000,000 francs, or, reckoning 5 francs to the dollar, nearly $63,000,000,000.

England is the next, with 265,000,000,000 francs, and France is the third in line, being the possessor of 225,000,000,000. Germany's fortune is considerably less, only 161,000,000,000, and the Russian empire, though far more vast, is considerably poorer, with but 12,000,000,000.

The actual amount of money possessed by the various nations bears but a feeble proportion to the above figures of national wealth. The Bank of France, for example, is responsible for only about 6,500,000,000 francs, or a little less than 3 per cent of the total fortune of that country, while other countries have still less cash in their pockets and strong boxes, for France has the greatest per capita wealth of any country in the world.

Three states possess more than 50,000,000,000 and less than 100,000,000,000 each. Austria-Hungary, 82,000,000,000; Spain, 63,000,000,000, and Italy, 54,000,000,000. The fortunes of the 11 other countries vary between 3,000,000,000 and 34,000,000,000 francs.—New York World.

CANTATA THEME IS HISTORIC

A PAGE OF HISTORY TO BE SUNG BY THE CHORAL SOCIETY.

The Society Have Taken Long Steps in Matters of Music and the Recital Thursday Night Promises to be the Best.

It is a long, long time since the Choral Society first warbled "The Sands of Dee" and "Stars of the Summer Night" for Plainfielders delectation, and it has been a succession of long steps—musically speaking—from the part songs of Macfanen and Smart to the kind of entertainment they have learned to look for regularly now.

In the selection of Max Bruch's superb dramatic cantata of "Arminius" as the initial novelty of this season, the society has given another proof of its artistic nerve, and its performance of the intricately melodious numbers of this work of the modern German school will furnish the old-time patrons, who are presumed to have been growing in musical grace while the choral leaders have been growing gray, a fresh opportunity to institute comparisons between the old-time concerts and the new.

The theme of the cantata is historic rather than legendary, for although its hero—the great Fenton with the Latin name—was exalted long after his tragic death to a place among the medieval deities, his fame as the liberator of Germany is firmly fixed in history through the unfriendly testimony of the enemies whom he battled with and overthrew at a time when his countrymen made history but did not write it. The time is the ninth year of the Christian era, and the story that of the great uprising of the Teutonic tribes under the leadership of Aminius, and the terrific three days battle amid the gloomy shadows of the Teutobugue-wald, in which three of the choicest legions of the Roman Empire were almost annihilated, a battle whose results literally changed the currents of the world's history. For as the star of the nation which was destined to be a mother of nations rose over Winfield, the star of Rome began its descending course. The tramp of the Roman hosts was to be heard again upon the banks of the Elbe and the Rhine, but they were no longer the legions invincible. The despairing cry of Augustus, "Give back my legions Varus," sounded the note of retreat for Rome at an hour when, in the language of Ronke, "The earth seemed void of independent nations," and the sententious observation of Victor Hugo concerning Waterloo, that it was not a battle but "a change in the front of the universe," is not less applicable to the wild struggle amid the forests of Westphalia, whose issue secured for Arminius the deserved title of Liberator of Germany.

CYCLING THROUGH NORWAY.

Spencer C. Crane Interests an Audience in the Y. M. C. A. Hall.

To those who have never taken a cycling trip of any length, the lecture at the Y. M. C. A. Hall last evening on a tour through Norway and Sweden by Spencer C. Crane was a revelation. The lecture itself was very enjoyable, as Mr. Crane is a pleasant speaker and has a ready command of language. The stereopticon views added to the pleasure of the lecture and gave the audience some idea of the wonderful country through which Mr. Crane rode. His accounts of the Norwegian dinner and shave were very amusing while his description of the perilous descent into Naerodalen Pass was thrilling to say the least.

A BRAKEMAN'S FATAL TRIP.

Struck an Overhead Bridge at Fanwood and Killed.

A very sad accident occurred last evening between 11 and 12 o'clock, when Brakeman William Jetters, of Camden, going west on a freight train, was struck by the Fanwood bridge, while standing on a freight car, and knocked insensible. The train was making fairly good speed.

He was discovered by his mates on top of the freight car, where he was thrown, and brought to this city in an unconscious condition. The ambulance was sent for and he was taken to the hospital. It was the belief that the blow he received in the head resulted in his death, as there were no other wounds about his body.

Mr. Jetters was a young man and very popular with the crew on the train. His body was cold when taken to the hospital and will be sent to Camden today.

Mr. Jetters recently gave up his position as conductor on a P. & R. freight to accept this last one on a fast freight.

His fellow-workmen on the train were deeply grieved by his sudden death.

MR. LEO RESPONDED.

His Remarks Stir the Women to Send a Barrel of Clothes for the Needy.

The Home Missionary Society, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, held a regular meeting yesterday afternoon at the home of the president, 821 First place, as usual. Owing to the illness of the woman who was expected to address the society, she was unable to be present. Alexander Leo, of New York, who is assisting Col. H. H. Hadley in the revival meetings this week, very kindly offered to say a few words about his work in the slums of New York. He presented his subject in an exceedingly interesting manner, and the women present decided to prepare a barrel of old clothing to be sent to New York to be used in the mission work. Any having articles to contribute can send them to 821 First place, where they will gladly be received. Mr. Leo says that anything from baby socks to a spring bonnet will be gratefully received.

ENGLISH IN THE CRIMEAN WAR

THEIR SERVITUDE AND SACRIFICE TO DUTY WAS REMARKABLE.

He Tells of the Personal Experience of Remarkable Men and the Extraordinary Suffering—Power of War Correspondents

Plainfield is having an unusual treat in Dr. James F. Riggs' lectures on the Eastern Question, and that they are thoroughly appreciated is shown by the increasingly large attendance. A large audience gathered last night in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church to listen to the lecture on the Crimean War.

Before beginning upon the subject of the evening, Dr. Riggs, with the aid of a large map, pointed out some of the places in Turkey which are just now of especial interest.

"The Crimean War," said Dr. Riggs, "was of peculiar interest on account of the small extent of territory fought over, the personal influence of remarkable men, the extraordinary suffering involved, and the power of the war correspondents. It was the first war in which large modern guns had been employed on any extended scale."

The personal influence of the officers over their men was very great. The men almost worshipped their commanders.

On one occasion Capta'n Gordon found a corporal and a private quarreling as to which of them should go up on the breastworks to make some needed repairs. He said to the corporal, "Never tell a man to do what you are afraid to do yourself!" and sprang up when they both followed him at once,

About the devoted charge of the Light Brigade, there will always be a great mystery. It has never been discovered where the mistake was made. Lord Raglan, who sent an order of some kind—no one knows what—died soon after, and Captain Nolan, who carried the order, was killed on the field while endeavoring to overtake Lord Cardigan and stop the charge, knowing there must have been a mistake somewhere.

As Lord Cardigan ordered the buglers to sound the charge, knowing well that the brigade was doomed, but obliged by military etiquette to obey orders, he said. "Here goes the last of the Cardigans!" When the few survivors of the charge returned, he sprang from his horse and stood in front of the line, crying, "Men it was an awful shame, but it was not my fault!" And though the cavalry was wounded and bleeding, many of them, swung their hats and cheered him, saying, "Never mind, General, we'll do it again if you say so!"

Such were the Englishmen who fought through the Crimea, and returned to England, what was left of them, covered with glory.

Not Many Present.

There were not very many present at the social given by the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Baptist church last evening. The social committee, Miss Grace Yerkes, Mrs. Chas. Conover and Mrs. E. VanName arranged the affair, which was very enjoyable. A portion of the time was passed in playing games, after which refreshments were served.

Careless Children.

Several small children playing in the street near the Arlington Hotel last evening about 5 o'clock, narrowly escaped being run over by Car No. 3. The children were trying to see how many times they could cross before the car arrived. One of the little ones fell across the track and the motorman succeeded in stopping his car about two feet from where the child lay.

A Fit Title.

"The Palace of Sweets" is a fit title for Tier's Park avenue store. Heaps of delicious candies are on all sides, all his own make, too. Now he is selling an excellent special mixed candy at ten cents a pound. Just take a look at his windows and see a few of the attractions.

A Contagious Card Removed.

Edward, son of E. L. Suffern, of Linden avenue, who has been ill with scarlet fever, has recovered, and the card denoting contagious disease has been removed.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

SOME ORDERS SERVED TODAY

THE NORTH AVENUE SEWER USERS WILL HAVE TO SHOW CAUSE.

Borough Counsel Reed Says That There is No Desire to be Arbitrary, But the Time for Action Has Come—His Views.

The publication in The Daily Press yesterday of the fact that Chancellor McGill had granted the application of Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed for orders to be served on property owners using the North avenue sewer to show cause why they should not be restrained from using the sewer, caused a great deal of talk among both city and borough people. The borough officials claim that this action was only taken as a last resort to suppress the pollution of Green brook after every appeal to the city officials to remedy the nuisance, had proved futile. They admit that the brook is no more unhealthy now than it has been in the past, but that inasmuch as there was no immediate prospect of the abatement of the sewage mixing with the water in the brook and culminating in the unhealthy stench, the actions in courts may as well be brought now as at any future time.

Borough Counsel Reed told a Press reporter this noon that he understood unofficially that the city officials did not desire to commence using the sewage beds until the weather was most favorable for them to succeed, and with this condition of affairs existing the pollution of the brook would be likely to continue all winter unless legal measures, such as have been taken, were enjoined to stop it. The borough, he said, had no desire to be arbitrary in the matter or to inconvenience property owners in the city, but they had waited as long as they felt that they could. The fact that many property owners would never make connections with the new system of sewers as long as the North avenue sewer could be used with impunity, made it mandatory for their own protection to take the action which they have.

A number of the orders to show cause will be served on property owners this afternoon. Tenants will not be bothered.

Whether or not any action to prevent the issuing of injunctions will be taken by those who will be effected remains to be seen.

THE LOAN EXHIBITION.

Committee Who Has It in Charge and and the Proposed Art Sections.

The committee in charge of the loan exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club meets this evening. The exhibit will be held some time during the month of February and will continue for one week. It is intended to combine the annual exhibition of the work of the club with this loan exhibition. The loans will be insured and a watchman will constantly be in atttendance.

The following are the art sections proposed for the exhibition: Paintings, engravings and etchings, statuary, photographs, painting on porcelain, illuminations, gems of the printers' art, goldsmiths' art, embroidery, Indian art, Japanese art, Oriental art, fans and European porcelain.

The committee in charge consists of G. A. Audsley, Harold Serrell, John E. Stewart, Howard Y. Stillman, J. Hervey Doane, G. Thorn, G. Harry Squires, George P. Taggart and H. H. Coward.

AT EUCHRE TABLES.

Central Avenue Club Entertained by Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Stockton.

The Central Avenue Euchre Club was pleasantly entertained at the home of Councilman and Mrs. H. M. Stockton last evening. At the conclusion of the games Mrs. Chapman was awarded first lady's prize, Mrs. F. O. Herring, second; R M. Stelle, first gentleman's prize, and E. H. Booth, second, while Mrs. Ecke received the consolation prize.

The members present were Mayor and Mrs. Alexander Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Irving Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Abbott, Mrs. Ecke, Mrs. Talmadge, Mrs. Corlies, Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Stelle, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Case, Mr. and Mrs. Mumford, Miss Randolph, Councilman and Mrs. H. M. Stockton.

Those present as guests included Mr. and Mrs. Ladd, Mr. and Mrs. Chapman, Mr. and Mrs. Adams, Mr. and Mrs. DeGraff.

Two Future Social Events.

The Twilight Social Club will hold its next ball at the Columbia Cycle Academy on New Year's Eve.

The sixth annual ball of the Oriental Social Club will be held at Saenger and Turner Hall on the evening of December 25th. The grand march will begin at nine o'clock.

OLD VOLUNTEER FIREMAN DEAD.

John Cass One of the Borough's First Fire Fighters.

At his home in Raritan, on Saturday last, John Cass died, aged sixty-three years. When the old Board of Fire Commissioners purchased the second steam fire engine for Gazelle Engine Company, No. 1, in October, 186), No. 2 having already been bought, the hand engine that Gazelle Company had been fighting the fire fiend with, was turned over to a company styling itself Warren Engine Company, No. 2. Barnabas Moore, now deceased, was elected its first foreman, John Cass, first assistant and Godfrey Herold, second assistant. The hand engine is still in use in Scotch Plains. The engine was stored in an unused blacksmith shop on Somerset street, where Richter's barber shop now stands, until the engine house was built for them later on further up Somerset street. No one man did more towards organizing the new fire company than did John Cass. He was an enthusiastic and conscientious fireman and never missed a run. He was afterwards elected foreman of the company and always took a lively interest in fire matters.

Mr. Cass in those days resided in what is now Orchard Place, Washington Park, and was in the employ of the late William White. He was a brother-in-law of the late Jacob P. Adams, father of Dr. D. C. Adams, of Grove street, and of John Wendell, of Warren township. Before coming to Plainfield he had resided in New York city and belonged to the old volunteer fire department. He knew intimately many of the men then in the New York department who afterwards became famous.

Mr, Cass learned the book-binding business, but could not stand being confined inside all day and was forced to give it up. Several years ago Mr. Mr. Cass accepted a responsible position in one of the mills in Raritan and later his family removed to that town where he has since resided. He has been in failing health for a long time and his death was not entirely unexpected. He had many friends in Plainfield. He was a kind, sympathetic and affectionate man. He leaves a wife and one married daughter. His funeral took place in Raritan yesterday morning. Interment was at Mt. Bethel.

OLD GLORY COUNCIL.

Another Daughters of Liberty Lodge Organized Last Night.

Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, took the initiative step towards organization last evening by electing their officers and closing the charter. Mrs. Bennett, State organizer, was present and assisted.

The new council will be instituted Tuesday evening, January 7th. The following officers were chosen last evening:

Councilor, Mrs. Lines; Vice Councilor, Miss Lizzie Dunlap; Ex-Associate Councilor, Mrs. Walter Walker; Junior Ex Councilor, Mrs. Heath; Associate Councilor, Mrs. GaNun; Associate Vice Councilor, Mrs. I. H. Boehm; Guide, Mrs. Demarest; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Snyder; Assistant Recording Secretary, Mrs. Holstein; Financial Secretary, Mrs. B. Thatcher; Treasurer, Walter Walker; Inside Guard, I. Voorhees; Outside Guard, W. Wyckoff; Trustees, W. Scribner, 18 months; W. Wyckoff, 12 months; Mrs. Lines, 6 months.

The Council starts off with a membership of 39.

AN AFTERNOON MARRIAGE.

The Nuptial Event Delayed a Half Hour by the Belated Pastor.

A quiet wedding was performed at Grace P. E. Church yesterday afternoon when Miss Caroline Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thompson, of 1030 West Front street, was united in marriage to W. H. Fulton, of Mauch Chunk, Pa. Rev. E. M. Rodman officiated, but owing to his being at Trenton the ceremony was delayed for half an hour until he arrived.

Arrangements had been made to have a Royal Blue Line train stop here at 4:30 to take the bride and groom to Philadelphia. The train stopped, but as the couple were awaiting the return of Rev. E. M. Rodmam to be married, they were unable to meet the train. They left on the 6:38 train for Philadnlphia where they will spend their honeymoon. They have not yet decided where they will reside.

Christmas at Monroe Avenue Chapel.

The Christmas entertainment of the Monroe Avenue chapel will be held Friday evening, December 27th. A very enjoyable programme, including a cantata, will be rendered.

MISS WRAY'S SLUM WORK.

SHE TALKS OF HER LABORS AMONG THE LOWLY PEOPLE.

Stirring Remarks by Mr. Leo—A Touching Solo by William N. Runyon—More Mission Converts to be Present Later.

A very much larger audience was present at Reform Hall last evening than at any previous time and the service was especially interesting and helpful. Mr. Leo was in charge and after a spirited song service he made a few stirring remarks to the unsaved. He is a very bright speaker and has a manner of holding the attention of his hearers.

An impressive portion of the service was when Wm. N. Runyon sang "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." Everything was so quiet that the slightest vibration could be distinctly heard.

Miss Wray followed by telling of her remarkable conversion, and of her work later in the Whitechapel district in London and the slums of New York. After hearing her wonderful experience everyone felt convinced that the Christian life was more than a myth and many hearts were deeply touched with her earnest words. The service closed in the usual manner and all felt well repaid for being present.

There will be no service this evening and everyone is urged to attend their own prayer meeting service.

Tomorrow evening the services will be continued when a contingent from the old Jerry McAuley mission will be present.

Jerusalem Lodge Elects.

The election of officers of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M., last evening, was very harmonious, it being the unanimous re-election of the present officers. They were as follows: Worshipful Master, Dr. D. C. Adams; Senior Warden, Stephen Beaching; Junior Warden, Warren F. Bartlett; Treasurer, Alexander Titsworth; Secretary, Charles Yaeger; Trustees, C. H. Rugg; L. B. Woolston and L. S. Pocock; Representative to Masonic Hall Association, W. R. Codington; Proxy to Grand Lodge, Henry Leifke. The installation of these officers will take place on Tuesday, January 7th, at which time the appointed officers will be announced.

Four Score Years Old.

Miss Phœbe Frazee died at the home of her niece, Miss Mary Coulter, at South Plainfield, last night at 8 o'clock. She has been ill for several months. She was in her eightieth year and had lived in the house where she died for over fifty years. The funeral services will be held in the church at South Plainfield, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made at Samptown.

Necessary to Kill the Horse.

A horse belonging to Geo. Conover, of the borough, received a severe injury at the stone crusher near Washingtonville yesterday afternoon that resulted in his death. His left hind foot caught in a stone causing the hoof to be entirely severed from the ankle. The animal suffered considerably from the loss of blood and as no relief could be given him, it was necessary to kill him.

An Evening of Sociability.

The Junior Epworth League of the Monroe Avenue chapel was very enjoyably entertained at the home of Miss Charlotte Aldrich, of Sherman avenue. The evening passed very quickly in playing games. Dainty refreshments brought the sociable to a close.

A Christmas Cantata.

A cantata is being rehearsed for the Christmas entertainment of the Sunday-school of the Seventh Day Baptist church which takes place on Thursday evening, December 26th.

– The contract case of Tobin against Chandler has been adjourned in Justice Newcorn's court to December 23d.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ENGLAND MUST SUBMIT

Text of the President's Venezuela Message.

The Little Republic Will Be Protected by Force, if Nececssary—No Calamity So Great as Supine Submission to Wrong—The Monroe Doctrine Applies—He Recommends the Selection of a Commission to Ascertain the Boundary—Lord Salisbury's Note.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The following is the full text of the message sent to congress yesterday by President Cleveland in connection with the Venezuela correspondence:

"To the congress—In my annual message to the congress on the 3d inst. I called attention to the pending boundary dispute between Great Britain and the republic of Venezuela, and recited the substance of a representation made by this government to her Britannic majesty's government, suggesting reasons why such dispute should be submitted to arbitration for settlement and inquiring whether it would be so submitted. The answer of the British government, which was then awaited, has since been received, and, together with the dispatch to which it is a reply, is hereto appended. Such reply is embodied in two communications addressed by the British prime minister to Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British ambassador at this capital. It will be seen that one of these communications is devoted exclusively to observations upon the Monroe doctrine and claims that in the present instance a new and strange extension and development of the doctrine is insisted upon by the United States; that the reasons justifying an appeal to the doctrine enunciated by President Monroe are generally inapplicable 'to the state of things in which we live at the present day,' and especially inapplicable to a controversy involving the boundary line between Great Britain and Venezuela.

Monroe Doctrine Sound.

"Without attempting extended argument in reply to these positions, it may not be amiss to suggest that the doctrine upon which we stand is strong and sound because its enforcement is important to our peace and safety as a nation and is essential to the integrity of our free institutions and the tranquil maintenance of our distinctive form of government. It was intended to apply to every stage of our national life, and cannot become obsolete while our republic endures. If the balance of power is justly a cause for jealous anxiety among the governments of the old world, and a subject for an absolute non-interference, none the less is an observance of the Monroe doctrine of vital concern to our people and their government. Assuming, therefore, that we may properly insist upon this doctrine without regard 'to the state of things in which we live,' or any changed conditions here or elsewhere, it is not apparent why its application may not be invoked in the present controversy. If a European power, by an extension of its boundaries, takes possession of the territory of one of our neighboring republics against its will and in derogation of its rights, it is difficult to see why to that extent, such European power does not thereby attempt to extended its system of government to that portion of this continent which is thus taken. This is the precise action which president Monroe declared to be 'dangerous to our peace and safety,' and it can make no difference whether the European system is extended by an advance of frontier or otherwise.

Exclusive American Principles.

"It is also suggested in the British reply that we should not seek to apply the Monroe doctrine to the pending dispute, because it does not embody any principle of international law which 'is founded on the general consent of nations,' and that 'no statesman, however eminent, and no nation, however powerful, are competent to insert into the code of international law a novel principle which was never recognized before, and which has not since been accepted by the government of any other country.' Practically, the principle for which we contend has peculiar, if not exclusive, relation to the United States. It may not have been admitted in so many words to the code of international law, but since in international counsels every nation is entitled to rights belonging to it, if the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine is something we may justly claim, it has its place in the code of international law as certainly and as securely as if it were specifically mentioned, and when the United States is a suitor before the high tribunal that administers international law the question to be determined is whether or not we present claims which the justice of that code of law can find to be right and valid. The Monroe doctrine finds its recognition in these principles of international law which are based upon the theory that every nation shall have its rights protected and its just claims enforced.

Clear Rights and Undoubted Claims.

"Of course this government is entirely confident that, under the sanction of this doctrine, we have clear rights and undoubted claims. Nor is this ignored in the British reply. The prime minister, while not admitting that the Monroe doctrine is applicable to present conditions, states. In declaring that the United States would resist any such enterprise if it was contemplated, President Monroe adopted a policy which received the entire sympathy of the English government of that date.' He further declares: 'Though the language of President Monroe is directed to the attainment of objects which most Englishmen would agree to be salutary, it is impossible to admit that they have been inscribed by any adequate authority in the code of international law.' Again he says: 'They (her majesty's government) fully concur with the view which President Monroe apparently entertained, that any disturbance of the existing territorial distribution in that hemisphere by any fresh acquisitions on the part of any European state, would be a highly inexpedient change.' Anxious to learn in a satisfactory manner whether Great Britain sought under a claim of boundary, to extend her possessions on this continent without right, or whether she merely sought possession of territory fairly included within her lines of ownership, this government proposed to the government of Great Britain a resort to arbitration as the proper means of settling the question, to the end that a vexatious boundary dispute between the two contestants might be determined and our exact standing and relation in respect to the controversy might be made clear.

Our Course Is Clear.

"It will be seen from the correspondence herewith submitted that this proposition has been declined by the British government upon grounds which, in the circumstances, seem to be far from satisfactory. It is deeply disappointing that such an appeal, actuated by the most friendly feelings towards both nations directly concerned, addressed to the sense of justice and to the magnanimity of one of the great powers of the world and touching its relations to one comparatively small and weak, should have produced no better results. The course to be pursued by this country, in view of the present condition, does not appear to admit of serious doubt. Having labored faithfully for many years to induce Great Britain to submit this dispute to impartial arbitration, and having been now finally apprised of her refusal to do so, nothing remains but to accept the situation, to recognize its plain requirements, and to act accordingly. Great Britain's present proposition has never thus far been regarded as admissible by Venezuela, though any adjustment of the boundary which that country may deem for her advantage and may enter into of her own free will cannot, of course, be objected to by the United States.

The United States Must Act.

"Assuming, however, that the attitude of Venezuela will remain unchanged, the dispute has reached such a stage as to make it now incumbent upon the United States to take measures to determine with sufficient certainty for its justification what is the true divisional line between the republic of Venezuela and British Guiana. The inquiry to that end should, of course, be conducted carefully and judicially, and due weight should be given to all available evidence, records and facts in support of the claim of both parties.

Must Resist By Every Means.

"In order that such an examination should be prosecuted in a thorough and satisfactory manner, I suggest that the congress make an adequate appropriation for the expenses of a commission to be appointed by the executive, who shall make the necessary investigation and report upon the matter with the least possible delay. When such report is made and accepted it will, in my opinion, be the duty of the United States to resist by every means in its power as a wilful aggression upon its rights and interests the appropriation by Great Britain of any lands or the exercise of any governmental jurisdiction over any territory which after investigation we have determined of right belong to Venezuela. In making these recommendations I am fully alive to the full responsibility in advocating and keenly realize all the consequences that may follow.

No Calamity Like Supine Submission.

"I am, nevertheless, firm in my conviction that while it is a grievous thing to contemplate the two great English-speaking people of the world as being otherwise than friendly competitors in the onward march of civilization, and strenuous and worthy rivals in all the arts of peace, there is no calamity which a great nation can invite which equals that which follows a supine submission to wrong and injustice and the consequent loss of national self-respect and honor, beneath which is shielded and defended a people's safety and greatness.

"GROVER CLEVELAND."

SALISBURY'S REPLY.

The Monroe Doctrine Not Applicable to the Venezuela Dispute.

Washington, Dec. 18.—The British side of the Venezuela dispute is embodied in two notes from Lord Salisbury to Sir Julian Pauncefote. Both notes are dated the same day, and one, which the ambassador is directed to communicate to Secretary Olney, is of the highest importance, as in it Lord Selisbury goes broadly into the Monroe doctrine. The main points are as follows:

Differs with Olney.

"On the 7th of August I transmitted to Lord Gough a copy of the dispatch from Mr. Olney, which Mr. Bayard had left with me that day, and of which he had read portions to me. I informed him at the time that it could not be answered until it had been carefully considered by the law officers of the crown. I have therefore deferred replying to it until after the recess. I will not now deal with those portions of it which deal exclusively with the controversy that has for some time past existed between the republic of Venezuela and her majesty's government in regard to the boundary which separates their dominions. I take a very different view from Mr. Olney of various matters upon which he touches in that part of the dispatch. The contentions set forth by Mr. Olney are represented by him as being an application of the political maxims which are well known in American discussion under the name of the Monroe doctrine

No Danger of European Imposition.

"As far as I am aware, this doctrine has never before been advanced on behalf of the United States in any written communication addressed to the government of another nation, but it has been generally adopted and assumed as true by many eminent writers and politicians in the United States. It is said to have largely influenced the government of that country in the conduct of its foreign affairs; though Mr. Clayton, who was secretary of state under President Taylor, expressly stated that that administration had in no way adopted it. The dangers which were apprehended by President Monroe have no relation to the state of things in which we live at the present day. There is no danger of any alliance imposing its system upon any portion of the American continent, and there is no danger of any European state treating any part of the American continent as a fit object of European colonization.

Purely a Personal Dispute.

"The British empire and the republic of Venezuela are neighbors, and they differ as to the line by which their dominions are separated. It is a controversy with which the United States have no apparent practical concern. It is difficult, indeed, to see how it can materially affect any state or community outside those primarily interested, except, perhaps, other parts of her majesty's dominions, such as Trinidad. It is simply the determination of the frontier of a British possession which belonged to the throne of England long before the republic of Venezuela came into existence."

What England Would Do.

The second note of November 25 is wholly devoted to a discussion of the boundary dispute, exclusive of its relation to the Monroe doctrine. This dispatch, however, sounds the keynote of Great Britain's position with reference to Mr. Olney's representations. Lord Salisbury states that Great Britain has repeatedly expressed its willingness to submit to arbitration the conflicting claims of Great Britain to territory of great mineral value, and follows this statement with these important words: "But they (the British government) cannot consent to entertain or to submit to the arbitration of another power or a foreign jurist, however eminent, claims based on extravagant pretensions of Spanish officials in the last century, and involving the transfer of large numbers of British subjects who have for many years enjoyed the settled rule of the British colony, to a nation of different race and language, whose political system is subject to frequent disturbance, and whose institutions as yet too often afford very inadequate protection to life and property. No issue of this description has ever been involved in the questions which Great Britain and the United States have consented to submit to arbitration, and her majesty's government is convinced that in similar circumstances the government of the United States would be equally firm in declining to entertain proposals of such a nature." Lord Salisbury concludes with the statement that her majesty's government have not surrendered the hope that the controversy between themselves and Venezuela will be adjusted by reasonable arrangement at an early date.

Threw the Priest Out Bodily.

Lansing, Mich., Dec. 18.—A number of the parishoners of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church who are opposed to Father Slattery went yesterday to the priest's house, dragged him from bed, and threw him bodily into the street. It is probable that they will all be excommunicated.

THE BLUES.

Why do Women have the Blues more than Men?

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

Are not women naturally as light-hearted, brave, and hopeful as men?

Yes; but woman's organism is different from man's.

Women in perfect or good health are rarely victims of this symptom.

Women nearly monopolize the blues, because their peculiar ailments promote them.

When the female organs fail to perform their functions properly, when the dreaded female complaints appear, there is shown nervousness, sleeplessness, faintness, backache, headache, bearing-down pains, etc., causing the dreaded "let-me-alone" and "all-gone" feelings.

When the woman does not understand what the matter is, and her doctor can not or will not tell her, she grows morose and melancholy; that's the blues.

Mrs. Newton Cobb, of Manchester, O., says: "Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will correct all this trouble. I cannot praise it enough. I am pleased to tell every one that it cured me; and if it will cure me, why not others? I am sure my case was severe enough." It will. Get it of your druggist at once.

LEDERER'S.

UPHOLD THE PRESIDENT

His Action Forceful and Has General Approval.

The Venezuela Affair the All-absorbing Topic of Conversation in Washington — Views of Senators and Representatives — The Message Cheered.

Washington, Dec. 18. — President Cleveland's Venezuela message is the all absording topic of conversation in both official and private circles to-day and the concensus of opinion is in effect that the president's attitude was forceful and in thorough accord with the sentiments of the people generally. When the message was read in the senate evidences of approval were equally strong and significant on both sides of the chamber—perhaps even more so on the republican than on the democratic side. Mr. Morgan, dem., Ala., looking over to the republican side remarked that there was "no mistaking the meaning of that," and Mr. Frye, rep., Me., gave an assenting nod, with the remark "that is capital." The message and accompanying papers were ordered printed and referred to the committee on foreign relations. The committee was authorized to sit during any recess of the senate. In the house the reading of the message evoked hearty applause on both sides. It was referred to the committee on foreign affairs.

Views of Representatives.

Mr. Russell, rep., Conn.: The message is good. Anything less would be unpatriotic and cowardly in a president of the United States. A commission will delay the settlement of the controversy and furnish information already known. Its suggestion is prudent, perhaps, and allows England a chance to retract. Mr. McCreary, dem., Ky., who was chairman of the foreign affairs committee in the last congress: It is vigorous, powerful and able. As a reaffirmation of the Monroe doctrine it will attract wide attention and, I believe, be generally approved by the people. Mr. Cummings, dem., N. Y.: The message breathes the spirit of Thomas Jefferson, James Monroe and Andrew Jackson. President Cleveland's action stands in strong contrast with the cowardly action of Lord Salisbury in Armenian affairs. The president stands by the Monroe doctrine, and he undoubtedly means every word he says. Mr. Bartlett, dem., N. Y.: I am glad to see that the president has decided in favor of resisting the aggressions of Great Britain in respect to the boundary dispute. I believe it is practically conceded that England's title to a large part of the disputed territory is a title which might alone gives. We should force Great Britain to recede from her position and relinquish the territy.

South American Diplomats Pleased.

The diplomatic representatives of American republics in Washington were highly elated over the message and nearly all of them cabled copious extracts of the document to their respective governments. Ever since the Corinto affair they had been somewhat despondent over the supposed indisposition of the United States to resist foreign aggressions on the American continent, but now they cannot find language adequate to express their admiration for the president's forcible utterances, particularly in regard to the possible resort to other competitions than those "in the arts of peace." None of the American ministers or charge d'affaires, however, consented to speak authoritatively for their governments in the absence of instructions nor would any be led into a public interview on the subject.

Expressions of Senators.

Mr. Gorman, dem., Md.: It is a very thorough, emphatic and strong American message. It looks very much as if the president intended to enforce the Monroe doctrine. Mr. Call, dem., Fla.: It is excellent, splendid. The matter is still open to arbitration and I am sure England will finally consent. Mr. Lodge, rep., Mass.: The message is the most serious and important utterance which has been submitted by any president to congress for many years. As a matter of course I heartly approve of its spirit and the general position taken.

REBELS TWICE DEFEATED.

Government Success in Cuba Reported at Madrid.

Madrid, Dec. 18.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Santiago de Cuba says that a government force under the command of Col. Garrido has twice defeated the rebels under Jose Maceo at Peladeros. The dispatch further says that Col. Zamara has routed 800 insurgents at Jamal. The Spanish losses in each of the engagements was slight.

Rebel Defeat Reported.

Madrid, Dec. 18.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that Colonel Arizon has defeated Gomez and Maceo with heavy loss at Mal Tiempe. The rebels retreated hastily, burning the railway bridge at Flore behind them and cutting off communication.

Russia's Second Guardship.

MANY CARS WRECKED

Riots Attend Philadelphia's Traction Strike.

Not a Wheel of the Company Involved Turning This Morning and Only One Line in the City in Operation—Mobs, Composed Mostly of Boys, Wreck About 300 Cars.

Philadelphia, Dec. 18.—Riot and destruction marked the opening day of the great strike of the street car employes of the Union Traction company. Aided by the mischievous, lawless element, the strikers succeeded in completely tieing up the lines of the Union Traction company this morning, with the exception of the one line not controlled by the company involved in the strike, not a street car wheel was turning in Philadelphia. Never before in the history of the city has there been witnessed such widespread disorder. To the credit of the strikers it may be said that the disorders were created by too ardent sympathizers. Boys held up cars and drove the motormen and conductors from their posts with volleys of bricks and stones and then smashed the glass in the windows of the cars, cut the trolley ropes, pulled out the fuses, smashed in the cash registers and tore off the fenders in front of the cars. In all about 300 cars were badly wrecked, and last evening the traction company gave up the effort to run cars, and, with the aid of the police, withdrew their shattered and abandoned rolling stock back into the car sheds.

More Trouble Anticipated.

The mayor issued a proclamation calling upon all good citizens to preserve the peace and asking them to refrain from gathering in crowds on the streets. He further added that violence and riot would be met with force and that the peace of the city will be preserved at all hazards. While the crowds attacked the cars, the spirit of the mob seemed to be one of malicious mischief more than threatening temper that marks a real riot. The suddenness of the numerous outbreaks seemed to take the police by surprise, and for a time cars were wrecked with impunity in the very heart of the retail shopping district. Then the patrolmen were massed at every threatened point and this morning every policeman in the city is on duty. The company made no attempt to run cars last night, but under police protection they will start the Market street branch of their line some time to-day, and trouble is sure to follow, and to-day may witness more serious rioting than took place yesterday.

Strikers Made No Disturbance.

The strikers attempted no interference with the cars, but confined their efforts to trying to dissuade the motormen and conductors who were not with them from going out on the cars. They met them as they went to work and talked with them, and in many cases were successful. Where a man would refuse to join them he might get sharply spoken to, but beyond this he was not threatened. In anticipation of any trouble six squads of policemen were massed at the various car stables as the most likely places where it would occur. The police allowed no congregations of men around the car stables, but they met with the greatest annoyance from women and boys who stood by and jeered and hooted at the motormen and conductors as they went out. There was no concerted movement to attack the cars, but in a dozen different places at once obstructions were put on the track. When the cars came to a stop some one would throw a stone. Then missiles of every description would strike the car until not a window was left. In no case were the motormen or conductors very roughly handled, the crowds being content to wreck the cars.

Boys the Wreckers.

Some of the worst destruction occurred on Chestnut street. A little bootblack alongside a stalled car swung his box and dashed it through one of the windows. Every boy in the crowd immediately proceeded to take a hand in the destruction and in less time than it takes to think of it every light in the car was broken. The stalling of this car banked up behind it as far as Thirteenth street thirteen other cars. The mob swept up the street with stones and clubs and drove the conductors and motormen away and wrecked the cars. Because a motorman, who was being hooted at by a store messenger boy, made a kick at the younster a gang of his companions dragged the motorman and conductor from their platforms and wrecked the car in a twinkling. Just above Ninth street a policeman was standing beside one of the wrecked cars hemmed in by the crowd. A boy about 17 years of age jumped on the car and taking a heavy iron switch rod proceeded to deliberately wreck the interior. After he had finished his work he disappeared. The police were powerless to stop him.

Storekeepers Alarmed.

At Twelfth street officer Joseph Ripplet attempted to stem the crowd, and he may pay with his life for so doing. The mob set on him and, wrenching his club from his hand, beat him to the pavement and passed on, leaving him unconscious. As the hooting, howling crowd rushed up the street and the crash of breaking glass was plainly heard above the shouts, hundreds of terrified women sought refuge in stores. Shopkeepers hastily put up their shutters before their windows, as no one knew where the spirit of lawlessness would end.

AS VIEWED IN ENGLAND

British Press Comment on the Message.

The Views Advanced by President Cleveland Are Vigorously Combatted—The Monroe Doctrine a Matter Only of History Now, the Newspapers Claim.

London, Dec. 18.—The Daily News, commenting on President Cleveland's message to congress on the Venezuelan question, will to-day say: "The president's communication is a remarkable document, though its consequences are not likely to be serious. Neither Mr. Olney nor the president seem to realize that the Monroe doctrine cannot be quoted as authoritative in negotiations with a foreign power. Both of them are certainly as far as possible from suspecting that the real author of the doctrine was Canning, not Monroe. Great Britain in 1832 was jealous of the Spanish encroachments in South America and induced Monroe to protest against European aggression on American soil. The seventy-two years that have since elapsed have entirely changed that situation. The Monroe doctrine is now purely of historical interest. The definition of the doctrine, however, is a matter for the Americans themselves. It binds nobody else. The president in his account of the doctrine surrenders the whole case. It follows from the message that Guiana, and, indeed, Canada, have no right of independent existence on American soil. The concluding portions of Mr. Cleveland's message are not expressed in the language usually employed by one friendly power to another. They are aggressive, even menacing. England is threatened with war unless she permits Mr. Cleveland to adjust the boundaries of Venezuela. Happily, there is some sense of humor in the American people. Regarded as a party move, the message is not unskilful. It puts the republicans in a hole."

With Blank Astonishment.

The Chronicle will say: "The message will be read in this country with blank astonishment. An American commission to determine what territory a British colony can call its own, and failing our compliance with its finding, war by land and sea with Great Britain. Can these be serious words addressed to us by the descendants of the little shipload of English folks who sailed in the Mayflower? We will not take things too seriously. We will suppose that the president is engaged in the familiar work of twisting the lion's tail. There is one answer to President Cleveland and America. If an enlarged application of a neglected doctrine is to be enforced with all the might of the United States at least let us be assured of the correlative that the United States will make itself responsible for the foreign policy of all the petty, impetuous little states on the two continents of America. There is no international right without corresponding duty. We can only express genuine regret at the tone of the document, which meets no argument made by Lord Salisbury, and which applies a threat of force from a daughter state to the motherland over an obscure, trumpery dispute in which the United States has no real interest, but the message cannot obscure of defeat the affection which subsists between the two countries, or break the ties of blood that must needs bine them in indissoluble union."

Outdone the Republicans.

The Morning Post says: "President Cleveland has outdone the republican party in his effort to show his dislike for this country, yet he has not committed himself to anything. The international law tribunal that President Cleveland asks congress to set up can have no more binding effect on this country than would a decision by the supreme court at Washington."

Cleveland's Position Preposterous.

The Standard says: Most Englishmen will read the message with unfeigned astonishment. The position taken by Mr. Cleveland is preposterous. There can be only one answer to such a demand. We decline to humiliate ourselves and refuse to accept the decision of the United States' executive in matters altogether outside of his jurisdiction. As British subjects have settled up to the Schomburgk line, we cannot possibly withdraw our protection and leave them to the risks of the revolutions and misrule of the republic; but beyond the pale of settlement we are quite willing to accept arbitration. By the same rule the United States might be asked to submit their title to Alaska to the judgment of impartial umpires. Congress would indignantly reject such a demand. So will the British government reject the present demand."

Will it be a war of blood or of words?

The pure white population is less than 3 per cent. in Venezuela. The vast majority of the people are negroes, Indians, mulattoes and zambos.

Editor Runyon needs to have his mouth washed out with soap again. His college day caprices continue to crop out notwithstanding his desire to pose as a political and moral censor.

The President's message on the Venezuelan question bears the stamp of Americanism which has made us what we are as a nation. His resume of the causes which have brought about the international complication are wonderfully clear, and his insistance that England consent to arbitration of the boundary disputes is couched in a tone of statesmanship that warms the hearts of those who can see something else beyond mere political strategy in the message. It is a paper which takes up a delicate matter and treats it in a fair, yet vigorous spirit.

WHERE THE SKATERS GO.

The Different Ponds In the Neighborhood That are Often Visited.

Now there is no more skating on Hyde's pond, most of the young people who frequented that place have gone to the smaller ponds on the outskirts. Wilson's pond at Washingtonville has been one of the favorites, and last evening was gay with a merry throng of young people from this city and Washingtonville.

Coddington's pond is the headquarters for the skaters of the West End. The ice is five inches thick and in good condition. Dunellen, New Market and South Plainfield ponds have also been well attended by the lovers of skating.

Ohl's pond also has its frequenters, while some of the enthusiasts even go as far as Westfield.

Pleasant Surprise.

A surprise party was tendered to Miss Emma L. Sutton last evening at her home on East Third street. Among those present were the following: Misses Retta Nash, Lillie Thorn, Jennie Thorn, Juliet Hill, Mollie Templeton, Florence Morrison, Belle, Alice and Jennie De Mott, Katie Messler, Edna Kelly, Lydia and Luella Day, Lillie Clarkson, Grace and Kittie Webster; Masters Cornelius Compton, Willie Nash, Herman Albert, Amer Bowman, Edward Clarkson, Arthur Thorn; Mr. and Mrs. Bowman, of Bound Brook; Henry S. Terrill, of Rahway; Miss S. E. Terrill, of Newark.

Mrs. P. Harman and children, of Front street, are visiting her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Bolton, of Somerville.

The Sunday-school of the New Market Baptist church will hold their Christmas festival on Thursday evening, December 26th.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church of New Market will meet tomorrow evening at the residence of Mrs. Larkin.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church of New Market will hold a sociable and watch meeting on New Year's Eve.

The the teachers of the public schools are obliged to attend the teachers institute to be held on December 22d and 24th, at New Brunswick.

—The Spanish class will meet at the Y. M. C. A. building on Thursday evening at eight o'clock. The instructor, J. Antornio Costales, is assistant-manager of the Spanish Division of the Foreign and Recording Department of the Equitable Life Assurance Society, of New York, and, having spent six years in Cuba receiving his education in part in Spanish, is well qualified to fill the position.

Wife—Here's an account of a man who shot himself rather than suffer the pangs of indigestion. Husband—The fool! Why didn't he take DeWitt's Little Early Risers? I used to suffer as bad as he did before I commenced taking these little pills. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

High School Notes.

The class of '97 held a class meeting in the building Monday. The only business transacted was the election of officers. William C. Buell was elected vice-president; Miss Florence Beal, secretary; and Miss Emma Cutter was appointed treasurer. The other officers are the same as last year.

The class of '98 also held a meeting at 3 o'clock the object of which was to reorganize the class. The meeting was called to order by H. Helen Phillips, vice-president. Paul W. Kimball was appointed chairman of a committee to draw up a constitution. The other committeemen were as follows: Bryant Harman, Miss Bessie Day, Miss Ellen Osgood, Miss Clara Long. The decorating committee appointed consisted of the following members: Miss Clara Long, chairman, Miss Catherine Nevius and Miss Ruth Dalzell. The class officers will be elected at the next meeting. Miss Edna French recited the very beautiful poem, "Waiting by the Gate." Miss French has great abilities in the line of elocution and her rendition of this poem was excellent. Elwood Davis, '97, gave a declamation entitled, "The Mysteries of Napoleon's Career." This declamation was also given in a very good manner and showed much work on the part of the declamer.

The Christmas programme is being prepared and it is expected that this exercise will surpass the one at Thanksgiving time. Good music is being practiced, among which is the song Nazareth, by Charles Gounod, and the Sanctus, which will be sung by the school without the music before them.

The highest score made on the Hope chapel alleys this season, 263, is held by Ben Edely.

The bowling team of the Union County Country Club go to Roselle this evening to roll a scheduled game in the Standard League.

A bowling match between the Bachelors and the Benedicts of the Park Club will take place Saturday evening on the Park Club alleys.

Another game has been arranged between the Crescent Wheelmen and the Plainfield Catholic Club which will probably be rolled on Friday evening.

The bowling team of the T. A. B. Society, of Newark, and the bowlers of the Plainfield Catholic Club meet tonight at Newark in a scheduled game in the Diocesian Union.

One of the highest team scores that has been rolled in Plainfield was made at the Plainfield Catholic Club alleys Monday evening in a practice game by a five man team. The team consisted of Kiely, Kenney, Carty, Wierenga and Moran. The score was 897.

A handsome diamond pin is the prize in a monthly high score contest at the Park Club. It must be won two months in succession to become the property of anyone. In November, when this novel contest began, Dr. C. R. Thiers was high man, with a score of 219. This month, William N. McCutchen has, so far, made the highest score, as on last Saturday evening he rolled 235.

An annual event in the Park Club is the bowling match between the Bachelors and the Benedicts of the club. There is considerable interest taken by club members in the match, and a goodly number of the members and their families turn out to see the game. The match this year is decided by the winning of two games by either side. The first game will be rolled Saturday and the second on Saturday, December 28th. If another game is necessary, it will be rolled on January 4th. The two teams will consist of the following: Bachelors—Sandford, Erickson, VanBuren, Waring, Runyon, Randolph, Murray, W. Lenox, Matthews, Worth, G. Benedicts—Lyman, Brooks, Smith, Worth, W., Reed, Douglass, E., McCutchen, McGee, H., Hegeman, Jr., B. A., Thiers.

There was excitement at the Park Club last night when the Cranford bowlers came and tried to down the Park Club's representatives. Although Cranford is last in the Standard League her men can bowl a game now and then. In the first game the visitors started off at a rattling pace but their opponents were not far behind and it was anybody's game until the last frame was bowled. The Parks took the lead at the fifth frame and held it to the end. Smith sent the spectators into ecstacies of delight by rolling five strikes in succession. Both teams rolled their highest score of the league. The second game was not as exciting. The individual scores were as follows:

PARKS.	1ST GAME.	2D GAME.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The prizes for the handicap pool and billiard tournaments which were held in the Park Club last winter, have just been presented to the winners. Chas. Lyman was the victor in the pool contest, while W. N. McCutchen was high man in the billiard tournament.

Entries are now being received for a handicap pool tournament and a handicap billiard tournament open to the members of the Park Club. The tournament begins on Saturday, Dec. 21st, and will continue until until Feb. 1st. The handicaps for the contests will be arranged by Augustus VanDeventer.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Crescent Wheelmen will hold a meeting this evening.

Wm. N. McCutchen will ride the Cleveland wheel next year.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club will hold an important meeting this evening.

Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker has ridden 4,500 miles on his Cleveland Swell Special this year and not an accident to mar the pleasure.

While out on a spin on his wheel Monday, Mr. Sebring punctured his tire near Clinton avenue. After several hours' hard work he managed to repair it temporarily.

Fred Decker and Hugh Decker, who have been employed as instructors at the Columbia Cycle Academy, have left their positions and leave for their home at Asbury Park this week.

BASKET BALL.

The Plainfield Y. M. C. A. went to Brooklyn last evening and met a team of crack players from the Y. M. C. A. of that city that greatly outweighed and outplayed them. The result was 31 to 0 in favor of Brooklyn. Only five of the first team of Plainfield were present.

THEATRICAL.

Do you want to laugh? If so, see "The Two Johns" at the Lyceum Theatre. J. C. (Fatty) Stewart and Paul Dresser appear as the "Johns." These funny fat men have made themselves famous the world over and their laughable personality has made the play equally famous. There is no blood curdling and mysterious plot in the play of "The Two Johns." Just simply a case of mistaken identity, and the resemblance which two fat men bear to each other, which gets them into all sorts of ridiculous scrapes. The supporting company is a good one, including a number of specialty performers.—Baltimore Sun. At Music Hall Saturday night.

The Christmas

SALE IS ON IN EARNEST.

From store opening to store closing time we are busy with seekers of useful and ornamental things for the holiday season. Every day finds us with more customers to handle—to wait on. You will help yourself and help us by coming early and as a special inducement a hundred pretty things step forward and proclaim their low prices. Come tomorrow before they are all carried off.

The Handkerchief Carnival.

Switzerland, Ireland and Japan contributed to this great handkerchief show. You might pay from five cents up to one dollar, but that's not the point. We are willing that you should go everywhere else and try to better them and then come here. Your better judgment will do the rest.

Christmas Gloves.

Not different from the good ones to be had here any other time, but assortments have been kept very complete for holiday buyers. Not a word about some very special values on extra good gloves that will greet you at the glove counter all next week.

Umbrellas.

Built extra good for Xmas gifts, and the handles and trimmings are the very latest. When a man has everything else, he usually thinks kindly of an umbrella. For instance one of these—26 inch Gloria silk, 79c, 28 inch Gloria silk, 89c, 26 inch Gloria silk, Dresden handles, $1.25.

A Word on Toys.

As long as children are children they will want pretty playthings. From far-off Germany came a multitude of them to make your children happy. Here they are side by side, waiting for Xmas shoppers who will carry everyone away.

Buy Blankets.

A note for the son or daughter who wants to remembers the guardian of the household with something she will appreciate. Fifty pairs of good wool blankets are easily priced for Christmas buyers. Can you imagine a more sensible gift? 10x4 all-wool blankets, $2.98, 11x4 all-wool blankets, $3.49, beautiful satine comfortables, $2.75.

Why not a Dress Pattern.

Several dozen novelty dress patterns, including every fashionable dress fabric of the season, ask for attention from gift buyers. You can't imagine what $3.00 will buy in a stylish serviceable gift until you see these dress patterns.

Men's Furnishing Department.

As fine an assortment as you find anywhere, only the prices are smaller. Men's heavy white shirts and drawers, 33c; Men's heavy natural wool shirts and drawers, 50c; Men's all-wool sweaters, $1.00; Men's seamless half-hose, fast black, 13c; Men's hemstitched handkerchiefs, 10c; Men's neckwear, four-in-hand and tecks. THE CAST OF A BELL.

It Is an Interesting Process Which Few Founders Have Mastered.

The operation of casting a bell is a most interesting one. The flask whereon and wherein the mold is made consists of two parts constructed of boiler iron of a general bell form and plentifully perforated with holes for escaping gas while casting, one being so much less in size than its fellow as to give space for the loam forming around the mold between the two. No "pattern," as the term is generally used, is provided. The two parts of the mold are "swept" by "formers," accurately finished from thin iron to the form intended for the inner and outer surfaces of the bell. These "formers" are mounted and rotated over the applied loam. Five courses of loam and clay are successively applied, "swept" and baked, to complete each mold. Before this work is done, however, the inner flask is wound near the top with a rope made of hay. As the shrinkage is very great as the castings cool, difficulty would be met with in getting the flask and loam out of the nearly parallel inside top. This "pinch" is obviated by using this destructible base, which permits the collapse of the loam after the heat of the metal has consumed the hay.

The five courses laid on the flasks are: Loam, a mixture of loam, fire clay and manure; two successive coatings of powdered fire clay, and, lastly, a thin coating of brick and fire clay combined with foundry facing. Each of these coatings is baked in an oven before the succeeding one is applied. The coatings are "swept" by the formers, as applied, both in the inner and outer flasks, by careful adjustments as to thickness of materials, so that when the exterior mold is placed over the interior a space corresponding to the intended thickness and shape of the bell shall exist. Inscriptions or embellishments to be made upon the bell are provided for with the last coating by means of a "knurl," or wheel, having the desired motto raised upon its periphery, the wheel being carefully rolled around the soft surface and leaving its imprint in the clay. Other designs are impressed from dies of the required ornament, and the usual "beading" is accomplished by notches in the edge of the sweep.

The two parts of the flask being placed together are firmly held in position by many clamps, the tendency of hot bell metal to squeeze through and force a separation of flasks being very great. As the mold nears completion a fire is started in a near by reverberatory furnace, in which is placed the desired charge of copper, and when the copper is melted the tin is added in its proportion. The melted metal being ready, the furnace is tapped, the bright stream caught in a huge ladle swung over the mold by a crane and poured into the open mouth of the mold until it is filled. After cooling and removal from the mold the bell is usually polished with sand and water in special revolving grinding machines. The tongue and clapper, the yoke and wheel are now attached and the whole suspended in its frame. In making a chime the bells are, after completion, temporarily set up and regularly tested by skilled bell ringers, from the permanent chiming stand of the foundry.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

A CURIOUS LOVE STORY.

It All Began With a Punch In the Nose and Ended Happily.

Here's a curious story of love and courtship: A few years ago a young gentleman of this city, while in Savannah, got into a street car with a heavy umbrella under his arm. Like a great many other careless people he held it at a dangerous angle, with the point sticking out behind him, and ere long the car gave a lurch and a lady just behind him emitted an ear splitting scream. Everybody jumped and looked, and to his horror the young man found that the point of his umbrella had come in contact with the nose of the young lady seated just behind him. Of course he apologized, or tried, but it was like apologizing for murder over the body of the victim, for the lady's nose was bleeding and she was almost in convulsions with pain.

The car was stopped at the next corner, where there happened to be a drug store, and the young man, aided and abetted by one or two elderly ladies, who at once took a lively interest in the case, helped the young lady off and into the store and posted off after a doctor. One was found, and the unlucky nose was soon put in working order, and the owner, attended by the married ladies, was sent home in a carriage.

The young man took her address and hunted up a mutual acquaintance, with whom he called the next day to see how the nose was getting along. The nose did well, so did the young man, for by the time the nose was out of danger he had got in the habit of calling, so that it became natural for him to step around in the evening. So in the course of time they were married, and she is the only lady in the United States whose courtship began by a punch in the nose from her future husband.—Athens (Ga.) News.

Light Without Heat.

Heatless light for illumination is a possibility of the near future. Experiments have recently been conducted with the well known Geissler tubes by which rarefied air or other gas is rendered luminous by an electric current. Recent investigations show that light sufficient to read by can be obtained in a practical way, although at an expenditure of considerably more power than is necessary for the incandescent or arc lights. There are indications, however, that some form of the Geissler tube will be developed for practical use. In surgery there can be no question as to its value, as by its use it will be possible to pursue investigations in the cavities of the human body which at present can only be imperfectly carried on, owing to the heat developed by the incandescent light.—Boston Transcript.

Not a Lady.

Lord Carrington, when lord chamberlain, sometimes made mistakes, says Vanity. At one of the drawing rooms he announced Mrs. Whatshername as Lady Whatshername, and then, suddenly seeing his error, called out: "Don't kiss her, ma'am. Don't kiss her. She's not a lady after all." It is only peeresses who, upon their presentation, are honored by their sovereign's embrace.

Cholly's Contribution.

"Aw, Miss Feighr," asked Chawles Algernawn Chapp, "d'ye know why it is I think you are like a mirror?"

"Give it up."

"Well, y'see, you're a—aw—a good looking lass."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

It is better that joy should be spread over all the day in the form of strength than that it should be concentrated into ecstacies, full of danger and followed by reactions.—Emerson.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

ALL FOR LOVE

By WALTER BESANT.

"I must be a judge by 45," he said to me, laughing. "Otherwise I shall think that I have failed."

"And then, Paul?" asked Isabel.

"Then I must be made lord chancellor, and I shall pass great measures for the law of the land and shall become immortal."

I never knew any couple so entirely happy as they were during the first 12 months of their marriage. They had very few friends, and these were all Paul's own friends. They lived on Campden hill.

Remember, it was long before Campden hill was covered with houses—and they were as selfishly and as completely happy as love could make them. Gradually the pensive and troubled look vanished from Isabel's eyes. The "cloud," the "thing," the secret, whatever it had been, was wholly put away and forgotten.

Isabel's brother came to town soon after his father's death and called upon me.

"I have made up my mind," he said to me soon after his sister's marriage, "what I shall do. So long as I remain in this country Isabel will always have somebody to remind her of the past. If I once go away, she will belong entirely to her husband. While I am here I shall always be in terror of the thing being found out. I shall go away, then, and travel. After a year or two I shall convey to Isabel the news that I am dead. Then she will have broken altogether with the past. I shall settle down somewhere perhaps some day. I am not sure where or when, and if I am quite sure that I can never be identified I shall marry perhaps. But never, never will I come back to England." So we shook hands, and we parted. Six months afterward there came a note to Isabel in pencil from her brother, saying that he was dying of fever on the African coast, and that the letter would be sent on after his death.

Isabel wept over the letter, but she dried her tears soon, and I think it was better that the last link which reminded her of the shame of her childhood should have been broken.

As for their happiness, however, it was rudely shaken.

One day Paul, the junior counsel in a case of no apparent importance, found himself unexpectedly called upon to maintain a legal position against the opinion of the court. He displayed in his argument so much ability and knowledge of the law as to call forth an expression of admiration from the judge himself. I was myself present in my quality of briefless barrister. On the termination of the case we came out and stood for a few minutes talking over the point which had been raised. Paul's senior joined us and congratulated him, prophesying that his table would never be without briefs after that morning's work. Others came to shake hands with him, and there was quite a little scene of congratulation and triumph. In the midst of our talk I saw, bearing straight down upon us, with the evident intention of speaking, no other than that terrible ex-Q. C. He was clearly half drunk. One of the men among us whispered in disgust, "Good heavens, here's that miserable man Brundish!" Everybody stood aside to make way for him, as one makes way for a leper. Worse than a leper in the courts of Lincoln's Inn is a man who has been disbarred. As well should a man who has been stripped of his commission and drummed out of his regiment for cowardice show himself again upon parade.

This man, then, with a half drunken laugh, walked straight to Paul and held out his hand.

"How are you, Paul, my boy?" he cried, addressing him independently by his Christian name. "Isabel quite well?"

Paul turned perfectly white. "How dare you," he cried, "how dare you speak to me? How dare you address me by my Christian name?"

"How dare I? Ho, ho! Not use his Christian name to the man who married my dear old friend's only daughter? How do you do, Sir John?" He addressed one of the group, a well known counsel of very high standing and ex-solicitor general, who made no reply. "Gentlemen, you know me, all of you. I have been in court today, and I declare I never heard a better argument than my young friend's here. Why, I never put a point better myself."

"Your friend! Yours!" cried Paul, with a gesture of loathing.

"Come, come!" cried the man. "This is rather too much. Why, Paul, you forget that you married the only daughter of my old friend, Sir Robert Reeve Byrne, baronet, whom I defended. You remember my famous defense, gentlemen. I am sure it nearly pulled him through, but not quite, for he got his five years' penal servitude."

Then there was a dead silence, and nobody dared to look at his neighbor. As for me, I understood it all. The case of Sir Robert Byrne was a cause celebre. He had been, I remembered, defended by Mr. Brundish, Q. C., with marvelous skill and ingenuity. My delightful host was no other than that famous baronet then, and the rest of his guests—were they also what the ex-Q. C. had described them?

Paul recovered himself. "It is quite true," he said proudly. "I married the daughter of Sir Robert Byrne, but this man I know nothing of, except that he is a rogue."

Mr. Brundish looked round him. He saw on every face loathing clearly written. Half drunk though he was, he was cowed. He said no more, but slunk away.

It was Sir John himself who laid his hand upon Paul's shoulder and said kindly: "We are all sorry you should have been troubled by this scoundrel, whom I once called my friend. As for your private affairs, but of them we need not speak."

They all murmured something, the group broke up, and I took Paul by the arm and walked with him to his chambers. He threw his papers upon the table and sank into a chair.

"It is all over," he groaned. "My career is finished."

"Paul, this is absurd."

"No," he said. "I have already made up my mind what will happen. These men are my private friends, they are part of our social circle, for Isabel, poor child, had no friends of her own. They are good fellows, and at first they will say that it doesn't make any difference and think it too. But then, you see, there are the women. They will resent the thing and show their resentment too. Isabel must be spared this at any cost. Go away now, my dear fellow, and leave me to think."

"It is all over," he groaned. "My career is finished."

"For heaven's sake, Paul," I said "do nothing rash. Think of your profession first."

"No," he replied. "Isabel must be first thought of."

I lingered awhile unwilling to leave him.

"Now you know all," he said. "It is something like a cloud, isn't it?"

"Is it possible that the courtly and polished"——

"Quite possible. Sometimes I tried to think what he would look like in prison dress, but I never could. There was another side to him, though. I saw it on the day when I asked him for his daughter. 'Do you,' he said, 'know the story of my past?' I assured him that he need not open a painful chapter, because I knew everything. And then—then he broke down, burst into a fit of weeping like any woman and thanked God solemnly that I had come to take his daughter away from him. 'For myself,' he said, 'I suppose I am sorry. That matters nothing. But for my children's sake, and especially for my daughter's sake, I am—sometimes I am mad.' I think that when he was left alone after our marriage he was really mad, and I am nearly sure that he killed himself. However, that is done with. Isabel must not know what has happened. And she must not be made to suspect that our friends, her new friends, know her secret. Women are not always considerate toward each other. I must think—I must think what is best to do."

Next morning I was not surprised to receive a note from Isabel. She said that her husband was suddenly prostrated with some kind of a nervous breakdown, though he looked very well, and that the doctor ordered him to give up all work, break off all engagements and go away for three months at least. They were going the same day.

The three months became six, and the six became a year. They were traveling about in unfrequented places, where Paul's health would not suffer from noise and talk of travelers. They staid only in towns where there were no English residents, and so on. Then Paul wrote to me that he had given up his chambers and bought a cottage in the country, where he proposed to stay, his health, he said, being too wretched to think of his practicing any more.

I made many visits to the cottage. It was three or four miles from any village or house. It was on the seaside, and they had a boat. They had no children, and the only people who ever visited them were the family of the nearest clergyman, who came often to them. Isabel was their friend, unpaid governess, adviser, everything.

Remark here a very strange thing. This man, my friend Paul, to whom at the outset life without success would have seemed intolerable, who gave up the most promising prospects solely on his wife's account, who was endowed with every quality which success requires, was perfectly happy in this obscure retreat. He wanted no other kind of life. To sail in his boat, to wander on the sands, to meditate in his garden, always with Isabel beside him, was enough for him. His love for Isabel was absorbing and sufficient for both.

They lived in this way for five and twenty years. Then the greatest possible misfortune fell upon Paul, for Isabel caught a fever and died. Then Paul began to break up. He was only just past 50 and should have been in the vigorous enjoyment of his manhood, but he began to fail. In the last months of his life I staid a great deal with him, and he talked freely about his old ambitions and their sudden end.

"I am sure," he said, "that I did right in giving all up. Sooner or later Isabel would have found out—would have been made to feel somehow—that other people knew the truth. In such a case the only safety lies in flight."

"But if you had staid your own career was certain."

"Perhaps — with the explanation whenever my name was mentioned, 'You know, I suppose, that he married Sir Robert Byrne's daughter.' And she would have heard it."

"Tell me," I said, "who were the residents of the village—the people we met at dinner"——

"I do not know. Why do you ask?"

Evidently Isabel knew nothing of them. Perhaps, after all, the wicked old man lied about them.

"I am glad to think," Paul went on, "that we never met any of them afterward, because perhaps they knew. Thank God, never, never for a moment after the marriage did Isabel feel that her father's sins were visited upon her."

"Why, Paul," I said, "they were, but you shifted the burden to your own shoulders and bore it for her. Did Isabel ever learn why you left London?"

"No, she never knew, and she never suspected. The man Brundish died a very little while after of drink, I believe."

"And you never regretted all that you lost?"

"Never—not for a moment."—Longman's Magazine.

Giving Currency to a Line.

A successful man of letters can give to a line or phrase more currency by quoting it in a single article than it has enjoyed perhaps in centuries before. In the best work the wisdom or beauty of a sentiment actually suffers sometimes from the wealth by which it is surrounded. Where the general level is very high, there are few saliences, and an expression that would attract attention by its very loneliness in an inferior writer may pass unnoticed in an excellent. Yet, once severed from its context, its special merit is immediately apparent, and it passes from lip to lip and pen to pen. It may sometimes happen, too, that to be much quoted means to be little read. Campbell is responsible for many of our most familiar phrases—for instance, "Distance lends enchantment to the view," "Angel visits, few and far between," and "Coming events cast their shadows before"—yet how many people now read either "The Pleasures of Hope" or "Gertrude of Wyoming?" The verdict of our own time has gone in favor of his great martial odes of "The Battle of the Baltic," of "Ye Mariners of England," of "Hohenlinden" and of "The Soldier's Dream," but of these only. The fact of his furnishing us with lines to quote is witness to that patient industry in polishing by which he repaired his real defect of striking original power.—Temple Bar.

Setting the Clock Back

isn't saving time any more than going to a cheap place is saving money, because they charge less. Our business is the scientific cleaning and dyeing of clothes. We do this work for as little money as good, honest work can be done for. The money's worth isn't in how the clothes look when you first get them, it's in the wear of the dye, the goodness of the color, the careful cleaning that means keeping clean. Grease spots come back sometimes. That's the cheapness of it. They can be taken out and be made to stay out. That's our way our cheapness. Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

FOR TEMPERANCE.

Lecture and Entertainment in T. A. B. Hall.

The lecture and entertainment last evening in T. A. B. Hall under the auspices of St. Mary's Temperance Society, was a success in every particular. The hall was crowded, and all listened with attention to the speaker of the evening, Rev. Father Miller, pastor of St. Joseph's church, North Plainfield, who in a well delivered address extolled the benefits and virtues of temperance.

Those who took part in the enter tainment that followed the address were the Misses Quinn, Messrs. Ward, Comerford, and O'Brien, Miss Day, and Miss Hickey. Miss St. Leger presided at the piano and Prof. O'Reilly manipulated the bow.

Short addresses were also made by Fathers Smyth and Murphy for the cause of temperance.

—The death of Daniel J. Manley occurred yesterday at his home in South Plainfield. He was thirty-one years of age. The funeral will be held tomorrow from his late home. Interment in St. Mary's cemetery.

SUPREME MOMENT IN A LAUNCH.

It Comes When the Vessel First Gets Into the Water.

That a launch is a matter of mathematics, as well as of great skill and labor, is shown by the fact that the man of science who has the matter in charge always makes a set of calculations showing the strain of the ship and its precise condition at practically every foot of the journey down the ways. If a boat should get in the way, or if it should take an unusual length of time to knock out the keel blocks, or if any one of half a dozen things should cause serious delay, the scientific man knows just how long he can wait and just how far the limit of safety extends.

There is always one supreme moment in a launch, and it is at a time that escapes the average spectator. It is when the vessel gets fairly well into the water. This is when an important factor known as the "moment of buoyancy" comes into play. If you can imagine a vessel sliding down an incline without any water into which to drop, you can see that the vessel would tip down suddenly at the end which has left the ways and would rise at the end still on the incline. But really in successful launches the stern of the vessel is gradually lifted up by the water, and this throws the weight forward on that part of the ship still resting on the ways. The force of the water is called the "moment of buoyancy," and the natural tendency of the ship to drop to the bottom of the stream is called the "moment of weight." Now, the moment of buoyancy must always be greater than the moment of weight, but it must not be very much greater, for if it were it would throw too much weight forward on the part of the ship still on the ways and might break them down or injure the plates or keel of the ship. When the great English battleship Ramillies was launched, this did really happen, and so great was the strain near the bow that parts of the cradle were actually pushed right into the bottom of the vessel. It is this danger of disaster that causes the scientific launcher to make the most careful calculations as to the conditions surrounding the ship at every foot of her journey into the water.—"Launching a Great Vessel," by Franklin Matthews, in St. Nicholas.

A Pipe Story Defined.

"There is one favorite Chicago expression that I don't hear in Washington so often," said a correspondent from the Windy City to a Post man. "It is 'pipe' stories, as a synonym for fake, or canard, or ghost story.

"Where does it come from? Oh, it came from the west along with the Chinese, and I suppose you will get it here when Chinamen and opium joints become more numerous. There are lots of white hop fiends in Chicago, and a great many of them are stool pigeons for the police and detective departments. They are not much good at any stage of the game, but they have to be half way tanked with opium before they are any good at all. Then if they get too much they go to the other extreme and imagine everything that they don't know.

"One of them will hit the pipe for an hour or so and then come around to police headquarters with the most marvelous stories of hold ups, burglaries and similar crimes that you ever heard. If they get hold of a green reporter or a green policeman, they are liable to have them chasing all over the universe at dead hours of the night looking for these suppositional events, and their mendacinations are known to the police as 'pipe stories,' or 'talking pipe.' That is the symbol in Chicagoese for anything that is without foundation in fact."—Washington Post.

The Nine In the Calendar.

The figure 9, which came into the calendar on Jan. 1, 1889, will stay with us 111 years from that date, or until Dec. 31, 1999. No other figure has ever had such a long consecutive run, and the 9 itself has only once before been in a race which lasted over a century—that in which it continuously figured from Jan. 1, 889, until Dec. 31, 999, a period of 111 years.

The figures 3 and 7 occasionally fall into odd combinations, but neither of them has ever yet served for a longer period than 100 consecutive years in our calendar since the present mode of calculating time was established. It is also clear that from their relative positions among the numerals it is an impossibility for either of them to appear in date reckonings continuously for a longer period than a century.—St. Louis Republic.

Heroism.

The heroes of today are the men and the women who do their duty faithfully, as they find it laid out for them, caring for family and home and doing what they can for their neighbors. We have our opportunities in the daily walks of life. Men are growing better every day; more chivalrous than before. The race is "falling up," and thousands of unsung heroes all around us are enlisted in the work.—Rev. George L. Perrin.

An Exception.

"I hardly know whether to marry her or not," said the count. "Her father is in the clothing trade."

"There is money in clothes," said the duke.

"There isn't any in mine," said the count.—Indianapolis Journal.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

HIS LAST WALK WAS TO DEATH

TRACK WALKER BRISKO FATALLY HURT BY AN EXPRESS TRAIN.

Struck a Short Distance From Bound Brook and Was Afterwards Brought to Muhlenberg Hospital Where He Died.

Josef Brisko, a track walker on the Central Railroad between Bound and Raritan, and a resident of the former place, was struck last evening about 6:30 near Bound Brook, by the Philadelphia express due in this city at 6:40. He was walking the track unconscious of the approaching train, which struck him with great force. His head was terribly crushed and one arm injured. He also sustained severe internal injuries. Several employes of the railroad picked him up and brought him to this city on the 8:31 train, at which time he was still living. The ambulance was called and the unfortunate man was removed to the hospital, where he died in about half an hour.

Brisko leaves a wife and several children. He held the position of track walker for a long time and was always considered a careful man. This morning his remains were taken to Casey's morgue, where the county physician viewed them, and gave permission to have them removed to his home in Bound Brook for interment.

STUDIES LEFT IN THE LURCH.

Class of '96 Enjoy a Holiday Spread and Hear Bright Remarks.

Last evening the class of '96 of the High School assembled in the Stillman building to enjoy with the members of their own class and with their teachers an evening of social intercourse.

At half past seven the class and their guests assembled around the large table, which was prettily decorated with flowers and handsome china. For nearly two hours the class sat and enjoyed themselves before the toasts were given.

Henry Eggerding gave a short essay as to the reaso why Christmas was a better time to hold a festival of this kind than Thanksgiving time.

The first toast was given by Miss Caldwell, who represented the class of '97, and defended or tried to defend them against the charge which was made against them by the senior class, which was made in the following quotation:

"So wise, so young, they say do ne'er live long."

Miss Caldwell made some very pat remarks concerning the class of '97 which were greatly appreciated.

The next number on the dinner cards called for the class poem, which was written and given by the author, Charles M. Dolliver, the class poet. In this poem the orator jibed several of the members of the class and some of the teachers, but in a friendly and good natured way.

Mr. Travell gave the toast on the subject of "Class Loyalty," which was suggested by this quotation: "Then come the wild weather, come sleet or come snow, we'll stand by each other however it blow."

The class history was given by Miss Bessie Cahoone, the class historian. In this history many of the old happenings of the class were spoken of which had almost been forgotten, but as soon as the historian mentioned them they came before the class in a vivid array.

The prophecy was given by Miss Grace E. Overton, who read it for the prophetess, Miss Sallye Swayze.

Wilbur F. Cornwell was the toast master and introduced the speakers. The rest of the evening was spent in social introcourse and enjoying charades and other interesting games. Before the company broke up, all gathered about the piano, both class and teachers, and entered into a hearty song. Some of the old and familiar college songs were sung.

Assessing Benefits and Damages.

Commissioners W. J. Roome, Justus H. Cooley and J. P. Emmons appointed by the borough to assess benefits and damages along the proposed Watchung avenue extension met yesterday and covered a portion of the property. They are continuing the work today.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A NICAURAUGA EXHIBIT.

Interesting and Valuable Collection to be Seen at the Public Library.

Mrs. S. R. Struthers, of 917 Madison avenue, has very kindly loaned to the Free Public Library her interesting Nicaurauga collection. This collection has been placed in the reading room where it may be seen by all who are interested at any time during library hours. Accompanying it is a map, compiled from official sources, showing the exact location, etc., of the proposed canal.

Perhaps the most interesting features are the little images made by the Indians of Maraya showing the native costume, manner of carrying burdens, etc. Very interesting also is the valuable collection of photographs of Greytown and vicinity.

The whole collection is as follows: Water jar, stamps and coins from Costa Rica, Nicaurauga, Guatemala and Honduras, drinking cups elaborately carved, images made by the Maraya Indians, specimens of paper currency, paddles used by the natives in their canoes, bowl, finely carved, made from the fruit of the calabash tree, sea beans and shells picked up on the coast, sharks' teeth, postal cards of Costa Rica and Nicaurauga, native birds, collection of mounted photographs of Nicaurauga and vicinity.

Library hours: 9 to 12, a. m., 2 to 6 and 7 to 10, p. m., daily, excepting Sundays.

MARRIED IN MT. OLIVE.

Cupid's Darts Pierce Two Hearts and a Nuptial Knot is Tied.

One of the prettiest weddings ever witnessed in the Mt. Olive Baptist church, was performed by the pastor Rev. P. S. Gibson last evening. The contracting parties were Miss Minnie Carey, daughter of Mrs. Belle Carey, and Forest Jones, coachman for E. B. Day, of Central avenue.

Commencing at 8 o'clock, Horatio Randolph, the organist, rendered several choice selections until the bridal party arrived at 8:30. The bride was becomingly gowned in white silk, prettily trimmed with silk lace, white satin ribbon and pearl ornaments. She also wore a tulle veil and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaid, Miss Julia Randolph, was gowned in white silk trimmed with silk lace, and carried pink roses. The best man was Joseph Bolden. The ushers, A. W. Brown, Burrill Gibson, Charles Barber and William Jones preceded the party and the bride entered leaning on the arm of William J. Douglass, who gave her away. Preceding them was the best man and bridemaid. They seperated on entering the church, the groom walking up the aisle with the best man. At the altar a circle was formed, after which the bride and groom were united in marriage.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was rendered while the bridal party were entering and leaving the church. After the ceremony they were taken to the home of Mrs. Maun, on Plainfield avenue, where a reception followed, which was largely attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones received many handsome presents, including a bed room suit, toilet set and a set of silverware, from the groom's employer, and numerous other useful articles for housekeeping. The bride and groom will reside at 345 Cottage place, the home of the groom's mother.

CARTED TO JAIL.

Rum Sends a Man to Jail for Thirty Days.

One lone man spent the night in the city lockup last night and appeared before Judge Coddington in the city court this morning. He was arrested last night by Officer Flanagan on South Second street, after making things lively on West Third and Liberty streets. Rum was the cause of the trouble and acted so effectually that it took a delivery wagon to cart the prisoner to jail.

In the city court this morning he gave his name as James O'Rourke and pleaded guilty to the charge. Thirty days in jail was the sentence imposed.

United in Wedlock.

Mrs. Nellie Jones, of Philadelphia, was united in marriage to Thomas W. Hurff, of Sewell, Camden county, yesterday afternoon at the home of the bride's brother, H. S. Thatcher, on East Fourth street. Rev. George Angleman performed the ceremony in the presence of only the immediate relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Hurff left soon after the ceremony for Sewell where they will reside.

—The directors of the Plainfield Building and Loan Association meet tonight at the law office of W. R. Coddington, for the transaction of business.

PARK CLUB ENTERTAINED.

AN INFORMAL VARIED PROGRAMME GIVEN LAST EVENING.

William N. Runyon Acted as Master of Ceremonies, and Was Obliged to Top Off the Event With One of His Songs.

There is a certain fascination about the Park Club that makes it one of the favorite resorts for old and young and its entertainments and dances all have that same attractiveness. The informal entertainment which was prepared by the House committee for last evening was no exception to the rule.

The programme did not begin until nine o'clock but long before that time the audience began to flock to the club house. Some went down stairs to bowl or engage in billiards and pool, while others preferred to watch the animated scene from some point of observation. Those who did not care for these kinds of enjoyment gathered in groups about the main floor and conversed.

When the time arrived, there was a general exodus to the upper hall and then William N. Runyon, a member of the house committee, took the floor as master of ceremonies. After a few humorous remarks about the excellence of the entertainment which was to follow, and some who were to have taken part, Mr. Runyon announced a piano solo by Miss Alice Coard as the first number on the programme and it was excellently rendered. An enjoyable tenor solo by Elmer E. Runyon followed, and then Fletcher Hallock, accompanied by Miss Alice Coard on the piano, gave one of his delightful banjo solos. Alfred Holmes sang a baritone solo in a very pleasing manner and the first part closed with a well executed piano solo by Miss Whitney.

After an interval of five minutes, Elmer E. Runyon was announced and sang again most acceptably. Mr. Hallock then "performed," according to Mr. Runyon, and gave a "mouthaphone" solo with banjo accompaniment. Another enjoyable piano solo by Miss Coard and one of Mr. Holmes's delightful baritone songs ended the programme. The audience was not satisfied however, and vehemently called for "Runyon" and "Romeo," so the master of ceremonies sat down at the piano and sang the plantive ballad of "Romeo and Juliet" as only he can sing it. And it was only after Mr. Runyon had been encored three times that he was allowed to make his escape.

The floor was then cleared and the audience spent the rest of the evening gliding about the waxed floor or enjoying the pleasures of the lower floor.

High School Student Dead.

Louis Coriell, the fifteen-year-old son of A. S. Coriell, of Bound Brook, died at his home this morning from injuries sustained in falling from a tree several days ago. He attended the High School in this city and was well liked among his classmates in the fourth class as well as by all the school.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

EX-MAYOR SAUNDERS' VIEWS

HE THINKS THE BOROUGH OFFICIALS ARE USING UNDUE HASTE.

There Should be More Courtesy Shown Between the Two Municipalities—Thinks the Court of Justice Will Not Sanction It.

Speaking to a Press reporter with reference to the action of the borough Board of Health ex Mayor Saunders said:

"The action taken by the authorities in North Plainfield against property holders using the North avenue sewer is much to be regretted. This is not an opportune time for such a course. The city of Plainfield has intelligently planned and forwarded a sewerage system which is expected to be in operation in a few weeks. This will take care of the North avenue sewer and prevent further contamination of the brook. To begin suits at this late date is as unwise as it is unfriendly and I do not believe that a court of justice will sanction it. If our authorities would only spend the time, energy and money which they give to the North avenue sewer on the more important subject of providing a sewerage system for North Plainfield they would be doing greater service to the community."

Yesterday afternoon thirteen of the orders to show cause were served on the North avenue property owners who connect with the sewer. The suit against J. T. Vail has been discontinued, as his building has a connection with a cesspool instead of the sewer.

When a Daily Press reporter saw Borough Counsel Chas. A. Reed this morning regarding any further action, Mr. Reed spoke of the fact that while the city had made the street connections in most of the other streets, in North avenue, where it was so necessary that the sewer should be used, no effort had been made to lay the house connections. He very emphatically declared that it was the duty of the city of Plainfield to connect the buildings on North avenue with the sewer before any other connections were made.

"Our notices to show cause" said he "are not returnable until Dec. 31st, and if they can get the sewage system ready to use by January 1st, as they claim, then there is no necessity for any trouble."

The serving of the order to show cause yesterday afternoon brought more forcibly to mind than anything else the difficulty which the property owners are involved in along the line of the North avenue sewer.

Immediately thereafter there was a scurrying among the different ones effected and many an impromptu conference was held yesterday afternoon and last evening. This morning several of the most active ones got to gether and arranged to call a preliminary meeting for this evening for the property owners to attend and discuss what was best for them to do

The meeting will be called to order at eight o'clock in the office of E. C. Mulford on North avenue. There is a general disposition to pool issues and employ a lawyer to represent them in the Court of Chancery and endeavor to prevent the issuing of any injunctions. They realize that it would be almost futile for them to take anything but concerted action.

Tomorrow night at 7:30 in the Board of Trade rooms in the Babcock building another public meeting will be held, when it is expected that something definite will be decided upon.

In conversation with a Press reporter this afternoon Constructing Engineer Gavett, who has general supervision of the sewer work, said that personally he thought the most advisable thing for the property holders to do would be to make application to the sewer committee of the Common Council for the right to make immediate connections with the new sewerage system from the buildings which are now connected with the North avenue sewer. He said that the sewage beds would without a doubt be ready for use by the first of January, and thus obviate the whole trouble.

Frank J. Hubbard, the engineer, who has been at the sewer beds throughout their construction, told a Daily Press reporter this morning that as far as the work was concerned, part of the sewage beds would be ready to use by January 1st. The screening tank is in condition to use already, and will be fully completed before the 1st, and the only thing that is lacking is four hundred feet of the carrier pipe, from the tank to the beds, and that will also be completed in time.

He also remarked that some of the residents in Netherwood were as badly in need of a sewer as those of North avenue, although they are not in danger of a law suit, and in some cases the cost of cleaning the cesspools exceeds that of the rent, and several are in a very bad condition.

TO COMMENCE EARLIER.

Choral Concert Will Start at Quarter of Eight O'Clock Tonight.

The first concert of the Choral Society for the season of 1895 96 will be given by the Choral Society this evening at Music Hall. The programme is by far the most imposing one ever presented by this society. It includes Max Bruch's "Arminius," a highly dramatic work, with the old story of the deliverance of the Germans from the Roman yoke, as its subject. Max Heinrich, who will sing the part of the hero, Arminius, is counted as the foremost baritone now before the American public. Miss Gertrude May Stein, contralto, (who sang with such great taste in the "Messiah" last year), is a favorite in Plainfield. She takes the part of the priestess, while J. H. McKinley, tenor, sings as Siegmund. The music is brilliant, and gives opportunity for effective orchestral and choral work.

The first part of the programme will be given up to a novel presentation of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," by Mendelssohn. The exquisite overture, Intermezzo, Nocturne, and Wedding March, by the orchestra, will be a charming entertainment in itself. But there will also be the recital of the various parts of Shakespeare's characters in the comedy, by Charles F. Underhill, dramatic reader, accompanied by the orchestra. Miss Grenelli and Miss Stein will sing the parts of the First and Second Fairies, while the "Fairies Chorus" will be sung by the ladies of the society. All will be under the direction of E. J. Fitzhugh. In order that there may be time for the performance entire of the overture and other instrumental parts, the concert will begin at a quarter before eight, instead of eight o'clock, as heretofore.

PAID FOR SAVING A LIFE.

Craig A. Marsh Granted a Handsome Fee By the Court in the Freehill Case.

Judge McCormick and his associate Judges yesterday determined the amount to be paid counsel for Frank Freehill for their services in the recent murder case. The Court allowed Craig A. Marsh $750 and T. J. Kelly $250.

It ought to be worth a thousand dollars to save a man's life. The Court told Freehill that that was what counsel had done for him. Every Jerseyman ought to be proud of his State, which sees to it that even a tramp shall not be deprived of life without due process of law, and the fullest opportunity to defend himself before court and jury.

Delighted Boys.

The Rev. Father Murphy took the members of the Boys' Club on a delightful trip to and through Savannah, the Forest City, last night. The attention the boys gave to his graphic descriptions, speaks well for the Rev. Father's entertaining talk. There was also a recitation by Lawrence Doyle and a song by Charles McCann, both of which pleased the boys. Last, but by by no means least, was clog and jig dancing by Prof. O'Brien. The boys were lavish with their applause, which testified that they were well pleased with their entertainers, whom they they thank very much for their efforts.

Election in Unity Lodge.

Unity Lodge, No. 102, K. of P., held its annual election of officers last evening, which resulted as follows: Chancellor commander, Frank Putnam; vice-chancellor, J. D. Anderson; master of work, J. W. A. Bauersachs; master of exchequer, Amos Andrews; keeper of records and seals, A. B. Dunavan; master of finance, Jeremiah Van Winkle, Jr.; prelate, F. Green; master-at-arms, J. S. Jones; trustee, B. Thatcher; representative to the grand lodge, I. N. Wyckoff; alternate, B. Thatcher. After the election a collation was served and a good time was enjoyed by all.

Columbus.

We all admit that Christopher was a great discoverer. Why did he prove so? Because he set out to find something new, and he stuck to it until he found it. If you want to find something new in the line of Christmas gifts, you can be equally successful, if sticking to your purpose, you drop in at Collier's, 103 Park avenue. Here you will be sure to find the best, the most attractive and satisfactory in price and durability to be found anywhere.

That's No Reason.

There may be war between the United States and England but that has nothing to do with Randolph's handsome display of delicious candies. He has a window full of bottles of perfumery, also, which make excellent Christmas presents.

CHANCE FOR VOLUNTEERS.

INDIVIDUALS WANTED TO TRY AND SAVE ONE MAN FROM DRINK.

Col. Hadley's Meeting Tonight Will be the Most Important One of the Week—Mission Converts to Relate Experiences.

From the first, the meetings in Reform Hall have been crowded and the interest has grown each night, and it is expected that the special preparation that has been made for the meeting tonight at 7:30 o'clock will draw still additional numbers, and judging from the past, those who wish seats should come early.

Mrs. Idabell Sparks Kress, the great soloist from New York city, has been engaged to sing several of her best pieces, and probably no finer singer of religious songs than she can be found, since great preparation has been given to her education in Germany. Indeed, she can sing in seven languages, and invariably charms her audiences.

Besides this, Miss Wray, who has already endeared herself to the hearts of all who have heard her, will sing her quaint songs and choruses.

There will be a preliminary song service from 7:30 to 8 o'clock, from the new book, Rescue Songs for 1895, which has proved very acceptable and seems to be filled with appropriate words and music for the work.

Another feature of the meeting, which will be led by Col. Hadley, will be the testimonies of four prominent converts from the Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission, New York, and if they can exceed in interest the testimonies of the St. Bartholomew's converts who spoke Monday evening, they must, indeed, be thrilling.

Tonight an opportunity will be given to all who wish to volunteer their services to try and save one drinking person during the year 1896.

Col. Hadley will also lead the meeting on Sunday afternoon at half past three in Reform Hall, where services will be held tomorrow and Saturday nights by Miss Wray, assisted by Mr. Leo and the converts from St. Bartholomew's Rescue Mission, New York.

So far, these meetings have exceeded in interest and numbers and financial support, the most sanguine expectations of all, and it looks as though much permanent good would result from them.

Col. Hadley received a letter requesting that the meetings be continued for another week. If it seems wise to do this and arrangements can be made so as not to interfere with previous plans, notice will be given in The Press.

ANCESTRAL ACCOUNTS.

Interesting Addresses on the Adventures of their Forefathers.

A novel, but very interesting, service was held in the Congregational church last evening under the name of an "Ancestral Party." The meeting was led by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor. The National hymn, the Pilgrim Fathers, and several other appropriate hymns were sung, and then a number of the congregation told something of their ancestors, their adventures and trials. There were some who came over on the Mayflower and numerous brave men who fought through the Revolutionary War. There were fights, escapes, captures and other thrilling adventures told, and everyone of the large audience was sorry when the last ancestor had been brought to light.

Those who took part in the meeting and told something of the history of their forefathers were: William Van Alstyne, Robert Suffren, Miss Clark, G. S. Raynolds, J. E. Morse, Miss Butler, Mrs. Souther, William H. Sampson, J. M. Whiton and J. C. Whiting. Miss Nellie Davis was unable to be present and her account was read by Rev. Mr. Goodrich.

Not There to Watch Boys.

The trustees of the First Presbyterian church ask The Press to deny the report that Officers Geise and Blackford were stationed at the church last Sunday evening to keep order and prevent loafing around the church. The report was probably founded on the fact that officers were stationed in the sheds several weeks ago in order to capture the thieves who had been stealing horse blankets and lap robes.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

WHO WILL BE CHOSEN?

Speculation on the Proposed Commission.

The House Upholds the President and Votes an Appropriation of $100,000—Senator Chandler Introduces a Bill in the Senate Appropriating $100,000,000.

Washington, Dec. 19.—There is considerable speculation among members of the house as to the personnel of the commission which the president, if the bill passed by the house becomes a law, will appoint to investigate the divisional line between Venezuela and British Guiana. Mr. McCreary of Kentucky, who has been three times chairman of the committee on foreign affairs, will offer a resolution to-morrow that the number of commissioners shall be five; that they shall report to the president as soon as practicable, and that they be authorized to take whatever action may be necessary and proper to perform the duties assigned to them. This would also permit them to visit the disputed territory if, in their judgment, such a course were advisable. Upon this point there is a wide division of sentiment among the representatives. It is not denied that all the data necessary to an intelligent understanding of the subject is already available, and for this reason it is claimed that no occasion exists for visiting Venezuela. While sentiment is strongly in harmony with the president's recommendations, there is a disposition on the part of the conservative members to "make haste slowly." Already gossip is busy connecting the names of Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court, ex-President Harrison, ex-Senator Edmunds of Vermont and other well known men with the proposed commission.

House Acts Quickly.

The response of the house to the message was the introduction yesterday by Mr. Hitt, rep., Ill., as soon as the reading of the journal was concluded of a bill appropriating $100,000 to pay the expenses of the commission suggested by the president. Its reading was hailed by applause all over the floor. Mr. Boutelle, rep., Me., in view of the momentous consequences which might follow from the passage of the bill, expressed a hope that it might be referred to a committee before being acted upon, but made no formal objection to its immediate consideration. After brief and stirring speeches by Mr. Hitt and Mr. Crisp, dem., Ga., urging united and speedy action as essential to the successful prosecution of the contention by the United States in regard the boundary dispute, the bill was passed without a dissenting vote. The house adjourned until Friday, after having adopted a concurrent resolution providing for a holiday recess from Dec. 20 to Jan. 3.

War Talk in the Senate.

The only matters that occured in the senate having any bearing on the exciting question of a possible war with Great Britain were the introduction by Mr. Chandler, rep., N. H., and the reference to the committee on military affairs, of a bill appropriating $100,000,000 to strengthen the military armament of the United States; the introduction of a bill by Mr. Hill, dem., N. Y., to repeal the law that prohibits officers of the late confederate states, who had formerly held commissions in the United States army or navy, from being appointed to any position in the United States army or navy, and a resolution of inquiry offered by Mr. Davis, rep., Minn., as to the attempted establishment of post routes by Great Britain or Canada over United States territory in Alaska. Mr. Hill's desire to have his bill passed immediately was defeated by an objection from Mr. Platt, rep., Conn., who suggested that there was no immediate haste for its passage, as the country was not likely to get into a war before the reassembling of congress. Mr. Hill's opinion was that it was particularly proper and appropriate at "this critical period of our history" that such offensive legislation should be wiped out. Mr. Hill's bill remains on the table, so that it may be taken up for action at any time; and Mr. Davis' resolution was agreed to without any question. The house bill appropriating $100,000 for the proposed Venezuelan commission was not received from the house.

Many Congratulatory Messages.

Washington, Dec. 19.—An effort made this morning to obtain copies of the congratulatory letters and telegrams received by the president resulted in the following statement from Private Secretary Thurber: "The president has received many communications on the subject of his message by mail and telegraph. These have been coming since Tuesday night and are still being received. We have telegrams from Maine and California, from Michigan and Louisiana, indeed from every state and teritory. In addition to these there have been a number of tenders of service from organizations and individuals."

Senor Andrade Gratified.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Senor Andrade, the Venezuelan minister, expressed himself as thoroughly gratified with the recommendations of the president and is confident that the enthusiasm in Venezuela when the main points of the message are received there will be very great. He considers as remarkable the deep insight into the question shown by the president and can find no words strong enough to commend the presentation of the facts of the controversy by Secretary Olney.

KEEPER BROWN INDICTED.

Grand Jury at Poughkeepsie Requests the Pardon of a Convict.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 19.—Keeper John Brown of the Matteawan asylum for the criminal insane, who was arrested Monday night for being implicated in a plot to effect a wholesale delivery of the convicts at that institution, has been indicted by the grand jury on three counts—two for aiding an escape and one for bribery. The grand jury also adopted a resolution commending the management of the Matteawan state hospital by its superintendent, Dr. H. E. Allison and endorsing his efforts to fulfill his duties as a public officer. A resolution was also adopting requesting the governor to pardon Patrick McGuire, a convict at the Matteawan state hospital, who, on Nov. 26, 1895, confessed to Dr. Allison that he and two other convicts had in their possession a loaded revolver and other dangerous tools and weapons, and had thereby prevented the commission of a serious crime and had possibly saved the lives of some of the officers and attendants in the hospital, and had subsequently furnished valuable testimony which would tend to the arrest and conviction of an untrustworthy and dishonest attendant.

FOURTEEN YEARS EACH.

Convery and Mack, ex-Attendants at Morris Plains Asylum, Sentenced.

Morristown, N. J., Dec. 19.—Henry Convery and William Mack, the two ex-attendants of the state insane asylum at Morris Plains, charged with the murder of Nicholas Dolfuz at that institution on October 12 last, were arraigned for trial here yesterday. The defendants withdrew their previous plea of not guilty and substituted that of non vult, which carried with it a sentence of murder in the second degree. This plea was accepted by the court and a sentence of fourteen years each at hard labor in the state prison was imposed. Dolfuz, it was alleged, had, on the above mentioned morning, been abused by Convery and Mack, and one of the two held Dolfuz against the wall while the other one struck him. The patient was then taken and seated at the breakfast table. A short time afterwards he was found lying on the floor of the dining room unconscious and bleeding from wounds on the head. The patient died shortly afterward, and at the inquest it was discovered that his death had been caused by hemorrhages in the brain, the result of the injuries he had received at the hands of the attendants.

ARCHBISHOP KENRICK DYING.

Last Sacrament Administered to the Venerable Churchman.

St. Louis, Dec. 19.—Archbishop Peter Richard Kenrick is dying. Last week he contracted a cold and has gradually grown weaker. Last night his condition was considered so serious that the sacrament for the dying was administered by one of the Jesuit priests living near the archiepiscopal residence. Dr. Gregory, the attending physician, fears that the venerable archbishop has not much longer to live. Archbishop Kenrick is 89 years old.

Foster Supports Cleveland.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Hon. John W. Foster, ex-secretary of state, and an acknowledged authority upon international law, cordially approves and supports the attitude taken by President Cleveland and Secretary Olney on the meaning and scope of the Monroe doctrine as laid down by the president's message.

MORE CARS WRECKED

Traction Strike Riots Continue in Philadelphia.

A Few Cars Run Under Heavy Police Protection—Mounted Officers Charge on the Mob—Revolver Fired into the Crowd—The Situation To-day Very Serious.

Philadelphia, Dec. 19.—The second day of the street railway strike was comparatively quiet, in contrast to the violent outbusts of the day before, but, nevertheless, there were many violent scenes enacted, and the Union Traction company only succeeded in running a few cars on the various lines, at long intervals, under a heavy guard of policemen. Before dark the company withdrew what few cars it had out, and again last night they did not turn a wheel, and thousands of people were put to the inconvenience of walking miles to their homes. The police authorities claim to be fully able to cope with the strike, but, nevertheless, every preparation has been made to call out the militia in the event of the mob getting beyone the control of the city authorities. While the rioting was not so extensive as on the first day of the strike there was an ugly spirit visible in the crowds on the streets, and it was noticeble that there were more men collected than boys. There are rumors that the traction company will consent to some adjustment of the strike, but that cannot be verified, and are probably not correct.

Guarded by Mounted Police.

Yesterday the company started out a car on nearly every one of its lines. From six to eight policemen were stationed upon the platforms of these cars and mounted police surrounded them. As the cars went out of the sheds, the crowds hooted and jeered at the motormen and conductors, but offered no resistance to their progress. The first car sent out went over the road without molestation. As the day progressed the crowds on the various streets grew bolder, especially those on Market street, and in addition to the regular force, 676 special officers were sworn in.

Police Club the Rioters.

In Kensington the crowds gave evidence of an ugly temper. The tracks were blocked with all kinds of obstructions, and frequently when the police would leave the car to remove the obstructions the mob would make an assault upon the car and break the windows and beat the conductor and motorman. The police had orders to show no mercy to the mob, and they clubbed them with a free hand whenever they came in conflict with them. One of the most exciting incidents of the day occurred on Market street.

Mob and Police Clash.

About 3:30 in the afternoon a car was crawling slowly westward on Market street. Eight policemen were on the car and a detail of mounted officers rode ahead and behind it. At Ninth street the mob surged out into the street and surrounded the car and one of the crowd bolder than the rest cast a stone. It went through the window of the car and was followed by a shower of stones and clubs. The officers charged into the mob and drove them back, riding up on the pavement and forcing hundreds of women and spectators to take refuge in stores. The fighting blood of the crowd was aroused, however, and it clung tenaciously behind the car. At Twelfth street it closed in again and pressed so heavily upon the policemen that two of them drew their revolvers and fired into the air. This frightened the mob and it fell back. A mail car was completely wrecked by the mob last night, and some one fired a pistol, but fortunately nobody was hurt. The situation today is most serious.

Unequal to Family Duties--No Appetite

Hood's Sarsaparilla Gave Strength and Courage to Work.

"I was in such condition I could not walk even about the house to attend to household duties and care for my children and family. I did not have the strength of a child. I was treated by several physicians, who pronounced my trouble Scrofula and Female Weakness. I could eat only a slice of bread and drink a cup of tea, three times a day. Sometimes I could stand a soft boiled egg for dinner. I became reduced to skin and bones; at last they had to draw me about the house seated in a rocking chair. I was in a terrible state when my husband, having noticed advertisements of Hood's

Premature

is deplorably prevalent in this nineteenth century. Thousands die annually—young in years, but as completely worn out as though the full allotment of their time had passed over their heads. The man who feels that he is "breaking down," experiences loss of strength, sleep, and appetite, should at once take that greatest of concentrated food preparations. It is not a medicine, but a builder-up of brain, nerve, and flesh tissue. By its strength-giving properties, and its action as an invigorator of each of the great life-maintaining organs of the body, it stops the decline, and gives to the prematurely broken-down sufferer a new lease of life, wherein poor health is an unnecessary adjunct if its use is continued.

ISAAC BASSETT DEAD

Aged Senate Doorkeeper Expires in Washington.

Appointed a Page at the Instance of Daniel Webster, He Continued in Public Service Up to the Time of His Death—Was Liked by All Who Knew Him.

Washington, Dec. 19.—Isaac Bassett, assistant doorkeeper of the United States senate died last evening after an illness that made its serious approach as early as last June. He was one, if not the very last, of the few officials of the government who have remained in the public service since the days of Daniel Webster, who, in fact, was Mr. Bassett's sponsor for his first official position, that of page in the United States senate. His urbanity combined with his usefulness in having the wants of senators in the locations on the senate floor properly regarded by his subordinates and his universal courtesy to all who came within the province of his office made him very popular. The soubriquet of "captain" was one of honory title as Mr. Bassett had never military distinction. His venerable appearance on the floor of the senate especially when he appeared in front of the presiding officer to announce a message to the senate from the house of representatives or from the president of the United States rendered his personnel a conspicuous mark. The old tradition of "Father" Bassett turning back the hands of the senate clock so as to give a few moments more time at periods of final adjournment is well-known to all observers of the last ends of congressional sessions; but in truth there was more of myth than actual fact in the rendition of the story.

One of the Capital's Oldest Residents

Mr. Bassett's death, while it has been expected almost daily for a long time, was nevertheless a sincere bereavement to his friends, including many senators who, from long acquaintance and official association, had more than an ordinary feeling of friendship for the venerable attache of the senate chamber. The immediate cause of Capt. Bassett's death was cancer of the pancreas and stomach, which, notwithstanding his well-preserved condition, made in his advanced age rapid inroads upon his vigorous constitution. He was one of the oldest inhabitants of the capital and had seen the city advance from literal primitiveness to its present stand among the great cities of the nation. Many of the greatest men of national history contemporary with him in official lists and with whom he was more or less officially associated, have been attended in their last moments by his ministrations and followed by him among the mourners at their tombs. His death occasions sincere regret in the community in which he passed his life and received the honored respect of everyone.

PRIESTS TORTURED TO DEATH.

Fifty-three Villages Around Harpoot Burned by Turks.

London, Dec. 19.—The representative in Constantinople of the United Press, telegraphing under yesterday's date, says that advices from the interior of Asia Minor are meagre owing to the fact that there are very considerable delays in the receipt of mails. The latest letters received from Harpoot are dated Nov. 18. They state that fifty-three villages around Harpoot have been burned, and hundreds of their inhabitants killed. Bishop Hohanes, together with his servants, was tortured to death. Most of the priests were tortured and killed in attempts to compel them to adopt Islamism. Some of the priests yielded under the torture they were subjected to. At Nussia, near Adana, the commander of the redifs pillaged a church and outraged the wife of the priest. The priest telegraphed a complaint to the authorities at Adaha, and was afterwards arrested and thrown into prison. Advices from Alexandretta, dated November 20, are to the effect that a number of fugitives from Marash and Aintah have reached there after a terrible journey. They state that many Armenians died along the road, where their bodies remain unburied. The porte on Sunday circulated reports that the Armenians at Zeitoun pillaged and burned nine villages, killing 250 Moslems, including sixteen women.

REBEL DEFEAT REPORTED.

Maceo, Benni and Perez Routed by Spanish Troops.

Havana, Dec. 19.—The columns of Spanish troops commanded by Canella and Buquero, 1,100 strong, have defeated Jose Maceo, Benni and Perequito Perez, whose forces numbered 3,000 men, in an engagement at Palmarito. The fight lasted seven hours. The rebels fled, leaving forty-six dead on the field and carrying off many wounded. The Spaniards, who stormed the position occupied by the rebels, lost seventeen killed and fifty-three wounded.

Minnie Williams Sentenced.

Boston, Dec. 19.—Minnie Williams, the young woman who achieved notoriety by passing a night in the same cell with Barbara Aub in the New York Tombs, was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in the municipal court yesterday for the larceny of a watch, chain and charm, Aug. 13, from Henry Fitzgerald.

Bayard's Speech Applauded.

London, Dec. 19.—Ambassador Bayard spoke at the Actors' club dinner last night and his remarks on the blooded ties between England and America elicicited hearty applause.

AMBASSADOR BAYARD ABSENT.

Other Diplomats Present at Lord Salisbury's Weekly Reception.

London, Dec. 19.—The Marquis of Salisbury held the usual Wednesday reception at the foreign office yesterday. The French, German, Italian and Spanish ambassadors and the Austrian aud Dutch charge d'affaires were present. United States Ambassador Bayard was absent. It is understood that the British government has not been informed officially of President Cleveland's message in regard to the proposed commission in connection with the Venezuelan boundary dispute, and that Great Britain will follow the usual diplomatic course until overt action is taken by the United States. The action of the house of representatives in voting an appropriation for the expenses of the commission may hasten a crisis, but it is not expected that there will be serious developments until the commission shall have arrived in Venezuela. Their presence on the Guiana border will constitute a grave menace, and the necessary instructions will be forwarded to the authorities to maintain the interests of Great Britain in Guiana.

Discreditable to England.

Dublin, Dec. 19.—The Freeman's Journal, in its comments on President Cleveland's message regarding Venezuela, says: "There is no doubt that the president wrote with an eye to the elections, but there is no going behind the unequivocal pronouncement in which he contemptuously brushes aside Lord Salisbury's quibbles. The next move in the game is England's, and it is a move on which much may depends. It is no exaggeration to say that a serious crisis is imminent, unless Lor Salisbury's stilted periods have been mere bluff, which is by no means improbable. The collection of Veuezuelan customs by British bluejackets, a worthy instance of Lord Salisbury's power, has been rudely postponed. The whole affair is discreditable to England. The manner in which Lord Salisbury will climb down will be watched with curiosity."

Gloat Over England's Dilemma.

Paris, Dec. 19. — The Republique Francaise, the Presse and the Coir, while they do not endorse President Cleveland's interpretation of the Monroeldoctrine, gloat over England's dilemma, and warn her that she need not look for any help from France.

BABY FROZEN TO DEATH.

A Pitiable Case of Destitution at Waverly, N. Y.

Patchogue, N. Y., Dec. 19.—A pitiable case of destitution is reported from Waverly, a place seven miles north of Patchogue. A family named Topping live there in an old house, which is badly in need of repair. They are very poor, and owing to the condition of the house and their inability to procure sufficient fuel they have suffered greatly since the cold weather set in. Their nearest neighbor lives half a mile away. Tuesday night the youngest member of the family, a baby four months old, named Edward, was frozen to death in bed. There were four children in the family, the eldest being six years of age. The mother left her home on Saturday last, saying that she was going to attend a lawsuit at Greenville, N. Y. Since then she has not been heard from, and it is supposed that she has deserted her family. The father and children slept on some bed clothing which was spread on the floor. There was no fire in the sleeping room and the small fire which they had managed to keep going in an adjoining room was not sufficient to keep them warm. The coroner will hold an inquest to-day on the body of the child.

A THIEF'S PECULIAR DEATH.

Accidentally Killed by an Elevator in a House He Had Broken Into.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—Hugh McCaull, a well-known thief, was accidentally killed yesterday while attempting to rob G. W. Hoof's commission house, 274 Water street, south. McCaull effected an entrance to the building by prying open a wire screen in a basement window leading into the elevator shaft. After getting inside McCaull accidentally pulled the rope which governed the cage and the latter descended rapidly, crushing him to death. His chest and back were horribly mangled and the body so tightly wedged against the shaft that it could not be moved. A portion of the elevator had to be cut away before the body could be removed.

Lieut. Prague Adjudged Insane.

Chicago, Dec. 19.—It is stated authoritatively in this city that a member of the court martial which recently sat at Fort Sheridan in the case of Lieut. Prague, charged with shooting at his superior officer, Col. Crofton, with intent to kill, said the verdict of the court martial was that the lieutenant was insane.

Accused of Arson.

Burlington, Vt., Dec. 19.—Fire yesday completely destroyed the New York Household store. Owing to several suspicious circumstances, the proprietor, Elmer Russell, was arrested on the charge of arson, and at a preliminary hearing was committed to jail awaiting his appearance in court today.

Watson Has Not Ordered a Yacht.

London, Dec. 19.—George L. Watson has informed the Yachting World that the rumor that the Hendersons of Glasgow had received an order for a yacht designed by him to compete for the America's cup is entirely unfounded.

England Will Not Cede Zeila.

London, Dec. 19.—The foreign office denies the report from Rome that England has agreed to cede Zeila, on the Somali coast, to Italy for a term of years.

ENGLAND IN A DILEMMA

Cleveland's Message a Hard Blow to Her Pride.

A Former Member of the French Senate Declares That Her Prestige Will Now Be Weakened in All Parts of the World—Ex-Premier Goblet's Views.

Paris, Dec. 19.—M. Lucien Milleveye, formerly a member of the chamber of deputies, has an article in La Patrie in which he says: "President Cleveland's message inflicts a harder blow on British pride than it has received in a century. It will diminish England's prestige in all parts of the world. England must undertake ultra-formidable adventure or bow to the Americans' haughty ultimatum. Since Napoleon threatened to invade England no chief of state has dared to use toward the British foreign office such firm language as that of Mr. Cleveland's. England is in a dilemma. Submission is equivalent to humiliation and resistence is equivalent to war, an implacable duel with all the energy and the moral and material forces which America has at its disposal, including the Irish whom England's iniquitous rule has exiled to the new world. Europe will not intervene. It would not dare to brave an American coalition roused to anger by an attack upon its dearest interest. The time is past when British diplomacy bribed half the world and intimidated the remainder. It is only audacious now with weaklings like the Matabeles; it will now know how to be prudent. England cannot count on any support."

Ex-Premier Goblet's Views.

The Paris representative of the United Press obtained an interview with ex-Premier Goblet, in which the ex-prime minister said, in reference to President Cleveland's message to the United States congress regarding the Venezuelan dispute, that he considered the president's pretensions absolutely novel in the annals of diplomacy. On the other hand, he expressed regret that England had refused to submit the boundary question to arbitration. "During my ministry," said M. Goblet, "France gave an example by submitting her dispute with Holland regarding French Guiana to the arbitration of Russia and accepting without hesitation the decision, which was adverse to her. As regards the Monroe doctrine, I can only say that it appears to be absolutely unacceptable to Europeans."

War Impossible.

The Temps has a two-column editorial on the message, which, it says, is the gravest document signed by an American president since President Lincoln's manifesto on the Trent incident. The question is whether Mr. Cleveland is merely twisting the lion's tail or is acting seriously. At any rate, his action is without diplomatic precedent unless such can be found in the annals of the arrogant Roman senate. England refuses arbitration, while the United States government declares that it will compel England to accept its judgment without appeal. It is impossible for an autonomus state, let alone a great power, to submit to such humiliation. Mr. Cleveland has been accused of restricting the meaning of the Monroe doctrine, but, in fact, he stretches it beyond measure. Monroe never imagined such action. Mr. Cleveland's claim of supreme authority over the whole hemisphere is a claim that is harmful to the proteges of the United States, as England and Europe will not bow to such a pretension. Arbitration has been greatly harmed in public opinion, yet war is impossible. The incident is one of the periodical outbursts that had a parallel in the Sackville-West affair. The paper says that it wishes and hopes that a pacific solution of the question at issue may be found.

Looks for Peaceful Settlement.

La Liberte says: "Peoples of the same race and origin are accustomed to using strong language without fighting. Doubtless the differences will be settled pacifically. If Lord Salisbury should pick up the glove so arrogantly thrown down England would be able to organize a military expedition in a few hours, while the United States is unprepared. The complication affords matter for reflection on the disadvantages of colonial expansion."

Like Playing with Fire.

Berlin, Dec. 19. — The Freisinnige Zeitung says President Cleveland's aggressive tone is hardly credible. It seems to serious politicians like playing with fire. The Freisinnige Zeitung concludes by expressing the hope that such a trifle as the dispute between Great Britain and the United States in relation to the Venezuela-Guiana boundary will not lead to war between the two first mentioned countries.

Sides with England.

Vienna, Dec. 19.—The Neue Freie Presse says that the indignation expressed in England over President Cleveland's message in regard to the Venezuelan controversy is abundantly justified.

B. & O. Earnings.

Baltimore, Dec. 19.—The earnings and expenses of the entire Baltimore & Ohio system for November were: Earnings, $2,041,828; expenses, $1,386,980, a net increase of $26,636 over November, 1894.

Jersey is up and ready in time of war as well as peace. The Veteran Zouaves, of Elizabeth, have telegraphed to President Cleveland their willingness to go where he commands.

The news that free whiskey is wanted by some and prohibition by others comes all the way from Alaska. Alaska is progressing rapidly towards civilization.

The Common Council of Trenton has decided to appoint a committee of citizens to investigate the accounts of the various city departments, on the charges of extravagance made by Councilman Baker. The officials asked for the investigation.

Resolutions have been presented in the City Council of Chicago providing for a three-cent fare for all street-car passengers not provided with seats and that no additional fare shall be charged in the case of a passenger who takes a seat subsequently vacated.

Editor Runyon yesterday stated that The Press stole the news of the granting of the orders to show cause in the Green brook pollution case from his sheet. The Press was on the streets at 4 o'clock with the account of the Chancellor's action, the facts of which were furnished to The Press by Borough Counsel Reed. So far as the publication of the other facts of how the evidence was gathered by William Pangborn, is concerned, The Press published these last Friday, or four days before The News. If this is not publishing ancient news, then in the name of swellheadness what is it? The Press does not find it necessary to flaunt its own qualities before its patrons to make them believe that it is the best newspaper in this city.

Characteristically, Editor Runyon devoted nearly half his editorial space in yesterday's sweat shop News to talking about himself. No one questions, Mr. Runyon, but that you are a wonderfully great man—in your own mind. Your attempts at making and breaking men with that double-barreled intellect of your is famous in Plainfield and where else you are known—Dunellen, Evona, Samptown and Ithaca. Nothing has ever happened in this city or contigous territory since you introduced sweat shop methods into newspaper production but what is conceded you were responsible for. The Press takes pleasure in acknowledging your greatness—for being little. Your influence was especially felt in the last municipal campaign, when your favorite candidates were buried under an avalanche of adverse ballots. It is hoped that every Plainfielder will doff their hat to Editor Runyon when they pass him on the public thoroughfare. He is the whole thing. He monopolizes all the swell-headedness. He is a great man.

TRADE MATTERS DISCUSSED.

Meeting of Master Plumbers From All Over New Jersey Held Yesterday.

A number of well-known plumbers of New Jersey gathered together last evening from 5 to 7 o'clock in Exempt Firemen's rooms, and considered important matters pertaining to the sanitary condition of the various cities and towns throughout the State, and remedies for the same.

Red Men Elect.

Last evening in the wigwam of Paugh-Caugh-Naugh-Sinque tribe one of the largest meetings of the season was held. Great Guard of Forest, Past Sachem Baker, of Hoboken, was present and gave a most delightful talk upon the principles of the order. Past Sachem Martinus, of Perth Amboy and Past Sachem Eastman, of Orinoco tribe of Virginia, also talked, after which the following officers were elected: Prophet, Chas. Conover; sachem, William J. Allen; junior sagamore, J. William Klein; senior sagamore, Charles Stevens; chief of records, C. M. Ulrich; collector of wampum, Thomas Osment; keeper of wampum, John H. Blimm; representative to great council, Chas. I. Young.

Iona Council Entertains.

The third anniversary and reception given by Iona Council, No. 14, D. of P., to their many friends in Red Men's Hall, last evening, was a pleasant affair. Fully 500 persons were present, the hall being crowded to its utmost capacity. Dancing was the main feature of the evening and was kept up until an early hour this morning to the strains from the "Old Veteran" Sam Frazee's orchestra. A supper was served at midnight and when all had done justice to the inner man dancing was again resumed. The committee who had the affair in charge were Mrs. C. Holstein, Mrs. H. Weigman, Mrs. W. A. Westphal, Mrs. Wm. Kline, and Miss Alice Sebring. D. Allen was the efficient floor manager of the evening.

Five men teams from the Crescent Wheelmen and the Y. M. C. A. will meet on the former alleys this evening.

The Roselle club and the Country Club broke even on the former's alleys last night. The first game resulted, Roselle 813, Country Club 700; second game, Roselle 760, Country Club 800. In the first game Graves, of Roselle, bowled a score of 222.

A week from Friday evening the postponed Central Journal League bowling game between the Crescents and E. A. C. will be rolled on the East Grand street alleys. The contest will be one for glory and both teams are getting into training. — Elizabeth Journal.

The Plainfield five-men bowling team went to Somerville last evening and bowled two games with the five-men team at that place. The Plainfielders made fairly good scores but were unable to win either one of the games. The second game, however, was more closely contested than the first, and the Somervilles came very near losing it. Below will be found the scores:

The Plainfield Catholic Club bowlers certainly have their eyes on the head pin, and in consequence they added another victory to the list in their contest against the Father Matthews T. A. B. bowlers, of Newark, in the two-ball Dioscean tournament. The men from Newark brought their best team and felt confident that they would win, until they reached the ninth frame, when they made so many breaks that all chance of winning vanished. Previous to that the score was close, and slightly in favor of the Newarkers. The home team rolled their usual even game, and nothing seemed to rattle them, as they piled up the totals. Good scores were made by both teams, but when it came to the wind up the home team was not to be lost. Reville and Lynch finished a tie of 170, and the former repeated his remarkable work of a week ago by making three strikes in succession, which of course set the cranks wild with delight. The score in full is as follows:

Some malicious person punctured the front tire on Frank Dencklau's new wheel on Tuesday while it was standing by a curb.

John Keefe, of the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company, will leave his present situation Saturday, and take a position with the Keer & Martin Cycle Company, of Newark.

Owen Fleming, of Park avenue, came to grief last Monday afternoon while riding on his wheel. He was carrying his skates and hockey stick when the latter caught in his rear wheel throwing him heavily. The handle bars were bent and several spokes smashed in the rear wheel.

A friend who has been visiting Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of Grandview avenue, went out bicycle riding on Mr. McKelvey's wheel Tuesday afternoon. He was riding along Park avenue, near the Revere House when he was run over by Dr. Endicott's carriage. The driver, who was alone, did not see him and, coming up from behind, the horse struck the wheel with its hoof, upsetting it. Luckily, neither the rider nor the wheel were seriously injured.

The Crescent Wheelmen met last evening and heard reports from the the secretary and treasurer. George O. Stevens, chairman of the committee that arranged the lecture given by Spencer Crane in the Y. M. C., made a report which was not as encouraging as the members had hoped for. It was stated that the minstrel show was progressing favorably. Plans for reducing the running expenses of the club were discussed, but nothing decided upon.

BASKET BALL.

The result of Tuesday's basket ball game at Brooklyn was 28 to 1 instead of 31 to 0 as previously announced.

New basket ball goals for the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium are in the course of construction. They will be of the regulation size and will be placed at regulation height.

The Y. M. C. A. basket ball team has received a challenge for a game from the Prospect Park Y. M. C. A., of Brooklyn. No action has been taken as yet on the challenge.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Alexander H. Leo, the Christian Athlete who is to speak to men at the Y. M. C. A. Hall next Sunday afternoon at 4:15, was elected captain of the college foot ball team when a Sophmore, although he did not accept the captaincy of the team until his senior year. He has also distinguished himself on the athletic field in sprinting and hurdling.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—The public debate on the money question between E. J. Whitehead and A. W. Lightbourne, will be held at the Westfield Club Hall next Friday night. Admission will be free. Mr. Lightbourne will argue for the gold standard and Mr. Whitehead for silver.

—Fairview avenue, Watchung Park, will next month have a lawyer for one of its residents, H. O. Hance having purchased of J. B. Mills the new house at No. 35 The people of that growing thoroughfare are very much pleased that Mr. Hance and family are so soon to become one of them.

—It is rumored in Morristown that the Erie Railroad contemplates extending its line to that place. The Caldwell road will be double tracked, and according to rumor an extension built from Caldwell across the upper Passaic Valley to Morristown. A representative of the road has been talking to business men in Morristown.

—Sheriff Serviss of Middlesex county has increased the number of daily meals from two to three at the county jail. This action was probably taken as a result of the agitation in the New Brunswick newspapers. Plans are being drawn up for the enlargement of the jail, which is now overcrowded. No alterations, however, will be made until spring.

THEATRICAL.

An audience that shouted and howled with merriment filled the Auditorium last night. "The Two Johns" with the original J. C. Stewart and Paul Dresser in the twin roles was presented with many new and up to-date jokes. The basis of the plot is the old stage favorite of mistaken identy, and this brings about many amusing situations in which the two heavy-weights figure largely. The company is fairly competent and includes a quartette whose excellent work was rewarded with encore after encore. If you desire a hearty, tingling laugh that will do you good like a medicine, go and see "The Two Johns" and their company in the funny antics at the Auditorium tonight, or tomorrow afternoon or evening. You will not regret going, take my word for it.—The Daily Union, Bridgeport, Conn. At Music Hall Saturday night.

The management at Stillman Music Hall announce the engagement of "Salambo & Clivette's New Wonders," a foreign organization of high class specialists, for Christmas, matinee and night. The matinee will not commence until 3 o'clock and every child attending for fifteen cents will receive a Christmas package of candy. The admission for adults for this performance will be only twenty-five cents, first come, first served. At night the regular prices will prevail. Laughter and merriment as well as astonishment is in store for the public. The acts of the Salambos, with their wonderful electrical apparatus, and the shadowgraphist funniments of the celebrated Clivette, being alone marvellous in their rendering. Other strong features by competent foreign artists constitute a rare treat for the holiday public.

Crescent Coterie Dance.

The third reception and dance of the Crescent Coterie was held in the Olympic last evening, and like the two preceding, it was a complete success in every particular. The programme was a general favorite and the music was excellent. The attendance was large and encouraging. About 12 o'clock refreshments were served after which the programme was continued. The following were in charge and deserve credit for the able manner in which the affair was conducted: Floor manager, W. V. Sutton; assistant floor manager, H. C. McVoy; reception committee, T. H. Kurzhals, Jr., N. H. Guttman.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following summons have been issued by Justice Newcorn: Boone against Johnson on contract, returnable January 3d; C. Sternberg against Kinsey on contract, returnable December 30th.

—The dramatic association of the Plainfield Catholic Club expect to give the comedy-drama "Confusion" at Music Hall January 16th.

GRIP IS EPIDEMIC.

Whole Families Stricken and Many Deaths Reported.

Nearly Every Tired Person Suffering With a Cold, Which Often Results in Grip, Pleurisy or Pneumonia.

Colds lead to coughs, coughs to grip, pneumonia and consumption; therefore, it is all important to check a cold before it reaches the lungs. Munyon's Cold Cure will positively break a cold inside of twenty-four hours if taken as soon as the cold manifests itself. When the cold reaches the lungs or bronchial tubes the Cough Cure should be used alternately every half hour with the Cold Cure. The Cold Cure is guaranteed to prevent pneumonia if used in the beginning of a cold. Pneumonia or inflamation of the lungs can be controlled by the use of these two cures.

The Cough Cure positively cures bronchitis, tickling in the throat, hoarseness, loss of voice, soreness of the chest, difficulty in breathing, hacking cough and all pulmonary diseases where the lungs are not too far decomposed or covered with tubercles.

If you are ailing step into the nearest drug store and get a 25c. vial of one of Munyon's Remedies. No matter what your disease, or how many doctors have failed to cure, it will give you relief.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randoloh, 143 W. Front st.

SENSE AND NON-SENSE IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Gifts really beautiful and useful show SENSE: Gifts of "Gew-Gaws" and trinkets show NON-SENSE, and, the more costly they are the worse they are. Can you choose a more sensible gift than a fine HAIR BRUSH; A SHAVING BRUSH; a HAND MIRROR? Or a more beautiful one than an Elegant CUT GLASS BOTTLE, empty or filled, as you please? Of such goods and their like we have a big stock at lowest prices, and, because of changes in styles, we are selling many fine articles at half the cost of manufacture.

ATTRACTED BY GOLD.

Coins and a Watch In a Man's Pocket Drew the Lightning.

An extraordinary case of lightning stroke fatality is reported from Shoeburyness, England. A man was walking along a footpath shaded by trees. As he was passing under the last tree of the row the lightning flash struck him. He was killed instantly.

No wound was apparent. The hair was singed short over the left side of the head. The left eyebrow and eyelashes and the left side of the mustache were practically gone. There were burns on the left cheek and over the abdomen. The burns were of various sizes and interrupted, the largest being about 1½ inches in diameter. Wherever the burns were made the epidermis was entirely destroyed and gone.

By contrast with these comparatively slight signs of the passage of the fatal current its effect on the clothing of the man was strangely fantastic. The hat was found to be in small shreds, but the coat and waistcoat were only slightly damaged.

A blue woolen jersey was almost uninjured. The gray flannel shirt was split in the same direction as the burns, and a merino undervest next the skin was split into the line of the burns two-thirds from above downward. The edges of the vest crumbled when handled, but were not charred black. There was a hole through the watch pocket. The trousers were split into long vertical ribbons in both legs, but more especially along the line of the burns. The right pocket was blown to shreds. Its contents, about 14 shillings in silver, were picked up at the time of removing the body.

In the left hand breast pocket of the deceased were found 37 sovereigns and 28 half sovereigns in a common leather, jaw opening purse, which had a metal rim and closed by two small knobs. Nearly all the coins were wrapped up in separate pieces of thin paper, and the purse was tied up in a handkerchief. In the waistcoat pocket on the right side was a silver matchbox containing two unignited wax matches, also a silver Geneva watch. Two of the half sovereigns were slightly fused and adhering together. One sovereign was partly fused on one side as though a splash of metal had been thrown on it.

Many of the gold coins and also many of the silver coins showed fusion of the milling of the edges only. The watch had a hole one-fourth of an inch in diameter through the outer case by the hinge, a splash of metal on the rim of the dome and another on the bow. The metal rim of the purse was fused inside, and the purse had a hole through one side of the leather.

There can be no doubt that the gold attracted the lightning. Had the deceased not been immediately under the tree his head would probably not have been struck first, but the gold would have received the discharge direct. The path of the current was through the head to the largest burn on the left chest—close to the heart's apex—then on to the gold in the inner breast pocket, thence to the right trousers pocket—containing the silver—touching the watch on its way and giving a slight radiation toward the matchbox.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

CANADIAN LEGISLATORS.

What a Stranger Might See From the Gallery of the House of Commons.

It is a mistake to think that the act which led to the confederation of the various provinces in 1867 has attained no higher meaning in the life of the Canadian people than that of a constitutional union. It carries with it a meaning of far deeper import—a union of hearts, whose offspring is oneness of patriotic aim and purpose. Of course it would be idle to say that the Canadian people are a unit upon all questions of vital interest to the life and growth of the Dominion. The geographical interests of Canada are so varied that there must necessarily be at times some friction and clashing of provincial needs and ambitions. This is the case at Washington. This is the case, too, in so small a confederation as the cantons of Switzerland.

A stranger visiting the gallery of the Canadian house of commons is struck with the dignity and decorum which mark the proceedings and surround even the warmest and keenest of debates. Parliamentary procedure being rigidly adhered to, there is little room for unseemly encounters, which usually grow out of uncalled for personalities in the heat of a discussion. Sometimes, however, when the house has been sitting for hours, wearied with the prolixities and incoherencies of some member from "way back," suddenly, as if through unity of desperation, the usual dignity of the house is relaxed, and grave members from such intellectual centers as Montreal and Toronto play the schoolboy and outvie one another in "shying" blue books at the heads of slumbering and inoffensive members.

Of the 215 members that make up the house of commons in point of ability and gifts 20 per cent of them are below mediocrity, 20 per cent occupy the plane of mediocrity, 40 per cent possess admitted ability and the remaining 20 per cent are men of commanding talent.—Donahoe's Magazine.

She Burned Her Hat.

An up town woman who leaves the gas in her room burning low all night because she is afraid in the dark met with a curious mishap last Sunday. When she returned from church Sunday morning, she laid her new fall hat across the top of the gas shade, as was her frequent custom, and went down to dinner. When she returned to her room, that hat was gone, while scattered around were blackened remnants of gayly colored ribbons and expensive straw. For some time she was at a loss to explain the disaster, but her attention was called to the little sickly flame still burning on the gas jet, which in the light of the morning she had forgotten to extinguish. The lesson might have been more potent had it not been for the ease with which her husband was induced to give up the price of a new hat.—Philadelphia Record.

He Had Time.

Mrs. Mann—Charles, you will have time today to see about getting some butter?

Mr. Mann—Really, don't see how I can. I've got so much to do today, you know.

Mrs. Mann—Oh, very well! I suppose I can go myself. And, by the way, if I am to go down town, you may as well give me $10 or so. I may as well do a little shopping while I am about it.

Mr. Mann—Come to think of it, I shan't be very busy today. I'll see about the butter.—Boston Transcript.

The Point of View.

Uncle—It is really awful that the young men nowadays contract so many debts.

Niece—I think it is a perfect blessing. Otherwise they would never think of getting married.—Fliegende Blatter.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans-continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

conditions
In some conditions the gain from the use of Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil is rapid. For this reason we put up a 50c. size, which is enough for an ordinary cough or cold or useful as a trial for babies and children.
In other conditions gain must be slow, sometimes almost imperceptible, health can't be built up in a day. For this Scott's Emulsion must be taken as nourishment, food rather than medicine, food prepared for tired and weak digestions.

NEARSIGHTED.

Mrs. Stanton was a little widow who thought herself inconsolable.

She was convinced that there never had been and that there never would be such another man as her late lamented husband. She believed that he had been created, raised to manhood and endowed with every amiable quality for the express purpose of completing her happiness, and now that he was gone she felt assured that her earthly felicity was over. She mourned for him so incessantly that her health broke down, and she was obliged to leave her home and seek restoration at a water cure.

It was a very small establishment in one of the eastern states, and it contained the usual complement of broken down ministers, men of business and spinsters, with a very few young epileptic, cataleptic or dyspeptic patients.

Among the latter was a certain Mr. Charles Weeks. He was about 24 or 25, rather tall and spare, yet well proportioned. He had regular features and a neat, dark mustache. He was not only nice looking, but his face was the index of a kindly disposition, and he had a very sweet smile.

These advantages were offset by two defects. He was very nearsighted, and he was desperately bashful.

This amiable young man had lately lost a beloved mother. He had been her idol, and she had been his friend and companion, and indeed had supplied him with all the society he was conscious of needing.

They had lived alone together for years, and when she was ill he had nursed her as tenderly as if he were her daughter. He was now mourning her loss very deeply.

Mrs. Stanton arrived at the water cure by a very late train; consequently she did not make her appearance in public until the next day at breakfast. She was then placed at the table at which Mr. Weeks was seated, but on the opposite side and farther down. Next to Weeks sat young Hardie, who, although a dyspeptic, broken down at college, was the life of the house. He was a merry, rollicking young fellow, with a good humored face and a sparkling black eye—indeed two of them.

When the little widow took her place, he nudged his companion and whispered: "Hello, Weeks, here is a newcomer! Very taking face—very. Seems to be an elderly lady. Must be a widow."

Weeks, in an agony lest the lady should overhear, glanced across the table, but could only see a blurred, indefinite, palish splotch, crowned by a white film, which he took to be a widow's cap, as indeed it was.

So he said, "I suppose she is."

* * * * * *

Mrs. Stanton spent her days as quietly as if she were in her own house. Here the formula was "water, water, nothing but water, hot, cold, externally, internally and eternally." The regular life, simple diet and bracing mountain air soon proved of great benefit to her. She was ordered by the good doctors to rest as much as possible out of doors on a cot. At other times she took as long walks as she could.

Now, young Mr. Weeks' bashfulness did not extend to elderly ladies, and when, a day or two after Mrs. Stanton's arrival, he found her sitting under a tree in the grove he recognized by her cap that she must be the widow lately arrived, and his natural politeness prompted him to stop and say, "The air is very fine today, madam."

As he uttered this commonplace, with his attractive smile, the lady could not help recognizing a well bred and kindly young gentleman, so she answered him with equal suavity and in a sweet and winning voice.

Mr. Weeks was sensitive to voices, and he honored all elderly ladies for his dear mother's sake. He told himself that Mrs. Stanton reminded him of her whom he had so tenderly loved, and almost before he knew it he had seated himself upon an opposite bench and was talking pleasantly.

At the end of half an hour, when the ringing of the treatment bell cut short their interview, he said to himself that he had not met so charming a person since his mother died. Mrs. Stanton's gentle voice and sympathetic manner and the spirit of kindliness which inspired all she said found a ready response in his own warm heart.

From that time they were frequently seen together. Sometimes he would meet her on her walks, when he would join her and often offer his arm to assist her over a rough part of the road. If they climbed a hill, he accommodated his pace to hers and begged her to lean upon him for support. They spent hours together in the grove. Weeks was a fine reader, though, as he would not wear glasses, he was obliged to hold his book so close to his face that it almost touched his nose. He used to read aloud while she lay in her hammock.

Thus their intimacy grew so gradually that there was nothing in it to alarm the most scrupulous little widow in the world. She told herself that, although she could never love again, she was glad that friendship was still possible to her. Besides she considered Mr. Weeks a mere boy and felt a motherly interest in him. His manner became more deferential as they advanced in intimacy. They discovered that their tastes were very congenial. In a word, they never bored each other.

* * * * * *

Under the influence of her pleasant surroundings Mrs. Stanton became resigned and cheerful.

One day as she was coming from her hammock to the house she saw Mr. Weeks stretched at full length on a bench under the trees. His handkerchief was bound over his eyes, and as she passed him softly she thought she heard a low groan.

"Are you suffering, Mr. Weeks?" she said. He answered that he had a bad nervous headache.

"Oh, I am so sorry," she said. "You must try to sleep it off."

Then a thought occurred to her. Her husband had been subject to such attacks, and she had frequently cured them. She had a magnetic touch, and she felt sure that she could charm away her friend's suffering, but still she hesitated. While she hesitated she heard him groan again. That decided her.

"If he were my young son or my brother," she said to herself, "I could not let him lie there suffering, and I believe I care for him almost as much as though he were. Why should I be silly and prudish?"

Finding no good answer to this question, she went back to her hammock and brought her own pillow. Then she gently raised Mr. Weeks' head and slipped the pillow under it. Seating herself on the bench, she made a few magnetic passes over the sufferer's forehead.

The effect of her soft, delightful touch was magical. The patient lay there, feeling his pain ebbing away, a delicious languor stole over him, and at last he slept. He had tried once or twice to express his gratitude, but she had gently forbidden him to talk.

When he at last awoke, some hours afterward, he found himself covered with Mrs. Stanton's shawl, but the lady had left him. As the remembrance of the light touch of her fingers came back to him he told himself that she was the dearest woman in the world.

"She is my sister or my adopted mother," he said.

But does one thrill at the touch of one's sister or one's adopted mother? Does one feel heavy and dull in her absence, but at rest and perfectly content in her presence? Does one feel that without the society of one's sister the whole world would be a blank? This was now the state of Mr. Weeks' affection for Mrs. Stanton. He never thought of her age. To him she was perfect in all respects.

* * * * * *

Next day something occurred that distressed our young friend very much. He found Mrs. Stanton in tears.

She was sitting on her favorite seat under the elm close to a purling brook, and the thrushes were singing breezily above her head. Her feet were half buried in the fronds of fern, and the air was soft and balmy. Yet her handkerchief was held to her eyes, and she was certainly weeping as if her heart would break.

Mr. Weeks remembered how kindly she had comforted him on the foregoing day, and he felt that he could not leave her to indulge in her sorrow alone. He must try to comfort her. She had an open letter in her hand, and he now came forward and asked her to tell him the cause of her trouble.

"Oh, Mr. Weeks," she said. "It is cowardly and wrong in me to give way so." She struggled to check her sobs and in a few moments became more composed. Then she said:

"I have just learned that my little fortune has been swept away."

She went on to explain that her business agent had persuaded her to allow him to make some investments for her that had resulted most disastrously, and that she was now almost penniless. The very small sum that might be saved would not suffice to keep her above want.

"I am only unnerved by this sudden news," she said, with a faint smile. "I shall soon be stronger and braver. I was a governess for one year before I married, and I shall go back to teaching. No doubt it will really be the best thing for me. What does it matter?"

Mr. Weeks was overcome with concern and pity. He could not bear the idea of his dearest friend entering upon such a life of drudgery.

"She is no longer young," he said to himself, "and it will be cruelly hard for her." He was silent a long time. He had an ample fortune and no one but himself to think of. When at last he spoke, it was to endeavor to persuade Mrs. Stanton to accept a loan, the half of his fortune, anything if only she would allow him to provide for her comfort. But she rejected all his generous offers firmly and gracefully.

"No," she said, "I could not possibly allow you to assist me, although I fully appreciate your great kindness. But there must be no inequality between friends, and I cannot be under so great an obligation to any one."

She persisted in saying that she must leave the cure soon and make arrangements for her future life as a teacher. At last he left her and went to take a long stroll by himself. He went to the top of a hill that they had often climbed together and then sat down to think. The idea of losing his friend filled him with alarm. As he pictured to himself what life would be without her, as he recalled all her sweet words and ways, something new seemed born in his heart.

It had only needed this last experience, this longing pity which made him yearn to comfort her, to enlighten his mind as to the real state of his feelings.

"I love her!" he cried aloud. "I cannot give her up."

And now the whole character of the man seemed to change. He was no longer the diffident, irresolute, shrinking young fellow that he had been. He was a man, with a man's strong will.

He sprang rapidly down the hill and returned to the cure. At last he reached the spot where the happiest hours of his life had been passed. Mrs. Stanton was still there. He went boldly up to her.

"Mrs. Stanton," he said as he seated himself by her and took her hand in his, "I cannot give you up. I love you with all my heart, and I cannot bear my life if you refuse me. I have come to beg you to be my wife."

Mrs. Stanton was bewildered and overcome. As she hesitated he burst out into a torrent of eloquence, telling her of his intense admiration and respectful love, how he would do his utmost to make her happy, and how blank and dark life would seem without her cheering presence. At first she tried to stop him. It seemed like sacrilege to her to listen again to words of love. But he was determined, and she was weak. She feebly interposed objections, but he swept them all away. She tried to say something about his pity for her destitute condition prompting him to make her this generous offer, but it was not possible for her really to believe her own words.

Genuine love was too apparent in the young man's earnestness, in every word and action.

"You have surprised me so," she said at last. "I must have time to think."

"Any length of time."

"Then give me a week to decide and please leave me now."

It was quite dark, but she sat a long time alone. She felt too bewildered to think. Overwhelmed with the excitement of the day, she began to cry softly again, yet not hopelessly as before, but at last with something like grateful peace forming itself out of the chaos of her mind.

* * * * * *

Two days after this Mr. Weeks walked down to the little village postoffice for his letters. There was but one for him. It was from an old friend. Among other matters of interest only to himself he read:

"By the way, old fellow, how are your eyes? There is a very famous oculist in this city who has performed wonders for people whose sight is affected. Why don't you run up and consult him? Don't you want to begin to see the world you live in?"

On his walk home this advice was constantly with him. He now had a new reason for wishing to overcome all defects. He told himself that he had never seen the face of the dear little woman whom he so loved. He did not even know the color of her eyes. She was to him a voice and a presence and a graceful outline—that was all.

Just here he was joined by young Hardie, who was taking his morning stroll. Thinking of the same subject, they naturally began to talk of Mrs. Stanton, and Hardie said:

"What a charming woman Mrs. Stanton is! She is looking ever so much better than she did when she came. I should not wonder if I had made a mistake in her age after all. It is so hard to tell a woman's age. She may not be more than 40. What do you think?"

"I have never thought about her age," said Weeks a little stiffly.

This casual remark of Hardie's decided him. He would see her. He knew she was charming, but he longed to see for himself. Next day he took the train for the city.

Punctually at 3:30 o'clock on the day appointed by Weeks for learning his fate a carriage drove up to the door of the water cure, and a young man wearing colored eyeglasses stepped out. He dismissed the driver and turned into the grove. With impatient footsteps he walked to Mrs. Stanton's favorite seat. Was she there? Some one was—but who was she?

He stopped in utter amazement. A lovely young woman, who might possibly be 25, but who did not look over 30, was seated upon the bench. Her eyes, which were raised to his, were a soft dark brown, her hair, wavy and luxuriant, was a beautiful shade of dark golden auburn. She was dressed in deep mourning; she wore no widow's cap. She rose hesitatingly as he approached.

"Can you tell me where Mrs. Stanton is, madam?" asked Mr. Weeks, wondering and trembling.

"Oh, Mr. Weeks, you don't know me!" answered a reproachful voice that made his heart leap.

Exactly how it happened they never knew, but the next moment Mrs. Stanton was in his arms.

After awhile he whispered to her, "You are not more lovely than I knew you were, but you are much younger."

"Well," she said, between tears and smiles, "that is a fault that I will do my best to outgrow, and in the meantime"——

"In the meantime," he interrupted, "we will be as happy a couple as ever lived in this happy old world."

And they were.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Setting the Clock Back

isn't saving time any more than going to a cheap place is saving money, because they charge less. Our business is the scientific cleaning and dyeing of clothes. We do this work for as little money as good, honest work can be done for. The money's worth isn't in how the clothes look when you first get them, it's in the wear of the dye, the goodness of the color, the careful cleaning that means keeping clean. Grease spots come back sometimes. That's the cheapness of it. They can be taken out and be made to stay out. That's our way our cheapness. Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

GUESTS OF THE COAL DEALERS

FIRST ANNUAL DINNER OF SUBSTANTIAL BUSINESS MEN.

A Dinner Followed by Many Bright and Philosophical Bemarks by Prominent Guests Who Sat Around the Board.

The spectre of a bloody war with Johnnie Bull, or the fact that we are twisting the lion's tail with such a twist that if the animal had horns the growth of them would be stunted by the operation, as is the commonly accepted theory of the tail twisting of recalcitrant cows in the rural localities, did not seem to phase the coal dealers the least bit last night. Solomon said eat, drink and make merry, and what this sage said was the slogan that was adopted by the coal men and their guests last night. War or any other international problem was relegated to the rear and Plainfield sociability was given the front seat at the Country Club Casino, where the event was held.

Shortly after 8 o'clock the host and the assembled guests set down to the tables and for two hours did nothing but eat and drink, and incidentally have a friendly chat with their nearest friend. After the last course had been served and cigars lighted, President John Thickstun, of the local dealers, who presided at the head of the table, arose and gazed at the guests in a fatherly manner, and then in a few words extended the greetings of the hosts to them. He remarked that he was not much qualified for speech-making, but this was really because he did not want to sing his own praises. He gazed down along the table and briefly told what each of the guests were capable of doing or had done, and as a starter called on W. H. Sieger, of Bethlehem, Pa. "What for?" asked the somewhat astonished man. "Why, a speech, of course," answered Mr. Thickstun, who, by the way, bears a close resemblance to ex-Governor Flower, of New York.

Mr. Sieger was not prepared for a speech and all that he could do was to beg apologies, and give voice to the fact that he was having a good time.

Mr. Balliett, of Philadelphia, line agent for Whitney & Kennever, who was introduced as the General Grant of the trade, disposed of his part of the remarks with a story and a bow.

Station Agent Joseph A. Haynes, of the Central railroad, was glad to be present, as the relations between the railroad company were always of the pleasantest, and he hoped to have the pleasure of again meeting the coal dealers as a body.

Mr. Loizeaux, who is to assume charge of Rheaume & Co.'s yard after January 1st, said that he trusted that this was but the beginning of an annual, genuine and happy greeting.

C. E. Smith, of Westfield, had a good speech before he came, but, unfortunately, it was gone, and he resumed his seat to hear what John D. Runyon had to say. Mr. Runyon said that there was one redeeming trait about a coal dealer and that was the fact that he had never heard that one had been hung.

C. E. Kelly, of New Market, felt like the Irishman who had fell from a high building and when asked by one of his brother workmen whether or not he was dead, he replied, "No, bedad, I'm not dade, but I'm spacheless." After this sally Mr. Kelly was also speechless.

E. H. Holmes arose and told of the trials and tribulations of the coal dealer, who, he said, was characterized by an unkind and unappreciative public and press as a coal baron. He wanted the guests to look into the faces of the dealers who were present and see if they did not look like an honest set of men. Everybody beamed an acquiesence.

Mayor Gilbert was next called upon. His Honor was in the best of humor and started off by telling a funny story, then got after the dealers and chaffed them in a good natured way. He said that one of the perquisities of the Mayor's office—and about the only one—was the receiving of invitations to attend events of this kind. But it was a good thing because it gave him the opportunity to make new acquaintances and friends and to exert influence in public measures when necessary. Speaking of Plainfield and to Plainfield people in particular, he said that they could be thankful that they were blessed with such an efficient and economical administration of city affairs. He could point with pride to the fact that all the improvements had been made without one cent of indebtedness, until the sewerage system was built. In the beginning the city started to pay as it went, and it was good policy. It was for the people to determine whether or not this condition of affairs would continue. City officials were subjected, he said, to a great deal of criticism, much of which was unfair and undeserved. In his mind he had an ideal city—city park, city hall, municipal control of water, lights, street railway, etc. But it was simply an ideal and it would probably never be realized in the present generation, but it was something to work up to. He closed by stating that if the coal dealers' dinner was to be made an annual affair he trusted that he would be accorded an annual invitation.

C. B. Conant, of Newark, Secretary of the New Jersey Coal Dealers Exchange, and H. S. Backman, of Roselle, each had a few words to say and then George Stevens, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., uncle of "our own George," was called upon to diffuse some of the humor for which he is famous from his many contributions to the funny press. Mr. Stevens was just bubbling over with funny remarks and the way coal dealers' jokes were rolled out was startling to behold and hear. He has a wonderful vocabulary, and his application of natural wit to the remarks made them of more than entertaining quality—they were absolutely ludicrious. He kept his hearers in constant laughter and was greeted with hearty applause on resuming his seat.

The speech making and the bottles having run dry, and the hour of midnight approached, the festivities were brought to an end by Mr. Sieger moving that the guests extend a vote of thanks to the dealers for the excellent time which they had provided. Of course it was carried.

The dinner was served by Max Wertz in his usual faultless manner.

The following were present: Mr. Truin and C. B. Conant, of Newark; H. S. Backman, Roselle; W. S. Sieger, Bethlehem; N. D. Cortright, Mauch Chunk; Mr. Bulhitt, Copley; Mayor Alex. Gilbert, J. A. Haynes, F. Hand, J. D. Runyon, H. O. Newman, A. Runyon, Mr. Loizeaux, DeWitt C. Ivins, W. Freeman, Geo. O. Stevens, George Stevens, Eugene VanCourt & Son, Chas. A. Smith, Chas. A. Smith, Jr., C. E. Kelly, J. A. Thickstun, John Blackford, E. H. Holmes, M. F. Elderton, W. W. St. John, F. A. Weber.

A GROWING ORDER.

Franklin Council Now Has Two Hundred Active Members.

Franklin Council, No. 41, J. O. U. A. M., is one of the most flourishing councils in the State, and is constantly increasing in membership. Last night there were about seventy-five members present who enjoyed witnessing the initiation of four candidates. One proposition was received and one member by card. The team work in this council is something the members should all feel proud of.

Next Thursday evening officers will be elected. State Vice-Councilor, A. J. Smith, of Newark was present last night and gave the members a strong address on the principles of the order. There were also remarks by brothers of Bound Brook, Fanwood, Dunellen and New Market.

Good Business Tact.

The shrewd business tact of J. Fred Mac Donald is evidenced in the manner in which he managed the assignment of Schepflin, Schultz & Co., the wholesale clothing firm. He has just consummated the sale of the store which they occupied on West Front street to Mrs. Christian Schepflin for $36,500. Real-estate men, who claimed to know the price at which the building ought to sell, stated that $30,000 would be a good price for it.

A Dangerous Practice.

It has become quite a habit among the youngsters of Plainfield to play marbles in the streets on their way to and from school. There have been several narrow escapes from horses and wheels and yesterday afternoon on West Fourth street three little boys, who were absorbed in a game of marbles, were very nearly run over by a passing wagon.

A Pleasant Surprise.

A surprise party was given to Hervey Morrison, of Watchung avenue, Wednerday evening by his mother. The evening passed very pleasantly with games and music. Refreshments were served toward the close of the evening. About fifty were present.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

MAY ESTABLISH A MISSION.

THAT IS THE POSSIBLE RESULT OF COL. HADLEY'S MEETINGS

Two Hundred Sign the Pledge to Try and Save One Man Each from Drink and Get Him to Live a Christian Life.

The people began to gather at Reform Hall last evening before seven o'clock. By half-past seven the hall was crowded, galleries included, and by eight, hundreds had been turned away for want of room.

The meeting was intensely interesting. The workers were at their best and the four representatives of the old Jerry McAuley Water Street Mission were listened to with rapt attention by the large audience, as they related the mistakes of their lives through drink and their restoration through accepting Christ as their Saviour. They were a fine looking lot of men, who had no appearance of the lives from which they had been rescued. Their names were 'Uncle Rube" Johnson, Mr. Day, "Doe" Sheppard and Mr. Rice as announced by Col. Hadley, who led the meeting in his usual vigorous and interesting style. Miss Wray sang and spoke, and Mr. Leo sang "Down in the Gilded Saloon."

About two hundred of the audience signed a pledge to try and save one slave to drink during the year 1896, and also bring them to Christianity and the church of their choice.

Tonight Miss Wray and Mr. Leo assisted by the converts of St. Bartholomew's Rescue Mission, of New York, will lead the meeting.

Col. Hadley will lead the meeting tomorrow evening and also the one on Sunday afternoon at 3:30. At the latter meeting he hopes to meet all true friends of rescue work. Further notice of these meetings will appear in tomorrow's issue.

Last evening William N. Runyon rendered 'Sowing the Tares When it Might Have Been Wheat." He will probably sing at the remaining services to be held.

Col. Hadley has advanced the idea of establishing a rescue mission in this city, and something more will be said on the subject before the meetings close.

A special invitation is extended to all for tonight's service.

UNCERTAINTIES OF LIFE.

Six Physicians, Two Nurses and a Minister Are the Examples.

Odd as it may seem, the awful uncertainities of this life are vividly illustrated in the good health which Mrs. Eugene A. Gross, of West Seventh street, now enjoys. Nineteen years ago she was stricken to her bed with a fit of sickness which became so serious that all hope of her surviving was given up by relatives and friends. During the six months that her life seemed to hang only by a thread of vitality, she was administered unto by six physicians,—Drs. Symmes, Budd, Parker, Barker, Peasely and Pettigrew. She was also attended by two nurses,—Mrs. Reynolds and Mrs. Stubb, and her condition at one time became so precarious that Rev. Mr. Trainor was called in to administer the last sacrement to her. Today all of these persons are dead and Mrs. Gross is enjoying remarkably good health.

It Really Needs It.

Street Commissioner R. A. Meeker informed a Daily Press reporter yesterday that as soon as the cold weather has passed and the frost gets entirely out of the ground it is the intention to tear up Park avenue and put it in a first-class condition, making it one of the finest avenues in the city. Other streets will also receive special attention.

To Organize a Debating Club.

A meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. building Saturday evening for the purpose of organizing a debating society. It is hoped that all interested in the new movement will be present.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

SUPERBLY RENDERED MUSIC.

THE CANTATA WAS A PAINSTAKING EFFORT BY THE CHORAL SOCIETY.

In Execution the Principals and Chorus Displayed Conscientious Study—Rendition of a Midsummer Night's Dream.

The Choral Society, under the careful training of E. J. Fitzhugh, has for so many years displayed such ambitious intent, painstaking effort and conscientious execution, even in minute detail, that the Plainfield public has learned to seek its concerts with pleased expectation.

The concert given last evening in Music Hall was a proof that the Plainfield public was justified in its anticipations. The Choral Society should have given an entire evening to each performance, however. Midsummer Night's Dream, rendered by Mr. Underhill last winter, gave great satisfaction, and the superb musical setting last night would have added a new attraction, but he was hurried and could not do full justice to himself in all the parts. The audience enjoyed Mr. Underhill's rendition of over twenty characters in monologue, and regretted deeply that flying time and a flying train to carry the baritone to keep an appointment at Boston, compelled the sudden stopping of Mr. Underhill before he had completed the last act.

Too much cannot be said in praise of the execution of the New York Philharmonic Society in their Mendelssohn accompaniment. It was so true, harmonious and masterly that one no more feared lack of melody than when birds sing and breezes play. The dainty, delicious music that gave sparkling dew drops, fairy dances and tripping of sprites and elves, was a thing not soon to be forgotten. The only bit of work done by the Choral Society in this part of the performance was the lullaby chorus accompanying the song of the fairies given by Miss Grenelli, soprano, and Miss Stein, contralto. The quality of Miss Grenelli's voice was such that it awakened a desire to hear her again. There was general regret that, with the loss of the last act by Mr. Underhill, there was involved the loss of the Wedding March by the orchestra.

In the second part of the programme in the cantata Arminius by Max Bruch, the Choral Society came out at its best and showed the firm quality of their work. In the precision of attack, force and accuracy, their singing is unequalled. The cantata is a soul-inspiring production, the music and sentiments thrilling the deepest chords of patriotism and love of freedom. We are told the copper statue of Arminius at the city of Detmold stands with the pedastal 180 feet in height, as high as a steeple. The cantata of Arminius has a position in music not unlike the statue—it stands high and clear in its exalted measures and lofty aspirations. All noble Germans must listen to Arminius with enthusiastic delight, and as the best chords in the heart of the German nation touch the best chords in the heart of every other nation. Arminius has music for the world. What Moses was to the Israelites, Arminius was to the Germans, and Tacitus says, "He lived seven and thirty years of life, twelve years of power." To interpret the spirit of an age when Germany was casting off the yoke of Rome, not Rome weak and feeble, but Rome in the zenith of its power, the music must be grand and soul stirring, representing the stately march of armies, the thunder of battle and the force that withstands oppression. The rchestra did fine execution in these interpretations and the Choral Society entered into the spirit of the music so heartily, that for the hour, they were all patriots warring for the Fatherland. Max Heinrich, the baritone, taking the part of the hero, Arminius, represented in his clear, full tones the power that incited the nation to throw off the "stranger's yoke." One of the finest passages was the duet of Max Heinrich, as Arminius, and J. H. McKinley, as Siegmund, and the chorus where the text is

"Free soars the eagle high in ether free breaks the fount from rocky shaft, and we dost think we'd e'er be slaves, for freedom reigns within our dwellings, Germania's sons are freemen."

Miss May Stein, as the Priestess, won great favor. Her contralto voice is pure and clear, with great compass. In the Battle when the orchestral accompaniment gave storm, thunder, lightning, ravens, corpses and carnage, the prayer of the Priestest to Wodan, the Lord of Battles, was so pathetic and powerful that a storm of applause from the audience testified their appreciation of her efforts.

J. H. McKinley's tenor voice is of fine quality and power and gave great force to Siegmund's cries of despair, curses and blissful death.

If the songs of a people influence the character of a nation, a debt of gratitude is due the Choral Society when they chant "A Solemn Song to Freedom, Our Prize and Our Treasure."

CHRISTMAS IN THE HIGH SCHOOL.

Special Exercises Held for the Students This Morning.

Christmas, with all its multitude of delights, is fast approaching, and the High School has felt its influence. The senior class spread of Wednesday night started the ball rolling, and yesterday afternoon the building was a scene of animation when the rooms were decorated for Christmas. The senior class looked after the main room and draped their colors, light green and white, about it while evergreens artistically arranged about the room added to the effect. The juniors took one of the classrooms on the third floor and the third class the other and decorated them with class colors and greens. The two divisions of the fourth class vied with each other in the arrangement of their rooms on the second floor

The special exercises this morning consisted of several vocal selections by the school, for which the music was furnished by the High School orchestra which is composed of Miss Mabel Maxson, Miss Bessie Cahoone, Miss Eva Noe, Lyman R. Allen, Walter Serrell and Lindley Hillman. Miss Raybert, '95, gave a very interesting reading, "The Convict's Christmas Eve," by Will Carleton. Superintendent Maxson then spoke a few words to the pupils complimenting them on the excellent work done during the year, especially in singing and the pleasant spirit shown by all. He closed by stating that the petition of the school had been granted and the Christmas vacation would last until Monday, January 6th instead of Thursday, January 2d.

TROUBLESOME ITALIANS.

A Gang of the Foreigners Are Not Wanted in the Borough.

On two or three occasions residents in the vicinity of the electric light station in the borough have had cause to complain about the disturbance made by a lot of Italians who live near by. They fill up on intoxicating liquor, and then make the night hideous with the most unearthly noise imaginable.

A few nights ago such a fracas occured, during which blows were struck. The neighbors was annoyed considerably, but no marshal was in sight and in consequence they had to wait till the Italians got tired of punching each other. The respectable people living at that point certainly deserve to be rid of such nuisances which are becoming so frequent.

On His Way to a Home.

An old soldier about seventy years of age, giving the name of Hamilton, was seized with a fainting spell in front of VanEmburgh & Son's dry goods store yesterday afternoon about 4:30. The ambulance was sent for and he was taken to the hospital. When he regained consciousness he said he had come from Albany and was going to Washington to enter the Soldiers' Home. He was kept at the hospital over night and this morning he started on his journey.

A Glee Club Coming.

The Daily Press in its issue of December 31st, 1894, says of the concert given here last winter by the Glee Club of the Brown University: "It was one of the most enjoyable musical events that a Plainfield audience has listened to this season. The audience was large and appreciative." The Brown Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Club will appear in Y. M. C. A. Hall under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. on Saturday evening, December 28th.

Officers to be Nominated.

Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P. will confer the third rank on three candidates in amplified form to night. Crescent Division Uniform Rank, will assist in the ceremonies and a cordial invitation is extended to all brother knights to present. The officers for the ensuing year will also be nominated and it is requested that a large attendance of the members be present.

An ex-Plainfielder's Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Anna Elizabeth Bunn, of Lamington, and Joseph Duy Hankinson, of Newark, formerly of this city, will take place at the home of the bride on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 2d, at three o'clock. Mr. Hankinson is well known in this city and a number of Plainfielders are invited to the wedding.

Noah Dove Elects.

At a regular meeting of Noah Dove Encampment, No. 28, I. O. O. F., last night the following officers were elected: C. P., F. M. Whitely; S. W., Frank H. Smith; H. P., Jacob Kettering; Rec. Scribe, Lewis R. Blackford; Fin. Scribe, John H. Williams; Treas., A. J. Woodruff; J. W., Alex Sargeant.

WILL FIGHT THE INJUNCTION.

NORTH AVENUE PROPERTY OWNERS WILL EMPLOY A LAWYER.

A Preliminary Meeting of the Interested Ones Held Last Night—A Committee to Report at the Meeting This Evening.

The contest over the sewer emptyiny into Green brook was until last evening a one-sided affair, but the North avenue property owners decided that it was time to bestir themselves and they met in the office of E. C. Mulford to consider the matter.

Ten of the twenty-four property owners, who were ordered to show cause why the injunction should not be issued, were present and discussed the question from its different sides. It was the opinion of most of those present that, with a good representative in court, the injunction would not be granted, as the pollution of North avenue would be worse than the present condition of Green brook. One of the interested parties remarked on the fact that a court never issued an injunction when there was any other remedy possible and he thought that, in this case, the remedy would come very soon in the shape of sewers. The pollution of Green brook, another stated, was a misdemeanor and should go before the Grand Jury instead of the Court of Chancery.

After considerable discussion Fred C. Lounsbury was appointed a committee to confer with Assemblyman-elect W. R. Codington, regarding the latter becoming the attorney of the property owners. He will report at the meeting which is to be held at the Board of Trade rooms tonight.

The borough authorities have been accused of being arbitrary in the matter of the Green brook sewer but Borough Counsel Reed, to a Daily Press reporter this morning, declared it to be utterly false.

"We have no desire to be unreasonable," he said, "if we get reasonable assurance that they will use the city sewers before even January 15th, we will postpone the hearing ourselves. If they will guarantee to go into the new sewers before that time they do not need to apply to a lawyer or the court but may come right here and get a stay."

Speaking of those on whom the notices were served, Mr. Reed said that several had already stated that they will disconnect from the sewer and connect with cesspools. The New Jersey Central has a contract with the city in which the latter agree to keep the large cesspool on North avenue clean. The railroad company said that they would cut off their connection with the Green brook sewer and use the cesspool alone but hold that their contract is perfectly legal and that the city is at fault and not the company.

Question of a Bell Tower.

The fact becomes more apparent every day that the borough needs a more suitable place for their fire apparatus. Their preseut quarters are much too crowded and entirely too small to meet the requirements, and when the work of erecting a bell tower near the engine house is completed there will still be less room. The Borough Council will meet tomorrow evening and the matter of building a tower for a bell will be discussed. It would not be a bad idea if they should discuss the question of how to secure more room.

A Social Afternoon.

The women of the Congregational church were very pleasantly entertained at the home of the pastor's wife, Mrs. C. L. Goodrich, on West Seventh street, yesterday afternoon. The women brought their fancy work and busied themselves with it while Rev. C. L. Goodrich made a few remarks. Mrs. M. E. Dwight then interested them with an account of her husband, and father, Rev. William Kirby, in the west. Dainty refreshments were served at the close.

Invaded By a Horse.

A horse attached to a buggy, without any apparent owner, walked about on the sidewalk in front of the Babcock building last evening about 5:30 o'clock. Constable Rockafellow, who was stationed near by, led the ambitious horse where he belonged. Its owner finally appeared and drove away.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it. Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

REFUSE TO SURRENDER

Turkish Charges Against Armenians at Zeitoun.

Alleged That the Rebels Slaughtered Their Military Prisoners, Murdered Women and Children and Burned and Plundered Many Mussulman Villages.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The Turkish legation has received from the sublime porte the following telegram: "You will please give the widest publicity to the following telegram sent to the minister of war by Gen. Moustafa Romsi Pasha: The leading men who were sent from Marash to give counsel to the insurgents at Zeitoun came to-day to see me and to state that the rebels resisted to the last to surrender, and that they slaughtered three days ago all the military men detained at Zeitoun with the exception of the colonel, the adjutant-general and the caimakam of this district. Col. Ali Bey, after having repulsed the insurgents, assembled at the village of Mukhal, situated at one hour's distance from Reitoun and opposite the point we have occupied before the town. To-morrow the town of Zeitoun will be surrounded on every side.

Many Depredations Alleged.

"The rebels committed within the last month all sorts of depredations They burned many Mussulman villages, plundered and robbed their belongings, cut the throats of Mussulman women and murdered young children. The fact that the rebels, besides their unparalleled atrocities, have also murdered their military prisoners, that they still persist in refusing to submit to the counsels given to them repeatedly and through many channels, and also that they increase day by day their bloody deeds, proves that they will stick to the end to their criminal rebellion."

BANK OFFICERS CONVICTED.

Verdict of the Jury in the Middletown National Bank Case.

Philadelphia, Dec. 20.—Charles W. Raymond, ex-president, and Edward M. Raymond, ex-cashier of the Middletown National bank, who were charged with misapplying funds, have been found guilty by a jury in the United States district court. Joseph F. Raymond, who was charged with aiding and abetting in the misapplication of the funds, was acquitted. The verdict of guilty against E. M. Raymond was accompanied by a recommendation of mercy. Judge Butler was not in court when the verdict was announced and sentence was postponed. The jury was out eight hours.

COMMERCIAL DAY.

Massachusetts Board of Trade Observes John Jay Centennial.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Yesterday was the centennial of the so-called John Jay commercial treaty with England. In commemoration of the anniversary, which mercantile organizations in the country have agreed to observe as "Commercial day," the executive council of the Massachusetts state board of trade gave a luncheon at the Parker house at 1 o'clock, at which Hon. William M. Everett of Quincy and president Jerome Jones of the Boston Commercial club were guests.

THE CHINESE-RUSSIAN TREATY.

A Winter Port Alleged To Have Been Secured by the Latter.

Yokohama, Dec. 20.—The Nichi-Nichi confirms the report that China has offered Chau-Som bay to Russia as winter station. Advices received here from Vladivostock say that the secret treaty between Russia and China is an accomplished fact, and that a survey of the proposed railway from Siberia through Manchuria has been ordered.

EARTHQAKES IN HAWAII.

Thought That Volcano of Maunalea May Become Active.

San Francisco, Dec. 20.—The United Press correspondent at Honolulu writes per steamer Alameda, that the island of Hawaii was shaken by a number of earthquake shocks on Dec. 8 and 9. It is believed the volcano of Maunalea is about to become active again. It is nine years since the last eruption and another is fully due.

Housatonic River Blocked by Ice.

Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 20.—Navigation on the Housatonic river is still closed on account of the ice. Huge cakes wedged together make navigation impossible. A number of barges containing coal and lumber are at anchor in this harbor waiting for an opening at the Stratford approach. The ice is about five inches in thickness.

Fitzsimmons To Begin Training.

El Paso, Tex., Dec. 29.—It is now fairly certain that the Fitzsimmons-Maher fight will come off, at least as far as Bob Fitzsimmons is concerned. He will be here to-morrow night, and has secured quarters near Dr. Alexander's hacienda at Juarez, Mexico, where he will at once go into active training.

Troy Steel Company Incorporated.

Albany, Dec. 20.—The Troy Steel company was incorporated with a capital of $2,500,000, to manufacture iron and steel articles. mine iron ore, manufacture coke, etc.

Internal Revenue Collections.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The collections of internal revenue for the past five months aggregate $64,423,418.

THE CONNECTICUT TROLLEYS.

Rights of Adjacent Landowners to Damages.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 20.—In the superior court of Hartford county, Judge Ralph Wheeler has handed down a decision in which he says that a real estate owner claiming damages against a trolley company must prove unreasonable occupation of land by such corporation and must prove also for himself special and not general damages. Should this case be appealed it will raise in the supreme court of the state the whole question of the right of adjacent landowners to compensation from trolley companies. The same question is to be raised soon in the superior court of this county in a case of the New Haven Steam Railroad company against the Fairhaven & Westville Trolley company, but Judge Wheeler's decision apparently anticipates it and is the first ruling on the subject in a lower court of the state.

SAVED CHILDREN'S LIVES.

They and Their Rescuer Had a Narrow Escape from Death.

Elizabeth, N J., Dec. 20.—A fire broke out in a three-story tenement on Pearl street. It was caused by a coal falling from a stove in the third floor in a room occupied by Mollie Bierman. She had left her son and daughter, 5 and 6 years respectively, in the room. William Williams rushed to the room and found the little ones huddled in a corner with the flames leaping about them. Williams was forced out by the heat and smoke, but went back with a blanket over his head, which he wrapped about the children and by crawling and dragging them on the floor saved their lives. He and the children were singed. The upper part of the house was destroyed. The damwas $2,000.

THE MOTORMAN KILLED.

Trolley Cars in a Collision on a Steep Hill in New Jersey.

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 20.—During the heavy fog yesterday two cars of the New Jersey Electric railway company dashed into each other at the foot of the steep hill at Lakeview. Motorman Murray of one of the cars was killed and conductor George A. Jackson was seriously hurt. Both cars were badly smashed by the collision.

CONVICTED OF BIGAMY.

Bank Clerk Had Two Wives and Was Prosecuted by No. 2.

New York, Dec. 00.—Harry Martin, a bank clerk, who lives at Flushing, L. I., pleaded guilty of bigamy yesterday and was remanded for sentence. Two weeks ago his second wife discovered that he had another wife living in this city with a 15-year old daughter, and she at once began the prosecution.

MONTGOMERY GUILTY.

The Triple Murderer Convicted at Albany, Ore.

Albany, Ore., Dec, 20.—The jury in the trial of Lloyd Montgomery, the 18-year-old boy charged with the murder of his father and mother and Daniel McKeercher, near Brownsville, has returned a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree.

Hill's Resolution Endorsed.

Richmond, Va., Dec. 20.—The senate has adopted an amendment to the resolution passed Wednesday upholding President Cleveland in his message in regard to the Venezuelan question, recommending that the statute which prohibits any person who served in the confederate army from holding a commission in the United States army should be repealed.

Justice of the Peace Kills Himself.

Saratoga, N. Y., Dec. 20.—Justice of the peace John F. Sullivan was found dead yesterday with a bullet in his brain on Cherry street. A revolver at his side told the story of suicide. He had been despondent for some time. He leaves a widow and two children.

Murderers' Sentences Commuted.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 20.—Gov. Hastings has commuted the death sentences of Wm. Weber of Berks county and Frank Bezek of Lackawanna county to life imprisonment upon the recommendation of the board of pardons.

MAY DECIDE TO-DAY

Senators Discuss the Venezuela Commission Bill.

Mr. Teller Declares That We Would Have European Allies in the Event of a War with Great Britain—Other Speeches of a More Pacific Character.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The discussion in the senate on the house bill appropriating $100,000 for the expenses of the proposed Venezuelan commission was marked by a unanimity of sentiment in favor of the position taken by the president in his recent message and was singularly free from passion and excitement. The debate proceeded by unanimous consent, as there was really no question before the senate, objection having been made to the second reading of the bill and that objection carrying the bill over till to-day. The debate was opened by Mr. Morgan, dem., Ala., who favored the passage of the bill just as it came from the house and would vote for its reference to the committee on foreign affairs only on the condition that it would be reported back and acted on to-day. The only other senator who favored immediate action on the bill without its being considered by the committee was Mr. Voorhees, dem., Ind., and his was the only speech which breathed war and defiance. He declared, emphatically, that Great Britain could not go to war with the United States so long as Canada was a hostage on our northern border. Speeches were made, moderate in tone and against hasty action, by Senator Sherman, rep., O.; Lodge, rep., Mass.; Hawley, rep., Conn., and Teller, rep., Col.

Would Have European Allies.

Mr. Teller's speech was remarkable for the declaration that if war should ensue—which he deprecated and did not think probable—the United States would not be without European allies, and he specified Russia particularly was waiting to seize the opportunity of opening the Dardenelles to her fleet, extending her domination over China, and enlarging her possessions in India. At the close of the debate Mr. Morgan gave notice that there would be meeting of the committee on foreign relations to-day, when other resolutions embodying the principles of the house bill, and which have been heretofore referred to that committee, would be taken up, so that a report could be made and action had this afternoon.

May Be No Holiday Recess.

The house bill will have its second reading as soon as the journal is read, and then the motion of which Mr. Sherman gave notice to refer it to the committee on foreign relations may be made. It is not at all likely that that motion will meet any opposition; but whether the bill can be considered in committee, reported to the senate and there acted upon before adjournment to-day is very problematical. If not, the joint resolution for the holiday recess may fail.

GREAT ROWING RACES.

Poughkeepsie May Become the Scene of All Contests Next Year.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 30.—There is some prospect that Poughkeepsie may become the scene of all the great rowing races of the country next summer. Not only are all the colleges that support eight-oared crews talking of rowing here by twos and threes and fives, but the National Rowing association which holds its regattas on Saratoga lake generally has been looking over the Poughkeepsie course. The secretary of the association was here yesterday and met some of the members of Apokeepsing Boat club and inspected the course. The association regatta will come here if money can be raised to put up their boathouses. Columbia is ready to come and lease land and build her own boathouse for permanent headquarters. At any rate all the rowing men acknowledge the superiority of the course over all others in natural advantages.

CRETE WAR FEARED.

Reinforcements for the Island Are Earnestly Requested.

Constantinople, Dec. 20.—It is feared that there will be a general uprising on the island of Crete. The governor of that island has made an urgent request for reinforcements.

Philadelphia's Traction Strike.

Philadelphia, Dec. 20.—Only a few disturbances of a comparatively trivial character marked the third day of the strike of the employes of the Union Traction company, and on several of its lines the company succeeded in effecting a partial resumption of its interrupted traffic. Such cars as were run, however, were heavily guarded by police.

KILLED FOUR PEOPLE

Harry Hayward's Confession Made Public.

Murdered a Chinaman in San Francisco and Then Killed a Woman for Her Money—A Brother of a Girl He Was Courting Another Victim—Laid All To Gambling.

Minneapolis, Dec. 20.—Harry Hayward's ante-mortem statement, dictated to a stenographer the night before his execution, and just made public, contains his confessions of the Ging murder and also the information that he committed three murders before that crime. Hayward stated in his confession that he never got into trouble until he began to gamble. This lead him to form the acquaintance of counterfeiters, with whom he associated for some time, but he never used much of the counterfeit money, it was too risky. The confession reads in part:

Killed a Chinaman and a Woman.

"The first murder I committed was in San Francisco in the latter part of 1893. I was playing with a Chinaman for small stakes and the Celestial was cheating me. I jumped up and told him that I had found him out, and he came at me with a knife. I pulled the heavy chair from under me, but I could not get a good swing to strike him, so I poked the leg at him and struck him in the face. He fell, and then I punched the leg into his eye and it crashed right into the skull and he lay still. After that I dug a hole in the place under the floor in the shed, broke up the chair and buried it with the body there. I never had any trouble from it, although the papers made a report of the finding of the body. After beginning, I rather liked the excitement. Then luck followed me and I went from there to Pasadena. I had formed the acquaintance of a likely girl, a regular adventuress. I was a little pressed for money and the girl had saved $500. I had her pat, but I could not get the cash except by pretending I had an investment for her that was a money-maker. She turned over the money and I took her out riding, shot her and buried the body. She was not very well known and was never missed. I never heard of that matter from that day to this.

His Third Murder.

"The last trouble before this was at El Paso del Norte. I was mixed up with a girl there, and we used to paint things once in a while. One night her brother caught us together in my room. He was crazy and came at me with a knife. I tried to beat him off with a chair, and the girl cried to me to shoot him or he would kill me. I fired at him and struck him in the shoulder, and he dropped the knife and the girl picked it up. He was quiet enough after that and I took him to a drug store and had his wound dressed. He made up a story of how it happened to ward off suspicion. I left there and found afterward that he died from blood poisoning from the wound.

His Acquaintance with Miss Ging.

"I was introduced to Kate Ging in January, 1894. That was a time when I had been suffering pretty heavy losses. It was about April 1 before I was well acquainted with her, and then I set out to get her money. I secured about $5,000 from her. That was right about my playing bank with her and a partner and that Chicago business. I did not lose the money there and did not intend to. I never took any notes nor gave any up to the time when we fixed up that last scheme. I hypnotized her and played her right. She was a good business woman, but she was not highly educated, and yet wanted to pretend that she understood things readily. In that way I could work on her only through mystery. I played the noble racket with her and said that, even though I was a wild devil, I would do her no wrong for the world." The confession then relates that Hayward had the mill at Hamil burned, and that he collected the insurance. He proposed to Adry to help him murder Miss Ging, but dropped him because he was too "white livered." Then follows the details of placing $10,000 insurance on Miss Ging's life, how they arranged for flashing money in restaurants, visiting fortune tellers, paying over $7,000 to her, of which $5,000 was counterfeit, turning over the policies, etc.

Blixt Anxious for Murder.

Hayward then relates how he hypnotized Blixt and interested him in the plot to murder Miss Ging, but he alleged that Blixt was eager to commit the crime. Hayward took Miss Ging out riding on two occasions, showing her on the first drive a house where, he told her, counterfeit money could be secured. These drives were taken on the Saturday and Sunday nights preceding the murder, Miss Ging taking the buckskin horse on each occasion and meeting Hayward near the West hotel. He intended to "smash her head" with a T rail on each occasion, but found no suitable place in which to commit the murder. The last time he saw her was at 11 o'clock on the morning of the murder. The rest of the confession gives an account of the murder and concludes with the evidence that came out at the trial.

Married To Keep Out of Jail.

Hackensack, N. J., Dec. 20.—Paul Mack, the 17-year-old son of Goetlieb Mark of Peetzburg, who was charged by Miss Katie O'Mara of Etna with betrayal and found guilty, has been married to her. Mack's father, who had refused his son assistance, broke down when he saw his boy about to go to jail, and advised the marriage.

THE POPE'S ENVOY HERE.

He Will Assist in Investing Mgr. Satolli with His New Dignity.

New York, Dec. 20.—Marquis Benedetto Sacripanti, the member of the Noble guard who was commissioned by the pope as his envoy to bring to this country the insignia of office and briefs for the elevation of Mgr. Francis Satolli to the cardinalate, arrived in this country yesterday on the North German Lloyd steamship Fulda. The marquis was one of the first to disembark from the vessel. He was met by Major John D. Kelley, city treasurer of Brooklyn, who represented Cardinal Gibbons, and by the Rev. Dr. Frederick B. Rooker, secretary of the apostolic delegation. Marquis Sacripanti is a tall, fine-looking man, probably not more than 40 years of age. He was dressed in the conventional garb of a Roman Catholic priest. After the marquis' baggage had been passed the party entered a carriage and drove to the Barclay street ferry. From this city the marquis will go at once to Washington, where he will be the guest of Mgr. Satolli. After recovering from the fatigue of the journey the marquis will go to Baltimore and be presented to Cardinal Gibbons, whose associate he will be in the ceremony of investing the papal delegate with his new dignity on the first Sunday in January at the Baltimore cathedral.

NO OFFICIAL CALL.

But Rev. Dr. Savage May Become a New York Pastor.

Boston, Dec. 20.—Regarding the dispatch from New York last evening which stated that Rev. Dr. Minot J. Savage had been extended a call to become assistant pastor of the Church of the Messiah (Unitarian) in that city, to act in conjunction with the pastor, Dr. Collyer, Mr. Savage states that although he has received no official call, he has received a telegram from a friend in New York, stating the action of the church. Mr. Savage declined to discuss the situation, and said he would have nothing to say for at least a week, and possibly two weeks.

MAY BE ANOTHER SCANDAL.

73,000 Silver Dollars of Apparently Unauthorized Coinage Found.

San Francisco, Dec. 20.—The Call states that Nevada is threatened with another mint scandal. The state board of examiners has discovered 73,000 bright new silver dollars in the state treasury, all of which bear the date of 1893, and have the appearance of being fresh from the United States mint. The coinage of standard dollars at the Carson mint was always limited and was wholly suspended early in 1893, and it is asserted that no such amount as $73,000 was legally coined in that year.

LAMBERT HANGED.

The Camden Murderer Pays the Penalty of His Crime.

Camden, N. J., Dec. 20.—Theodore Lambert was hanged in the jail here yesterday. It was fourteen minutes after the trap was sprung before he was pronounced dead. His crime was the murder on December 4, 1893, of William G. Kaiser, a wealthy baker, of Camden. The murder was the result of attempted burglary. He was sentenced to be hanged on December 13, 1894, but execution had been delayed by a series of otherwise fruitless appeals to state and federal courts.

ACCEPTANCE ASSURED.

Pneumatic Dynamite Guns Fulfill All the Requirements.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Gen. Flagler, chief of ordnance, United States army, has received the official report on the acceptance test of the three pneumatic dynamite guns recently at San Francisco. The report shows that the guns fulfilled all requirements and in some cases exceeded them, so that acceptance is assured. The contractor for the guns was the Pneumatic Torpedo & Construction company of New York.

NEW TRANSATLANTIC CABLE.

French Budget Committee Confirms the Arrangements for the Line.

Paris, Dec. 20.—The budget committee has confirmed the arrangements for the new submarine cable from Brest to New York.

St. Louis Is Piggish.

St. Louis, Dec. 20.—The politico-business element of St. Louis, flushed with their recent success in securing the republican national convention, now proposes capturing the democratic convention as well. Representative Oobb of St. Louis will leave to-day to attend the meeting of the Business Men's association on Monday next, which will appoint a committee to confer with the national committee in the effort to secure the convention.

Anti-Saloon League Convention.

Washington, Dec. 20.—The National Anti-Saloon league convention closed yesterday. The committee on resolutions made a report, which was adopted, declaring "unceasing warfare against this great evil," and calling upon ministers and churches of all denominations to unite with them for the utter destruction of the saloon business.

Theatrical Company Stranded.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 20.—Williams & Harlan's "Gay Masqueraders" burlesque troupe is stranded here. Williams has been deserted by his partner. Few of the company have funds enough to take them out of town.

Formed a National Organization.

Pittsburg, Dec. 20.—The manufacturers of plumbers' brass goods of the country formed a national organization in Pittsburg yesterday. The organization is not called a trust by the persons present.

VENEZUELA REJOICES

President Crespo Grateful for Our Protection.

He Is Writing a Personal Letter of Thanks to President Cleveland for His Action on the Boundary Dispute—Outburst of Enthusiasm in Caracas.

New York, Dec. 20.—The correspondent of the New York Herald at Caracas, the capital of Venezuela, cables that he had an interview with President Crespo concerning the message to congress on the Venezuelan bounday dispute from President Cleveland, during which he expressed himself as very highly pleased at the attitude taken by President Cleveland on the question, and said that the safety of Venezuela was assured now that it had the friendship and protection of the "great, glorious and unconquerable northern republic." He said that the entire nation was enthusiastically alive to the importance of the step taken by President Cleveland and also deeply grateful for the interest taken by the powerful republic of the north in the affairs of her weaker sister. He says he is now engaged in preparing a personal letter to President Cleveland conveying to him his deep sense of the obligation under which he was now placed. The receipt of the news of the action of President Cleveland was marked by a wonderful outburst of enthusiasm on the part of the inhabitants of Caracas. Thousands of the people marched to the monument of Washington in one of the principal squares of the city, where patriotic speeches and addresses eulogistic of the United States were delivered. Then some of the women began placing bouquets upon the statue, and in a very short time it resembled a bed of roses. The citizens then proceeded to the United States legation, where a serenade and a grand reception was tendered to the United States minister. The American flag was enthusiastically cheered. A committee of prominent citizens is preparing for a grand ball to be tendered to the United States minister on Jan. 1.

German Press Views.

Berlen, Dec. 20.—The Kreuz Zeitung says regarding President Cleveland's Venezuelan message: "England must remember that the time has gone by when the growl of the lion sufficed to secure advantages where it had no rights." The Vossische Zeitung says: "This time it is a case of honor for the European states to stand by England's side, else Yankeedom will believe it has but to command, the old continent to obey."

Blood Thicker Than Water.

Paris, Dec. 20.—The Temps says that the possibility of a war between Great Britain and the United States controverts the proverb that "blood is thicker than water," and pricks the bubble of a gigantic Anglo-Saxon federation. It adds that the violence of American politicians is laughable, although the matter becomes grave when it is remembered that the excitement is echoed in England.

Englishmen Not Excited.

London, Dec. 20.—Lord Salisbury did not come to London yesterday. Business at the government offices went on as usual, and there was no bustle or excitement. It is the opinion in official quarters that there will be no developments in the Venezuela matter until the Christmas holidays are over. It is also thought that the government will not act in any way until it receives a formal intimation of the appointment of the American commission.

Unexpected Way of Escape.

London, Dec. 20.—The Morning Post to-day says: "There seems little doubt that the commission will hold an inquiry, in which event an unexpected way of escape may be provided for President Cleveland." The Post expresses surprise that Mr. Cleveland accepted the Venezuelan version of the case without an inquiry, and says it believes that an examination would have saved him from skating on ice that must give way on the least pressure. The paper contends that Venezuela will be desired to prove her claims before the commission, which, she being unable to do so, will make the proceedings of the commission brief. Mr. Cleveland will thus be enabled to withdraw from an untenable position.

WEATHER BUREAU'S WARNINGS.

385 Vessels Have Been Detained in Port by Them.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Prof. Moore, chief of the weather bureau, has just issued a storm bulletin covering the Atlantic coast storms on December 9-12 and 12-15. The violence of these storms is shown by the following rates of velocity of the wind occuring within these dates, viz.: sixty miles an hour at Hatteras; sixty-eight at Block island; fifty-six at Nantucket, and sixty-eight at Kittyhawk. A total of 385 vessels, from ocean steamers to fishing smacks, valued with their cargoes at nearly $7,500,000, seem to have been detained in port by the weather bureau storm warnings.

A Call for Orangemen.

Belfast, Dec. 20.—A newspaper here prints a suggestion that the Orangemen volunteer their services in the event of a war with the United States to enable them to have a chance of meeting the proposed Irish-American army.

Andrade Thanks Olney.

Washington, Dec. 20.—Senor Andrade, Venezuelan minister, thanked Secretary Olney for our action on the boundary dispute.

Among the bills introduced in the House of Representatives is one by Congressman Sulzer, of New York, providing for the election of United States Senators by a direct vote of the people.

A clergyman in Connecticut, and another in New Jersey, have been brought under prosecution for slander. We do not know anything as to their guilt. But a minister has no more right than any other man to make accusations in a public assembly which he is unable to sustain in a court of law.—Sun.

Judge Pardee of the United States Circuit Court at New Orleans has rendered a decision in two test cases brought under the sugar bounty appropriation act, holding that the act is constitutional and that therefore the $5,000,000 appropriated by Congress to pay sugar bounty claims is illegally withheld by Comptroller Bowler, and should be distributed pro rata among those for whom it was intended. Judge Pardee said that Cougress was the exclusive judge of the purposes to which money shall be applied, and after it had passed such an appropriation no court or officer had power to revise its action. The cases will immediately be taken to the Supreme Court of the United States.

Miss Cora Applegate, of San Francisco, will spend the winter months with relatives at West Dunellen.

Don't forget the sociable to be held this evening in the parlors of the Presbyterian church, at which Prof. Bausch, of Brooklyn, will entertain.

An Honor.

Edward T. Bowman, of West Front street, and a past officer of Goodwill Lodge, No. 301, K. of P., of Scotch Plains, has been selected for the post of Deputy Grand Chancellor for this district, to succeed the present Deputy, James Patterson, of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., whose term expires, on the meeting of the Grand Lodge in Trenten, February, 1896.

Listen to This.

If you want sure relief from that annual mystery—
"What shall I get for my loved one this year?"
You needn't assemble your household consistory
Nor ask all the Solons that chance to appear;
But just go to Collier's and see the luxurious
Fancies in silver and gold, and the curious
Novelties—dainty, delectable, durable,
Yet to the slenderest purses procurable—
And you'll say, if your wonderment strike you not dumb—
"Of fine Christmas gifts here's the positive sum."

A Skating Accident.

Robert Tilney, of West Eighth street, has recovered from a serious accident. While trying to skate backwards on Ohl's pond last week his feet slipped out from under him and he struck on his face, badly cutting his lip.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Louis Chase, of East Front street, is home from his studies at Yale.

Israel Lewis, of Somerset street, has retired from the butcher business.

Rev. Mr. Brower, of Coontown, was the guest of Plainfield friends today.

Stephen Rushmore, of Park avenue, returns today from Amherst College.

Charles Brower, the prominent Park avenue horseman, is very ill at his home.

Miss Havens, of New York, is a welcome visitor among Plainfield friends.

George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, returned home yesterday from Lehigh University.

Wm. A. Woodruff, the insurance agent, went to Flemington yesterday on business.

Miss Kate Opdyke, of Somerville, is visiting her sister, Mrs. H. H. Brokaw, of Duer street.

Thaddeus Doane is spending the Christmas holidays at his home on West Fifth street.

Mr. Vroom, of Madison, returned home yesterday after a visit with Plainfield relatives.

OPEN EVENINGS.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—New invoice of latest collars at the haberdasher, H. M. Jaquett.

—A special meeting of the Borough Council will be held Saturday evening at 7:30.

—The chemical engine for the city is expected to arrive about the first of January.

—The members of the W. C. T. U. held a very interesting and helpful prayer service yesterday afternoon.

—The city was awakened. Harry M. Jaquett dropped 10 per cent. in the price of all winter clothing last Saturday.

—The Guinee Club met Wednesday evening, but adjourned for one week on account of the absence of so many members.

—The Christmas vacation of the students at Leal's School has been extended from Friday until Monday, January 2d.

—The question as to where the business of delinquent taxes will be placed next year is agitating the minds of some people.

—Don't forget that unless you pay your taxes today your name is liable to get into print in consequence. This is the last day.

—Christmas this year will be celebrated in an elaborate manner, as usual, at the East Third Street Mission, and plans for it are nearly completed.

—Twilight Council, J. O. U. A. M., of Scotch Plains, will hold an entertainment and dance this evening in Excelsior Hall. Representatives of the Plainfield councils will attend.

—Neuman Brothers' special sale of choice table apples, oranges, grapes, grape fruit, bananas, figs, table raisins, extra quality nuts of all varieties; new mixed nuts, 2 pounds for 25 cents. 2

—If you are in doubt as to what kind of a Christmas present you want to make visit Leggett's drug store and he will help you to decide the question. His line of perfumes, toilet articles and atomizers are unexcelled.

—Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Starr, of Mercer avenue, entertained a few friends at their home Wednesday evening. The time was spent playing progressive euchre. Mrs. L. G. Timpson was awarded first lady's prize and Mrs. Adams second, while Mr. Adams and Mr. Ladd secured first and second for the gentlemen.

Wife—Here's an account of a man who shot himself rather than suffer the pangs of indigestion. Husband—The fool! Why didn't he take DeWitt's Little Early Risers? I used to suffer as bad as he did before I commenced taking these little pills. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

A Millington Wedding.

The hospitable home of Mr. and Mrs. Dilley, of Mine Brook, was the scene of a brilliant wedding on Thursday at high noon. The contracting parties were their daughter, Anna May, and Ayers L. Leeson of Millington. Rev. Walker Jones, of Bedminster, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. P. Gibb, of Millington. About one hundred guests gathered to honor the occasion.

The presents were numerous and beautiful. The happy pair left for Denver, where they will make their future home.

Among those present were Rev. Mr. Gibb and wife, O. R. Stelle and daughter, Mrs. Wm. Leeson, Mrs. Irene Irving, Mr. and Mrs. James Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Terrell, of Millington; Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Cook, Joseph Channon and sister, of Philadelphia; Mr and Mrs. E. L. Irving, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Leonard, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mrs. David Leonard, George Fritz, Mr. and Mrs Wood, Mr and Mrs. Kenworthy, Mrs Everhart and daughter, of Newark; Judge Codington and wife, Mr. and Mrs. Moon, Mr. and Mrs Hance, Mrs. Williams, and Miss Gertrude Jackson, of Plainfield.

The Crescent Wheelmen will bowl a postponed game against the Elizabeth Athletic Club on Friday, December 27th, at Elizabeth.

The bowlers of the Plainfield Catholic Club roll their next game in the Diocesan Union on Friday, December 27th, at Elizabeth, against the Y. M. C. L. A. of that city.

CYCLING COMMENT.

George B. Cobb, one of the crack riders of the Harlem Wheelmen, visited friends in town yesterday.

Spencer C. Crane, who lectured at Y. M. C. A. Hall last Tuesday, will deliver his lecture at the Brooklyn Bicycle Club house tomorrow evening.

Edward H. Field, of West Seventh street, and James Hayes, Jr., of East Front street, took advantage of the delightful weather yesterday morning and took a spin to Morristown and back.

The Lakewood, N. J., Bicycle Club is preparing a novel run for Christmas day. It will be a paper chase and will be about ten miles. About one hundred wheelmen are expected to start.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The entries for the handicap billiard and pool tournaments at the Park Club have closed. There were nine for the billiard contest and ten men entered for the pool tournament. They begin on Saturday evening.

PRACTICE WHAT THEY PREACH.

Borough Board of Health Prosecute a Borough Resident for Brook Pollution.

The Borough Board of Health are endeavoring to practice what they preach in the matter of Green brook pollution. Some time ago they learned of the fact that a Mr. Scheelein, and old German, living on Pearl street, had a sewer pipe running from his house into the brook, through which the waste water of the house was disposed of. They investigated the matter and found that the pipe had been broken off in close proximity to the brook, but that the waste water was allowed to run out of the severed end of the pipe and from there dripped into the brook. They immediately notified Scheelein that he must stop it. This was three weeks ago and he promised to do so. It seems, however, that he continued to use the pipe, and again last week he was notified by the borough officials to suppress the nuisance. He paid no heed to the command and on Tuesday he was officially served with a notice by Health Inspector Hansen. Yesterday an investigation was made and it was found that he had paid no attention to the notice. On application of the Board of Health Justice Crosley issued a warrant for his arrest. This morning he was arraigned in court and his trial set down for 2 o'clock Monday afternoon in order that he might consult counsel before pleading.

Last Day to Pay Taxes.

Tax Collector Johnson received over $23,000 for taxes yesterday. Today is the last day for paying in.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

☞Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

No excuse for sleepless nights when you can procure One Minute Cough Cure. This will relieve all annoyances, cure the most severe cough and give you rest and health. Can you afford to do without it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

ABSOLUTELY PURE

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—See Pargiter's select display of toys, games, etc.

—Yesterday was the warmest winter day for the last ten years.

—Don't forget—umbrellas and canes for the holidays, at Jaquett's.

—Hoods Pills have won high praise for their prompt and efficient yet easy action.

—Special Christmas music is being prepared for Sunday at the Park Avenue Baptist church.

—An electric light is to be placed at the corner of West Front street and Waynewood place in a few days.

—Justice Nash issued summons yesterday in the case of Biddell against Johnson, on contract, returnable on December 27th.

—The German Reformed church Sunday-school will enjoy their Christmas festivities Wednesday evening, December 25th.

—The "Coming" of Christ at Christmas Time will be the subject of Rev. A. H. Lewis' sermon at the Seventh-Day Baptist church.

—The creditors of John Spitler, who conducted the Hotel Netherwood last summer, have been allowed 22½ per cent. for their accounts.

—A debating society will be organized at the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow evening, providing a sufficient number desire it. All interested are invited.

—The residents of Netherwood have been promised that next year they shall have a policeman in their district all night instead of up to 11 o'clock as is now the rule.

—Avoid Pneumonia, diphtheria and typhoid fever, by keeping the blood pure, the appetite good and the bodily health vigorous by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—Stop in at Doane's jewelry store and see the new invention. A miniature stove to carry in the pocket. Its use in case of illness is unlimited. Can be carried in a lady's muff.

—John O'Brien, the genial dispenser of beverages, formerly of Rafferty's saloon, can now be found at Miller's cafe, in Grenada Hotel, where he will be pleased to meet his friends.

—Westfield can meet all the requirements for free postal delivery except one, and that is that the houses and stores in the town are not numbered. A move is now being made to remove the disability.

—Some of the expressmen in the city do not like the idea of having the freight house moved so far from the centre of town, and think it should have been located nearer the North Avenue station.

—In the article appearing in Wednesday's issue entitled, "Pleasantly Surprised," it should have read Emma L. Stratton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Stratton, of East Third street, instead of "Emma L. Sutton."

—Edsall's Commercial Palace received this morning a magnificent line of Xmas tree ornaments, consisting of candles, candle holders, tinsel in all colors, glass balls, all sizes. They are going to make great reduction in price by the dozen or hundred pieces.

—A. C. Maclay, who will give an illustrated lecture entitled "An Evening in Old Japan," under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., on Monday, December 30th, is the author of "A Budget of Letters from Japan" and also of "Mito—Yashiki—A Tale of Old Japan."

—Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Clark, of Newark, prominent workers in the primary department of the Sunday-school, will make addresses at the public meeting of the Primary Teachers' Union Monday evening, December 30th. A third speaker will also be secured.

—Beautiful gifts at reasonable prices can be found at Swain's, on East Front street. Boxes of oil, china and water colors, etchings, photographs, water colors, oil paintings, Christmas cards, calenders, booklets and fine note paper and a full line of other attractive goods. You are invited to call and see them. 2 far superior to oatmeal, for the brain-worker, the dyspeptic, the weak and worn-out, the sick and the well. Easily assimilated by the most delicate stomach. All first-class grocers or the Hygienic Food Co., Orange, N. J.

Coughing irritates the delicate organs and aggravates the disease. Instead of waiting, try One Minute Cough Cure. It helps at once, making expectoration easy, reduces the soreness and inflamation. Every one likes it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

THEATRICAL.

J. C. Stewart's "Two Johns" is just as funny now as when it made its first appearance years ago, and judging by last night's performance, it is going to make one of the best runs of any show that has been at the Lyceum Theatre this season. Stewart and Dresser are the same team that gave to the play the name and fame that rightfully belong to it, and if years do bring wisdom to some people they certainly have brought wit to this duo. The general theme is the same as ever, but new jokes and new situations have been introduced and a number of specialties are worked in with excellent effect. All of the actors in the cast are good in their particular ways, and the Lyceum last evening was filled almost to "standing room only."—Buffalo Courier, April 16th. At Music Hall Saturday night.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

SENSE AND NON-SENSE IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Gifts really beautiful and useful show SENSE: Gifts of "Gew-Gaws" and trinkets show NON-SENSE, and, the more costly they are the worse they are. Can you choose a more sensible gift than a fine HAIR BRUSH; A SHAVING BRUSH; a HAND MIRROR? Or a more beautiful one than an Elegant CUT GLASS BOTTLE, empty or filled, as you please? Of such goods and their like we have a big stock at lowest prices, and, because of changes in styles, we are selling many fine articles at half the cost of manufacture.

A French Custom.

When a bullock is to be slaughtered in some parts of France, he is taken round with a drummer and bids farewell to earth. The crier, or tambourineur, as he is generally called, because he carries a drum, is one of the institutions of rural France. A traveler in the valley of the Cele says, in "Wanderings by Southern Waters," that he found the tambourineur making the rounds of a town, lustily beating his drum to awaken the curiosity of the inhabitants, and accompanied by an ox, which he introduced to the public as, "Le bœuf ici present."

The crier's business is to announce to all whom it may concern that the animal is to be killed this very evening, and that tomorrow morning its flesh will be sold at 1 franc 25 centimes the kilo. It will all go at a uniform price, for this is the custom. Those who want the aloyau, or sirloin, will only have to be in haste.—Bow Bells.

"Is that the cheapest you've got?"

"It is."

"I wish you had something for about 4 cents."

DIGESTION AND WORK.

How Sick People May Save Their Energy.

It is as hard work for some people to digest their dinner as it is for a normal man to walk ten miles.

"After dinner rest a while." This is an old saying. It means that if after eating a heavy meal you try to do hard work you will exhaust all your energy. There will be none left for your stomach. Your stomach needs energy to work just as your leg or arm does.

Sick people want energy. They seldom have enough for their stomach Their digestion is out of order and they want to know the reason. It's simple enough as we have told it.

What they ought to do is to save their stomachs from hard work until it is capable of doing it, just as they rest their tired backs by lying down.

This they can do by using artificially digested food. Shaker Digestive Cordial contains such food; not only this, but it is capable of digesting other foods in the stomach.

Shaker Digestive Cordial affords nourishment and creates new energy as soon as it is swallowed. Ordinary food first has to be digested. Shaker Digestive Cordial while creating new energy does not expend any. It gives the stomach no work to do. It will make thin people fat. Sick people are naturally thin. Getting thin is a sign of sickness. A person may be born thin, and naturally remain so. Such a one is not necessarily sick. All druggists keep it and a 10 cent sample bottle may first be tried.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

Corporation Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
J. T. MACMURRAY, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 12, 1895.

AN ORDINANCE

locating the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, and regulating the construction and operation of the same, and also concerning the compensation to be paid by said Plainfield Street Railway Company to the City of Plainfield.

The inhabitants of the City of Plainfield by their Common Council do enact as follows:

Sec. 1. That the tracks of the extension of the Plainfield Street Railway Company's railway be and are hereby located in the following streets, roads and alleys of the city of Plainfield:

Route 1. From the present terminus of the road in Watchung ave through Watchung ave to East Fifth street, through East Fifth street to Richmond street, through Richmond street to Putnam avenue, and through Putnam avenue to Woodland avenue, through Woodland avenue to South avenue, through South avenue to the station of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, at Netherwood. Also from Watchung ave., through Fourth st. to Grant ave.

Route 2. From the present terminus of the road in Front street at Grant avenue to the city line at Dunellen.

And in those portions of said streets, roads and alleys marked out and shown on map filed in the office of the city clerk of said city entitled "Map showing location of tracks, turn-outs and poles for proposed extension of Plainfield Street Railway, No. 2, and signed by John T. Fritts, Vice-President, dated, Sept 1895," to which reference is made and the same hereby made a part of this ordinance; and the said company is hereby given the right to construct, maintain and operate its extension to its street railway in said portions of said streets, roads and alleys under and subject to certain restrictions and regulations hereinafter specified or referred to; the same being such restrictions and regulations as the common council hereby deem requisite for the public interests, as well as subject to such further reasonable regulations as may be hereafter enacted by said common council. A detailed plan of construction shall be filed with the City Clerk by said company, and be approved by said Common Council before any work is done under the permission herein granted.

Sec. 2. That the said company shall construct, maintain and operate a single track railway for said extension, to be laid upon the middle line of the street, except on Watchung avenue; between North avenue and East Fourth street, and shall construct the tracks, switches, turnouts and poles in the manner and at the points and places indicated for the same on said map.

The poles shall be constructed and set and the wires strung thereon in the same manner as the poles are constructed and set in the ground, and wires strung on poles on the line of street railways now operated in the city of Plainfield by the Plainfield Street Railway Company.

Sec. 3. That said company shall keep in repair to the satisfaction of the Committee on Streets, the paving or other surface materials of the portion of streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks, and in addition shall so keep in repair eighteen inches on each side of the portion of said streets, roads and bridges occupied by its tracks. In case of double tracks, or switches or turnouts, the expression "occupied by its tracks" shall be construed to mean all space in the street between the outermost rails. In case the city shall at any time determine to pave or repave any street or section of a street, the said company shall forthwith repave any portion of said street or section of street which may be occupied by the company's tracks and for eighteen inches beyond, with same material and in same manner, and shall do so at the company's expense under the supervision of the street commissioner. If said company shall at any time fail to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the work or repairs hereinabove specified may be done or made by or under the direction of said committee on streets, and to their satisfaction, and the expense thereof shall on demand be paid by said company to said city; provided that the said committee on streets or a majority of them shall give at least ten days notice in writing of the intention to do such work or make such repair, said notice to be served upon any officer or employe of said company who may be found at their office or depot.

Sec. 4. The said company and its officers, servants, agents or employes shall not, nor shall any or either of them be allowed to shovel, throw or place any snow, ice or slush alongside the said track or tracks, in any street or streets, in such manner as to obstruct other public travel therein; but, when moving said snow, ice or slush from said track or tracks, the said company or its officers, servants agents or employes shall cause the same to be immediately levelled between said track or tracks and the gutter lines on each side thereof unless the fall of snow shall have been too heavy to make it practicable to level the same as aforesaid; in which latter case the said company shall pay its pro rata of the expense of the removal of said snow. Upon violation of any of the provisions of this section, there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for every city block on which any such violation shall take place, but said penalty shall not aggregate more than one hundred dollars in any one day; said penalties to be paid to the city by the said company or by any of its said officers, agents or employees so offending for each and every offence.

Sec. 5. That the rights and privileges intended to be given by this ordinance to said company are subject to all limitations, provisions, terms and conditions set forth and contained in sections 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 13, 14, 16, 17 and 18 of the ordinance of the city, entitled, "An ordinance locating the tracks of the Plainfield Street Railway Company and regulating the construction and operation of the same and granting permission to said company to use electric motors as the propelling power of its cars", approved April 27, 1891, to the same extent and with the same effect as if said sections were re-enacted in full as a part of this ordinance.

Sec 6. That the guage of the tracks of the said company to be hereafter laid shall be four feet eight and one-half inches, and the other tracks of said company already laid may be made of the same guage. That all the cars of the said company shall be similar to those now in use by it or such as shall be approved by the common council of said city. They shall be lighted by electricity, and properly heated in winter. Said company shall use upon its cars the Climax or other noiseless gearing and equip said cars with proper bells or gongs, and said cars shall be run at a speed of not more than ten miles an hour. No salt shall be used by said company on any part of its tracks.

For violation of any of the conditions of this section there shall be incurred a penalty of ten dollars for each offence and ten dollars additional for every day that such violation shall continue not exceeding one hundred dollars on any one conviction.

Sec. 7. That said company shall on or before the first day of March, 1896, equip each street railway car by it operated or run within the city of Plainfield, with fenders of the most approved pattern, to be approved by the Mayor of the city, and so attached to the car as best to protect from injury persons or vehicles using the streets or riding on the said cars; that after said last mentioned date no street railway car, the motive power of which is electricity, shall be operated or run upon any of the streets of said city, unless such car is equipped with fenders as above required, and in case any such car is operated or run contrary hereto the said company and every person or persons who shall either as president, manager, conductor, motorman or otherwise be engaged in so operating or running any such car shall be deemed to have violated this section and on conviction shall forfeit and pay fifty dollars for each day during which such violation shall continue, not exceeding one hundred dollars for any one conviction.

Sec. 8. The said company shall build or construct its extensions in the order specified in Sec. 1 and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route 1 of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within nine months after the passage of this ordinance, and if the said company shall fail to build or construct the lines mentioned in route 2 of this ordinance with turnouts and switches in the manner aforesaid, and put the same into complete operation for the transportation of passengers within twelve months after the passage of this ordinance; or shall afterwards fail or neglect to operate the same as aforesaid, all the rights, powers and privileges and every one of them of said company, their successors or assigns, under and by virtue of this supplemental ordinance, shall thereupon cease and determine, and this ordinance shall be null and void so far as the grant of any such right, power and privilege to said company is concerned, and in either of such cases the common council expressly reserves the right to cause the said railroad or any part or parts thereof, so constructed, to be removed from said street or streets, or any of them, and to sell and dispose of the materials thereof by public auction, and, after paying all the expenses of such removal and sale and of repairing the said street or streets, and of restoring the same nearly as possible to its or their original condition, to pay the balance of the proceeds of such sale to the said company, or its successors or assigns, provided, that no notice of such sale shall be required to be given, other than an advertisement, signed by the city clerk, and published in any one or more newspapers printed and published in said city.

The time during which the said company shall be delayed in the prosecution of its work or in the operation of its road or in any section thereof by injunction or other legal proceedings in the courts of New Jersey, or the federal courts in New Jersey, shall not be included within the nine and twelve months within which the said extensions are to be constructed and put into complete operation.

Sec. 9. The said company shall for each and every mile of street occupied by its tracks laid already or that shall hereafter be laid by said Company, whether under the provisions of the ordinance hereinabove referred to, approved April 27, 1891, or the amendment thereof approved May 4, 1892, or under the ordinance entitled "An Ordinance authorizing the Plainfield Street Railway Company to extend the location of its tracks", approved Oct. 4, 1892, or under this ordinance, or under any other ordinance, and also for every mile of street occupied by tracks that may be owned or operated or that may be hereafter owned or operated by said company within the limits of the city of Plainfield, pay or cause to be paid to the collector of taxes of said city for the use of the said city, the following sums, to wit: For the year beginning Jan. 1, 1896, fifty dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1897, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1898, seventy-five dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan 1, 1899, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1900, one hundred dollars a mile; for the year beginning Jan. 1, 1901, one hundred and twenty-five dollars a mile, for each and every mile of track; said payments to be made each and every year on or before the last day of each year.

For the years succeeding that beginning 1901 the said company shall pay at the same rate as for the year 1901, provided that when the gross receipts in any one year from the entire system within the city of Plainfield and the borough of North Plainfield shall equal or exceed eighty thousand dollars, then for that year and annually thereafter, the said company shall pay annually to said city collector for the use of said city five per cent. of the gross earnings of said company, and said gross earnings shall be construed to include all earnings of said company and full proportion on all earnings on through traffic to be calculated according to the proportion between the entire length of the journey and the number of miles travelled within the limits of the city of Plainfield or the borough of North Plainfield or both as the case may be. That to enable the city to ascertain from time to time the amount of gross earnings of said company the books of the company shall be open to inspection by the finance committee of the common council or such other person or persons as the common council for that purpose shall designate.

The payment provided for in this section shall be in lieu of all license fees for cars, whether provided for in prior ordinances or not.

Sec. 10. That the tracks and cars of said company shall be used for the carrying of passengers only; that no freight shall be carried by said company or over its tracks, and that no luggage other than hand luggage actually carried by passengers shall be carried or allowed upon the cars of said company or any other cars passing over said tracks. Nothing herein contained, however, shall prevent the company from carrying the U.S. mail. That cars shall not be run in trains of more than two cars over any of the tracks of said company, and that all cars shall stop upon being signalled by any foot passenger at any street corner past which said tracks are or shall be laid and passengers shall be freely allowed to board said cars or alight therefrom at any street corners, and said company shall cause the cars to come to a full stop and sound the gong or bell immediately before turning any curve on road now constructed or to be constructed. Any violation of any of the provisions of this section by said company or any of its employes shall be subject to a penalty of twenty dollars fine for each and every offence.

Sec. 11. That in case the said company shall lease its tracks or any section of the same, or sell, or assign its franchises, or attempt so to do, said company shall cause to be inserted in any such lease, deed, bill of sale, assignment or other transfer, a stipulation and agreement and condition that the same is made subject to the provisions of this ordinance, and that the lessee, vendee, assignee or other person to whom such lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer may be made or attempted to be made in accepting the same agrees to be bound thereby and to conform thereto, and will in turn insert a clause similar to that required by this section in case of any lease, conveyance, assignment or transfer thereof to be made, so that no persons or corporations shall acquire any rights in the premises except subject to the same terms and conditions as herein provided.

Sec. 12. That said company upon the final adoption of this ordinance and before exercising any of the rights and privileges granted hereby, shall as a condition precedent file with the city clerk of the city of Plainfield a contract to be executed by said company and duly approved by the corporation counsel, wherein said company covenant and agree with the inhabitants of the city of Plainfield, to abide by and perform all the matters and things herein, on the part of said company required to be observed, kept and performed; that it will, at any and all times hereafter, fully indemnify and protect the city of Plainfield of and from any and all suits, actions and proceedings that may be brought and maintained, or sought to be brought and maintained, by any person or corporation for, on account of or by reason of, the adoption or maintenance by said company, its successors or assigns, of said electric system aforesaid, or the construction or maintenance of said electric system or anything connected therewith, or any act of omission or commission by said company, its successors or assigns or any of its agents or servants, at any time or times, and shall whenever requested by said city, fully defend any and every such action, suit or proceeding.

Sec. 13. That said company shall also at the same time herein above specified for filing said contract, file a bond to the city in the sum of twenty thousand dollars to be approved as to form by the common council and corporation counsel of said city, conditioned for the full and faithful keeping, observance and performance of the terms and conditions in this ordinance contained, on the part of this company to be kept, observed and performed. And in case the conditions or terms upon which said company is granted permission to locate its tracks and maintain and operate its road or any of the terms or conditions of the said contract are violated, the city reserves the right to revoke the permission herein granted, to remove the tracks of the said company and all the constructions made in the streets of the city by said company, its successors or assigns.

Sec. 14. The company shall file with the city clerk, within thirty days next after the passage of this ordinance, their acceptance, under their corporate seal and signed by their president, of the terms and provisions, restrictions, and regulations hereof, and every one of them, and, in default thereof, it shall be understood and held that they decline to accept the same, and thereupon all rights, powers and privileges, to them granted thereby, shall forever cease and be at an end, in the same manner and with the same effect as if this ordinance had never been passed.

isn't saving time any more than going to a cheap place is saving money, because they charge less. Our business is the scientific cleaning and dyeing of clothes. We do this work for as little money as good, honest work can be done for. The money's worth isn't in how the clothes look when you first get them, it's in the wear of the dye, the goodness of the color, the careful cleaning that means keeping clean. HOW GLADSTONE BUYS BOOKS.

Eugene Field Tells of a Sample Transaction That He Witnessed.

For a good many years I was deeply interested in British politics. I was converted to Liberalism, so called, by an incident which I deem well worth relating.

One afternoon I entered a bookshop in High Holborn and found that the Hon. William E. Gladstone had preceded me thither. I had never seen Mr. Gladstone before. I recognized him now by his resemblance to the caricatures and by his unlikeness to the portraits which the newspapers had printed. As I entered the shop I heard the bookseller ask:

"What books shall I send?"

To this, with a magnificent sweep of his arms indicating every point of the compass, Gladstone made answer:

"Send me those."

With these words he went, and I stepped forth to claim a volume which had attracted my favorable attention several days previous.

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the bookseller politely, "but that book is sold."

"Sold?" I cried.

"Yes, sir," replied the bookseller, smiling with evident pride. "Mr. Gladstone just bought it. I haven't a book for sale. Mr. Gladstone has just bought them all."

The bookseller then proceeded to tell me that whenever Gladstone entered a bookshop he made a practice of buying everything in sight. That magnificent, sweeping gesture of his comprehended everything—theology, history, social science, folklore, medicine, travel, biography. Everything that came to his net was fish.

"This is the third time Mr. Gladstone has visited me," said the bookseller, "and this is the third time he has cleaned me out."

"This man is a good man," says I to myself. "So notable a lover of books surely cannot err. The cause of home rule must be just, after all."

From others intimately acquainted with him I learned that Gladstone was an omnivorous reader; that he ordered his books by the cartload, and that his home in Hawarden literally overflowed with books. He made a practice, I was told, of overhauling his library once in so often and of weeding out such volumes as he did not care to keep. These discarded books were sent to secondhand dealers, and it is said that the dealers not infrequently took advantage of Gladstone by reselling him over and over again—and at advanced prices, too—the very lots of books he had culled out and rejected.—Chicago Record.

New Way to Exterminate Sparrows.

One of the slickest men I ever saw was a young fellow out west who was selling baking powder and was up to all dodges to advertise his goods. He happened to strike one little town in which English sparrows were a great nuisance and the authorities had offered a bounty on sparrow heads. The baking powder man saw a golden opportunity to give his goods a big reputation and offered to exterminate all of the sparrows in town inside of two weeks. His proposition was gladly accepted, so he began his work. He selected a large vacant lot as the scene of his operations, and every evening would go out there with several bushels of corn, which he fed to the sparrows until they began to get acquainted with him and came to the lot in bigger droves every day.

In the meantime he had sent east and bought a barrel of empty capsules, which he filled with the baking powder, and then put salt on the outside of them. When he saw that all of the sparrows in town were coming to the feed ground, he had a large tank of water placed there and was ready for the grand climax. On this eventful evening he took his salted capsules of baking powder to the lot instead of corn and threw them out to the unsuspecting sparrows. Of course the salt made the birds thirsty, and they immediately flew to the water tank and drank, and the result was something awful. The water melted the capsules and made the baking powder rise. The poor little birds tried to stay on the ground, but the baking powder was too strong and compelled them to rise straight up into the air and finally popped them open. The spectators could plainly hear the sparrows pop and said that it sounded like the popping of a paper bag. It rained popped sparrows all night, and the next day not a single live one was visible. It is needless to say that there is only one brand of baking powder for sale in that town.—Louisville Commercial.

The Norman's Dream.

The Normans are called the Yankees of France, which is a compliment to them, no doubt, though it sometimes has reference to their extremely thrifty habits and to the craft which they employ in evading a service that may cost them something. It is related that one good Norman farmer went early one morning to another's house and found him still in bed.

"Art thou asleep, neighbor?" he asked, somewhat falteringly, in the tone of a man who is going to ask a favor.

"If I were not asleep," murmured the other from his bed, "what probably wouldst thou want of me?"

"To borrow thy donkey to go to the fair at Gisors."

"Well, then, neighbor, I am sound asleep."

"Bah! Thou canst not be asleep when thou talkest to me."

"Nonsense! It is only a dream I am having, neighbor!"

And the other had to go away without the donkey.—Youth's Companion.

An Unfortunate Test.

Canon Duckworth tells an interesting story of absentmindedness. It relates to a worthy clergyman of his acquaintance who, having been presented to an important living, preached his first sermon from the words, "All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers." He was surprised and distressed when the church wardens afterward hinted to him that his choice of a text had been a little hard upon his predecessors.

Would Be Appreciated.

"You can trust the man who sings at his work," said the cheery citizen.

"Yes," replied Sinnicker. "I wish some one would persuade the man who works around my woodpile two or three nights a week to sing loud enough for me to hear him."—Washington Star.

A CANE RUSH.

High School Students Participate in a Class Contest.

Class spirit has been increasing all the week, and this morning the senior class appeared in the school yard with a large cane. It did not take long for the other three classes to find out what was up, and in a few minutes a rush had taken place; for fifteen minutes the classes strove to get the seniors off of the cane and nearly effected their desire, but soon the spunk of the seniors was arisen and in a short time the cane was in their possession, and remained so for the remainder of the rush. At the end the cane was held by more hands belonging to the senior class than by any other class of the school.

Christmas in French.

The Plainfield French Kindergarten, of which Miss Scribner, Miss Newton and Miss Hellwig, are principals, held its Christmas entertainment yesterday morning, at 303 LaGrande avenue. The exercises consisted of French and English songs, games and recitations, in which the children had been well trained, and did credit to the Kindergarten teacher, Miss Fuller. A Christmas tree, with presents and cards, completed the entertainmenn, and sent the children away happy.

The Truce of God.

One of the most curious of the many queer mediæval customs was that known as "the truce of God." From what we have been able to learn of it the custom appears to have originated as an outgrowth of a desire to protect the common people, to some extent at least, against the lawless tyranny of the feudal lords of the middle ages. It was first decreed at a church synod which convened at Roussillon in the year 1027. By this decree it was provided that no man should attack his enemy between Saturday evening at nones and Monday morning at the hour of prime. About the year 1032 a similar compact was entered into between the church and the barons of England. The church forbade barons to make any attack upon each other between sunset on Wednesday night and sunrise on the following Monday or upon any feast or fast day. The same truce made provision that no man should be disturbed while laboring at his trade or while going to or from a place of worship. —St. Louis Republic.

"Have you a lawyer?" asked the court.

"No, sir."

"Are you able to employ one?"

"No, sir."

"Do you want a lawyer to defend the case?"

"Not partickler, sir."

"Well, what do you propose to do about the case?"

"We-ll-ll," with a yawn, as if wearied of the thing, "I'm willin to drop the case, far's I'm concerned."—London Tit-Bits.

A RED TEA.

Mrs. Lowe Entertains Her Friends in a Charming Manner.

The parlors of the beautiful residence of William Ebbets Lowe, on Park avenue, were thronged yesterday afternoon with those who came to attend the tea given by Mrs. Lowe. She was assisted in receiving her guests by Mrs. Howard Fleming, Mrs. O. T. Waring, Mrs. Henry B. Newhall, Miss Cock, Miss Lyon and Mrs. Lockwood, of Philadelphia.

In the dinning room the Misses Holly, Miss Shepard and Miss Smalley assisted. The decorations of both the rooms and tables were charming; they consisted of red roses and carnations, Southern smylax, holly and palms. They were arranged by Miss Lincoln. The music was furnished by a mandolin quartette from Landers. About two hundred guests were present.

ASK THE CITY'S PROTECTION.

NORTH AVENUE PROPERTY HOLDERS RESIST INJUNCTION.

Those Who Are Affected Discuss Plans to Settle the Difficulty—Engineer Gavett Says the Sewage Beds are Ready.

The North avenue property owners arranged their campaign of action regarding the Green brook sewer question at a lively meeting, held in the Board of Trade rooms, last evening.

Shortly after eight o'clock the meeting was called to order and Lemuel B. Woolston was elected chairman. Chas. H. Lyman was chosen secretary. The following property holders were represented at the meeting: William C. Kelly, Joseph P. Taylor, Lorenzo Paoli, Alicia McIntyre, Andrew Vanderbeek, John H. McVey, Dan S. Roberts, Lemuel B. Woolston, James F. Buckle, Edward C. Mulford, James McGee, Chas. M. Raybert, Fred C. Lounsbury and Edward Love.

Andrew J. Gavett, constructing engineer of the sewer, was present and spoke regarding the use of the sewage system at once. The sewers, he said were all ready, while several of the beds will be completed in a week. A small bed was now ready, however, that will accommodate the North avenue sewage.

It was stated that Corporation Counsel Marsh would represent the city at the trial and there was considerable discussion as to whether or not the property owners should send an attorney also. But before any action was taken, secretary C. H. Lyman said that he had seen Contractor Siddall and the latter agreed, although his tools and other apparatus were all packed up, to begin work at once and make street connections to the curb for four dollars apiece above the contract price. Then the question came up as to whether the Common Council would allow them to use the sewer even after they were connected.

Mr. Gavett thought they would and said that Expert Hazen had been in town and favored beginning at once and declared his intention of advising Councilman Frost and Ginna to support the plan. The meeting wanted some positive assurance of the fact. After an animated discussion on this and kindred subjects, the sewer itself became the topic of conversation.

Chairman Woolston stated that there was a cesspool, which the North Plainfield authorities had not spoken of at all, which held all the solid matter, allowing only the liquid to go into Green brook and he believed, that if Chancellor McGill knew of it, it might change the appearance of the case.

Mr. Raybert said that the city accepted the ownership of the cesspool when they paid for its cleaning last September, and he thought it was the city's business to do the fighting.

Mr. Mulford suggested that it might be a good idea to get to work and offered a resolution which, with a clause added by motion of Mr. Buckle, read thus:

Resolved, That the Common Council of the city be requested to take immediate action through their appropriate committee to exert their influence in protecting those of their taxpayers who are now threatened with prosecution and privation of the sewer service which they now enjoy. As a revenue the city receives in taxes of the property affected amounts to not less than $5,000 a year, and with a deprivation of the sewer, even for a short time, would be a great loss and depreciate the value of the property assessed for taxes, and would necessarily lower the assessment value of the property for the coming year, therefore your petitioners pray for your kindly and more than kindly, but just, service and intervention in our behalf, and that a committee of three, Messrs. Lounsbury, Mulford and Woolston, wait on the chairman of the committee immediately.

The resolution was unanimously carried and, on motion of Mr. Buckle, the committee was given full power to protect the interests of the property-holders in any way they deem necessary which, of course, includes the employment of counsel.

A document, agreeing to give Siddall the $4 extra for each immediate connection, was signed by all present, except Mr. Kelly, whose property on Park avenue is already connected. Several thought that if this paper was shown to Borough Counsel Reed it would stop proceedings.

After Mr. Lounsbury's report regarding counsel was heard and many suggestions were made, a vote of thanks was given to the Board of Trade for the use of their rooms and the meeting adjourned.

The Green brook sewer matter promises to come to a peaceful settlement after all. This morning the committee, appointed at the meeting of the property owners, came to see Borough Counsel Reed and told him that a contract had been made for the immediate laying of the street connections to the curb and that assurance had been received from a number of the councilmen that the required permission to use the sewer would be granted at the meeting of the council on the 30th.

"They asked for an extension of time," said Mr. Reed to a Daily Press reporter this morning," and I agreed to give them until the 14th of January. If the City Council does not allow them to connect by that time the case will come up as before."

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES.

North Plainfield Public School Holds Its Christmas Celebration.

Christmas was rousingly celebrated in the North Plainfield public school yesterday morning. The different class rooms were decorated with holly and evergreen wreaths, while numerous drawings lined the blackboards. The Class of '96 had a large flag of their class colors, orange and white, artistically drawn on their boards, while bunches of ribbon of the same colors were prominently displayed.

ODD CHRISTMAS PRESENTS.

High School Students Indulge in Seasonable Pranks.

The regular Christmas festivals of the senior and junior classes were held yesterday afternoon at the close of the session. As has been the usual custom, the seniors had a present ready for each member of the junior class and they were presented by Volney F. Green who made a witty speech with each gift. One of the young women received a doll, another a baby rattle and the rest gifts of a similar nature. A pipe was a rather suggestive present to one of the young men, while a cake of yeast hinted to another that he should rise. The juniors presented the seniors in return with a toy donkey which brayed most tunefully. The two classes then parted with a gay "Merry Christmas," and their respective class yells.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

A WARRIOR WENT WRONG.

SERGEANT PHILLIPS STOOD SHOT AND SHELL BUT RUM DOWNED HIM

He Accidentally Met an Old Comrade and Was Saved—His History Wove Into the Song of "Twenty Years Ago."

On the 31st of May, four years ago, a Grand Army comrade, with some of his companions, was laying flowers upon soldiers graves in Greenwood cemetery.

A pitiful looking tramp, wearing a Grand Army button and little else except a face of misery, came up toward him and said:

"Isn't your name Corporal Buck?"

"My name is Buck, and I was Corporal in the—New York Regiment during the war, but who are you?" he said. "Oh, you have forgotten your old sergeant, have you? You don't remember the sergeant that placed the colors on the fort and stood there until he was pierced with bullets, while Company C spiked the guns and lost eighteen men, killed and wounded, in a few minutes?"

"Why," said Buck, "Is this Sergeant Phillips? I heard that you were dead long ago," and he grasped the extended hand of the tramp, whose breath gave evidence of heavy drink. After some conversation, Mr. Buck invited his old comrade to his house that evening to supper. The old drunkard, with still some pride remaining, glanced at his shabby clothes which were covered with vermin, and said:

"No, Corporal, I will walk down and be there after you have got through supper, if you will just lend me a quarter."

This Mr. Buck gladly did.

It was dark and he had given up hope of the arrival of the old veteran, and his son, a nineteen year-old lad, was sitting upon the back porch of the snug cottage, upon which the Corporal had made the final payment but the week before. The boy was singing some old war choruses that his father had taught him, brought to his mind by this memorial day, when the old Sergeant tottered up drunker than before, having spent most of his money for rum, crying in a maudlin way over the memories which he said had been aroused by the songs.

Mr. Buck invited him in, gave him a good supper, then a bath, after which he dressed him from head to foot in his own clothing and shoes. He kept him all night and in the morning told him that he owed his prosperity to the fact that he had become a Christian after he came out of the war, and left off his drink and other bad habits. The result of it was that Sergeant Philips concluded to lead a new life, which, encouraged and assisted by his old comrade, he has done up to this time.

When Col. Hadley learned the facts, he took the story to Miss Fannie Crosby, the famous song writer, who wove it into verse to the tune of "Twenty Years Ago," bringing in as a medley several old war choruses. This is Colonel Hadley's special song, which he has memorized and will sing to morrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at Reform Hall to which he invites all old soldiers and their friends, that they may help him sing the choruses.

The Colonel also leads tonight at Reform Hall at 7:30, and these two meetings will conclude the series of the most successful campaign, so far as attendance and enthusiasm is concerned, that this city has had for a long time.

Hudreds have volunteered each to try and save one drinking person within the year 1896. Others will doubtless do so tonight.

A deep marked spirited interest was manifested in the service at Reform Hall last evening, which was in charge of Miss Wray, and the large audience was deeply effected by the earnest and helpful words spoken. The musical portion of the service was assisted by J. F. Townsend, violinist and H. J. Martin, vocalist.

After Miss Wrav had opened the service with a few remarks and a song service enjoyed, William Potter, of New York, was introduced and spoke for a few minutes telling something of his former and present life. Joseph McCabe, also from New York, followed with remarks. He sang effectively a song, the words of which he composed himself.

Mr. Leo then spoke, urging all the unsaved to give up their life of sin and give themselves to God. In conclusion Miss Wray talked for a short time.

Tonight a special service will held when an extra effort will be made to have as many drinking men present as possible. All the speakers will be at the meeting. Tomorrow afternoon the meetings close and a grand service will be held.

DR. FRENCH, STATE PRESIDENT, TELLS OF ITS WORTH.

Tenth Anniversary of the Congregational Church Society Celebrated Last Night—The Services Were Largely Attended.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Congregational church celebrated their tenth birthday, last night, with a very pleasant service. Members of other societies were present, and the evening was rendered especially enjoyable by the presence of Dr. J. Clement French, the State President of the Y. P. S. C. E.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich read a short Scripture selection and offered prayer. He then gave a brief historical sketch of the society. He said it had started out in life with a threefold purpose: "To promote an earnest Christian life among its members, to increase their mutual acquaintance and to make them more useful in the service of God." This purpose they had nobly fulfilled. Their prayer meetings showed an unusual readiness to speak and pray, and a deep spirituality; and he had found the society willing and glad to work, and to originate and carry out new plans for endeavor. However, much might still be done, and he hoped the society would go steadily forward in its good work.

An "Anniversary Song," written for the occasion, was sung by the choir, then Mr. Goodrich introduced the State President, the speaker of the evening. Dr. French began by telling of his own original disapproval of Christian Endeavor, and of his thorough conversion to its principles. He had feared that the obligations of the pledge would take the sweetness out of Christian duties. "But," said he, "it will not do to wait for a feeling of love before you do your duty. Do the duty and the love will come."

He told of the magnificient work done by the Christian Endeavor Society in its fourteen years of life, the poor relieved, the churches kept alive, the theological students and missionaries supported, the money given to the mission boards, prayer-meetings, Dorcas circles, rescue missions, Christmas dinners given, and many other grand works.

"Do you ask the reason for all this?" he asked. "It is because the Lord Jesus Christ is the acknowledged head of the whole movement, and because the Holy Spirit's power is constantly implored."

He closed with a strong appeal for more consecrated earnestness. Nothing can be accomplished by half-hearted work. The Christian worker needs to have as much earnestness as the worker in any other department of life. And even if there were no other motive for earnestness, how many of us want to leave this world with our work half finished? We can never return to finish it. Let us not be called away without having made for ourselves a record of all we can possibly do for God, His church and humanity.

LEAL'S SCHOOL CELEBRATE.

Appropriate Exercises Among Students for the Coming Festival Day.

Yesterday afternoon, for the first time in several years, the boys in Leal's School celebrated Christmas at the school. The exercises were gotten up by the students and were held the last half hour of school. There were several well-rendered selections by the mandolin club, which consisted of Prof. C. M. Slocum and Gilbert Lovell, mandolins, Willis West, guitar, and Charles Davis, violin. The glee club furnished a quartette for the occasion, which consisted of Herbert Moore, first tenor, E. Maxwell Honeyman, second tenor, Hugh Miller, first bass, Raymond A. McGee, second bass. Their selections were greatly enjoyed. A very pleasant part of the programme was a banjo solo by Willis West, his encore, in particular receiving extra loud applause. The different selections were all heartily applauded and all encored.

Principal Leal closed the exercises with a few remarks and, after wishing his pupils all a pleasant vacation, dismissed them.

A New Year's Eve Dance.

A holiday dance will be given at the Park clubhouse on New Year's Eve., beginning at 8:30 o'clock. The patronesses are Mrs. Charles A. Reed, Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutchen, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. George D. Hallock. The dance is arranged by the House Committee, which consists of Elston M. French, Samuel Townsend and William N. Death of Mrs. Case.

The many friends of John T. Case, will be grieved to learn of the sad death of his beloved wife which occurred last evening, after a painful and lingering illness of nearly four years from spinal trouble, which terminated in consumption. Mrs. Case was born in Chester, Morris county, and was the daughter of the late B. S. and Margaret A. Mulford. She leaves a husband and four sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Chapin, of West Front street, Mrs. J. B. Hurlburt, of Emily street, Mrs. Andrew Lutkins, of Somerset street, Mrs. L. A. Hummer, of Somerset street, and one brother, Mahlon T. Mulford, of New Market. She was also the sister of the late L. B. Mulford.

REV. MR. JOHNSTONE ON WAR.

HE SAYS THE MAN WHO THRATENS IT IS A TRAITOR.

He Says the Silent Majority are Resolutely Set Against Anything That Will Antagonize Two Kindred Nations.

Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone, of this city, was the principal speechmaker at the dinner of the British Public Schools and Universities Association in the Holland House in New York Thursday night. He spoke in part as follows:

We shall make it one of our objects to illustrate in the club and its membership the spirit of strength and moderation which we believe has come to us from our British past. But I feel convinced that we shall discharge a higher and more important duty if we make it our object individually and collectively to soften the bitterness of international relations. There is not the slightest doubt that England and America need to understand each other better: but we are happy to think that our mutual misunderstandings can be rectified, and that it is only a noisy minority in either country which would dare to set flaming the torch of fratricidal war.

The great silent majority in England and America will set their faces resolutely against any policy which would antagonize two kindred nations which in their power and possibilities are the hope of the civilized world. This is true of all ranks in our country of the past and our home of the present; but it is still truer of the smaller number of those who have learned the lessons of gracious toleration and large outlook from the universities of England and America. There is a common brotherhood of intellect and culture, the only aristocracy we recognize today. That common brotherhood, whether in Oxford or Harvard, has learned the great world lesson that, except at the awful price of a sacrifice of honor, war is not o nly a blunder, but a crime

It should be the object of our club to show to our friends and fellow citizens of the western republic how much we have in common. With the love both of east and west burning in our hearts, we insist that in spite of the differences which have divided us in the past, we are learning today that we are the children of a common mother. Here in America the wisest know that all that is brightest and best in our western civilization has sprung from the inspiration of England. We are justly proud of the large liberties which are achieved in American institutions. That freedom was born on the rocky hills of Scotland and Wales and the wide field of England and Ireland.

The institutions of America draw their strength and dignity from the constitution of Great Britain. We speak a common tongue. The language of Shakespeare and John Milton joins us together in bonds that are stronger than those of blood. As long as it is spoken and written, as long as the liberties of England and America trace themselves to a common source, as long as we are bound together by the ties of race and interest, the man who would threaten us with the disaster of war is a traitor not to America alone, nor to England alone, but to the whole of humanity itself.

THE KIRMESS PROFITS.

The Woman's Auxiliary Clear Almost $5,000 for the Hospital.

The gross receipts at the Kirmess for the benefit of the Muhlenberg hospital were $7,378.44. The expenses were $2,637.51, leaving a net profit of $4,740.93. Two checks for $4,500 have already been placed in the hands of the Governors' Board of the hospital, and it is hoped that the final check will be $300.

Election of Haymakers.

Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., met last evening and nominated officers for the ensuing year. They will be elected at the next meeting. The Haymakers Association held a meeting at the conclusion of the tribe's business, when the following officers were elected: Chief-haymaker, C. L. Holstein; assistant chief-haymaker, F. S. McCarthy; overseer, Joseph Newman; collector of straws, J. A. Karet; keeper of bundles, A. J. Stiglitz; past chief-haymaker, D. C. Allen; trustees, N. C. Mague, C. Fullmer and Fred TenEyck. The members then adjourned to the Crescent Hotel where a sumptuous collation was served.

Christmas Day Reunion.

On Christmas day at 10 o'clock, a union Christian Endeavor meeting will be held in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church, to which all the societies are cordially invited. The meeting will take the form of a preparatory evangelistic service and will be led by the Local Union Secretary.

The teachers in the public schools will spend their vacations as follows: Miss Petrie at Cortlandt, N. Y.; Miss Filmer at Gloversville, N. Y.; Miss Lee at Brooklyn and Washington, D. C.; Miss Stillman at Brooklyn; Miss Schutt in Western New York; Miss Scott at Oswego.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

OUTLOOK OF BUSINESS

General Trade Somewhat Affected by War Talk.

Violent Depression in Stocks and Securities Both in America and Europe—Two Stock Exchange Failures—No Serious Outcome, However, Anticipated.

New York, Dec. 21.—Bradstreet's report of business will to-day say: The general business situation has been affected by the precipitation of possible complications with Great Britain. First to feel this are the stock market and prices of cotton and wheat, the influence of which ramify among business houses in many different lines. The serious nature of the president's statement of the case had the effect here and in London of causing free selling of securities even in sight of the fact that expectation of war is slight. The most unfavorable feature is, and is likely to be, continued negotiations and the uncertainty which must exist until the incident is concluded. A violent depression in stock and security values has followed the message and its reception in Europe. The London market has been no less disturbed than our own, and the foreign selling of our securities was on an enormous scale. Yesterday the stock market approached a panicky condition, with heavy declines and total demoralization for a time, followed, however, by a rally. Gold shipments for the week were $6,580,000, of which $3,500,000 will go to London to-day. The treasury gold reserve is below $70,000,000. Two stock exchange failures accompanied the decline in prices. Money ranged as high as 80 per cent. on call yesterday, but dropped to 6 before the close. There were heavy losses among speculators on a margin.

No Uneasiness Felt.

Representatives of Bradstreet's at twenty-three cities interviewed many leading manufacturers and merchants Thursday as to the effect, present or prospective, on trade of the international situation precipitated by the president's message, the message itself, and as to the probability of actual hostilities. The interviews fairly represent the sentiment of many of the most important financial, industrial and commercial houses of the country. In no instance, so far as the interviews extend, is war consideded the probable outcome. So far as the effect on business is concerned, eastern and western manufacturing centers and many of the larger western and northwestern distributing points report none is felt whatever. The influence in the cotton and wheat markets and at the stock exchange has been characterized. Perhaps as significant as any other feature of the interviews is that in all cities except four the concensus of opinion distinctly favor the sentiments expressed in the president's message. The exceptions, where opinion on this point was divided, are New York, Boston, Detroit and Milwaukee.

Industrial Situation Quiet.

The industrial situation reflects previous tendencies. Jobbers in cottons and woolens report demand quiet at first hands. Woolen mills are taking only fair orders for spring goods. Hides are firmer, but manufacturers of shoes have not yet begun to anticipate wants by increasing purchases of leather, although in instances shoe factories have begun to increase their outputs. Favorable reports come from western glass factories, the prospect being for a largely increased demand and a corresponding advance in quotations. Iron and steel report another reduction in prices of nearly $1 a ton each, and bar iron has gone off 10 per cent. in price, which is also true of structural material. The output of pig iron is nearly at the rate of 1,000,000 tons a month, and unless consumers place orders soon, there will be a restriction of production. The bank clearings total this week is $1,185,000,000, or 5 per cent. more than it was last week, nearly 14 per cent. more than in the third week of December, 1894, and 20 per cent. more than in the corresponding week of 1893. As compared with the corresponding total in 1891, this week shows a decrease of only 4 per cent.

Prices Still Weak.

Prices generally show no more encouraging tendency than heretofore. Higher quotations are recorded for wheat, flour, oats and coffee. A better export demand for oats probably explains one, but the increase in the price of flour is nominal; practically unchanged quotations are made for pork, lard, and for sugar, as well as for lumber and for coal, although the usual check to building operations at this season tends to weaken prices of lumber. In addition to reductions in prices of crude iron, steel, and various forms of the same, there are reactions also in prices of petroleum, of cotton and of print cloths, of wheat and of Indian corn. The total number of business failures throughout the United States, as reported to Bradstreet's this week, aggregates 385, compared with 313 last week, 309 in the like week one year ago, 353 two years ago (more than at the close of the panic year), and 398 and 313 in similar periods in 1892 and 1891.

Cronin Convicted of Arson.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 21.—John Cronin was last night convicted of arson in the third degree in setting fire to the parochial school house at Charlottee on the night of July 17. Father Fitzgerald, in whose employ Cronin was at the time, is also under indictment on the same charge, as is Nora Cronin, the sister of the convicted man.

A SURPRISE FOR ALL.

News of the President's Message Caused Great Astonishment.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The special message of the president which reached the capitol yesterday afternoon after the adjournment of the house was received with widespread astonishment on all sides. Although its purpose became quickly known and circulated rapidly through the hotels, where many public men reside, so surprised were they that at midnight few could be found who cared to express an opinion for publication either upon its merits or as to the course which congress would probably pursue. Privately, republican members of the house severely criticised the president. It was contended by a number of these gentlemen that the message was ill-advised and unnecessary; that its effect would be to add to the gravity of the situation and that congress is in no position at the present time to afford the relief desired. Leading republicans say that no measure satisfactory to them can either pass the senate or receive the president's sanction. Two things, however, were considered this morning as certain. One is that congress will not adjourn to-day, asw as expected, and secondly that the announcement of the committees will be made shortly after the house meets. The president's message will first be laid before the house and after the committees have been made public, it will be referred to the ways and means committee. Beyond this course all is speculation.

VANDERBILT TALKS WAR.

Says We Will Not Yield an Inch and Are Ready for Fight.

Brussels, Dec. 21.—The Soir publishes an interview with Mr. Vanderbilt, who, according to that paper, said: "We shall not yield an inch. We shall begin closing our ports to England. I have private telegrams announcing the convocation of a congress of delegates from all the American republics. This congress will effect the late Mr. Blaine's project for a customs union." Referring to England's navy, Mr. Vanderbilt exposed the palm of of his hand and said: "In a month from the declaration of war the entire ocean will be as this of British ships." He referred to Edison's self-steering torpedo. "President Cleveland, he added, would never have thrown down the gauntlet unless he had been prepared for every eventuality. Hands off," he concluded, "is America's cry to Great Britain."

MRS. W. VASSAR WEBB DEAD.

Well Known as an Author of Several Important Works of Fiction.

New York, Dec. 21.—Mrs. William Vassar Webb died yesterday at a private hospital in Forty-ninth street, after an operation for the removal of a tumor. As Isabel Frances Currie, Mrs. Webb was known as the author of several important works of fiction and of frequent articles in the public press. By either name she was widely known, as well as an intelligent and philanthropic student of public charities and prisons. Mrs. Webb was born in Springfield, N. J. Her husband survives her.

RUMOR OF REBEL DEFEAT.

One Hundred Killed and Many Prisoners Taken by the Spaniards

Havana, Dec. 21.—It is rumored here that a rebel force was badly beaten on Wednesday last on the Santisima estate. It is said that one hundred insurgents were killed and many prisoners taken. A number of horses and mules fell into the hands of the troops. A Spanish force has defeated the rebels under Felipe Rodriguez. Five of the insurgents were killed and one captured. Some horses and a quantity of arms were also captured.

TERRELL GOING TO SMYRNA.

His Errand Probably in the Interest of American Citizens.

Constantinople, Dec. 21.—The representative of the United Press learns that the Hon. A. W. Terrell, the American minister here, is about to start for Smyrna. The object of his visit to that place is not stated, but he is undoubtedly going there in connection with the protection of American missionaries and other citizens of the United States.

RATIFIED BY SENATE

Favorable Action on the Hitt Measure.

Adopted Without an Amendment and Without a Dissenting Vote. Futile Effort To Limit the Venezuelan Commission to Three Members—Holiday Adjournment.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The proceedings in the senate yesterday were opened with a prayer by its blind chaplain invoking the Christmas influence of "peace on earth and good will to men," and then asking that the two greatest nations of the earth of one language, one faith, one baptism and one Lord, should not be embroiled in war. It was delivered with such feeling, earnestness and eloquence that it was ordered to be printed in the Record—a very unusual pivilege to be accorded to a chaplain's opening prayer. The day, however, did not respond to that peaceful opening, and when the hour of adjournment came the senate had passed, without amendment, and without a single negative vote, the house bill appropriating $100,000 for a commission to report to the president on the true divisional line between the republic of Venezuela and British Guiana. Mr. Sherman's (rep., Ohio) amendment fixing the number of commissioners at three, and requiring their appointment to be "by and with the advice of the senate," was reported from the committee on foreign relations, but it had very little support and was at the close of the debate laid on the table without a division and with only two or three negative votes—the vote being viva voce.

Some Little Excitement Aroused.

The debate took a more excited turn than that of the preceding day. It was opened by Mr. Platt, rep., Conn., who said there was no reason to suppose that war was to be precipitated, but the American people did not shun war and that they were never more in earnest since the revolution than they were now. Mr. Sherman made a plea against excitement and eagerness to arouse the patriotism of the American people, and declared his firm belief that the matter would be settled by arrangement between Great Britain and Venezuela without a drop of American blood being shed. Mr. Mills, dem., Tex., deprecated war and inquired how the revenues to carry on war were to be obtained. He suggested that, before going into war, the constitution should be amended so as to enable congress to levy direct personal taxes, particularly the income tax. Mr. Lodge, rep., Mass., derided the attempt of English capitalists to create a panic in Wall street and State street and notified them that the calling in of loans and the withdrawal of gold were not the roads to an honorable and peaceful settlement. Mr. Stewart, pop., Nev., ascribed the aroused feeling of the American people to English arrogance, and declared that England could put an end to the excitement by being honest and reasonable.

Holiday Recess Agreed Upon.

Mr. Turpie, dem., Ind., spoke of the bill as the "crossing of the Rubicon," and so the discussion went on to the close when the bill was passed just as it came from the house. Earlier in the day the resolution offered on Thursday by Mr. Allen, pop., Neb., was taken up, discussed and adopted. It instructs the finance committee to inquire whether it would not be expedient and proper at this time for the government of the United States to open its mints to the free and unlimited coinage of gold and silver at the rate of 16 to 1, and to issues, besides, an adequate volume of legal tender treasury notes. A motion to refer the resolution to the finance committee was voted down. After the passage of the Venezuelan commission bill the senate went into executive session and there, among other things, agreed to the house concurrent resolution for a holiday recess, with an amendment fixing its beginning for to-day and its close for the 6th of January. When the doors were reopened a message from the president was laid before the senate urging the necessity for prompt aid for the finances of the government and that congress should not take a recess until the necessary financial legislation was provided.

Gladstone on Venezuelan Trouble.

New York, Dec. 21.—A morning paper has received the following cablegram from Mr. Gladstone in answer to a request for his comment on the Venezuelan dispute: "Sole possible reply: 'Dare not interfere. Only common sense required.' Gladstone."

Too Tired to Smile

Weak, Weary and Worn

Dizziness, Impure Blood—Cured by Hood's.

Many weak and worn-out women know just what this means. In totally unfit condition for work, they force themselves through the daily routine of duties, almost too discouraged to even look for relief. But it is to be found in Hood's Sarsaparilla, which makes the blood pure, builds up the nerves, makes the weak strong and gives a cheerful spirit. Read this:

Mrs. Wm. Smith
New York City.

"I have suffered more than tongue can tell from dizziness and severe pains in my head. I also felt so low spirited that I often said I wished I was dead. A friend suggested that I try Hood's Sarsaparilla. I gave it a trial and was more than surprised to see what a great change came over me after I had taken the first bottle. I felt better right away. I have now taken nearly five bottles and am happy to say I am entirely cured. I would advise all suffering on account of impure blood to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. It will cure." MRS. WM. SMITH, 319 E. 88th St., N. Y. City.

PROMPT ACTION URGED

Congress Notified of Our Financial Dilemma.

The President in a Message Sent in Late Yesterday Afternoon Says the Heavy Withdrawals of Gold Have at Last Aroused Apprehension in Business Circles.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The president late yesterday afternoon sent the following important message to congress on the financial situation: To the congress: In my last annual message the evils of our present financial system were plainly pointed out and the causes and means of depletion of government gold were explained. It was therein stated that after all the efforts that had been made by the executive branch of the government to protect our gold reserve by the issuance of bonds amounting to more than $162,000,000, such reserve then amounted to but little more than $79,000,000, that about $16,000,000 had been withdrawn from such reserve during the month next previous to the date of that message and that quite large withdrawals for shipment in the immediate future were predicted. The contingency then feared has reached us and the withdrawals of gold since the communication referred to and others that appear inevitable, threaten such a depletion in our government gold reserve as brings us face to face with the necessity of further action for its protection. This condition is intensified by the prevalence in certain quarters of sudden and unusual apprehension and timidity in business circles.

Another Season of Perplexity.

We are in the midst of another season of perplexity caused by our dangerous and fatuous financial operations. These may be expected to recur with certainty as long as there is no amendment in our financial system. If in this particular instance our predicament is at all influenced by a recent insistence upon the position we should occupy in our relation to certain questions concerning our foreign policy, this furnishes a signal and impressive warning that even the patriotic sentiment of our people is not an adequate substitute for a sound financial policy. Of course there can be no doubt in any thoughtful mind as to the complet solvency of our nation, nor can there be any just apprehension that the American people will be satisfied with less than an honest payment of our public obligations in the recognized money of the world. We should not overlook the fact, however, that aroused fear is unreasoning and must be taken into account in all efforts to avert public loss and the sacrifice of our peoples' interests.

Prompt Action Urged.

The real and sensible cure for our recurring troubles can only be effected by a complete change in our financial scheme. Pending that the executive branch of the government will not relax its efforts nor abandon its determination to use every means within its reach to maintain before the world American credit, nor will there be any hesitation in exhibiting its confidence in the resources of our country and the constant patriotism of our people. In view, however, of the peculiar situation now confronting us, I have ventured to herein express the earnest hope that the congress in default of the inauguration of a better system of finance will not take a recess from its labors before it has by legislative enactment or declaration done something not only to remind those apprehensive among our people that the resources of this government and a scrupulous regard for honest dealing, afford a sure guarantee of unquestioned safety and soundness, but to reassure the world that with these factors and the patriotism of our citizens, the ability and determination of our nation to meet in any circumstances every obligation it incurs do not admit of question. I ask at the hands of the congress such prompt aid as it alone has the power to give to prevent in a time of fear and apprehension any sacrifice of the people's interests and the public funds or the impairment of our public credit in an effort by executive action to relieve the dangers of the present emergency.
GROVER CLEVELAND.

Predicts a Revulsion of Sentiment.

London, Dec. 21.—The Standard predicts that before many days there will be a striking revulsion of popular sentiment in the United States. The American mind, it says, is clear and logical, and Americans fully share with the British in what they both call love of fair play. Englishmen are well aware of the difficulty many Americans must feel in reconciling patriotism with a frank disavowal of Mr. Cleveland's attitude, but we can join in all sincerity in the prayer offered by the chaplain of the senate.

Woman Suffrage Voted Down.

Montreal, Dec. 21.—The Quebec legislature has decided that women shall not be allowed to vote for members of that body. The question was brought up by Mr. Simpson, who moved that the franchise be extended to widows and spinsters; that other conditions being fulfilled, sex should be no disqualification.

Snow Storm and Floods.

Lamar, Mo., Dec. 21.—Snow has been falling since midnight. The electric light plant is under water and the creek falling slowly. No trains have arrived since midnight Wednesday. Eight hundred yards of Missouri Pacific railroad, two miles south of here, is under water.

MINES' VICTIMS NUMBER 42.

Thirty-five Charred Remains So Far Recovered.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 21.—Interest in the news from Cumnock mines is intense, and many persons from a distance are at the scene of the great disaster whereby forty-two lives were lost. The difficulty in obtaining persons to search for the dead was great and is one of the worst features of the affair. "You haven't a heart as big as a pea. You won't help raise your own dead, it's cowardice," said F. Nuttal, one of the leading miners, and the first to enter the mine to begin the work of rescue, to the crowd which stood at the mouth of the mine. The average number at work searching is only twelve. Bodies were found in all parts of the mine, but mainly in the 350 foot level, where the principal loss of life occurred The condition of many of the bodies is shocking. The hands of many are nearly burned off. The work of identifying the dead was slow. Hundreds of persons inspected the thirty-five bodies laid out in the engine house up to yesterday afternoon.

DEBS MAY LEAD THEM.

Philadelphia Car Strikers Send for the A. R. U. President.

Philadelphia, Dec. 21.—Eugene V. Debs is coming to Philadelphia to take part in the strike of the employes of the Union Traction company. The leaders of the strike yesterday decided to call upon the famous leader of the American Railway union and John McBride, president of the American Federation of Labor, to aid them with their advice and presence. Accordingly a telegram was sent to Mr. Debs at Terre Haute, and to Mr. McBride asking them if they would come here. Replies were received from both that they would come to Philadelphia at once and it is expected that both these labor leaders will be here some time this afternoon. Mr. Debs may take charge of the strike. It is the intention now of the strike leaders to meet Mr. Debs at the railroad station and welcome him with a big parade of the strikers. The strike situation is unchanged to-day, except that the company is succeeding in operating more cars than yesterday.

24 MINERS PERISH.

Entombed in a Mountain Mine Two Miles from the Entrance.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 21.—Twenty-four miners lost their lives yesterday in the Nelson mine entry No. 10, near Dayton, Tenn., by an explosion of fire damp. The explosion caused the roof to cave in, shutting off the air passage. The twenty-four victims were entombed beyond the possibility of rescue, as the point of the accident is two miles from the entrance straight in the mountain side. The unfortunates, who are both white and colored, included several boys. Rescuing parties are vigorously trying to reach the entombed miners, but it is probable that they will be several days forcing an opening through the wall of fallen roofing which must be made safe as they proceed.

REJOICING AT PANAMA.

A Demonstration To Express Gratitude for Cleveland's Message.

Panama, Dec. 21.—The Star and Herald says: At the meeting of prominent citizens, held to-day, a commission was appointed to organize a grand public demonstration, to take place on Dec. 23, to Consul General Vifquain as the representative of the American nation. The demonstration is intended to be expressive of the gratitude of South America for President Cleveland's attitude on the Venezuelan question. Boundless enthusiasm prevails over the firm attitude of the United States in defence of the Monroe doctrine.

NO NEWS OF THE CLARIBEL.

She Is the Steamer That Declined Assistance Although Disabled

New York, Dec. 21.—The overdue Atlas line steamer Claribel has not been reported since she was sighted by the steamer Newport on the morning of Dec. 13 in a disabled condition. Her agents here think that she may be in tow of their vessel, the Alps, which is one day overdue from Kingston and West Indian ports.

CZAREWITCH AT NICE.

The Dying Nobleman Conveyed from Russia on a Man-of-War.

Nice, Dec. 21.—The czarewitch, who is suffering from consumption, has arrived here. He bore the journey from Russia better than was expected. He sailed from a Black sea port on a Russian warship, the sultan of Turkey giving his permission for the vessel to pass through the Dardanelles.

The Stranded Steamer Spree.

London, Dec. 21.—The steamship Spree being aground on English territory a number of coast guardsmen have been placed on board of her for excise purposes in view of the impending discharge of part of her cargo. It is stated that the vessel was running at a speed of twelve knots per hour when she took bottom. Her bow waterline is about six feet above the sea at low water.

Pardons Issued by Gov. Hastings.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 21.—Governor Hastings, pursuant to the recommendations of the board of pardons, has issued pardons to Stephen De Ayala of Lackawanna county and John Walls of Philadelphia.

Flood at Chicago Abates.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—The deluge in Chicago and its suburbs abated last evening after four days of an almost incessant rain. Much business and residence property were damaged or washed away.

WALL STREET PANICKY

Great Rush To Sell Stocks at Any Figure.

Gilt-Edged Securities as Well as the Rattle Traps Thrown on the Market—Three Firms Forced to the Wall—The Excitement Reaches Chicago—Almost a Wheat Panic.

New York, Dec. 21.—The dealings of the New York stock exchange were attended with unusual excitement yesterday and prices broke badly. The Venezuelan question loomed into greater prominence, and the news relative to the proceedings at Washington was scanned with more concern. Before the opening of the local stock market it was known here that prices for Americans in London had broken anywhere from one to four per cent. The result was a great rush to sell stocks the minute the board opened for business, and the movement continued well into the afternoon. London, which has been selling our securities ever since President Cleveland's message on Venezuelan boundary matters was sent to congress, turned up again at the start with liquidating orders, and, it is said, sold about 50,000 shares of various American stocks. Local operators who have become weakened financially by the recent break in the industrials were forced to sell and thus added to the depression. No discrimination was used, the gilt-edged issues as well as the rattle traps all being thrown on the market apparently regardles of price. Rumors of heavy withdrawals of gold for export to Europe next week also had a demoralizing influence.

Money Jumps to 80 Per Cent.

Some of the estimates were that ten millions will be forwarded, but at the end of the day no one could be found to confirm this or anything like it. Again money which has been ruling at 2 per cent. and under to stock exchange borrowers suddenly rose to 80 per cent. and a number of banks began to call in loans. This helped swell the amount of offerings of long stock and three stock exchange firms were forced to the wall. The firms in question—Messrs. S. S. Sands & Co., Nichols, Frothingham & Co. and De Neufville & Co.—in announcing their suspension stated their insolvency was due to the failure of their customers to respond to call for margins. At the consolidated exchange there were also two small failures. The outpouring of stock and the total lack of support from any quarter led to a break of anywhere from 1 to 15½ per cent.

Foreigners Call in Their Loans.

The Canadian banks were among the first to call in their loans and in answer to inquiries some of the foreign capitalists said they were compelled to use the money to purchase exchange. Borrowers were compelled to seek elsewhere and near the close the Central Trust company came in the market and offered $5,000,000, which broke the money rate from 80 to 6 per cent. In the final dealings the rate worked back to 50 per cent. The decline in money started up a little better demand for stocks generally, and on purchases by bargain hunters and others a recovery of 1 and 7 per cent. took place in the standard issues, and 11 per cent. in lead preferred. A rumor which had some influence at this time was to the effect that the head of the Belmont-Morgan syndicate had been called to Washington.

Chicago Securities Affected.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—The excitement and weakness of the New York stock market extended to local securities. There was no particular flurry, however, and there was a hopeful feeling at the close, but if the New York market continues to display the panicky feeling the sentiment is that Chicago will sympathize fully. There was no uneasiness at the banks and call loans were not advanced. The industrials declined the most, but everything suffered more or less.

Nearly a Panic in Wheat.

Chicago, Dec. 21.—Wheat was dangerously close to a panic yesterday. Twice during the session it appeared as though there was no hope of averting a catastrophe, but happily the feeling underwent a favorable change in each instance. The action of the New York stock market and the war talk, which appeared in all the morning papers, was directly responsible for the alarming condition which prevailed in grain.

Flood in the Mississippi.

St. Louis, Dec. 21.—Telephone messages from Alton, Ill., state that the Mississippi river rose fourteen feet since last night. Forty families on the green below the city were forced to flee to higher ground at midnight.

Appointed Confidential Clerk.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Edwin A. Hill of Connecticut has been appointed confidential clerk to the commissioner of patents, John S. Seymour, vice John W. Street, resigned on account of ill health.

Turks Murdered by Armenians.

Constantinople, Dec. 21.—An official dispatch states that on December 15 the Armenian insurgents at Zeitoun massacred all the Turkish soldiers confined in that city except a colonel and adjutant.

Found Dead in Bed.

Gloversville, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Frank Phar, a wealthy contractor of this city, was found dead in bed at a hotel in Johnstown yesterday afternoon. It is supposed that he committed suicide.

COMING EVENTS.

Announcements of all meetings, etc., will be made in this column, free of charge, if copy is furnished by 10 a. m.

December 21—Meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Debating Society.
December 22—Alexander H. Leo will address the Y. M. C. A. afternoon meeting.
December 23—Opening of Mt. Bethel Hotel—evening.

There seems to be a consolidation fever epidemic. The Somerset Democrat advocates the consolidation of Somerville and Raritan.

The highly inconsistent Seventh-day law is again taken advantage of in this city by a local barber, who last night closed his shop at sundown and will reopen at sundown this evening. He is thus permitted to get around the Sunday closing ordinance recently passed by the Common Council on the petition of the barbers themselves. The law is a farce.

It seems probable that an effort will be made in the Legislature this Winter to cut off from Somerset county the borough of North Plainfield and annex it to Union county for the purpose of creating a greater Plainfield. Somerset will resist this move, as to lose North Plainfield would be to part with a most valuable slice of the county. Doubtless there is a feeling among the more progressive citizens of North Plainfield that they would fare better if united to Union county. The action of Somerset's Board of Chosen Freeholders in refusing to take advantage of the State Aid Road law has to a certain extent soured up to-date people on our too conservative county authorities, but the best place to cure that defect is at the ballot box. North Plainfield ought to stay in Somerset.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

A PARLOR SALE.

Queen Esther Band of Grace M. E. Church Give One on Craig Place.

A choice display of choice goods made the yellow and white parlor sale of the Queen Esther Mission Band of the Grace M. E. church a great success. The sale was held yesterday afternoon and evening at the residence of John Valiant, of Craig place. The tables were tastefully arranged and were daintly decorated in in white and yellow and green. Those in charge were as follows:

Candy table, the Misses Nellie Valiant, Carrie Pangborn, and Mary Hoagland; Pantry shelf, the Misses Addie Carney and Mabel Stevens; Cake table, the Misses Nellie Vermeule and Jennie DeCamp; Fancy table, the Misses Winnie Carroll and Sadie Winckler; Ice Cream table, the Misses Teenie Voehl, Flossy Conroy, Hattie Noehl, Edith Conover and Ethel King. Mrs. H. F. Randolph acted as general director and superintendent of the sale. There was a very good attendance, and the band realized a neat little sum of money.

Dunellen.

The Board of Education have employed Miss Clara M. Davis, of New Paltz, N. Y., as a special teacher for music and drawing.

The following list of officers were selected at the last meeting of the Independent Order of Foresters, Court Dunellen. The court has about 75 members at the present time and is successfully growing. Two new members were initiated at their last meeting: C. R., L. T. Titsworth; V. C. R., L. Schneider; recording secretary, W. Apgar; treasurer, John Peters; senior warden, J. Teauzeau; junior warden, Wm. Brokaw; Sr. B., Allen Wilson; Jr. B., Henry Lyons; chaplain, Isaac Stites; financial secretary, C. F. Enander; trustees, F.W. Vail, S.P. Staples; finance committee, I. W. Laing, A. Gaston; State representatives, P. W. Brakeley, E. T. Titsworth, A. S. Gaston; court physician, P. W. Brakeley; court deputy, C. H. English.

High School Notes.

The last class meeting of this term was one of the most important to the class of '98. The meeting was called to order by Paul W. Kimball who was appointed chairman in the absence of Miss H. Helen Phillips the vice-President of the class last year.

A committee was appointed to invent a "class yell." Arthur Lederer was appointed chairman with the following committeemen: William H. Morgan, Miss Bessie F. Day, Miss Grace Crane and Henry Brower. The following combination of words is the yell, as proposed by the committee, and it was accepted with an unanimous vote of the class: "Hoolaba-Halaba-Kuchee-Ko Whing-Whangser Let-er Go Whoser Whatser Wenser Waite Plainfield High School '98. The following officers were then elected for the ensuing year: President, Paul W. Kimball; Vice-President, Ruth Dalziel; Secretary and Treasurer, H. Helen Phillips; Poet, Grace Crane; Orator, Henry Brower; Historian, Ellen Osgood; Prophet, Arthur Lederer.

NOTES IN DIXIE LAND.

PHASES OF INTELLECTUAL, MORAL AND PHYSICAL NEGRO CHARACTER.

The Confederate Veteran—Sent Away Like Rip Van Winkle—A Visit to the Atlanta Exposition—Trouble at the Midway Plaisance.

[Special Correspondence.]

ATLANTA, —It has been my good fortune for a few days past to run about the city and vicinity, including the exposition grounds, with a youngster to the manner born, who sees everything and either knows its significance or soon finds it out, for he is a live interrogation point. It is like a revelation. I knew, of course, that Atlanta was a cosmopolitan city, and just now we have Turk and Greek, green Chinaman and Arab, and many more "outlanguaged folk," but I had never dreamed that the natives were such a heterogeneous set. My friend points out to me that there are four distinct races of Africans represented in this region, ranging from a tall and angular people with faces much like Jews, down to those "stubby and shovel faced fellows" who sprung from the Kroomen of the Guinea coast; that while the country negroes are growing blacker—that is, the miscegenes there are absorbed—the city negroes are growing lighter, and between the two there rages a sullen feud which is the underlying reason of many of those otherwise unaccountable frays which are of nightly occurrence in the city's black districts.

THE COUNTRY NEGRO.

Negro Feuds.

"I'll wager that if the full truth could be known," says he, "there are a thousand darkies in this city carrying razors or pistols for some other darky, and the only reason there is so little killing is that they are on the lookout for each other. As it is they seldom have a picnic or excursion without at least one getting badly slashed, and here lately they have done a deal of it at their camp meetings. These are the 'regular low down niggers' you hear about and the better class now draw the social line on them very severely. When the distinction between city and country negro was pointed out to me, I wondered that I had not noticed it before, it is so marked. The work and good wages due to the exposition have drawn thousands here from all parts of the state, and even from the lower coast of South Carolina, where, as I take it, the least developed branch of the race in this country is to be found. These newcomers generally get here in rags and penniless and will take any job they can get at any price, and so in addition to the old feud there is a kind of labor war on. "Comin to take de wuck frum we 'uns," is a high crime in the city darky's estimation. I note also that the line is very closely drawn between white and black labor. The dray drivers, the truck handlers, the heavy porters, in short all who do hard and dirty work in the hot sun, are black, but I cannot hear of any colored employee in the cotton mills or any place where close attention to machinery is required.

"It won't do just yet," is the common testimony of employers. "There is a curious streak in the negro mind which we have never been able to overcome. Even the smartest and best educated have it. No matter how carefully he is instructed, or even how dangerous the neglect is, his mind will stray from his work at intervals, and they appear to be tolerably regular intervals too. If the machine makes a sound that is not actually harsh, the negro will soon get to humming and sometimes to singing in a sort of tune with it, and then, if it is a machine he is 'feeding,' he is apt to lose a finger or a part of one. They did put darkies on the little cutters for splitting cane, and in a month or two enough finger ends were nipped to start a small hospital, and there were first joint bones enough in stock to frame a baby. The women, also, are much harder on sewing machines than white women, and you will see in the big laundries that the smoothing rollers are run by white girls. Even the new flatiron with fire inside is too complicated for our old black washerwomen, and they burn the clothes or themselves. Your notion that the lighter colored girls and boys should be put in silk, linen and cotton mills won't do just yet—that is, unless philanthropists will train them thoroughly, but that takes a long time and this is a fast age."

Confederate Veterans.

We took particular notice of the Confederate veterans, of whom thousands were here for a few days, each wearing the white badge of honor, and with rare exceptions I think they were rather superior to others of their age and class. They are on the average considerably older than Federal veterans and, of course, not so well fixed, but when we had decided that the "poor and ragged old Confederate" was a myth we ran upon one who completely filled the bill. He sat on the post-office steps, his back squeezed into the angle formed by the portico and main wall. He was dining on crackers and cheese, and from the crown of his slouch hat to the open toes of his boots he was the perfect wreck of a once splendid manhood. He was Baalbec and Palmyra and the ruins of Carthage all in one. His vest was held together in front with buckskin thongs in lieu of buttons, and straps of the same went over his boots to prevent the parting of sole and upper. And his face was full of character too. His raven black hair, but slightly tinged with gray, curled about a bold forehead, under which glowed two glorious black eyes, and to these his large sequiline nose contributed to make up a singularly strong face. He was from "wire grass Georgey," he told me, and had never been in Atlanta since the evacuation. He had spirit enough to kick when a kodak was trained on him, but kicked too late, as vide cut. Almost every southern state makes some little provision for the old Confederates, and in this connection a very curious thing happened here a few weeks ago. A woman who had considered herself a widow for 31 years and drawn the pittance ever since it was granted was amazed by the appearance of her husband. In the retreat from Kenesaw he had got separated from his command, and believing the struggle hopeless had slipped away in the night and escaped through the lines to east Tennessee. Old age, poverty and homesickness made him tramp to Atlanta, where his old comrades recognized him. But they gave him the marble heart, and he tramped back to where he had acquired a legal residence in Tennessee, to end his days in the poor-house. The only comment of his wife, so far as heard from, was that she would now lose her allowance as a soldier's widow.

Exposition Notes.

As to the exposition, it is no longer denied that there has been inexcusable delay, chiefly on the part of the exhibitors. One week after the opening day I made the rounds of the buildings, and here is what I saw and heard. The first large building I approached was barred by huge planks across the door on which was inscribed in deadly black, "No Admittance." Next I entered the Georgia Manufactures building to find not a single exhibit complete, though several are nearly so. And they will be beauties, too, especially the display of clouded, veined and pink marbles from the now famous Tate quarries. In the Transportation building I found just one exhibit complete, that of the Studebakers of South Bend, Ind., and it's a splendid one. In the Woman's building the contrast between the catalogue and the situation was laughable. Every room where the exhibits were in place was closed to visitors while the finishing touches were being put on, and elsewhere there were stacks of boxes and piles of litter and distressed looking women. The most entertaining view I got there was of a carpenter on a stepladder and two ladies standing by with anxious looks. The carpenter was homely and clumsy and the ladies strikingly beautiful, and so the toot ongsomble was complay, as we say in Paris. It is an interesting fact that all the ladies in charge of this building are good looking and several of them superb beauties, so when the exhibits are in place this department alone will be worth the price of admission.

The Fine Arts hall was completely furnished, and it is quite up to the promise. There was a deal of talk that the nude was to be suppressed, and some of the city preachers gave notice that a line must be carefully drawn, but so far as I can see it is much as at Chicago. The Government building was the first to be complete throughout, and it is worth many days' study. Especially amusing is the array of articles lost in the malls or stopped in transit and sent to the dead letter office. Among them are an alligator, Indian scalp, rattlesnake, centiped, Chinese shoes, cowboy hat, hickory nut doll, whisky flask, false teeth, an Easter egg and a Chinese doll. Of all other buildings it may be said in general that they were about two-thirds complete. The out doors was unqualifiedly bad. The broken stone pave was loosely thrown down, and to use it was like walking over a bed of Indian flint arrowheads. Elsewhere the red clay was worked up into beds of dust and every passing cart or dray raised a rolling cloud of it as bad as on any country road. A thin red cloud hung over the mere and plaza; two hours' walk in it made one look "foxy," and a visitor with black clothes was like a cockroach in a box of madder. Most of the visitors were country people, and from those I talked with the cry was "Water, water. Do tell us where we can get a drink of cold water."

Discontent on the Midway.

Such was the condition. That night there was a general reorganization. Some of the overworked officials were allowed to retire, Colonel W. A. Hemphill was put at the head, and a fresh force of workers put on, and there is a decided improvement. The Midway was in good fix early, and two of the Mexican gentlemen added to the interest of the place by an impromptu duel with the swords designed for the bull fight. Both were mashed on a Chicago girl employed as cashier in the village. The younger one thought himself ill treated and insulted the other, who was with the girl. In an instant they had grabbed the keen rapiers and were slashing at each other in a way to have delighted Dumas' heroes. One was soon down and the other's weapon at his breast, and nothing but a blow from the watchman which paralyzed the victor's arm saved the other's life. Other serious affrays have occurred, but none so bad as this. The trouble is the Midway folks are in a fierce state of discontent because the big crowd hasn't come and are threatening lawsuits and all sorts of trouble.

Sightseeing is not expensive. Refreshments of all kinds are sold in the grounds at the standard city prices elsewhere. Good board and lodging can be had at hundreds of places in the city for $6 per week, and there are cheap lodgings galore. I am, however, greatly disappointed to find Atlanta such a poor fruit market. The last of the state's crop of peaches was picked a month ago, and those since sold are from California and cost perhaps twice as much as in Chicago. The native apples at this date are trying on the jaws. There was a big kick because the trolley lines charge 10 cents to the grounds, but they make as good time as the Southern railway, which charges the same, and we can't expect Chicago rates on a third of the patronage. The real trouble, the only serious trouble, was in the delay, and we may now hope to soon see that rectified.

They are designated as follows: Regular, north; Regular, south; Primitive, Old Two Seed; Regular Baptists (colored), General Baptists, Original Freewill Baptists, United Baptists, Baptist Church of Christ, Separate Baptists, United Brethren in Christ, United Brethren in Christ (old constitution) and four varieties of Plymouth Brethren.

TAILOR MADE GOWNS

THEY ARE MORE THAN HOLDING THEIR OWN WITH OTHER FANCIES.

Description of Model Costumes—Popularity of Postilion Backs and Strap Seams. Leading Winter Silks—The Stock Collar. New Shoe Styles.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK .—In spite of the fanciful Louis XVI rage the tailor gown is more than holding its own. Some of the neatest and most tasteful costumes of this season are tailor made, and for them there is a revival of two old details. One is the strap seams and the other the cunning little postilion back. The tailor suits are made alike of smooth and rough surfaced goods. The smooth materials generally used comprise cheviot, tweed, kersey, covert suitings, serge, cravanette and fine broadcloth. The smooth ones only have the lapped strap seams. The woolly goods are made with smooth pressed seams. Hussar trimming and straps with buttons are seen very often, done in thick castle braid. A very stylish tailor suit had a plain round skirt, not reaching the ground by an inch. The sleeves were medium gigots, with two buttons at the wrist. The basque was cut with a centerpiece forming the middle of the postilion. The side gores were cut separate from the rest of the postilion to insure a perfect fit. The front part had one dart each side and a centerpiece fitting the outline and narrowing to a point in front, extending below the waist in the little strap points, simulating a vest. The basque was formed by two pieces of the cloth cut to fit and neatly stitched. Across the front were 12 straps, six on each side, and three rows of buttons, the center row put an inch and a half below the others, both straps buttoned to the center line of buttons, which brought the straps to a becoming series of points. A stylish military cape of the same material was prepared to wear with this, the same idea in strap trimming being carried out.

LOUIS XVI WALKING GOWN

In rough cheviot boucle, in mixture of several dull colors, there was another model costume for a tailor suit. The skirt was laid in two flat folds each side of the front breadth. This was stitched down from the outside, and at the left hip it extended out in a sharp lap, with two enormous buttons. In the back the skirt was laid in two box plaits. The sleeves were drooping leg o' mutton shape. The basque was double breasted and closed invisibly save for two buttons at the shoulder like those at the skirt. It was pointed in front and had a postilion at the back, finished with a little soutache braid and two buttons like the others, but smaller. With this gown there was a short cape of rough plaid with high boucle curls on each plaid. Four large buttons and two pointed straps held it across the chest. I think it is safe to say that 19 out of 20 tailor suits will have postilion backs. Some are like these, very small and plain; others are 10 and 12 inches long and about 6 wide, with rows of small buttons and loops of soutache braid. They are neat and yet very dressy.

The Louis XVI costumes are certainly growing in favor and are as certainly pretty, but one hardly feels like taking them seriously. There is something too finicky and frivolous about them, but folks are going to wear them.

A very handsome gown after this kind was made by a leading house this week. The skirt was of ashes of roses satin rhadames, in the circular style. The bottom was scalloped and bound with velvet of the same shade—a very neat piece of work it was too. The vest was of silver gray silk mull, with a row of point lace down each side. There was a cunning little cutaway of rich satin brocade, gray ground, with superb crimson roses and foliage for pattern. On each side were three chased gold buttons, and for a collar there was a wreath of roses, shaded from pale pink to crimson. With this went a silver gray pressed plush flat hat. Around this was a wreath of large roses, and on the crown were three large black plumes.

I see that rhadames is to be the leading winter silk. Its superb texture and rich appearance ought to make it popular, particularly for those gowns all of one material. It is far heavier than the grosse faille, or even satin duchesse. It is shown in all the newest colorings. It will stand alone when folded. I note that fur will be largely used to trim handsome home gowns, ivory white having brown or black fur upon it. The effect is very rich and becoming. Fashion says that there will be much ivory and mat white worn for nice occasions in silk, satin, moire and velvet. One may think white velvet would not make an effective gown. Wait until you see one edged with Alaska sable and strewn with fine cut jet beading and fringe before you express an opinion.

The stock collar with its wings, bows, loops and rosettes is back again and to stay all winter without doubt. Shoes are longer, narrower and more pointed than they were. Some are laced and some are buttoned. Slippers are too various to mention.

OLIVE HARPER.

KENTUCKY SHAKERS.

A Visit to the Quaint Old Village of Pleasant Hill.

[Special Correspondence.]

LEXINGTON, —A quaint old place is the village of Pleasant Hill, the home of the Shakers, overlooking the Kentucky river, twenty odd miles from Lexington, and just in sight of the famous "high bridge," on the Cincinnati Southern railway, known to every tourist traveling between the north and the south. The overland route from Lexington to Pleasant Hill is not much traveled in these days of steam and electric conveyances, and comparatively few of the present generation know of its picturesque beauty.

It was my good fortune to be one of a merry party that started from the blue grass metropolis late one August afternoon to drive to the Shaker settlement by moonlight.

It was 10 o'clock when we drove up before the "office building," where the business affairs of the village are conducted and the strangers within the gates are entertained. The "silence bell," the signal for retiring, had been sounded two hours, but we were given a kindly greeting after we had succeeded in arousing good Brother Stephen, the landlord and postmaster, and Sister Jane, the matron.

The Shakers are proverbially generous and hospitable, and the hotel conducted by them once enjoyed an extensive patronage from summer visitors. In recent years the Shaker community has not prospered and the hotel has suffered in the general decline, so that the "office family" now entertains visitors more as a matter of courtesy than as a business undertaking.

According to the rules and regulations for visitors, placarded in the great hallway, the Shakers carry their idea of celibacy to the point of requiring that husband and wife shall occupy separate apartments while guests of the Pleasant Hill hotel. Another of these published rules enjoins guests from taking more food on their plates than they are likely to consume. Sister Jane's fare is so wholesome and appetizing that this latter injunction is in little danger of being violated.

The Shaker settlement at Pleasant Hill was founded in 1805 by four apostles who left the parent body in the east and landed at the site of this pretty village when it was part of a heavy woodland, in which deer and other game roamed at pleasure. The Kentucky river country was then sparsely settled, but the news of the strange doctrines taught by these four men quickly spread, and many there were who went to hear them and became converted to the new faith. The converts put what little property they had into the general stock, and the pioneer band went earnestly to work to carve a common home out of the wilderness. They cleared the land, erected substantial houses of brick and stone, divided into families as the community grew and added to their possessions until at one time they owned 10,000 acres of the richest farming land in all Kentucky.

Shaker settlements are grouped for convenience into "families," about equally divided between men and women, each family occupying a separate house and being governed by an elder and an elderess. At Pleasant Hill there is a "center" family and a family for each point of the compass, the relative locations of the houses suggesting the designations of the several groups. There are two orders of members—probationers and covenanters—novices and full members. In recent years the community has been seriously imposed upon by so called "winter Shakers," who, after a summer of improvidence, pretend in the fall they want to join the society, live off these good people during the winter and abandon them with the opening of spring. As the Shaker religion is founded upon a celibate life, the society can only be recruited from without, and the membership is steadily decreasing in spite of occasional additions.

The men and women are models of industry, every man having at least one occupation, while the women are more especially charged with housekeeping, dairy management and indoor pursuits. Those who wish to marry are privileged to do so, but they must withdraw from the community. The recruits have usually been single men and women, although married persons and their families have been known to "enter into union" and surrender their marital and family relations.

From causes not entirely apparent on the surface the community at Pleasant Hill is not as prosperous as it was a generation ago. The members are growing old and dying out, acceptable recruits are not plentiful, much of the labor on the farms must be employed from the outside, and the financial results are not satisfactory. Several years ago 1,000 acres of land were sold to meet indebtedness and provide additional working capital. An unfortunate patent fence transaction ten years ago, in which two elders were induced to sign a document which afterward turned out to be a seven year note for $10,000, has added to the burdens of the community. The note was not presented, even for the collection of interest, until the end of the seven years, after the two elders were dead. It is generally believed to have been a fraudulent transaction, but the Shakers were without conclusive testimony, and a suit on the note was decided against them, a judgment of upward of $15,000 being entered in the United States court.

The present financial head and business manager is Dr. William Pennebaker, or "Dr. William," as he is known among the brethren and sisters, a gentleman of fine character and a high order of intelligence. Brother Abraham, the "farm deacon," or chief farmer for the community, is one of the jolliest good fellows to be met with in a day's travel. An interesting character is Brother Larz, a Swede, surnamed Ericson, who is chief broommaker, and who delights in expounding the Shaker gospel to visitors who ask him the story of his conversion.

There were at last accounts 18 societies in existence, with a combined membership of 9,000.

With the decline in numbers the religious ceremonies at the celebrated Shaker meeting house at Pleasant Hill have been discontinued except upon special occasions, and each family holds separate services in a large hall in the family house. In these houses the men and women use different doors, stairways and entrances to the chapel and sit or stand apart during religious services.

There are so many interesting phases of Shaker life that one might profitably spend weeks among these benevolent, intelligent and thrifty people studying their history, learning more of their manners and customs and attempting to solve the problem of the future of the remarkable society to which they belong. That the surviving believers may enjoy many more years of peace, prosperity and contentment is the united and sincere wish of the merry party from the blue grass that enjoyed with me the hospitality of Pleasant Hill for a brief season.

isn't saving time any more than going to a cheap place is saving money, because they charge less. Our business is the scientific cleaning and dyeing of clothes. We do this work for as little money as good, honest work can be done for. The money's worth isn't in how the clothes look when you first get them, it's in the wear of the dye, the goodness of the color, the careful cleaning that means keeping clean. Grease spots come back sometimes. That's the cheapness of it. They can be taken out and be made to stay out. That's our way our cheapness. Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

Once more to mark the Christmas morn
Time's murmuring tides their tumults cease,
For on this day a King was born,
The prophet pointed Prince of Peace.

The waifs are singing in the street,
And distant hills and icy dells
Their merry Christmases repeat
And hear the clang of Christmas bells.

Pile up the Yule log's ancient flame;
Bring in the feast of savory worth.
Today the name of every name
Shall sweep the circuit of the earth.

And burdens of the soul shall flee
Since he took up the cross for us,
And all the sorrows that can be
Shall turn to triumphs glorious.

Now lovely maids whose hearts beat high
Shall stand beneath the mistletoe,
While in the purpled eastern sky
Sweet symbols of this day shall glow.

Let evergreen and holly make
Their wreaths for every human door
And good cheer, for the Master's sake,
Come without stint to rich and poor.

Ring, Christmas bells, this joyous morn!
Let not your peals or music cease,
For on this day a King was born—
The gentle, heaven crowned Prince of Peace.

JOEL BENTON.

Christmas Changes.

The Yule log has given place to the steam radiator, the furnace register and the base burning heater, but we who are warmed by any of these means on Christmas eve are quite as likely to enjoy Christmas as were our forefathers and foremothers, who used to celebrate its festivities when gathered about the old time fireplaces. There have been changes in heating apparatus, but human nature and Christmas remain as they were and will probably so remain after the present apparatus has been displaced by electric heaters. We grumble about our furnaces, our radiators and our stoves and will probably grumble about our electric heaters, but in Yule log times our ancestors were often roasted on one side and frozen on the other.

Christmas Stockings.

A street urchin stood peering into the window of a toyshop one evening just before Christmas watching a prosperous father buying presents. Bigger and bigger the boy's eyes grew as the purchasing went on. Finally, when it was all over and the man left the store, the lad sidled up to him and with great diffidence asked:

"Wuz all them things you bought fer one boy, mister?"

"Why, yes, certainly," said the man impatiently as he turned away with the bundles under his arms.

The street boy's eyes grew bigger yet.

"Gee whiz!" he whispered under his breath. "Rich men's boys must wear awful big stockings!"

A CHRISTMAS TURKEY.

How an Old Tar Came Near Being Cooked For Dinner.

"I never think of Christmas turkeys without rememberin the time I come near to bein the turkey myself," said an aged sailor to the group of seamen who surrounded him as he sat upon the end of an old spar on South street, New York.

The ancient mariner's name was Jack Brown, and as he had followed the sea as man and boy for over 50 years and had cruised in every part of the world the group listened in respectful silence, well knowing that when old Jack Brown started to spin a yarn it was sure to be well worth hearing.

"It was away back in 1840, and I was little more than a youngster then—only about 18. I had bunked aboard the Jolly Rover; but, mates, she didn't prove to be what her name indicated. We left this port for Melbourne, weathered Cape Horn as safe from Davy Jones' locker as a mountain a mile inland, and all was smooth goin until we were a week's sail into the south Pacific. Then a storm struck us that sent us scuddin along under bare poles like a Mother Carey's chicken afore a cyclone.

"I've run afore many a gale, mates, but that hurricane could give points to any of 'em. One minute the Jolly Rover would plunge out of sight into a big wave, and the next she would seem to be perched like the ark on a Mount Ararat of water. The gale blew nearly all night without a moment's pause. All we could do was to let her run. Suddenly she struck with a shock that made every timber creak. I was below, but I rushed on deck, expectin the ship would go down. An instant later a big wave came over the rail, washed me overboard and swept me on and on. I kept my head above water part of the time, every moment expectin to be dashed agin the rocks. To my joy, I was washed up on a sandy beach. Luckily I had strength enough left to get up and run inland a few feet before the next wave caught me.

"Day was just breakin, and as I looked around I saw Captain Stout, Second Mate Bill Fry and Jim English crawlin out on a big wave and helped 'em up the beach.

"'Look!' yells Fry, shakin the water from his eyes. 'There she goes!'

"As we glanced in the direction of the Jolly Rover she staggered like some gigantic animal with a mortal wound and sank beneath the waves. We watched the beach for an hour, but not another man came ashore. Every Jack Tar of 'em was drowned. Then we started inland to explore the place. We didn't feel at all at ease, mates, because Captain Stout figured as how we must be on one of the smallest of the Solomon islands, which we knew was inhabited by the toughest lot of cannibals and head hunters in the Pacific.

"We realized that we were dead men if we were captured, and we kept a sharp lookout for the cannibals while we were takin in the lay of the land. We saw many cocoanut and breadfruit trees, but the island was apparently uninhabited. I say apparently because about half an hour after we landed a dozen ugly, tattooed savages leaped upon us from the bushes. A knocked one of 'em off his legs before a big warclub brought me to the grass, and Stout, Fry and English had no better luck. The savages were armed with clubs, bows and arrows and bone pointed spears, and their hair was thick and bushy and was stuck full of sticks for hairpins.

"We were all bound hand and foot, and then the savages carried us to a village near by, where we were thrown into a hut and guarded by two big black fellows armed with clubs.

"'Mates,' says English, 'did you notice what was hangin up agin the hut next to us?' We all said, 'No.' 'Well,' says he, 'it was the flesh of human bein's, and, as Captain Stout feared, these fellers with clubs is cannibals.'

"'If they are, our goose is cooked, and —and so are we,' the captain says with a hollow sort of a laugh. 'Blast my eyes,' he says, 'if tomorrow ain't Christmas day too! Perhaps these blacks are goin to have us help 'em make their turkey dinner a success.' We all shuddered, and Jack Brown for one thought he had seen New York for the last time. We lay in the hut all day and the followin night. The savages fed us very well, and while we enjoyd the mess we couldn't help thinkin that the black villains were givin it to us to make us more fat and eatable. Next mornin we heard a great yellin and poundin of tamtams, and Fry, who could look through a crack in the hut, said that a big party of blacks had just returned from somewhere in large war canoes and had with 'em a dozen native prisoners.

"'It looks,' says Fry, 'as if our captors have been makin war on another tribe that lives in this village. The prisoners they have with 'em evidently got away when the village was attacked, but were chased inland and captured.'

"Fry's guess proved correct, and we soon found that our captors did not live on the island, but on another large one about five miles away. Just after sunrise Christmas day we were loaded into big, handsomely carved war canoes along with the dozen native prisoners, and the savages paddled across a wide channel to their own island. On the shore was a native village, and about 1,000 dancin, yellin drum beatin blacks of both sexes welcomed the return of the war canoes, loaded down as they were with Christmas turkeys.

"Well, mates, the savages carried us up the beach a short distance and dropped us near an ugly idol 20 feet high. Several hundred fires were built near by, and then most of the savages gathered in a circle around the idol. Pretty soon a dozen of the tallest blacks, all armed with long, sharp spears, danced around the idol to the music of a hundred tamtams, and then they ranged the dozen native prisoners in a line facin the idol and speared the poor blacks through and through.

"I won't describe the horrible scene that followed, except to say that we lay there expectin every minute would be our last and saw the cannibals cook and devour their victims.

"'They're savin us for dessert,' says the captain.

"But they didn't save us long. In a very few minutes the 12 big savages were leadin us toward the idol, and we were savin goodby to one another. Death seemed very near when suddenly we heard the boom of a dozen cannon. An instant later shells exploded right and left among the cannibals, killin scores of them. The remainder took one look at the British man-o'-war, lyin in the channel half a mile away, and then fled, panic stricken.

"We sailors were soon tackin for the beach with every sail drawin, you can bet, and when the warship's boats picked us up Jack Brown for one was heartily thankin heaven he'd saved his wishbone!"

EARLE H. EATON.

ARMENIAN CHRISTMASES.

One of the Persecuted Race Tells of Observances and Customs of His People.

It is not as easy to describe the customs of the Armenian people in their celebration of Christmas as it would be to tell of the English or the American ways of celebrating, because the customs of my people differ according to their habitat. Scattered as the Armenians are from Constantinople and other cities to the little villages in Asia Minor, there are many observances that are almost purely local. Some of these, however, are extremely interesting.

To begin, Christmas is not observed on the same day with us as it is here, for there is a difference of 12 days in the calendar, as everybody knows. So our Christmas falls on your Jan. 6. Coming, as it does, so near New Year's day, it is not so much of a social occasion as it probably would be otherwise, but as a religious festival it ranks with Easter, and the two days are the principal feasts of the year.

The religious services are most impressive. Our churches differ from yours in some ways, for there are no pews in them, and we adorn them as richly as we are able to do. The principal service on Christmas day is a sort of high mass that is celebrated before daybreak. Everybody who is able to do so goes to this mass, at which the highest church dignitary in the neighborhood always officiates. If there is an archbishop near, he is the one; if not, it is the bishop. And everybody wears his very best clothes. It is a general custom to give the children a new suit of clothes if possible on Christmas. If the parents cannot afford so much, they will at least contrive to give some article of dress, if it is only a pair of new shoes.

This has led to another custom which is in vogue especially in Constantinople, where the Armenian children are all educated in our parochial schools. These schools are located in the churchyards and are, of course, supported by the churches. Some of the children are very poor, and a collection is always taken up at the Christmas service in the church for the purpose of buying new clothes for the children whose parents cannot clothe them properly. There is one very benevolent gentleman, a merchant in Constantinople, whom I know very well, who always buys a great number of suits at Christmas—from 20 to 60 or 70, according to what he can afford.

The making of presents at Christmas is not perhaps as general among our people as it is here, though in the cities we are rapidly adopting European customs. Presents are given, but most frequently by superiors to their inferiors or by elders to children.

After the church services the people greet one another with a special salutation. One says, "Christ is born," and the reply is, "Blessed is the birth of Christ." This is as they return to their homes from church.

Later in the day there is a general interchange of visits, much like the fashion of New Year's calls, which is still kept up in some parts of this country, though with this difference: It is deemed almost obligatory for inferiors to call on superiors, and for the younger members of the community to call on the elder. There is, of course, no law about this, but if an employer, for example, should not receive a call from each of his employees, he would feel that his dignity had not been properly respected, and the employee would feel that he had been rude, to say the least. I remember that my father used to reprove me severely if I failed to call on any one who had a right to expect a visit from me.

When the visitor arrives at the house of the person he is calling on, he is received according to his station. If he is a dependent or a servant or hired man, he may very likely receive a small present of money; perhaps only as much as 25 cents, or perhaps $5 or $10, or he may, especially in the country, receive food or clothing. If he is a social equal, he will be entertained with arrack and fruits and sweets. Fruits are much used, too, for trifling gifts.

I should say that the greeting on entering the house on one of these visits is similar to the morning salutation. The guest says, "Christ is born and made manifest to us," and the reply is, "Blessed are the birth and the manifestation of Christ."

One custom is worth mentioning. The smaller boys in each village go out in parties on Christmas day, carrying bags, and go from house to house singing a sort of Christmas carol or song about the birth of Christ. I cannot recall the exact words, but it tells the old story and has a refrain: "Good tidings! Good tidings!"

They go on the roofs of the houses, for the houses of the villagers are almost underground, and the roofs are easily reached, and as they sing they let the bags down in front of the doors, and the people put in them whatever they feel disposed to give. Sometimes it will be a little money, and sometimes it will be something the boys can easily sell for money to have a good time with, and sometimes it will be some kind of trash put in for fun, but everybody is good natured.

Christmas among my people is hardly what it is here, but the spirit of the day is the same, and perhaps it is only poverty that makes the difference.

It was the morning after Christmas and the

And he continued his work of destruction.

CHRISTMAS IN CAMP.

HON. AMOS J. CUMMINGS RELATES AN AMUSING EXPERIENCE.

How He Added a Pot of Soup, a Little Sugar, Some Molasses and a Canteen of Yeast to the Christmas Mess—On Short Rations.

My recollections of Christmas experiences in the army are mostly connected with the matter of grub, and I suppose every other old soldier, if he is frank enough, will admit the same thing. As a rule we always looked for boxes from home on Christmas day, and those boxes were tolerably certain to have something in them that made a delightful change from the ordinary rations. When we got those boxes, we celebrated Christmas. When we didn't, we didn't celebrate. Christmas was pretty much the same as any other day under those circumstances.

The particular Christmas that stands up above all others in my memory was that of 1862. We had gone into camp after Fredericksburg, at a place called White Oak church, about six miles from Falmouth, Va., and lay there when Christmas came. We looked for our boxes, of course, for we knew the people at home would not forget us, but no boxes came. We learned afterward that they were only three or four miles away, but that didn't help us then, and we didn't get them for several days.

It was bitter cold. Only two days after Christmas three or four men were frozen to death on picket, and it was almost as cold then, but even worse than the weather was the notion of feeding on hard tack and salt horse, which was about all we had, while the people at home had turkey and plum pudding. In the morning, though, there seemed to be no help for it, and while we didn't grin we thought we had to bear it.

At noon, however, there came a little alleviation. One of the men—I remember his name was Hageman—came in from picket duty with the bones of a sheep that he had kicked up in the snow. Some guerrillas had been along there and had killed and eaten the poor brute and left the bones. They had mighty little meat on them, but they were full of marrow, and we boiled them up. There was a Dutch sergeant in the company who had a potato, and somebody managed to steal two onions from the quartermaster; so we had some soup.

It was a change, and so it was welcome. I don't remember to have enjoyed any soup since then quite as much as I did that, but somehow it didn't seem to fill the bill of fare very well for Christmas, and we were ready to take almost any kind of a chance for something good.

My brother was in the same company with me, and he was on guard at brigade headquarters that day. We all knew that there were some provisions in the storehouse there, but the question was how to get at them. It meant running the risk of being shot by some sentinel, besides the certainty of severe punishment in case we should get caught trying to steal anything, yet there were some of us willing to take the chance.

When my brother came in after being relieved, he came to my tent in great glee.

"I've got it!" he said after making sure that nobody was looking or listening. "What have you got?" I asked. "Sugar," he exclaimed. "Where is it?" said I. "Here," said he, showing me his musket. He had managed to get into the storehouse long enough to pack the barrel of his gun full of sugar, but didn't get anything else.

"Sugar is good," said I, "but if there is sugar in the storehouse there ought to be some whisky there too." And I made up my mind to get some of that whisky that night if it was a possible thing.

There was a corporal named Nason in the company, who was always ready to take chances if there was anything to be gained by it, and he wanted some of that whisky as much as I did. It was cold enough to make a temperance orator long for a nip. I hunted Nason up, and we agreed to start together when it got dark enough. Meantime we managed to steal an auger from the quartermaster, and that, with two canteens, made all the outfit we thought we needed.

Fortunately it was a dark night, and we knew the lay of the land all right, so we had a comparatively easy time to dodge the sentries. It wasn't really easy, but it proved to be a good deal easier than getting away from the place afterward. It took us half an hour of hiding and dodging to get through the line, but we managed it and found ourselves, somewhere about 10 o'clock, under the storehouse.

It was a rough sort of a shanty, built on the side of a hill, and there was room enough to move around under it all right, but the trouble was, we had neither of us been inside the building and we hadn't any notion where the things were packed, so we could only guess where the whisky barrel was, and that was what we were after.

We took turns boring holes in the floor at random, and it wasn't long before we found out that we had a pretty dirty job on hand, to say nothing of a good bit of hard work, but we persevered for something like an hour before we could strike anything that would leak through. We struck all sorts of things that wouldn't leak, but we had no means of knowing what they were and no way of getting them down if we had known.

At length, after an hour, we struck a barrel out of which a slow thick stream began to trickle. We couldn't think what it was till we tasted it, and then we knew it was molasses. We used a little language for a minute or two, but even molasses was a treat, and we couldn't afford to despise it. So we filled one canteen with that and plugged the hole up as well as we could, so as not to waste the stuff unnecessarily. I am afraid the plug wasn't a very good one, but we did the best we could.

Then we went to work again. It was a little discouraging, but we didn't propose to give up. We bored hole after hole. It seems to me we must have bored 50 or more before we got through, and it took some minutes for each one. Sometimes we would go through the floor and hit nothing, and sometimes, as I said, it would be something solid.

At last we struck something that spouted like a geyser, only it spouted downward. I was right under it and I was flooded in a minute. I scrambled out of the way as quickly as possible, and we investigated. It was yeast. Well, yeast didn't seem to be as near what we wanted as the molasses was, but we didn't propose to lose any tricks, so we filled the other canteen with that, after we had had a good drink apiece. It was not quite equal to the best beer, but it was a sort of substitute for it, and we enjoyed it hugely.

We didn't succeed in plugging that up as well as we did the molasses barrel, though we did try. The yeast was too much for us, and I am seriously afraid that that whole barrel of yeast was spilled.

By this time we had pretty well despaired of finding the whisky, but we kept on trying awhile longer, until it seemed as if we had riddled the floor so completely that there was no place left above where a barrel could stand. Finally we gave it up and began to plan a retreat.

The side of the hill in the rear of the house was covered with a sort of ice formation that was 300 or 400 feet wide and sloped downward at a pretty steep angle. We had surveyed this carefully before going in, and I said to Nason that if we could make a rush over to where that ice was we could get down the hill a good deal faster than any of the sentinels would care to come after us, for all we had to do was to jump on the ice and slide down. That seemed to be about the best scheme we could think of, so we watched our chance and made a rush.

We hadn't got to the edge of the hill, and that was only a few feet from the storehouse, when we heard the sentries cry, "Who goes there?" It really wasn't worth while for us to stop and answer them under the circumstances, so we kept right on. There were two or three shots fired after us, but we did not get hit. I don't imagine the men on guard were very anxious to kill us, for they must have understood in an instant what we were about and probably stopped long enough to remember that they would have liked the chance to try the same thing.

So our Christmas extras that year were a pot of soup, a little sugar, a little molasses and a canteen of yeast. And I think perhaps we enjoyed the yeast more than any of the other things. The real Christmas festival did not come for some days afterward, when our boxes arrived, and I remember that I had a glorious time, for there was a big Yorkshire plum pudding in my box and three pounds of killikinick tobacco, and the tobacco was a perfect godsend.

But before that, on the morning after Christmas day, there was the very mischief to pay in camp, and if Nason and I had been found out, we would have been in for severe punishment, for we had done a great amount more of mischief than we knew anything about.

It appeared that there was a politician of some standing—I think he was an alderman from Boston or somewhere—who had been in camp for some days looking for the remains of his brother, who had been killed some time before, and he had found them Christmas morning. The body had been disinterred and put in a handsome coffin that the alderman had brought from home, and the coffin had been put in the storehouse over night.

Of course we didn't know it was there. Perhaps it might have made a difference to Nason and me if we had known. I don't know as I care about expressing an opinion on such a delicate question. At all events we didn't know, and naturally we couldn't be expected to bore holes through the floor in as many places as we did bore them without hitting the coffin, and as a matter of fact we had bored three or four holes in it. It hadn't really spoiled the coffin for actual service, but it had certainly damaged it to some extent.

Well, the politician made a row, and the commanding officer ordered a general search of the camp, to see if any trace could be found of the miscreants—meaning Nason and me—who had been guilty of the desecration. It was a pretty rigorous search, too, and our tents were ransacked thoroughly, but long before they got around to our quarters Nason and I had the molasses and sugar, or what was left of them, safely buried. Of course the yeast was all gone, and there wasn't a trace of our crimes left.

I suppose it would be easy to tell a more sentimental story about a soldier's Christmas, but the sentiment that moved us most powerfully when we were on short rations in those days was hunger.

PORTRAITURES OF CHRIST.

Singular Diversion of Views by the Great Masters.

IT IS a singular fact that throughout the entire New Testament there is nothing regarding the personal appearance of Christ, and the early fathers of the church, who doubtless knew something of how he looked while on earth, are equally silent about it. A portrait of him has been claimed by some to have come down from apostolic times, and that copies of it were taken and are still extant. That this statement has no foundation in fact would appear to be evident from the circumstance that the old masters, in their representations of the Saviour, follow no recognized model and are as various in such portraitures as were their conceptions of what the real Christ should be.

This diversity must be apparent to all who have examined such paintings in the Louvre and other large collections. In Fra F. Lippi's "Madonna and Child," for instance, an exquisite creation, the face of the infant Saviour, though perfect in contour, has a look of precocious intelligence which seems unnatural in one so young. Carlo Dolce, Murillo and others, though displaying different types of child life, are perhaps equally successful in conveying a nearly satisfying ideal in their representations of the child Christ. They all, however, pay no regard to ethnic considerations in their work, and as a result, the face is Italian, French, Spanish or Flemish, as the case may be, rather than Jewish, as it should have been.

In paintings of the man Christ there is a still greater diversity noticeable, as would be naturally expected. The face of Christ in F. R. Francia's painting, "The Virgin and Two Angels Weeping Over Dead Body of Christ," is probably the vinest conception of it ever traced on canvas. Though the face is evidently that of the dead, all the emotions of the soul seem to be mirrored upon it. In Borgognone's "Christ Bearing the Cross," Correggio's "Ecce Homo," Guido Reni's "Ecce Homo," all marvelous creations, as well as in others perhaps equally meritorious, however different they may be, they at least convey an ideal Christ, which does not shock Christian sensibilities, as does Munkacsy's representation of the Saviour in his famous painting "Christ Before Pilate."

NEIL MACDONALD.

The Usual Way.

Mrs. Youngbryde—What are you going to give your husband for Christmas?

Mrs. Longwed—I think I shall give him a new mahogany tea table—I've wanted one a long time.

Skeleton of a Lay Sermon For Christmas.

First.—Young women who are thinking of giving Christmas remembrances to their pastors should remember that the straight and narrow path is not an easy road to travel at all times, and therefore stout walking shoes may be more appropriate than embroidered slippers.

Second.—Measure the value of the gifts you receive by the motives of the givers and not by their intrinsic value. Oftentimes when the proper standard is used the humblest gift, costing but a few cents, is found to be of more real worth than the richest, most expensive present.

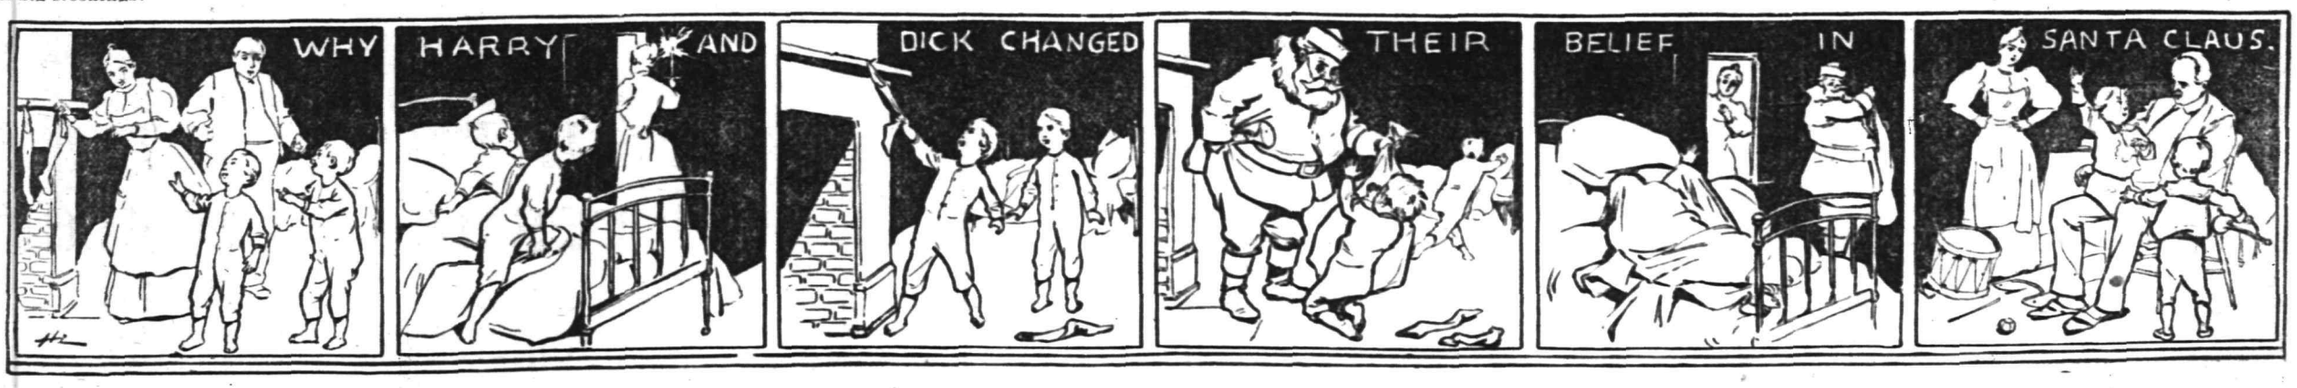
Third.—If you have made up your mind to give So-and-so a Christmas gift just because you think you are going to receive one from that quarter, you would better abandon the idea altogether. Christmas gifts prompted by anything but a desire to confer a real pleasure upon the recipient had best go ungiven.

Fourth.—It's a good thing to eat the old time Christmas dainties at Christmas time—the rich black plum pudding, the boar's head and the juicy baked goose—just the same as our forbears did. But if you have indigestion the next morning do not grumble. Go out into the sunshine and walk five miles, or, better yet, hunt up an ax and a log of wood and make the chips fly for an hour or two. It is a law of nature that whoso will not physically labor shall not overeat with impunity.

Fifth.—It's a good thing to remember that the recording angel is likely to make a bigger entry to your credit on his books because of the gift of a half worn overcoat to a shivering fellow man or a dinner to a half starved and possibly grimy urchin than because of a costly jewel given to a favorite of fortune.

Sixth.—Christmas is the day of all the year on which the unlovely traits of your character should be smothered, and it would be a great thing for you if you were to manage in some way this year to get rid of those traits altogether.

In England the day after Christmas, "boxing day" as it is called, is a day of greater festivity among the working classes than Christmas itself. "Boxing day" is so called from the Christmas boxes, each containing money given by the rich to the poor in olden times.



LINCOLN'S BOYHOOD.

The Story of the Poverty of His Early Home In Kentucky.

The Kentucky home into which the child came was a poor one. The cabin was not "the picturesque, vine clad one of the story books," says a resident of the country who has followed in detail the scenes of the president's early life, "but one standing out in a clearing, with only one small room, a door, but no window, a stick chimney, with open cracks, through which swept the winds, the rain, the snows of winter and the swarms of mosquitoes in summer. We take an inventory of the furniture of that cabin—bunks, the mattress of dry leaves, the slab stools, the open fireplace. We note the absence of even the necessities of life—neither stove, window nor floor." The only one of Mr. Lincoln's early acquaintances now living, Mr. Austin Gollaher, said to a representative of this magazine in describing the poverty of these early surroundings:

"At the time of Abraham's birth his father was away from home. Some of her neighbors who were with Mrs. Lincoln at the event learned that she was destitute of anything in the nature of food. Some of the ladies called upon Judge William Cessna, one of the most prominent men of that time in this section, in Mrs. Lincoln's behalf, and he donated flour and other articles of food."

The picture is dark, but fortunately there are those who remember pleasanter things about it. Christopher Columbus Graham, whose statements have already been quoted, says of some of the stories of the poverty in Thomas Lincoln's family:

"It is all stuff about Tom Lincoln keeping his wife in an open shed in a winter when the wild animals left the woods and stood in the corners next the stick and clay chimneys so as not to freeze to death, or, if climbers, they got on the roof. They had a cow and calf, milk and butter, a good feather bed; for I have slept in it while they took the buffalo robes on the floor, because I was a doctor. They had home woven 'kiverlids,' big and little pots, a loom and wheel, and William Hardesty, who was there, too, can say with me that Tom Lincoln was a man and took care of his wife."—Ida M. Tarbell in McClure's Magazine.

BISHOP POTTER'S IDEA.

A Fitting Punishment For the Man Who Tells a "Chestnut."

Bishop Potter, the dignified bishop of New York, is the joker of the house of bishops. He is always looking for a chance to make some of his brethren of the cassock the object of a little harmless laughter. He is also the raconteur in chief of the august body to which he belongs. At almost any time when the house is not in session he is the center of a little group of clergymen and bishops to whom he is telling one of his droll stories. His slow yet easy manner of narration and the drooping eyelids, which remind one of Mgr. Satolli, add greatly to the effect of his anecdotes.

The accommodating bishop of Iowa introduced a Journal man to Bishop Potter one morning while he was regaling two of his associates with an account of a device of his own invention for the suppression of story tellers who deal in ancient tales.

"Do you know what we say of reporters in New York?" asked the bishop.

The reporter ventured a conjecture that it was nothing of a complimentary nature.

"We say, 'Take them out and slay them,'" replied the bishop.

Then he went on with his story.

"Some of us were talking the other night," he proceeded slowly, "about people who tell old stories at dinners. I suggested that it would be a happy idea for the host to conceal a large chestnut in a group of palms and flowers in the center of the table and have this chestnut connected with a mechanical contrivance which could be worked by a button placed at each guest's seat. When any one was telling a story, the moment a guest recognized the ear marks of age he would press the button, and the chestnut would rise up in the center of the table. And then he would be silenced? Oh, no. He would turn to the interrupter and say, 'Finish it.' If he were not able to do it, he would be fined a liberal amount. If he could finish it, the man who began it would be fined, but in all cases the fines are to go to foreign missions."—Minneapolis Journal.

Origin of the Loving Cup.

There is an inquiry as to the origin of the loving cup. The best account of its creation comes from the late Lord Lyons, British embassador at Paris. According to his narrative, King Henry of Navarre, who was also Henry IV of France, while hunting became separated from his companions, and feeling thirsty called at a wayside inn for a cup of wine. The serving maid on handing it to him as he sat on horseback neglected to present the handle. Some wine was spilled over, and his majesty's white gauntlets were soiled. While riding home he bethought him that a two handled cup would prevent a recurrence of this, so his majesty had a two handled cup made at the royal potteries and sent it to the inn. On his next visit he called again for wine, when, to his astonishment, the maid, having received instructions from her mistress to be very careful of the king's cup, presented it to him, holding it herself by each of its handles. At once the happy idea struck the king of a cup with three handles, which was promptly acted upon, as his majesty quaintly remarked, "Surely out of three handles I shall be able to get one." Hence the loving cup.—Philadelphia Times.

Count Taafe an Irish Peer.

Count Taafe is an Irish peer. He is the eleventh Baron Ballymote and Viscount Taafe, creations which date from 1628, in the reign of Charles I. His elder brother, on whose death in 1873 he succeeded to the family honors, proved his claim to vote at the election of Irish representative peers before a committee of privileges of the house of lords. The number of Irish peers at present is 174. Of these 85 are peers of the United Kingdom. The remaining 89, of whom Viscount Taafe is one, are peers of Ireland only. That the Irish peerage is a rapidly diminishing body may be proved from the fact that no fewer than 268 peers of Ireland were created by George III alone.—Westminster Gazette.

Sagacious Sage.

One of the stories told of Russell Sage is that when a thief one day dropped a bill near him in order to draw his attention from counting some money he had drawn at the bank Mr. Sage put his foot on the bill, thanked his informant, finished his count, stowed his own money securely away and then smilingly put the thief's bill also in his pocket.

BIG CHINA CLOSET.

The Imperial Treasures of the Winter Palace at St. Petersburg.

Perhaps the largest residence in the world is the winter palace at St. Petersburg. It has 700 rooms, many of them of enormous size and some so large that the White House at Washington could be erected in them, portico and all. It is said that 5,000 soldiers have at different times been sheltered under its great roof. The storerooms of the winter palace are filled with the china of the Russian czars as far back as Catherine the Great, and here a woman collector was able to obtain samples by purchasing them of the attendants, who brought the pieces to her hotel one at a time for several days afterward and demanded only moderate prices—not more than some plates would be worth at a shop without considering the value of association.

The imperial china is all of Russian manufacture and does not equal in quality nor in luster the product of Austria or Germany or France. It is plain and coarse, and the decorations are not very artistic, although there is in the winter palace a world famous table service of solid silver overlaid with gold that will furnish a banquet of 500 covers. It dates back to the time of the crazy Emperor Paul, who was the son of Catherine the Great.

The plates used by all the czars are larger than the ordinary size. Those of Catherine were ornamented with conventional designs of blue and gold and bore the imperial crest in the center. Nicholas, "The Iron Czar," as he was called, used enormous plates and cups and saucers of the commonest china, heavy and coarse, which were also decorated with blue, and in the center bore his initial, with a crown and cross. The china of Alexander II, who was assassinated by the nihilists, was a little better in quality, but of similar designs, only it bore the initial A and an eagle with outspread wings. That of his successor is of the same pattern and bears the same initial, with the distinctive III under the A to indicate that it belonged to the third monarch of that name.

It is said that the private china in the smaller palaces is very different and of much better quality. It was imported by the empress from England, but strangers are not allowed to visit them, and it is impossible to obtain a sample.—San Francisco Chronicle.

LINCOLN AS A LOVER.

How He and Miss Mary Todd Made Up Their Little Tiff.

A writer in the Chicago Times-Herald says: C. C. Brown of Springfield tells the following story, which he has every reason to believe is absolutely true: "Some time in the autumn of 1840, after Lincoln and Mary Todd had been 'keeping company' and after it was understood they were engaged, some trouble arose between them, and they became estranged. Each was anxious for a reconciliation, yet neither would make the initial advance.

"John J. Hardin of Jacksonville made a party, and a number of Springfield people were invited. Among them was Mary Todd. Lincoln did not accompany them. After dinner all the young men brought around saddle horses and took the young women for a gallop to the places of interest in the vicinity. So skillfully did Mr. Hardin and his wife manipulate the start that the whole party had arranged itself into couples mounted and prepared to ride before it was discovered that Miss Todd had no escort. Deeply chagrined, but in perfect control, she disclaimed having had any intention of going with them, and, rallying her woman's tact, speeded them gayly.

"Then she sat down on the porch in no very pleasant mood, and Hardin and his wife were left alone. While she sat there Lincoln arrived, entirely without a suspicion of his coming so far as she was concerned. And it was there their differences were arranged, and when the party returned they thought they understood why Mary Todd had refused to go riding with them.

"In the following November Abraham Lincoln and Mary Todd were married."

Structure of Water Plants.

We cannot conceive of a higher animal without veins and lymph vessels. But in water plants we not seldom miss the long and broad ducts of which the vascular system of land plants is constituted. At all events the vessels do not perform so important a part in the vegetable kingdom as the circulation of the life juices in the animal kingdom. Their principal service is to carry water from the roots to the leaves. From this we can understand how organs essential to the life of land plants can be dispensed with in water plants. They do not need a special conducting of water, because they are surrounded by that element on every side.

The most marked instance of the absence of internal organs is met in an alga which forms green fields in the deeper parts of the Mediterranean sea. It has slender, branching, horizontally creeping stems which develop above in the water into leaves and below in the sand into fine thread roots. But the whole plant, often many feet in length, consists only of single gigantic cells. A tough skin incloses its juices, which flow in a continuous stream through the stem, leaves and roots of the curious growth, here taking up through the skin and assimilating mineral substances, there producing and transforming organic matter, and at the same time advancing the growth and increase of the whole.—M. Busgen in Popular Science Monthly.

The Largest Sailing Ship.

The largest sailing ship now navigating the waters of this planet is La France, a vessel of the French merchant marine, which was completed in the spring of 1890. Its dimensions are 360 feet by 48 feet 9 inches. Its carrying capacity is about 6,150 tons and its depth about 30 feet. Its sails are said to have an area of exactly 46,000 square feet. The vessel is used principally in the trade between France and South America.—St. Louis Republic.

THE BANK OF ENGLAND.

Some Interesting Facts Concerning That Great Monetary Depository.

The Bank of England is two centuries old, and it is the greatest bank in the world. In its early days the bank employed 54 clerks, and the yearly salary list amounted to but little over $20,000, the chief accountant receiving $1,225 a year. At the present time the number of employees is 1,500.

No note of the 50,000 or so issued daily is ever issued again. Each note as it is paid in is cancelled and an account kept of its filing. One of the curiosities of the bank is a £25 note which was paid in after being out 111 years. In the bank album for large notes and other curiosities is a £1,000,000 bank note which was once issued for convenience in a transaction involving a large amount of money.

Whether lost or stolen, the bank's notes will always be paid. Once a clerk ran away with about $100,000 worth of notes. For six months the theft and number of notes were advertised, and at the end of that time a Jew appeared with them and demanded that they be paid. On being refused he went to the exchange and raised such an outcry, saying that as the bank refused to pay its own notes it must be insolvent, that the bank called him back and paid him the full amount of the stolen notes.

Another time one of the directors deposited $150,000 and took a single note. He put the piece of paper on the mantelpiece and fell asleep. On waking he found the note gone. He thought it had fallen into the fire and got another note, giving a guaranty that if the first note ever turned up he would be responsible for it. Thirty years later, the man having died in the meantime, the first note was presented for payment at the bank, and the bank stood the loss. The man's estate had been divided, and nothing could be recovered.

Clerks of standing and character are selected to remain at the bank every night of the year and on Sundays and bank holidays. A guard of soldiers is on duty every night, and they are assisted by a body of watchmen consisting of porters and workmen fully trained how to act in case of an emergency.—Chicago News.

PHILOSOPHY FOR SMOKERS.

Known by His Cigars and the Way He Smokes Them.

As a test of character tobacco is useful. A man may be known by the cigars he keeps as well as by the way he smokes them. No man of refined taste will smoke a bad cigar. The philosophic smoker takes his comfort in a leisurely way, amid proper surroundings, and is able to shut himself out from the world and all its petty annoyances as he follows the curling wreath into the dreamland of reverie.

The man who allows his cigar to go out a great many times and relights it in successive spasms of fidgetiness may be usually set down as an incoherent character, quite prone to get off his trolley, so to speak, and certainly lacking in tenacity of purpose. The man who fumbles his cigar a good deal and manages to get the wrapper unraveled and the fire all on one side may be dismissed as a nervous person, with a proclivity for uncomfortableness. Men who chew their cigars, leaving their teeth prints on them and do this for a long time before lighting them are quite likely to be stern, determined men, full of grit and resolution. General Grant used to handle a cigar in that way, and Bismarck is said to do likewise.

As an index of generosity or meanness of soul the cigar is quite trustworthy. The generous man, if he smokes at all, is sure to indulge himself and his friends when they call on him with a good cigar. The man who, with abundant means to smoke the best, deliberately buys the worst cigars and pretends to enjoy them is capable of almost any conceivable meanness. Per contra, the man who can find solace and refreshment from a cigar of good quality or a pipe filled with choice tobacco and who is always ready to open his heart wide and let his tongue wag the most merrily when he takes his friend into the hospitalities of a mutual smoke talk is pretty sure to be one whose instincts and impulses are in the main honest, genial and right.—Baltimore Sun.

The Logan Stone of Land's End.

The most celebrated rocking stone in England is that known as the Logan, Loggan or Logging stone. It is situated on the summit of a bold promontory of granite about 11 miles from Land's End, in Mount's bay, Cornwall. It is estimated to weigh about 90 tons; yet it is so nicely balanced that a child can move it with one hand. The pivot upon which the stone rests is a small, hard protrusion, on all sides of which the whole surrounding surface has worn away, leaving the enormous bowlder standing upon a narrow neck so exactly and evenly poised that a touch sets the whole mass to rocking. In the legendary lore of Penzance there is a prophecy to the effect that the Logan stone will stand until the day of the end of the world, when it will fall of its own accord just before and as a token of the ending of all earthly things. Several years ago a young English lieutenant, who did not believe in prophecies, hired a force of men, who repaired to the spot and with ropes, crowbars and levers, threw the great stone from its pinnacle. When the authorities heard of the destruction of the old landmark, they forced the young officer at great expense to replace the stone just as he had found it. Some claim that the poise is not so equal now as it was before the incident just related.—St. Louis Republic.

Broken Hearts.

We often hear of broken hearts, and usually with a smile of incredulity, as though such a thing were not possible. Medical science has discovered that a literally broken heart is by no means as uncommon as one might fancy. A physician was recently called to a patient, a lady of middle age, who had experienced a severe shock. He found her dead, and as there was some discussion as to the cause of death, an autopsy was held, revealing the fact that the heart had burst at one side. Heart failure as a cause of death is about as satisfactory as to say "one dies for lack of breath," heart failure being merely a result of clearly defined conditions. Broken hearts can easily be brought about by a diet of sweetmeats, with a free use of fermented liquors. These weaken the tissues of the heart and pave the way for a sudden dissolution. It has been supposed that fatty degeneration of the heart was an incurable disease, but this is another popular error, as such conditions are positively curable by a suitable diet and proper medical treatment.—New York Ledger.

Lightened Grief.

"She has been thrice married? And all three husbands dead? She has had a terrible experience."

"Yes; but, then, she has a brother who is an undertaker, and he always gives her a good deal off."—Boston Transcript.

Dyspepsia,

✲ Gastritis

and all stomach troubles where that great life-maintaining organ refuses to dispense nourishment to every part of the body, and the sufferer gradually wasting away and losing flesh daily, finally meets his death from the perforation of a gastric ulcer or dies by actual starvation, can be cured, as has been done time and again, by the use of that great blood enricher, flesh and muscle builder, and strength creator. Give the vital centres of the body strength to perform their regular functions and perfect health is a natural sequence. Dr. Louis Faust, of Schenectady, N. Y., says of Bovinine, "In the severest cases of gastritis the stomach will bear it. For one month my mother lived almost exclusively on it during such a sickness." Over 25000 physicians use and endorse it.

Great Reduction in Time to California.

Once more the Northwestern Line has reduced the time of its trans continental trains, and the journey from Chicago to California via this popular route is now made in the marvelously short time of three days. Palace drawing-room sleeping cars leave Chicago daily, and run through to San Francisco and Los Angeles, without change, and all meals en route are served in dining cars. Daily tourist sleeping car service is also maintained by this line between Chicago and San Francisco and Los Angeles, completely equipped berths in upholstered tourist sleepers being furnished at a cost of only $6 each from Chicago to the Pacific Coast. Through trains leave Chicago for California at six p. m. and 10.30 p. m. daily, after arrival of trains of connecting lines from the east and south. For detailed information concerning rates, routes, etc., apply to ticket agents of connecting lines or address: H. A. Gross, G. E. P. A., 423 Broadway, New York, or T. P. Vaille, S. E. P. A., 112 South Fourth street, Philadelphia, Pa. tf.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. H. Barnett, the crack Class B rider, visited friends in Plainfield yesterday.

The Victor Wheelmen hold their regular meeting on Thursday evening, January 2d.

The first '96 Crescent to be sold in Plainfield, found a purchaser in W. R. Larkin, of the Pond Tool Works. It was purchased from the F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company.

BASKET BALL.

The basket ball team composed of the football players of the Y. M. C. A. met last evening for practice. The team was composed of the following: forwards, F. H. Freeman and T. U. Smith; centre, Edward Laing; wings, E. I. Serrell and Geo. Schoonmaker; guards, George Cathcart and George Snediker.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

A twenty-five live-bird match is to be shot off by Dan Terry and John Benner on Christmas day at the Climax Gun Club grounds. The shoot is for $25 a side. Sweepstakes will be held before and after the match.

The Independent Scheutzen Corps held their weekly sweepstake contest Thursday afternoon which resulted as follows:

First sweepstake—F. Hui, Lewis VanDyke and H. Haurand first money; W. Williams, second money. Second sweepstake—Henry Wedemeyer, first money; W. Williams, second money; Lewis VanDyke, J. A. Blatz, and H. Haurand, third money. Third sweepstake—Fred Hui, first money; Henry Wedemeyer, second money; J. A. Blatz, third money. Fourth sweepstake—Fred Hui and Lewis VanDyke, first money; W. Williams and Henry Wedemeyer, second money. Fifth sweepstake—Lewis VanDyke, first money; Henry Wedemeyer and J. A. Blatz, second money; H. Haurand, third money. Sixth sweepstake—Lewis VanDyke, first money; H. Wedemeyer, W. Williams, second money; August Trust, third money. Next Wednesday afternoon the members will shoot at live birds for prizes.

Public Memorial Service.

On Friday evening, January 17th, Columbia Lodge, No. 58, A. O. U. W., will hold a public memorial service for the members of the order who have died during the past year. It is intended to make this service an annual feature in this lodge and other lodges will probably do the same.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

No excuse for sleepless nights when you can procure One Minute Cough Cure. This will relieve all annoyances, cure the most severe cough and give you rest and health. Can you afford to do without it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

THEATRICAL.

It seems to me that the doctors are bound to loose business through a visit of the "Two Johns" at the Auditorium. The way the audience laughed last night ought to have shaken every trace of the humor and disease out of every one in it.—The Daily Union, Bridgeport, Conn. Will appear at Music Hall tonight.

Salambo and Clivette's new wonders, a complete organization, direct from the principal theatres and courts of Europe, will appear Christmas day, matinee and night, at the Stillman Music Hall The Salambos performance of holding two uninsulated carbons in their hands, making an arc light, is one of the most extraordinary acts ever produced. The great Clivette is one of the finest shadowgraphists in the world, having just returned from a six months tour through Europe. Besides these stars, several new features will constitute as entertaining a performance, and possibly as novel, a one as has ever been seen.

—Dr. Probasco, president of the Board of Education, addressed the students in Irving School yesterday afternoon.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

Cut Friendship

'Tis said, but don't you believe it—it's all nonsense. If your friend offers you one of these handsome knives Christmas morning, take it, and let it cut away any small differences which may have existed between you.

If you are a trifle superstitious and believe there's truth in the old saying, just give a penny in return and that will break the bad omen, but it's simply an old saying and don't mean anything.

MUNYON

Cured Mrs. Julia B. Fuss of Sciatic Rheumatism After Six Doctors Failed.

Two Bottles of Munyon's Rheumatism Cure Made a Complete Cure After Twenty Years of Suffering—All of Munyon's Remedies Act Promptly and Cure Permanently.

Mrs. Julia B. Fuss, Tama, Ga., says: "I have had a complication of ailments for the past twenty years, and during that time had six doctors and tried innumerable remedies without obtaining a cure I suffered from sciatic rheumatism, pains in all parts of the body, pain in the back and nervous prostration. Two bottles of MUNYON'S RHEUMATISM CURE have cured me completely. I am like a new woman and shall always recommend MUNYON'S REMEDIES above all other medicines."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure never fails to relieve it in 1 to 3 hours, and cures in a few days. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed to cure all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Kidney Cure speedily cures pains in the back, loins or groins, and all forms of kidney disease. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Vitalizer restores lost powers to weak men. Price, $1.00.

Munyon's Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect positive and permanent cures. A separate specific for each disease. At all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

Training to Speak.

Bishop Wilberforce was noted for the variety of his speeches and sermons, even when they all treated of the same subject. His addresses at confirmations and at missionary meetings were remarkable for their variations on the same themes. A friend who had heard him speak day after day for several weeks in behalf of the Society For the Propagation of the Gospel, expressed his surprise that he could treat the same subject in such a variety of ways. The eloquent preacher replied:

"I owe my facility mainly to my father. He took pains to form in me the habit of speaking. He would see to it that I thoroughly acquainted myself with a given subject and then require me to speak on it without notes and trusting to the inspiration of the moment for suitable words. This practice strengthened my memory and cultivated the power of mentally arranging and dividing a subject."

The Earl of Chatham trained his son, William Pitt, in a similar way. Pitt was the familiar friend of William Wilberforce, the philanthropist, and the father of the bishop. Doubtless he learned from Pitt this method of cultivating the faculty of thinking and speaking on one's legs.—Youth's Companion.

A Shower of Yellow Clay.

On April 4, 1892, Marion county, Ia., and especially that portion of it contingent to Knoxville, the county seat, was treated to a bath of thin, yellow mud. The cloud came up from the south southeast, but did not appear to be the result of any unusual meteorological disturbance. The barometer did not indicate cyclonic conditions, and the great mud vehicle which rolled across the ridge which separates English and Whitebreast creeks was unaccompanied with either wind, thunder or lightning. In some places in the county thin, sticky clay covered everything to the depth of about one-tenth of an inch, making a general cleaning up necessary after the "shower" was over. The Knoxville Journal of April 6, two days after the mud shower, contained the following among its locals, "We had a regular mud shower here on Monday morning, the mud falling a few minutes only, but while it lasted it literally plastered the south sides of buildings and covered the windows and the people upon the streets with a coat of thin yellow clay."—St. Louis Republic.

An Armless Nimrod.

An armless Nimrod is the wonder of the people and the envy of all the sportsmen of Bucks county. He is John Simon of Zion Hill, and his prowess is something marvelous. Simon's arms were ground off above the elbows in machinery a few years ago, but his love of hunting spurred his ingenuity, and he overcame his seemingly insurmountable obstacle. He straps his single barrel breechloading hammerless gun to his right arm, and when he sights game he swings the piece over the stump of his left arm, takes quick aim and fires, generally with telling effect. His mode of loading is as unique as his shooting. He carries the shells in his hat, and when he wants one bows low, drops his hat on the ground, pulls out the empty shell with his teeth and in a similar manner loads, then pushing his head into his hat to re-cover his head.

Despite his affliction, Simon has done some of the best shooting in Bucks county the past year, his record standing: 16 opossums, 5 pheasants, 5 dozen blackbirds, 37 rabbits and 21 quail.—Philadelphia Record.

A Unique Salad.

"Mamma, I have invented a lovely salad," exclaimed Margery, aged 7.

"Have you, darling?" said her pleased mother. "And how did you make it?"

"Why," answered the mite proudly and seriously amid the laughter of those present, "I chopped up a rose, some parsley and some cold potatoes and covered it with dressing."

"And where did you get the oil?" exclaimed Mrs. A.

"Oh, I used sewing machine oil," responded the little monkey, who had, as she supposed, copied her mother's methods with perfect success.—New York Advertiser

TOLD BY THE NAILS.

SIGNS BY WHICH A MANICURE IS ABLE TO READ CHARACTER.

Finger Nails That Indicate Love of Luxury and Others That Tell of Melancholy. Study Nails, and You Will Learn Whom to Trust and Whom to Shun.

"Dear me, but you are luxurious in your tastes!" said a pretty little manicure, who does a thriving business in caring for the hands of men as well as those of women. The customer to whom she spoke was a young woman whom the manicure had never seen before.

"And, pray, how do you know that I am luxurious in my tastes?" the customer asked in astonishment and at the same time with much interest.

"Oh, I can tell by your nails. You hear people constantly talking of character being shown in the hands, feet, eyes or mouth, but no one but a manicure with years of experience knows how people can be read by their finger nails. I've been in this business five years. Many of my customers are men, and I've got those that come to me regularly down pretty fine, and yet I've never exchanged a dozen words with most of them. I judge everybody the first time that I fix the nails, and it isn't often that I make a wrong estimate of a person's character."

"But how in the world can you tell what a man or a woman is merely by the finger nails?" asked the customer.

"Because they are such telltales. As soon as I took your hand in mine and saw how your nails grew into the flesh at the points and sides I knew instantly that all your tastes are luxurious, and you indulge yourself too, just as far as you can, don't you?"

"I'm afraid you are right."

"There, now, I knew it. All of my customers who have such tastes have nails that grow into the flesh. They quarrel about it and beg me for something to stop this tendency, but I can't stop the work of nature. Of course it's ugly and often causes pain to have the nail imbed itself in the flesh, but if one is fond of self indulgence one must pay the penalty, even to the finger nails.

"The other day a little woman came in here with pale nails. They were almost lead colored. She made two or three pleasant remarks and finally said:

"'I wish my nails were pink, like those of most girls.'

"'But you can't have pink nails so long as you are so melancholy,' I answered, and she blurted out:

"'You never saw me before and don't know whether I'm melancholy or not!'

"'Oh, yes, I do,' I said, 'because the color of your nails tells me so! I've several melancholy customers, but they don't know that I know it. When a person is subject to fits of the blues, or rather is in a constant state of depression, the nails seem to turn lead colored from sympathy. If you would make up your mind to always be cheerful, your nails would grow pink after awhile.'

"Then she told me how she had lost her sweetheart just two weeks before they were to have been married, and although three years have elapsed she has never been able to shake off the melancholia."

For awhile only the sound of the file was heard, and then the customer said:

"Do you know what you've been telling me is very interesting? I wish you would tell me more, for I'm going to begin to study nails."

"Well," resumed the manicure, "broad nails indicate a gentle, timid and bashful nature. Of course people with broad nails often overcome their timidity and have perfectly easy manners, but they are invariably gentle. I made a customer very angry once. She was a middle aged woman, and it was the first time that she had ever come to me. She said that a dear friend, Mrs. Brown, who was one of my regular customers, had recommended her to come to me. As soon as I began to work on her nails she began to quarrel. She quarreled with my instruments and my way of using them, and finally let in on her dear friend for sending her to me. I worked away and said nothing, and when I finished her nails looked really beautiful. She looked at them and then at me and said:

"'You must think me very disagreeable?'

"'Oh, no!' I answered. 'I knew you would quarrel about something when you sat down, because your narrow nails told me that you had a quarrelsome nature, and you are not only quarrelsome, but you have an inordinate ambition. Pardon my frankness, but people with narrow nails like yours are always quarrelsome and ambitious.'

"She flounced out, but she has come to me once a week ever since.

"That very day a stout man of athletic build came in. He fixed his piercing eyes upon me and seemed to be trying to read me, but I had the advantage, because I could read him without glancing at his face. After a time he began to question me about my business, and I plucked up courage to volunteer:

"'And you are a student, you are fond of knowledge and are full of liberal sentiment.'

"He stared at me as if I were crazy and said nothing more, but when he went to leave he undid a parcel, took out a book and wrote upon the fly leaf, 'For the little manicure who read the author at first sight—from the author,' and presented it to me. That author was one of the most popular belonging to the realistic school, and I guess he thought I was a witch, or of course he thought that nobody would take him for a student with his magnificent physique. He didn't know that his round nails had indicated to me what his chief characteristics were, and he has never been back since. Perhaps he was afraid of me, but anyway I prize that book he gave me above anything else that I have.

"Small nails indicate littleness of mind, obstinacy and conceit. Watch out for the person with small nails, especially if it happens to be a man, for he will be capable of petty thoughts, speeches and actions and thinks more of himself than of any one else. If it is a woman, she is apt to be spiteful and jealous, and, generally speaking, says things behind your back that she wouldn't to your face.

"People of bilious temperament have red and spotted nails, and so do martial men, delighting in war. Where you see these red nails you may be sure that the person possessing them is easily irritated, though apt to get in a good humor just as easily.

"There is a superstition to the effect that white marks on the nails denote misfortune, but there is nothing in it. These white marks that schoolgirls call beaus merely show that there is too much acid in the system. They are rather disfiguring, but are easy enough to get rid of if one is inclined to diet for a week."—New York Sun.

JUST BEYOND THE DOOR.

On the threshold baby stands
Holding out her little hands
To the great world just beyond,
Just beyond the door.
Ah, that door! It shuts her in
From the pleasures she would win,
And within her baby heart
She is saying o'er and o'er
That some day she'll ope it wide
And step forth to see in pride
That great world she longs to see
More and more.

Ah, my baby, in your eyes
I can see the longing rise
That I in my heart have seen
Once before—
Only this: To step outside,
Join the hurrying humantide
That goes marching daily by
Just beyond the door.
May you find it just as grand
When with them you really stand
As you think it is, my child,
Looking o'er.
May you never wish to be
Just a little child to see,
Not to do; just to gaze with longing eyes
Just beyond the door.

SAVOIR FAIRE.

English People Are Surprised at the Ease of American Schoolgirls.

"Where does the very young American girl get her amazing sense of savoir faire?" asked a titled Englishman the other day. He had sat at dinner beside the youngest daughter of the house, called in by her mother to take a suddenly vacated seat at a grand dinner party. The pretty miss had volunteered to the amiable British gentleman that she had never sat at a dinner party before, and yet he observed her manners showed all the quiet ease, the lively self possession and pretty dignity that would have done credit to a duchess.

"Ah, she attends a fashionable boarding school," exclaimed a Newport belle, who overheard the remark, "and a fashionable school in America gives a very different sort of training from that girls get in French convents and under English governesses. At our schools the girls are not only taught their three R's and some other things, but after that are trained in the path they must walk when they are ready to become debutantes. It costs the parents about $3,000 a year for every daughter sent to one of these temples of polite education, for, first of all, they live, while they study, like princesses.

"Their school lodgings are divided into most charming suits, they are regularly attended by manicures and hairdressers, and a teacher of physical culture drills them twice weekly in the canons of grace and ease, and there are maids provided to assist at every toilet, maids who speak several languages. They dine in full toilet every night at the fashionable hour, are sent to an opera box twice a week to hear the best music and are taught only those accomplishments that are the fads of the day.

"They are allowed to read such novels as will give them a true insight into the society they are to enter, but will not hurt their young minds. The highest class daily papers are brought fresh to their breakfast tables every morning, and the parents are encouraged to afford their daughters such liberal allowances as will enable the girls to give generously to charity. As schoolgirls, then, they enjoy all the luxury, the sense of power their money and position brings and are taught to regard shy awkwardness of manner as a greater fault than bad spelling."—Demorest's Magazine.

Fine Remitted.

The late Judge Snell was very fond of croquet playing, and when not busy with his official duties could most always be found, with mallet in hand, engaged in his favorite game. One morning while presiding over the police court a young boy was brought before him charged with playing ball on the street. The policeman who arrested the boy swore he had caught the boy in the act.

"Fine the boy $5," said the judge. "This ball playing on the street must be stopped."

The boy's father was present and suggested to the judge that he would like to question the policeman a little before the fine was imposed. So Judge Snell ordered the policeman into the witness box again. After a little close questioning the officer finally admitted that the boys were playing ball on a vacant lot, and this boy had knocked the ball out into the street.

"Make that fine $2, Mr. Clerk," said Judge Snell. "The case is not quite so bad as I thought it was."

"But, your honor," said the boy's father, "not long ago up on Twelfth street I saw a game of croquet in which a high court official was engaged, and I saw that official spitefully knock his opponent's ball clear across the street, and"—

"Take off that other $2, Mr. Clerk. I don't believe this boy was doing wrong, after all." And the judge lay back in his chair and laughed heartily as he remembered what a whack he gave his opponent's ball in the game referred to.—Washington Star.

"Parson," said Poker Jack, doffing his slouch hat respectfully, "would ye mind tellin me who it wuz thet wrote 'Let dogs delight to bark an bite?'"

"Certainly not," replied the new pastor of the little church at Rattlesnake Diggins. "I am delighted to see the people of our settlement begin to take an interest in such things. It was Dr. Watts."

"Then I've lost," said Poker Jack disconsolately. "I bet the drinks fur the crowd it was Shakespeare. Mornin, parson."—Chicago Tribune.

The Whole Thing.

"No," said the prosperous gentleman with the large diamond and both feet on the car seat, "you can hunt a seat in another car. I am not going to bother myself for a ham actor."

"Sir," said Mr. Barnes Tormer, with fine courtesy, "I would rather be a ham actor than act the hog."—Indianapolis Journal.

scrofula

Any doctor will tell you that Professor Hare, of Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia, is one of the highest authorities in the world on the action of drugs. In his last work, speaking of the treatment of scrofula, he says:

"It is hardly necessary to state that cod-liver oil is the best remedy of all. The oil should be given in emulsion, so prepared as to be palatable."

He also says that the hypophosphites should be combined with the oil.

Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil, with hypophosphites, is precisely such a preparation.

THE

New York Times.

THE TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world and tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record of human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports, and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, etc.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson; majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industrial emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic Party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 5th, 1895.

J. T. MAC MURRAY, City Clerk.

AN ORDINANCE
TO CREATE THE OFFICE OF INSPECTOR OF BUILDINGS AND TO DEFINE HIS POWERS, DUTIES AND COMPENSATION.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. That there shall be appointed by the Common Council within thirty days after the approval or final adoption of this ordinance, and annually thereafter, on the first Monday of February in each year, an officer to be known as Inspector of Buildings, who shall be either an architect, carpenter, mason or other mechanic. The term of office of every person so appointed shall expire on the first Monday of February following the month of his appointment. His duties shall be such as devolve upon him as Inspector of Buildings by the laws of this State, and this and other ordinances of the City of Plainfield, and his compensation shall be the sum of five hundred dollars per annum. For brevity, said officer is hereinafter designated as Inspector.

Section 2. That the said Inspector is hereby charged with the performance of all services necessary to ensure the strict enforcement of the ordinances of the City now existing or that may be hereafter adopted, relating to the erection, construction or alteration of buildings therein. He shall keep a record of all applications for permits and preserve and properly index such drawings as may be filed of all plans on which permits shall be granted.

Section 3. That after any permit shall have been granted as aforesaid, it shall be the duty of the said Inspector diligently to inspect said building while in course of erection, and to see that it is constructed in conformity with the ordinances of the City relating thereto. The said Inspector shall also keep a full and complete record of all buildings in course of erection or alteration, their style and proposed uses, and make a report of the same in writing once a month to the Common Council.

Section 4. That for the purpose of ascertaining all violations of ordinances designed for the more effectual prevention of fires, it shall be lawful for him, the said Inspector, whenever he shall have good and sufficient reason to believe that any of such ordinances are being violated, to enter into or upon any lands or building for the examination of hoistways, trapdoors, fire-places, hearths, chimneys, stoves and pipes thereto, receptacles for ashes, ovens, boilers, heaters and chemical apparatus, which may be dangerous as tending to cause or promote fires; and it shall be his duty to direct the owner or occupant of any defective building, by notice signed by said Inspector, to alter the same in such manner and within such reasonable time as he may deem necessary. He shall also examine, at reasonable hours in the daytime, and it shall be lawful for him for that purpose to enter into and upon all buildings and places where any gunpowder, saltpetre, hemp, flax, tow, hay, rushes, firewood, boards, shingles, shavings, or other combustible materials may be lodged; and whenever he shall discover any violation of any of such ordinances, or anything that is detrimental to public safety, he shall notify in writing the owner or occupants of the building wherein such unlawful or unsafe conditions exist to immediately cause the same to be corrected, and it shall be the duty of the person so notified to comply with such notice. And in case of the neglect or refusal of the owner or occupant of such building, or the possessor of such combustible materials to correct said unlawful or unsafe conditions and to alter, remove or secure the same within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the person offending shall on conviction thereof pay a penalty of five dollars for each and every day after the expiration of the time in such notice stated he shall neglect or refuse to comply, not exceeding one hundred dollars in any one suit.

Section 5. That in case the Chief Engineer of the Fire Department of said City shall be either an architect, carpenter, mason or other mechanic, he may be appointed to said office of Inspector of Buildings, and hold both offices at the same time, and in that case, he shall devote all his time to the performance of the duties of said offices.

Section 6. All ordinances or parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are herby repealed.

CORPORATION NOTICE.

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.

J. T. MacMURRAY, City Clerk.

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 5th, 1895.

AN ORDINANCE
RELATING TO THE CONSTRUCTION OF BUILDINGS.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. Before the erection, construction, removal or alteration of any building or structure, or any part thereof, or any platform, staging or flooring to be used for seating or standing purposes is commenced within the City limits, the owner or his agent or architect shall obtain a permit therefor from the Inspector of Buildings, and unless such permit shall expressly waive the same, shall submit to the Inspector of Buildings such drawings as may be necessary to show the construction of the building or structure, and a detailed statement, in duplicate, of the specifications, on appropriate blanks to be furnished by the Inspector, giving also the location, the proposed use of the building or structure, which shall be accompanied with a statement in writing, sworn to before any person authorized by law to administer an oath, giving the full name and residence of the owner or of each of the owners of said building or proposed building, staging or flooring.

If such operation is proposed to be made by any other person than the owner or owners in fee, the person or persons intending to make such erection or alteration shall accompany the application for permit with sworn affidavit, giving the full name of the owner or owners of the land, and also of every person interested in said building or proposed building, either as owner, lessee or in any representative capacity.

Such statement may be made by the agent or architect of the person or persons hereinbefore required to make the same, and any notice served upon such agent or architect shall be binding upon the principals.

Said sworn statement and copy of application and plans shall be kept on file in the office of the Inspector, and the said operation or any part thereof shall not be commenced or proceeded with until said statement and plans shall have been so filed and approved by the Inspector in writing.

A permit may be granted for the erection or construction of any part of a building, when accompanied by a statement and plans of said portion, before the entire plans and detailed statements of said building have been submitted.

Ordinary repairs may be made without notice to the Inspector, but such repairs shall not be construed to include the cutting away of any constructional support, whether wall, pier, column, girder or beams, or the removal, change or closing of any staircase or exit.

All applications for permits shall be passed upon by the Inspector within ten (10) days from dates of receiving the same respectively.

All permits to construct or alter any building shall be valid for one year from the date thereof and no longer.

Permits for removal shall specify the time within which the removal shall be made.

As herein used, the term "removal" means to change the location of building or structure. To take down or remove shall be termed "demolition."

Section 2. Outside of the fire limits prescribed herein, buildings of frame or wood may be erected subject to conditions hereinafter prescribed for chimneys, flues, hearths, steam or heating flues, electric wiring or any fire-causing factor of construction.

Frame buildings to be occupied or used as a stable, workshop or manufactory shall not be built or so used if more than thirty (30) feet in total height.

No frame or wood dwelling house hereafter erected shall exceed fifty (50) feet in height to highest point on main roof.

In no case shall a wooden building be erected within three (3) feet of any inside line of a lot, unless the space between the studs of any and every such side be filled in solidly with not less than two (2) inches of brick or other hard fireproof material.

When three (3) or more frame houses are built continuous the dividing wall between each house is to be of brick not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundation wall to a point up to the under part of the roof.

No spire or tower of wood shall be built or rebuilt within the City limits to a greater height than sixty (60) feet.

Section 3. All excavations to be made and protected as per Section 13.

Section 4. All cellar or basement walls for frame buildings, outside of the fire limits, shall be not less than eight (8) inches thick; if of brick, to a depth of eight (8) feet below grade on street; and to be not less than eighteen (18) inches thick and well bonded if of stone. If of greater depth than above, or if carried up eight (8) feet or more above grade to frame, the foundation wall is to be not less than twelve (12) inches thick if of brick, and not less than twenty (20) inches thick and well bonded if of stone.

All foundations below grade to be laid in good lime or cement mortar mixed with sharp sand.

Section 5. All frame or wooden buildings exceeding a height of fifteen (15) feet shall be built with sills, posts, inter-ties or ribbon strips, plates and rafters, all of suitable and sufficient size, to be properly braced and framed, and with suitable studs set at proper distances apart, with fire cut-off at each floor. The floor beams shall not be less than two (2) inches in thickness and ten (10) inches in depth, except third story or attic beams which may be two (2) inches in thickness and eight (8) inches in depth, well bridged.

Whenever frame construction is of wood, even if partially or wholly covered with veneer of brick or stone, it shall be deemed a frame building.

Section 6. The removal of any wooden building or structure from without to within the fire limits is absolutely prohibited, and if accomplished before discovery the Common Council may, at its discretion, order its return or demolition within twenty-four hours after notice, at the expense of owner or owners of said building.

Section 7. The fire limits of the City of Plainfield are hereby established so as to include all that district of said city contained within the following boundaries, and also within the space of one hundred and fifty (150) feet beyond and parallel to the centre lines of the streets or avenues constituting the said boundaries: Beginning at the point of intersection of the centre line of Washington Avenue with the City line in Green Brook; thence along the centre line of Washington Avenue to the centre line of West Front Street; thence along the centre line of West Front Street to the centre line of New Street; thence along the centre line of New Street to the centre line of West Fifth Street; thence along the centre line of West Fifth Street and East Fifth Street to the centre line of Washington Street; thence along the centre line of Washington Street to the centre line of East Front Street; thence along the centre line of East Front Street to the centre line of Elm Place; thence along the centre line of Elm Place to its intersection with the City line in Green Brook; thence along the City line in Green Brook to the place of beginning.

Section 8. Every wooden or frame building, with a brick or other front within the fire limits, which may hereafter be damaged by fire, the elements or otherwise, to an amount not greater than three-fourths the total immediately previous value thereof, may be repaired or rebuilt pursuant to the provisions of this ordinance.

But, if such damage shall amount to more than three-fourths such value, then such building shall not be repaired or rebuilt, but shall be demolished.

Section 9. Should the decision of the Inspector or of Appraiser as hereinafter prescribed permit of the repair or restoration of any building, every damaged wall or part thereof shall be repaired or restored to its full original strength, but only within the limits of its original height and other dimensions and uses.

Section 10. The previous value of such building and the proportion of such damage, the extent of re-use of any wall or walls or parts without repair, and the amount of repairs or restoration may be determined by the Inspector, subject to appeal as hereinafter provided.

Upon the written demand of the owner or owners of such premises, to be sent to the Mayor, he shall appoint one appraiser and one appraiser shall be selected by said owner or owners.

They shall at once examine the said premises, and if they agree their decision is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to, and shall be final and conclusive.

Should these two appraisers not agree, they shall select a third appraiser or umpire to take part in such impartial and disinterested examination and verdict.

The joint decision of any two of them is to be stated separately in writing and sworn to, and shall be final and conclusive.

Each appraiser is to receive ten ($10) dollars for such service, to be paid by the owner or owners of said building before said report is filed, and no repairs or alterations except to the extent necessary to make safe as directed by the Inspector, shall be made or begun until said report is filed and permit obtained.

Said report is also to include a separate detailed statement in writing as to causes or probable causes of damage, and of the general or special conditions making favorable thereto in each case, and may also include the suggestions of the appraisers as to effective future remedy and prevention.

These reports are to be kept carefully filed by the Inspector in a special docket, to be known as the Fire Inquest docket.

Section 11. Temporary one-story frame buildings within the fire limits may be erected for the use of builders within the limits of lots whereon or adjacent to where buildings are in course of erection, upon permit of Inspector, said structure to be used only for the purpose specified.

Temporary stagings, platforms or floorings for seating or standing purposes may be constructed of wood, upon filing of plans and permit from Inspector.

All temporary structures of wood are to be demolished by owners upon the completion of purpose specified.

Fences of wood shall not be over ten (10) feet in total height.

Signs of wood shall not be erected over two (2) feet high on any building.

Piazzas or balconies of wood, not to extend in height more than three (3) feet above the second story floor beams, may be erected upon any detached dwelling house, occupied by not more than three (3) families.

One wooden bay or oriel window may be built of wood upon any face or front of any building, if but one (1) story in height and not more than one-third of the width of said face or front.

If but two stories in height and of said proportionate width, it may be constructed of wood, but shall be covered with metal, slate or tile.

If of any greater height or dimensions, or more than one is desired on any one side or face, it or they shall be wholly built of fireproof material.

The roofs of all permanent new wooden constructions are to be covered with metal, clay tile or slate.

Existing shingle roofs may only be repaired or renewed on old lines and heights.

If altered or reconstructed in any way, a metal, clay tile or slate roofing is to be substituted.

Sheds of wood not over fifteen (15) feet to highest point of roof, and constantly open on at least one side, with the closed sides and roof thereof covered with metal, clay tile or slate, may be built on permits from the Inspector, but no fence shall be used as any side of such shed.

Exterior privies, wood or coal houses not exceeding one hundred and fifty (150) square feet in superficial area and not over eight (8) feet in heigh, may be built upon permit from the Inspector, with roofs only, covered with metal, clay tile or slate.

Section 12. The walls of all buildings within the fire limits other than frame buildings and constructions herein authorized, shall be construction of stone, brick, iron or other hard incombustible material, and the several component parts of such buildings shall be as hereinafter provided.

The height of all walls shall be measured from the curb level at the centre of the building, to the top of the highest point of roof beams on flat roofs, or to the average or middle height of gable for all high pitched ridge roofs having no deck.

When the walls of a structure are twenty-five feet or more distant from every street line, then the average level of the grades at walls may be taken instead of curb.

If the wall is practically entirely carried on iron girders supported by masonry piers or iron columns, the measurements as to height may be taken from the top of such girder, for such wall only.

The width of buildings for the purposes of this ordinance shall be construed by the direction in which the beams are placed, the lengthwise of the beams to mean the width wise of the building, and the bearing walls are those on which the beams are carried.

Section 13. All excavations shall be properly guarded and protected by the person or persons causing the excavation to be made, so as to prevent the same from becoming dangerous to life or limb; and shall be sheet piled where necessary to prevent caving in of adjoining earth.

Whenever an excavation for building or other purposes shall be intended to be, or shall be, carried to a depth of more than ten (10) feet below the street curb, the person or persons causing such excavation to be made shall at all times, from the beginning to the completion thereof, at his or their expense, preserve any adjoining or contiguous wall or walls from injury and support the same by proper foundations, so that the said wall or walls shall be, and remain practically as safe as before such excavation was begun, whether the said adjoining or contiguous wall or walls are down more or less than ten feet below the street curb.

If such excavation shall not be intended to be, or shall not be, carried to a depth of more than ten (10) feet below the street curb, the owner or owners of such adjoining or contiguous wall or walls shall preserve the same from injury and so support the same by proper foundations to full depth of such excavation, that it or they shall be and remain practically as safe as before such excavation was begun, and for that purpose shall be permitted to enter upon the premises where such excavation is being made, when necessary, and shall complete the same within reasonable time.

If in either case entry at reasonable times is refused, the Inspector may determine such difference, or prescribe the best and most practicable way of making safe as herein required.

If an adjoining party wall is intended to be used by the person or persons causing the excavation to be made, and the use of such wall is approved by the Inspector, then the said person or persons causing the excavation to be made shall at his or their expense amply protect and secure such party wall by proper foundations as before described.

If the person or persons whose duty it shall be to preserve or protect any wall or walls from injury shall neglect or fail so to do, after having had twenty-four hours' notice from the Inspector, then the Inspector may enter upon the premises and make same secure and safe at the expense of the person or persons last herein referred to.

Section 14.—Except on rock bottom, all foundations shall have footing courses, and all footing or base courses under foundation walls shall be laid not less than three (3) feet below the permanent surface of the ground, on a good solid bottom; and in case the nature of the earth and the character of the building should require it, on a bottom of driven piles or laid timber, of proper kind and sufficient size and thickness, or such other approved foundation as the Inspector and the nature of the case may require, to keep and maintain the walls firm and secure.

All piers, columns or posts, resting on the earth, shall be set upon a solid bottom, in the same manner as required for the foundation walls.

Except in the case of adjacent excavations as hereinbefore provided, should any grade be lowered the foundational supports shall be also carried down to the depth above prescribed.

The footing or base course under all the foundation walls, and under all piers, columns or posts resting on the earth shall be of stone or concrete, and if under a foundation wall shall be at least six (6) inches wider than the bottom width of the wall; and if under piers, columns or posts, shall be at least six (6) inches wider on all sides than the outside bottom lines of said piers, columns or posts.

Except that in case of dwellings, where a good gravel bottom exists, the footing or base course may be only four (4) inches wider instead of six (6) inches wider, as hereinbefore provided.

The thickness of all footing courses shall be not less than one-third their width, but no concrete footing course shall be less than six (6) inches thick.

All base stones shall be well bedded and laid crosswise, edge to edge.

Section 15.—In buildings, where the space under the sidewalk is utilized, a sufficient stone or brick wall shall be built to retain the roadway of the street, and the side, end or party walls of such building shall extend under the sidewalk, of sufficient thickness, to such walls.

The roofs of all vaults shall be of incombustible material.

Openings in the roofs of vaults for the admission of coal or light shall be covered with lights of glass in iron frames, or with iron covers having a rough surface, and rabbeted flush with the sidewalk; these lights shall not be more than four inches square.

When areas are covered, iron, or iron and glass combined, stone or other incombustible materials shall be used, and sufficient strength in such covering shall be provided to insure safety to persons walking on the same, and to carry the loads which may be placed thereon.

Open areas shall be properly protected with suitable railings.

Section 16.—Foundation walls shall be construed to include all walls and piers below the curb level or tier of beams nearest to the curb level intended to serve as supports for all superimposed weights.

All foundation walls shall be built of stone or brick.

If built of stone they shall be at least eight (8) inches thicker than the wall resting upon it, to a depth of not more than ten (10) feet below curb.

If built of brick, they shall be at least four (4) inches thicker than the wall resting upon it, to a depth of not more than ten (10) feet below curb.

All stone walls shall have at least one header extending through the wall in every three (3) feet each way, of good flat stones.

All stone to be laid on its natural bed, to be built flush and true with struck joints, on inside, and all foundations below grade to be laid in good lime or cement mortar.

Section 17.—When walls herein prescribed are of diminishing thickness upwards, the said decrease of thickness shall be construed to mean at the top line of tier of beams nearest to the height specified.

The ends of all wooden beams in all walls, especially in all party walls, are to be separated by at least four (4) inches of brick work.

And in eight (8) inch walls, to be strapped together on the tops of every fourth beam strongly spiked, for cross tie.

As many stories as desired may be placed within the given total heights.

If a greater height than seventy-five (75) feet is desired for the walls of any building, the entire building must be built of approved fireproof construction.

If any tower, or part of any building or structure is to be built of a greater height than seventy-five (75) feet above curb, it shall be built of fireproof materials as approved by the Inspector.

Section 18.—All outside walls of dwelling houses within the city limits shall not be less than eight (8) inches thick, if under and not more than twenty-four (24) feet above curb level.

If over twenty-four (24) feet and not over fifty (50) feet above curb level, the walls shall not be less than twelve (12) inches thick.

If over fifty (50) feet and not over sixty (60) feet high, the walls shall be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of fifteen (15) feet above curb level, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

If over sixty (60) feet and not over seventy-five (75) feet high, the walls shall be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of twenty-five (25) feet above curb level, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

Section 19.—All party and interior brick walls twenty-five (25) feet or less in height shall be not less than eight (8) inches thick.

All party and interior walls over twenty-five (25) feet high, and not over forty (40) feet high, shall be not less than twelve (12) inches thick to the height of fifteen (15) feet above curb level, and not less than eight (8) inches thick from thence to top.

All party and interior walls over forty (40) feet high, and not over fifty (50) feet in height above curb level, may be built twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches thick more than twenty-five (25) feet in height.

All party and interior walls over fifty (50) feet high, and not over sixty (60) feet in height, may be built twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches thick more than twenty-five (25) feet in height.

All party and interior walls over sixty (60) feet high, and not over seventy-five (75) feet in height, shall be not less than sixteen (16) inches in thickness to the height of fifteen (15) feet, and from thence upward twelve (12) and eight (8) inches respectively in thickness, but no such wall shall have a vertical portion eight (8) inches in thickness more than fifteen (15) feet in height.

Section 20.—Excepted from the requirements of previous sections are all dwelling houses built in continuous blocks of three (3) or more, when each is not more than twenty-two (22) feet wide, forty-five (45) feet deep, and thirty-five (35) feet in height, which may have interior and party walls only, of brick, not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundations. And also:

All the walls of dwellings not more than twenty-two (22) feet wide, forty-five (45) feet deep, and not more than twenty-five (25) feet or two (2) stories in height may be built not less than eight (8) inches thick above foundation.

One-story structures not over twenty (20) feet wide, thirty-five (35) feet deep, and fifteen (15) feet in height, may be built with all the walls not less than eight (8) inches in thickness.

Section 21.—In dwellings where the distance between the bearing walls is not over thirty-three (33) feet, and no clear span is over twenty-six (26) feet, brick partition walls not less than eight (8) inches thick, nor more than thirty (30) feet high, may be built to support the floors.

Over any room with a clear span of more than twenty-six (26) feet, proper supports of iron or masonry, of approved rises and strength, may be used to support walls or floors, inclusive of support from overhead trusses or girders, but in every such case the bearing walls shall be increased four (4) inches in thickness for every twelve and one-half (12½) feet or part thereof that said span is over twenty-six (26) feet.

Where dimensions of buildings are given in the preceding sections, the width or depth may be changed, providing the area is not increased and additional inside walls are added if deemed necessary by the Inspector.

Section 22.—The outside or party walls of warehouses, stores and factories shall not be less than twelve (12) inches thick, if under and not more than forty (40) feet in height.

If over forty (40) feet and not over sixty (60) feet in height, the walls are to be sixteen (16) inches thick to the height of twenty-five (25) feet, and not less than twelve (12) inches thick from thence to top.

If over sixty (60) feet and not over seventy-five (75) feet in height, the walls are to be twenty (20) inches thick to the height of twenty-five feet, and from thence sixteen (16) inches thick to a height of fifty (50) feet above curb, and from thence twelve inches thick to top.

Front and rear non-bearing and intermediate bearing walls may be four (4) inches less in thickness than is above given, in buildings not more than twenty-five (25) feet clear span between walls, provided none are less than twelve (12) inches thick, and piers or columns supporting ends of girders are of sufficient strength.

When bearing walls are less than twenty-five (25) feet apart, or are intersected by cross walls, or strengthened by piers of sufficient size, the Inspector may permit the reduction of thickness of interior walls in just proportion to such added strength, except on walls less than forty (40) feet in height.

Where the clear span exceeds twenty-five (25) feet in any part of a building the walls supporting said span shall be four (4) inches more in thickness than is in this section specified, for every twelve and one-half (12½) feet or fraction thereof, that said span exceeds twenty-five (25) feet.

Where any bearing wall or part thereof shall, in its horizontal section or plan be weakened by excess of flues or openings, or at any other point not herein provided for, the Inspector shall require its amendment to a sufficient total bearing thickness.

Section 23. In all warehouses, stores and factories over twenty-five (25) feet in width between walls, in which there shall be brick partition walls, or girders supported on iron or wooden columns or piers of masonry, the said partition walls or girders shall be spaced not more than twenty-five (25) feet apart on longitudinal centres, and the columns, girders or piers shall be of sufficient strength and size to bear safely the weight and any strain to be imposed upon them.

Section 24. The walls of churches, theatres, foundries, machine shops and other buildings of a public character, shall in no case be less than is in this ordinance specified for warehouses; and said buildings shall have in addition thereto such piers or buttresses as in the judgment of the Inspector may be necessary to make a safe and substantial building for its purpose.

Section 25. In all walls the same amount of materials herein required for walls, may be in part used in piers or buttresses, provided the width or bars between shall be of a thickness approved by the Inspector.

The inside four (4) inches of all walls may be built of hard burnt hollow clay or porous terra cotta blocks, if laid at the same time with brick work and properly bonded into the walls and of the same dimensions as the brick used.

In all walls that are built hollow, the separating space shall not be counted in the total thickness of wall, but the same quantity of material shall be used as if it were built solid as herein provided. No such hollow space shall exceed four (4) inches in width, nor shall such wall be built unless the parts of same are strongly bonded together by proper ties either of brick, stone or iron placed not over twenty-four (24) inches apart each way.

Recesses may be left in the foundation or walls of lower stories, but in no case shall these walls be of less thickness than the walls of third story, or less than eight (8) inches.

No recess for alcoves, water or other pipes shall reduce to less than eight (8) inches in thickness at that point.

If it is desired to increase the height of any existing party or independent wall, when said wall is less in thickness than is herein required, it shall be done by a lining of brick work to form a combined thickness with the old wall of not less than four (4) inches more than is required for a new wall at total height desired, and no lining shall be four (4) inches thick for more than one story or fifteen (15) feet.

Said lining is to be supported on proper foundations, and whenever four (4) inches thick is to be applied only to firm, cleaned wall and thoroughly anchored by wrought iron anchors driven into the old wall.

No existing wall shall be used for party wall or other purposes unless approved by the Inspector, and all supports of walls shall be only of brick, stone or iron.

The walls of each story shall be built up to the full thickness to top of beams.

All walls shall be carried up to all roof sheathings, and to top lines of all cornices, and all party walls shall be built twelve (12) inches above the roof and coped with stone, iron or terra cotta.

No coping wall shall be less than eight (8) inches thick.

In all buildings occupied by three (3) or more families over a lower portion used for any other purpose than a dwelling, the hall partitions of first story and basement shall be of brick or other fireproof material and underside of staircases covered with metal lathing and plaster.

All walls shall be properly bonded together, or anchored to each other by tie anchors built not less than sixteen (16) inches into side walls every six (6) feet in height, anchors to be not less than one and a half by three-eighths of an inch in size.

All walls shall be anchored to each tier of beams with iron anchors not more than eight (8) feet apart, and extending to within at least four (4) inches of the outside face of the wall; between all openings there shall be at least one anchor, and where beams with anchors rest on partition or girders, in two or more lengths across the building they shall be strongly bolted or strapped together to obtain cross tie.

All walls to be strongly braced during their construction from the beams of each story, and when required and necessary shall also be braced from the outside until the building is enclosed.

All piers shall be built of stone or brick laid in cement mortar; all isolated stone piers to carry girders supporting walls, or columns or posts over, shall be well bonded and well covered on all exposed sides.

Isolated brick piers shall not, in height, exceed twelve (12) times their least dimensions.

Every brick pier less than nine (9) superficial feet in area at its base, supporting any beam, girder, arch or column on which a wall rests, or lintel spanning an opening over ten (10) feet and supporting a wall, shall at not greater intervals than thirty (30) inches apart have built into it a bond stone not less than four (4) inches thick, or a cast iron plate of sufficient strength, and of the full size of pier.

Under all iron beams, girders, trusses, columns of posts there shall be a cap or template of sufficient size and thickness, of stone or iron.

Ashlar shall not be counted as a part of the thickness of walls as herein provided, unless built and bonded as prescribed for foundations, and the walls so faced laid with, and ashlar bedded in, cement mortar.

All stone used for the facing of any building or part thereof, shall not be less than four (4) inches in thickness, to be strongly bonded or anchored to the backing.

Section 26. The brick used in all buildings shall be good, hard, well burnt brick, every sixth course to be a header course; all to be laid wet except in freezing weather, with closely filled joints, to be built to true lines and carried up plumb.

Where walls are faced with brick in running bond every sixth course shall be bonded with whole brick diagonal bonders, or by splitting the face brick into halves and backing the same with a continuous row of headers.

The sand used in all buildings shall be clean, sharp grit sand.

All mortars to be thoroughly mixed by careful and persistent working.

Cement mortar shall be made of sand and cement in the proportion of not more than three (3) parts of sand to one (1) part of cement, and shall only be used immediately after being mixed.

Lime mortar shall be made of not more than four (4) parts of sand to one (1) part of lime, and shall not be used until throughly slaked.

Cement and lime mortar shall be made of three (3) parts of sand, one (1) part of cement, and one (1) part of lime.

Concrete for foundations shall be made of two (2) parts of sand, one (1) part of cement, and not more than five (5) parts of small, clean broken stone or good sharp gravel, all to be carefully mixed immediately before using.

Section 27. All openings for doors and windows in all buildings shall have a good and sufficient arch of stone or brick, well built and keyed and with sufficient abutments, or a lintel of iron of sufficient strength, or of stone not less than four (4) inches thick, with a bearing not less than four (4) inches at each end.

When the lintel is of less thickness than the wall to be supported, there shall also be a good timber lintel with bearings of not less than three (3) inches, and a double rowlock or bonded arch turned over same.

Section 28. In computing the weight of walls: Brick work shall be estimated at 115 lbs. per cubic foot; facing stones shall be estimated at 160 lbs. per cubic foot.

The safe bearing load for good brick work shall be estimated at 8 tons per su. ft. when laid in good lime mortar; 11½ tons per su. ft. when laid in good cement and lime mortar; 15 tons per su. ft. when laid in good cement mortar.

The strength of floors to be estimated for in buildings, in addition to the weight of materials, is to be not less than: For dwellings, 75 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for office purposes, 100 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for public assembly, 120 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for stores, warehouses, etc., 150 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface; for all roofs, 50 lbs. upon every su. ft. of surface.

Section 29. Every iron column, post or other vertical support, and all trusses, beams and girders shall be of sufficient strength to bear safely its intended total load, and if of iron, the manufacturer or contractor shall cause to be plainly marked upon said girder or column, the weight it will safely sustain, and no greater weight shall be imposed thereon. All beams and girders to have ample bearings upon sufficient capstone or templates of stone or iron.

Iron supports to walls, whether beam, girder or column shall, if required, be thoroughly incased with brick or other approved fireproof material.

Section 30. No wooden floor beam shall be less than two (2) inches in thickness and ten (10) inches in depth. Except third story of attic beams which may be two (2) inches in thickness and eight (8) inches in depth.

All header and trimmer beams shall be double or one inch thicker than the beams, and where more than six (6) feet long shall be hung in stirrup irons.

All floor and roof beams to have bearings of not less than four (4) inches at ends, and where they rest upon brick or stone walls, shall be cut to a bevel of three (3) inches on their depth.

All wooden beams shall be framed away from all and every kind of flue in walls and chimneys, the trimmer beam to be at least eight (8) inches from the inside of any flue in a straight way, and four (4) inches away from the outside of a chimney breast, and the header not less than two (2) inches from brickwork.

All tiers to be strongly bridged with sufficient rows of continuous herringbone bridging well nailed for every ten foot span.

Each tier of beams to be anchored to all walls every six (6) feet with one and one-half by three-eighths inch wrought iron anchors well secured to side of beams.

All timbers and wooden beams to be free from weakening imperfections, and of full strength of dimension and kind.

Stud partitions are to be continuous wherever practicable, that is, to run down between the beams and rest on the plate of the partition below.

All wooden girders supporting beams shall be carried by brick piers, or iron, locust or other suitable hard wood posts of sufficient strength, on proper foundation.

Section 31. Every hoistway opening is to be provided on each story with a substantial railing, and strong battened trap door securely hinged, such railings and doors to be kept closed at all practical times, except when in actual use by occupants of builings, but especially to be carefully closed each and every day at the completion of business.

Any failure to provide such trap doors, and for every neglect to close the same as herein prescribed, the owner or occupant of said building shall be respectively liable for the violation of this ordinance.

The interior of all elevator or dumb-walter shafts to be lined with metal or covered with metal lathing and plaster. The doors at each story to be covered with metal on the inside.

Section 32. In the fire limits, all roofs and cornices, the tops and sides of all dormers and gables, all balustrades, pediments and details generally, both constructional and ornamental, shall be of slate, metal or terra cotta. All cornices and other metal features to be secured to brick work with iron anchors.

The roof sheathing of every building shall in no case be extended across the front, side or end of any party wall.

All buildings shall be provided with metallic gutters and water leaders, the latter in no case to discharge upon the sidewalk.

The roofs of all buildings within the fire limits shall have a scuttle or bulkhead, covered with approved fireproof material, with fixed ladders or stairs of iron leading thereto. No scuttle is to be less than two by three feet in size, and the frames of all bulkheads are to be filled with brick or fireproof block.

All skylights shall be made only of metal and glass.

Section 33.—No chimney shall be built upon any floor, or be supported in whole or part with wood, but shall be wholly supported on stone, brick or iron.

Corbelling out a chimney shall not exceed eight (8) inches, in not less than six (6) courses of brick, and if supported by piers, said piers shall not be less than twelve (12) inches on the face, and be properly bonded into the wall.

All fireplaces shall have hearths of brick, stone, slate, or tile, not less than eighteen inches in width, to be supported on arches of brick or stone, and under all portable ranges such hearths shall be at least sixteen (16) inches wider on front than depth of range.

All floors under kitchen cook stoves and other stoves shall be covered with metal the same to extend at least one (1) foot, on all sides, beyond base of said stoves.

All stud partitions back of portable kitchen ranges shall be framed sixteen (16) inches higher than smoke pipe opening and one (1) foot wider each side of range, and the opening filled in with brick or fireproof blocks. No stove shall come within two (2) feet of any wooden partition. No wood work shall cross the brick breast of any portable range.

All ash holes, ash houses or ash depositories of any kind shall be built wholly of brick, stone, iron or fireproof material.

All smoke flues with walls less than 8 inches thick shall be lined on the inside with cast iron or fireproof terra cotta pipe, to be built in with brick work, from the bottom of the flue or from the throat of the fireplace, and shall be carried up continuously to the extreme top of chimney, which is to be not less than three (3) feet above the roof, to be coped with stone, terra cotta or iron.

All smoke flues for manufacturing or steam power boilers shall be built with double walls, with an air space between, the inside four (4) inches to be of fire brick or fire clay slabs or blocks laid in fire mortar, to the height of twenty-five (25) feet from the bottom.

All such flues to extend at least ten (10) feet above the highest point of any roof within a radius of fifty (50) feet, and be covered on top with a heavy wire netting.

The fire backs of all fireplaces shall not be less than eight (8) inches thick of solid masonry.

The brickwork on outside faces of all fireplace flues shall not be less than eight (8) inches, unless lined with tile.

All blind and dead flues to be shut off at the underside of the beams of each story.

Section 34. No wooden casing, furring or lath shall be placed against or cover any smoke flue or metal pipe used to convey hot air or steam.

All such flues to be covered with metal lathing, and all flues to be left smooth and clear on the completion of building.

No stovepipe shall pass through any floor or roof of any building or through any woodwork or partitions, unless protected by a double collar of metal or terra cotta with holes for ventilation, and not less than three (3) inches of air space between.

All stovepipes shall in all cases be kept twelve (12) inches away from all beams or unprotected woodwork; if protected by metal work the least distance from woodwork shall be six (6) inches.

All smokepipes from laundry stoves or any kind of heating furnace or boiler must be kept at all points not less than eighteen (18) inches from all unprotected woodwork.

If protected by metal the least distance from the woodwork shall be six (6) inches.

Where such pipe passes through any woodwork or partition it shall be protected by an iron thimble with at least eight inches of brick work around it, or a double collar of metal or terra cotta with holes for ventilation and not less than six (6) inches of air space between.

Section 35. All brick set hot air furnaces shall have two covers, with an air space of at least four (4) inches between, the top to be of brick or metal supported by iron bars, to be made perfectly tight, and there shall not be less than four (4) inches of space between the ceiling or floor beams and top.

All brick set furnaces except hot water furnaces shall have two four (4) inch well bonded brick walls with a not less than three (3) inch air space between. In every case to be built at least four (4) inches from all woodwork.

All portable hot air furnaces shall be kept at least two (2) feet away from any unprotected woodwork or ceilings (plaster not inclusive), and when protected by metal lining the distance shall not be less than one (1) foot.

No furnace shall be placed upon a wooden floor, but if such floor is adjacent thereto, the furnace must in every case be set upon brick or stone base of full size of furnace and to extend not less than two (2) feet beyond the furnace in front of the ash-pan.

Section 36. All hot air flues or shafts in stone or brick work to be lined with metal or burnt clay pipe.

All hot air flues in stud partitions shall be made double, with not less than one-half inch air space between, the back and sides of said channel and all other contiguous beams or woodwork to be lined with metal.

The outer faces of all hot air flues to be covered with metal lathing.

Horizontal hot air pipes shall not be less than three (3) inches below plaster ceilings, and where carried through wood partitions or floors they shall be guarded by either a double collar of metal with two (2) inches of air space and with ventilating holes, or be surrounded by brickwork at least four (4) inches in thickness.

Section 37. Registers shall not be located within four (4) feet distant horizontally from the furnace. When registers for hot air furnaces are placed in any woodwork or combustible floors the sides shall be lined with tin. All register boxes to be made of tin plate with flange, the register to rest upon the same, the sides of boxes to be not less than two (2) inches from all woodwork.

All indirect radiator boxes and all wooden boxes and casings enclosing steam pipes shall be lined with iron or tin.

Section 38. No steam pipe shall be placed within two (2) inches of any timber or woodwork unless same is protected by a metal covering, when the distance shall not be less than one (1) inch.

All steam or hot water pipes passing through floors and ceilings and plastered partitions shall be fully protected by a metal tube one (1) inch larger in diameter than the pipe, and the space filled in with mineral wool, asbestos or other approved non-combustible material.

All cutting of beams for gas, water or other pipes shall be not more than three (3) feet from bearing of beams, and shall be not more than two (2) inches in depth in any case.

Section 39. Every electric wire for furnishing light, heat or power, led into any building from the outside thereof, shall have proper and sufficient appliances to cut off the current where it enters the building.

All inside wires shall be properly insulated and all work throughout be in accordance with the rules and requirements of the Underwriters' Association of this Department, a copy of which said rules and requirements shall be kept on file in the office of said Inspector.

Section 40. No gas burner, unless protected by a bell, shall be placed less than three (3) feet below any ceiling or woodwork, and all side lights and swinging brackets shall be so placed as not to endanger any woodwork, curtains or other combustible material.

Section 41. Every dwelling house occupied by three or more families above the first story, and every building already, or to be erected, occupied or used as a hotel, lodging or boarding house, school, theatre, or place of public assembly, and every factory, mill, manufactory or workshop, hospital, asylum, or institution, or office building shall be provided with suitable strong iron fire escapes as may be determined by the Inspector, to be constructed in such manner as he may direct and approve.

The owner or owners of any building upon which any fire escape may be erected is to keep the same in good repair,

Died at the Hospital.

Mrs. Isadore Fauchereau who was taken to the hospital several weeks ago suffering from spinal trouble caused by a fall, died this morning at that place. A most difficult operation was performed on her recently by the hospital staff, but the extent of her injuries were such that she could not recover. She was the wife of the proprietor of Mizzen Peak cottage.

Smoker and Apple Crush.

At the last meeting of the Carpenters' and Joiners' Union one candidate was initiated and one proposition was received. There will be initiation at the next meeting, Tuesday evening, December 24th. The election of officers will also occur at that time. A smoker and apple crush will be enjoyed under the good of the order.

Thanks Offered.

The officers of the Children's Home return to the managers of the Kirmess and the Firemen's Fair their cordial thanks for their free entertainments of the children, also to A. Bartlett for the ton of coal sent by him.

The Knowing Maiden.

"Whe-e are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I'm going to Collier's, sir," she said;
"And why go there, sweet maid?" said he.
"To see his silver show," said she—
"Match boxes, pocket-combs, spoons multifarious,
Tea-strainers, watch-boxes, key-rings galore,
Hat-markers, bag-markers, glove-but'ners various,
Flower-stands, paper-knives, rings by the score.
And many more dainties of workmanship rare
Will charm and delight all the visitors there."

Tributes of Classmates.

The funeral of Louie F. Coriell, was held at the home of his father, A. S. Coriell, at Bound Brook this afternoon. Among the floral tributes was a very handsome one from his classmates in the fourth class in the Plainfield High school.

Intended to Catch Your Eye.

Don't skip this paragraph because it is small. It is worth reading for it tells about The Pineola Balsam, a certain remedy for cough, tickling in the throat and the stopped-up feeling in the upper part of the chest. A simple cough may turn into something serious if let alone. It ceases to vex you and to keep you awake o'nights when you have allayed the inflammation in your throat with Ely's Pineola Balsam. The druggists sell it for 25c.

SINGING CHRISTMAS CAROLS

SPECIAL SERVICES HELD IN THE CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Music Was a Prominent Feature of the Programmes, and the Edifices Were Decorated With Fine Flowers.

The effort put forth at Trinity Reformed church yesterday towards an appropriate observance of Christmas Sunday, was an ideal one in every particular, and the church never looked more beautiful. It was a sight that one would have to look upon to appreciate. The words "Christ is Born," in large letters with a gilt background, were attractively placed across the upper part of the large organ, while in front suspended over the pulpit was a handsome star of evergreens and holly berries. Surrounding the platform were placed large quantities of evergreen forming a perfect bank. There was also a pleasing arrangement of cut flowers and palms.

Probably the most artistic decorations ever witnessed in the city were to be seen in the body of the church. A large, handsome evergreen bell with silver clapper was gracefully suspended from the centre point, at the top of which numerous evergreen ropings were suspended. These were attached to the various columns, between which were smaller evergreen bells with silver clappers. Small bunches of evergreen neatly arranged around the sides of the church between the windows completed the picture, which could not have been improved upon.

Special music by a choir of twenty voices under the direction of F. S. Cutter, director, and A. L. Titsworth, organist, rendered an exceedingly choice programme, as published in these columns.

There were solo parts by Miss Etta Krymer, Miss MacMurray, Robert Clark and F. S. Cutter, which were rendered in a thoroughly pleasing manner. The entire choir showed careful training, which is due to Mr. Titsworth, organist.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck preached an appropriate sermon which was listened to with deep interest.

The choir was composed of the following persons: Sopranos—Miss Etta Krymer, Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke, Mrs. J. S. Cutter, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff, Mrs. J. T. MacMurray, Miss MacMurray; altos—Miss Lizzie Dunn, Mrs. George Saums, Miss Emma Gillem, Mrs. F. S. Cutter, Miss Minnie Williams; tenors—Robert Clark, Bradley Hall, Henry Williams, Joseph Moon, T. R. Van Zandt; bassos—F. S. Cutter, John Steiner, A. J. Moore and C. Weston.

Great credit is due F. S. Cutter for the selection of such an excellent choir; also Harry C. Van Emburgh, R. A. Meeker, Miss Lizzie Dunn and Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke for their earnest work in decorating the church, which excelled in artistic beauty any previous efforts.

In the evening the exercises were in charge of the Sunday-school, and consisted of singing by the choir and school, Scripture reading by Assistant Superintendent F. E. Smith, prayer and short address by the pastor, and also a few remarks by E. E. Anthony, the Superintendent.

"How Christ Would Keep Christmas" was the title of a letter written by Rev. F. E. Clark, and published in the Golden Rule. It was read by Edgar Sheppard. An entertaining feature of the evening was the singing and recitations by the primary department, as follows:

Recitation—A Christmas Prayer. Albert Yaeger
Recitation—It Was Years and Years Ago. Pauline Buckley
Singing—Manger Song.....School
Recitation—Gift of Gifts.....Luther Sheppard
Recitation—Gifts for Jesus.....Ten little girls
Lucy Coriell, Minnie Nischwitz, Etta Trembly, Mabel Vanderhoff, Ruth Berg, May Anthony, Pauline Buckley, Dora Wilson, Bessie Randall, Anna Holder.
Singing—While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks.....School
Recitation—Daisy.....Bessie Randall

Mrs. J. M. Tier, their Superintendent, felt proud of her little flock last evening, and well she may, for they acquitted themselves nobly, and gave evidence of careful, patient training.

The Christmas Day services at St. Stephen's church will be as follows:

First Celebration of Holy Communion, 7:30 a. m. Morning prayer, 10:30 a. m. Second Celebration and sermon, 11 a. m.

The music at the second celebration will be:

Introit—Hymn 51.....Mendelssohn
Kyries and Glorias.....Gilbert
Offertorium.....Clare
Sursum Corda, Sanctus, Benedictus..Gilbert
Agnus Dei.
Venite Adoreamus.
Gloria in Excelsis, old chant.
Retrocessional—Hymn 61.....LeJeune

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church, were held last evening. The front of the interior of the church was decorated with greens and holly, while arranged partly in the greens over the organ loft and partly suspended in the air were gilt letters forming "His Name Shall be Called Wonderful Counsellor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

A star formed of a great number of small gas gets glittered just above the heads of the choir. The instrumental music was rendered by Miss Jessie Utter, organ, Mr. Martin A. Korff and Clarence Mills, violins, Daniel E. Davis, trombone and Raymond A. McGee, cornet. A large chorus choir led the singing and rendered several anthems.

The programme was as follows: Anthem by the choir "There were Shepherds," invocation, scripture reading, recitation by Roland Horne, singing by school "'Tis Christmas," primary department exercise "Joy Bells," singing by the school "Lo! He Comes," scripture reading, recitation by Frank Binghaman, singing by school "Pure and Holy," recitation "The First Christmas" by Edna Moore, offertory, recitation "The King and the Wise Men" by Rita Pond, singing by school "Happy Christmas Bells," short address by Rev. C. R. Barnes, D. D., singing by school "Sweet Christmas Time," benediction.

Under the direction of Wm. E. MacClymont organist, the choir of the First Presbyterian church assisted by an orchestra of twelve pieces presented a Christmas musical service in that church last evening. The congregation was very large. The church was prettily decorated with evergreens and an attractive sight was a large star illuminated with incandescent lights. This was suspended over the pulpit platform.

The programme was rendered as published in these columns, with the exception of a soprano solo, "Christ's Child," by Miss Glen, and was enjoyed by the audience. There was no sermon by the pastor, short scripture selections taking the place of it.

Christmas Sunday was very pleasantly observed yesterday morning at the Congregational Church. The church was prettily decorated with greens and flowers, and a large congregation listened to special music well rendered by the choir and an instrumental quartette, and to an excellent sermon by the pastor, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, on the subject, "Isaiah's vision of Christ."

The Sunday-school held its special exercises in the afternoon. The music was furnished an instrumental sextette, Messrs. Conde and Paronbok, violins, Mr. Menzel, 'cello, Mr. Clauss, flute, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, piano, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organ. There was an instrumental trio and a quintette, besides the special Christmas carols. The primary department gave a pleasing exercise entitled "Joy Bells." Those who took part in it were the Misses Edna Scheyd, Edith Glaentzer, Ethel Van Zandt, Ethel Weseman, Mildred Day, Marion Dwight and Laura Baker. There was also a solo by Miss Agnes LaBoyteaux and chorus by the Misses Caroline Fuller, Edith Robinson, Marion Sheldon and Hattie Messersmith.

The Christmas exercises of the Seventh-Day Baptist church were held yesterday morning. Several Christmas anthems were sung by the choir. Miss Violet Truell assisted in the instrumental selections with her violin. Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis preached a sermon appropriate to the occasion. The church was prettily decorated with palms and greens.

Justice Newcorn's Court.

The following cases on contract were tried in Justice Newcorn's court this morning and judgment was rendered for the plaintiff in each one: Hand against Brambani; Coddington against Wyckoff; Tobin against Chandler.

Mail Delivery by Wagon.

Owing to the great amount of Christmas mail to be delivered Postmaster Hetfield was this morning compelled to put on a wagon to deliver packages.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

TALKING FOR THE ARMENIANS

A MINISTER SAYS ENGLAND IS RESPONSIBLE FOR HER CONDITION.

Essentially England is a Mohammedian Government, Because She Rules More Subjects of That Belief Than Any Other.

At the festal Christmas season, when we are surrounded with happiness and good cheer, then it is surely fitting that we turn our thoughts to those to whom the Christmastide will not bring the same blessings. A very interesting service was held last night in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church. It was called an "Armenian Relief Service," and was a union of Grace Episcopal, Crescent Avenue and the Congregational church.

Dean Rodman was the first speaker. He told of the extreme antiquity of the Armenian church, it having been founded by St. Gregory in 300 A. D. Ever since its history has been one of persecution and suffering. We might not care to worship with them in their own manner, but at least they have convinced the Christian world of their honesty. When the starving people were offered food by the Sultan if they would become Mohammedans, they preferred to die, and keep the faith.

We busy ourselves in these days over a miserable boundary line in Venezuela, instead of thinking what can be done for our afflicted brethren in Armenia. May God help us to see our whole duty to them, and then to do it!

Rev. C. L. Goodrich was expected to be present and to speak on mission work in Armenia, but he was detained by illness.

Dr. W. R. Richards followed, giving a vivid description of the sufferings of Armenia from Turkey. England, he said, is responsible for the existence of Turkey, therefore, indirectly responsible for these atrocities. England is a Mohammedan Empire, if counted by numbers; the Queen rules more Mohammedan subjects than Christians.

There has been nothing in the nature of a revolt in Armenia; they are not a warlike people; they have no arms in their hands. It is almost incredible that in this age men can shut up helpless women and children in a church and then set fire to the building. And the leaders in these outrageous proceedings are decorated and honored by the Turkish Government. It makes it hard to keep one's Christian temper!

Perhaps the most unfortunate thing about our temporary misunderstanding with England, for we cannot believe it is more than that, is that it turns our thoughts from this more important subject. If we must fight, let us strike a blow against wrong and injustice, instead of for a few miles of territory, far away in South America.

A collection was taken for the work of the Red Cross Society in Armenia, and a committee was appointed to consider any further method of help that might be brought up. The committee will consist of Dean Rodman, Mayor Gilbert and Isaac L. Miller.

THE REVOLVER WAS LOADED.

BUT A CARELESS YOUNGTER SAYS HE DIDN'T KNOW IT.

Pointed it at His Brother, Pulled the Trigger and There Was a Miraculous Escape From a Sudden and Sad Death.

The revolver that "wasn't loaded" came very near having another victim this morning, when Raymond McMurtry accidentally shot his brother Clarence in the back. The shooting occurred in the sitting room of the home of the father of the two young men, J. B. McMurtry, of 175 Somerset street, at 7:20 o'clock this morning.

Last evening Mr. McMurtry was examining a 38-calibre, self-cocking revolver and placed it under the lounge in the sitting room for safekeeping. This morning Raymond, his fourteen-year-old son, found the revolver and began to examine it. Not supposing that it was loaded he pointed it at his older brother Clarence, and pulled the trigger, as he had often done before with Mr. McMurtry's other firearms which were not loaded. The cartridge was exploded and the ball just missed Mrs. MacMurtry's head, who was sitting at the table.

Clarence is nineteen years old and is employed at the Scott Press Works. He had on a very heavy ulster which hung loosely on his back. The bullet struck him on the left shoulder, but the ulster and the heavy clothing he wore checked its force so that it merely cut a gash in the flesh and rebounded.

Dr. Zeglio was called and dressed the wound. He said that it was one of the most miraculous escapes he had ever seen. When the shot was fired the two young men were not fifteen feet apart.

A MISSION ESTABLISHED.

Col. Hadley's Meetings Arouse Interest for the Victims of Drink.

The very successful evangelistic meetings which have been held at Reform Hall during the past week, under the leadership of Col. Hadley, came to an end yesterday afternoon. The meeting in the afternoon was a rousing one and every available space in Reform Hall was packed with the large crowd that attended.

After a very impressive talk, Col. Hadley brought up the question of regularly establishing a mission in Plainfield. He stated that he had three checks for $50 each for the rent of the vacant store at 224 West Front street, formerly occupied by F. S. Rose, hardware dealer, from January 1st to April 1st. And that if a like amount could be raised to pay the necessary running expenses, the Chinatown Men's Mission will establish a Plainfield branch for a trial of three months. By a rising vote the audience unanimously decided to support the new movement and a number of subscriptions were received. The meeting then adjourned to meet Monday evening, January 13th, at the new mission when it will be opened. Meanwhile it will be put in condition for its new work.

Chicken Thieves Sent to Prison.

Judge Rice, of Middlesex, on Saturday sentenced Arthur and Peter Van Fleet to two years each in State Prison for larceny of fifty chickens from a farmer named Lingerman, residing near Dunellen. Both men have served terms at Trenton before for horse-stealing and burglary in Union and Somerset counties, and since their arrest the annoyance of petty burglaries in the vicinity of Dunellen has entirely ceased.

Leave The Light On.

Complaint is made to The Press against the practice of the conductors on the trolley cars lifting the trolley cars off the wire at the terminus on Watchung avenue, before the passengers alight from the car, thus leaving them in darkness to get off as best they can. A lady came near falling last evening from one of the cars.

Presents to Instructors.

Previous to the Christmas exercises at the North Plainfield public school Friday morning the members of the graduating class met in the library where John H. VanWinkle, Jr., president of the class, presented Miss Cutter, their teacher, with a handsome Dresden china clock, and Principal Boss with a gold pe nholder and pen.

A Praise Service.

A praise service was held at the Scotch Plains Baptist church last evening. The special music consisted of Christmas anthems by the choir and vocal solos by Mrs. Force and Mrs. E. Drake, of Scotch Plains, Mr. Mackininy, of New York, and Clifford Braider, of Plainfield.

ANOTHER DAGO OUTRAGE.

A Brutal Italian Assaults a Woman in the Borough.

Tony Armte, an Italian boarding on Race street, attempted a dastardly assault on Mrs. Hobbie, of 218 Grove street, Saturday night about 8:30 o'clock, as she was returning home through Grove street after doing some shopping.

The man accosted her, threw her in the gutter and attempted to tear her clothes off. Mrs. Hobbie was so frightened that she was hardly able to make her cries for help heard. William Perrine and William Freese happened to be near and responded at once. They took charge of the man and started for the lockup, when they met Chief VanHorn. He locked the man up and this morning Justice Crosley gave him a hearing. He was committed to the Somerville jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

NOTHING LEGAL IN THE WAY.

Corporation Counsel Marsh Says the Use of Sewage Beds Can be Commenced.

There is no reason why the Common Council will not grant the North avenue people the privilege of using the sewers at once. At least, so Corporation Counsel C. A. Marsh told a Daily Press reporter this morning. Now that Expert Hazen has declared the system in condition to use, as Mr. Marsh says there is no legal reason for their non-operation. He also said he did not fear an injunction from the Dunellen people. Should the Council refuse the permission, however, Mr. Marsh will not represent the city at the trial, as the city is in no way concerned.

Work was begun early this morning on the street connections on North avenue and they will be finished in a few days.

In City Court.

The city court had two victims this morning ready for Judge Coddington to dispense justice to them. Howard Doty was arrested Saturday evening on West Front street by Officer Frederickson for being drunk and disorderly and using indecent language. When given his choice between a fine of $10 and a trip of thirty days duration, he preferred to travel free.

"Corky" Goodwin, the hackman, was fined $5 for violating the hackmen's ordinance.

Quarreled, Shot, Run.

Two men, one called Smokestack and the other unknown, met near Scotch Plains yesterday afternoon and indulged in a serious quarrel. The unknown threw a stone at Smokestack and the latter pulled a revolver and shot. He missed his mark however. Smokestack jumped in DeMott's stage and came to Plainfield while the unknown went on to Scotch Plains.

Death of Frank Lukman.

After a long illness from consumption Frank Lukman died at his home, 834 North Front street yesterday.

He was formerly an employee at Scott's Press Works. A wife and daughter survive him. The funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon at one o'clock from the house.

Chief Doane Objects.

Work was begun on the roofing for the Jackson building this morning but it came to a sudden halt. It is made of tar paper and gravel and T. O. Doane, chief of the fire department, deemed it a violation of the fire ordinance and ordered the work stopped. It was stopped without protest.

The Sanitarium to Open.

The Townsend Sanitarium, formerly the Hotel Netherwood, will open on Monday, December 30th, for the reception and treatment of consumptives. Dr. Townsend claims that he has no false theories but has an infallible cure for consumption.

Yuletide Festivities.

The Sunday-school of the First M. E. church will hold its Christmas entertainment on Thursday evening in Vincent chapel. The primary department will have its Christmas festivities on Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

ROOSEVELTING THE BOROUGH

AN ORDINANCE TO BE FRAMED FOR SUNDAY CLOSING.

The Borough Council Take Action to Prevent City Barbers From Establishing Sunday Shops Across the Brook.

At the special meeting of the borough council held Saturday evening the members assembled promptly at 7:30, the time set, and at once proceeded to transact the business on hand. The absentees were Councilmen Peck and Schutt. Clerk Arnold stated the call of the meeting which was to consider the report of the Fire Water and Lamp Committee in regard to the erection of a bell tower and the purchase of a bell in place of the gong now in use.

Mr. Valiant, for the chairman of the committee, Mr. Peck, stated that the North Plainfield Electric Light Co. who had been operating the steam fire whistle, had sold out to the Plainfield Electric Light Company, thus rendering the whistle useless. The committee had spent time in seeking another place for it, but could find none. The Plainfield Electric Light Co. had offered to place it on their station, but owing to the similarity in the sound of the whistles, the committee did not think it wise to accept the offer. Therefore in the best judgement of the committee, they suggested that a bell be secured, a tower erected and that fire department bonds be issued at as low a rate as possible, one bond to mature each year, till all were paid. The council received the report and it was paid.

Mr. Valiant then offered a resolution that the Fire, Water and Lamp Committee be authorized to secure bids for the erection of a tower, the purchase of a bell and report at the next meeting of the council. The resolution was adopted. Mr. Valiant stated furthur that the electric light plant where the fire gong is at present located would be changed January 1st, and he thought that during the interium some other arrangement would be necessary to give an alarm of fire. Accordingly he offered a resolution which was adopted, that the above committee be authorized to fix a temporary bell for that purpose. Mr. Lounsbury called the attention of the Council to the fact that Chief Marshal Van Horn had reported 114 electric lights out during the past two weeks, which is six per cent. more than under the former system. He thought that the service was very poor, as was also the lights. Acting on the suggestion of Mr. Valiant, Clerk Arnold will acquaint Cairman Peck, of the fire, water and lamps committee, with the facts and the matter will be attended to. Mr. Valiant offered a resoluion that Borough Counsel Chas. A. Reed be directed to carry out the intent of a former resolution adopted, which provides for the revision and compilation of the laws and ordinances of the borough, and that the same be put in pamphlet form. The resolution was adopted.

At this point Mr. Lounsbury surprised the Council by offering a resolution that the Borough Counsel be instructed to draw up an ordinance that would close up all stores, including barber shops, in the borough, on Sundays. The resolution was adopted. Mr. Lounsbury stated that he saw no reason why persons with no moral intent whatever should be allowed to come from Plainfield into the borough and make a regular gala day of Sunday by running their stores full blast This sort of thing was not allowed in the city, and should not be in the borough. He voiced the sentiments of the other members, who are heartily in favor of a strict observance of the Sabbath. There being no further business, the Council adjourned.

GERMANS NOT EXCITED

No Public Interest in Our War Talk in Berlin.

Operations on the Bourse, However, Greatly Affected—All Interest Bent on Christmas Celebrations—The Kaiser To Entertain Members of the Reichstag of 1871.

Berlin, Dec. 23.—Public interest in the quarrel between the United States and Great Britain has never been highly strained and bids fair to become rapidly less, especially as regards the political aspect of the question. On the other hand, however, financial anxiety is on the increase. The operations on the bourse here, in Frankfort and in Vienna on Saturday showed a greater tendency to take the situation seriously. It is true that nothing like a war panic prevailed, but the operators obviously got the impression that the financial situation must become much worse than it is, whatever may happen, in relieving the political difficulty. The selling of American stocks on the various German bourses proceeded actively and a considerable number of selling orders are reported to have been sent from Berne to London. The selling movement meanwhile is not that investors are unloading, but is largely confined to speculative dealings which seem calculated to eventually draw in genuine holders. The concurrence of the financial press in the general gloomy view of the monetary prospects of the United States is giving a great deal of assistance to speculators. Responsible newspapers like the National Zeitung predict a flow of gold from the United States. To a large extent the trouble lies in the difficulty of American railroads and other enterprises obtaining the support of European capital and the cessation of the revival of American industry which recently set in. In regard to a tariff war between Germany and the United States, nobody affects to believe anything of the kind will occur excepting interested agrarians who have been hoping that such a war would result in the formation of a strong agrarian and protectionist ministry in Germany.

Christmas Celebrations.

The preparations which everybody is making for Christmas places to the nation at large political and financial events in the back ground. The members of the imperial family are passing their time in thorough burgher fashion. The emperor is enjoying himself in the bosom of his family and the life of the royalties at the new palace at Potsdam mirrors upon a great scale the life of most of the households in Germany. On Christmas eve the biggest event for the young princes will be "die bescherung"—the giving of Christmas boxes. The distribution of gifts will be made from a Christmas tree, of which each prince will have one, their size varying according to the ages of the owners. There will be a tree too for the little princess Victoria Louise, and there will also be trees for everybody in the household down to the kitchen servants. Apart from domestic fetes Berlin will be quiet socially until the season commences shortly before the annual "ordenefest" which will take place on January 18, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the proclamation of the German empire. Chancellor Prince von Hohenlohe left Berlin on Friday on his way to Bohemia to pass the Christmas holidays with his eldest son Prince Philip.

Interesting Berlin Society News.

Among the high society leaders of Berlin Prince and Princess Radziwill are the only ones now here. The princess is "at home" every day from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 8 o'clock in the evening to intimate friends. Just prior to the "ordenfest" all of the grand seigneurs will leave their country seats for Berlin. The upper house of the Prussian diet will then begin its session and the series of court balls will commence. Each aristocratic set gives its own special functions, society cliqueism not having been modified in the slightest degree under the regime of Emperor William II. Besides the regular court circle there is the set of the officers of the First Guards, composed of members of the old mediatized princely families. This set is so exclusive that it will not mix even with the officers of the guard du corps. Those of the public official circle stand apart from the court aristocrats, the various cliques meeting only at great assemblies where the general world goes. All of those circles will be in the full swing of gaiety three weeks hence making Berlin brighter and adding to the prosperity of the tradesmen, and no complications in the east or the west menace a blight upon a good season.

Cleveland's Sedan.

The Vossiche Zeitung in an article referring to the financial panic in New York says: "The outcome is likely to prove to be President Cleveland's Sedan. The economic position of America is bad enough now, but what will happen in the event of war." The North German Gazette expresses fear that it will take at least a decade for America to recover the confidence of politicians and financiers of Germany.

An Offer for Count Bismarck.

The ex-Empress Frederick, Saturday presented Christmas gifts to the girls of the Victoria institute and also to pupils in the Pestalozzi and Froebel institute. A report is in circulation that Count Herbert Bismarck is about to obtain an office in the Prussian ministry, but the rumor is not generally believed in official circles.

Red Cross Society Overrun with Applicants.

No Lack of Persons Who Are Anxious To Assist in Distributing the Relief Fund in Armenia—Clara Barton Unable To Answer All Applicants Individually.

Washington, Dec. 23.—So many applications for accompanying the red cross on the proposed Armenian relief expedition are coming from nurses, doctors and people of all other avocations and of all nationalities, nearly, that the following general reply has been prepared: "The American National Red Cross begs to acknowledge receipt of your esteemed communication on the subject of the undertaking to distribute relief in Armenia and your kind offer of services in the work. In the beginning I must apologize for this informal and general mode of replying to a communication which deserves a special and personal response; but I trust that a short statement of the circumstances will be sufficient excuse for this method of reply. "Since the first intimation of the probability that this organization would be asked to undertake the great and complicated work of delivering America's generosity to the destitute Turkish subjects, offers of service have poured in upon us from all parts of the country, and in such numbers that it has become an utter impossibility to give each one separate acknowledgement and consideration: hence the actual necessity of preparing this circular answer. At the present time it is not possible to definitely judge of the number of assistants that may be required, nor of the character of the help that will be needed. The Red Cross having performed active field service in a dozen great disasters, has drawn into its ranks a staff of faithful and diligent helpers upon whom it can call at a day's notice, and that staff for the present seems all sufficient. Your kind offer has, however, been duly placed on file, and should later developments call for an increase of the staff it will give us much pleasure to consider your letter further. In the meantime, in the midst of the labors of preparation and voluminous correspondence, I can only thank you in behalf of the Red Cross for your sympathy, good words and sacrificing offer to help. Faithfully yours, CLARA BARTON."

NO WAR POSSIBLE.

Rev. Dr. Parker Says England and America Will Not Fight.

London, Dec. 23.—Speaking at the City Temple yesterday the Rev. Joseph Parker, D. D., said: "Do not trouble yourselves with the thought of war. There will be no war. England and America cannot do without each other. War would be suicide. We send to-day messages from our hearts to our fellow Christians in America. We must act in a spirit of magnanimity and concession. We miss Henry Ward Beecher. He could and would have spoken the word of reconciliation. I call upon British and American Christians to unite in prayerful counsel in the interests of peace.

Big Order for Powder.

Santa Cruz, Cal., Dec. 23.—The powder works here are rapidly filling an order for 125,000 pounds of government powder ordered a month ago. Government contracts are frequently filled at the works, but no order so large as the present one has been received at this time of the year. Men are working night and day to fill it. Whether this has anything to do with the war scare no one is prepared to say.

Stanley Refuses To Talk.

London, Dec. 23.—Henry M. Stanley, M. P., the well-known African explorer, declined to accede to a request for his opinion on the dispute between Great Britain and the United States. He said he hoped that all would end well, and that a war would be a crime and the biggest blunder of the age.

The Mississippi Flood.

St. Louis, Dec. 23.—Since Thursday the Mississippi river at this point has risen twenty-two feet, which is unprecedented in the same length of time. The boatmen and dwellers on the river bank were taken unawares and the loss is already very great.

Express Messenger Kills Himself.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Dec. 23.—William Van D. Vanslike, express messenger on the Cooperstown & Charlotte Valley railroad committed suicide by hanging. Domestic troubles are supposed to have caused the act. He was about 30 years old and highly respected. He leaves a widow and a little daughter.

Big Blaze at Putnam.

Putnam, Conn., Dec. 23.—The foundry and machine shop of the Putnam Foundry & Machine company were burned yesterday. The fire caught from an old mould that was used in the foundry Saturday.

Marlboroughs at Rome.

Rome, Dec. 23.—The Duke and Duchess of Marlborough have arrived in this city. They will remain here for several days visiting the Roman antiquities.

Catholic Church Dedicated.

Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 23.—St. Joseph's Catholic church, one of the finest structures in the state, was dedicated with appropriate ceremonies yesterday.

REICHSTAG OF 1871.

Surviving Members of That Body To Be Entertained by the Kaiser.

Berlin, Dec. 23.—The emperor has invited all of the members of the reichstag who sat in the first session after the creation of that body in 1871 to be present at the castle on January 18, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the proclamation of the German empire. It has been ascertained that of the original body only thirty-five are now alive and of the thirty who formed the memorable deputation to Versailles upon the occasion of the proclamation of William I. as emperor of Germany the only ones living are the Duke of Ujest, the Prince of Pless, Herron von Drest, Von Romberg and Von Salze and Count Hompeach. The bundesrath has three members who were in the first session of the reichstag and to these a special fete will be given on January 18.

THE CHEROKEE FUND.

Court of Claims Will Ratify the Agreement To-day.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The United States court of Claims will probably ratify an agreement entered into by counsel for all the parties in interest in what is known as the Cherokee fund. This fund, aggregating $2,300,000, was by a treaty with the Indians paid them for surrendering to the United States what is termed the Cherokee strip. It was paid by the the United States to the treasurer of the Cherokee nation and is now in the United States subtreasury at St. Louis awaiting his order. A question arose when the money was about to be distributed pro rata among the tribe as to who were entitled to receive. There were half-breeds, men who married Cherokee women, full blooded Cherokees and other Indians who had become citizens of the Cherokee nation. All the parties in interest have now by counsel, after much bickering, come to an agreement and submitted it to the court of claims to ratify, each agreeing to abide by the court's award. The essential feature of the agreement is that each of the several classes—Cherokees, half-breeds and adopted citizens—is to receive $295, and if any residue remains it is to be distributed to the full blooded Cherokees.

BREACH OF PROMISE ALLEGED.

Saxton, a Brother-in-Law of Gov. McKinley, Sued.

Canton, O., Dec. 23.—Mrs. Annie George has filed suit for $50,000 against George D. Saxton, Gov. McKinley's brother-in-law, alleging breach of promise. Saxton is a wealthy bachelor, and moves in the best of society. Mrs. George came from Columbian county and opened a dressmaking establishment in a block owned by Saxton. Her husband subsequently sued Saxton for $30,000, charging the alienation of his wife's affections. The case has been shifted about on legal technicalities so that it has not yet come to a hearing. Meantime Mrs. George got a divorce in South Dakota. Her husband alleges in his $30,000 suit Saxton paid the expenses of the divorce case.

Sober Second Thought.

London, Dec. 23.—The Daily News under the caption of "Sober Second Thought" discusses the situation in that light. It says: "It would be improper and ungenerous to attribute the change of opinion to the chilling influence of a financial panic on a people so self-reliant and courageous as those of the United States. They would never be turned from any supreme object of patriotic effort by misgivings respecting their own power. No American can have stronger belief than we in the potency of the great country and its people. it is because we so strongly believe in the power and will of the American people that we rejoice in their rapid change of opinion."

Rejoicing at Colon.

Colon, Dec. 23.—There was a grand demonstration Saturday night at the American consulate here in honor of the United States for its attitude in support of the Monroe doctrine. Many prominent Colombians and also Venezuelans, who either reside or are visiting here, were present. Much enthusiasm was manifested and the American government was, through the consul, heartily commended for the actior it had taken. The streets in the vicinity of the consulate were filled with cheering crowds.

Rio Janeiro Refuses To Arbitrate.

New York, Dec. 23.—A special cable dispatch to the Herald from Buenos Ayres says: Rio Janeiro advices state that a report is current that President Moraes will refuse to arbitrate the question of the ownership of the island of Trinidad, claimed by both England and Brazil. It is declared in official circles that his determination is due to the action of the United States government in the Venezuelan question.

State License Law Unconstitutional.

Butte, Mont., Dec. 23.—Judge Speer, in the district court, has decided the entire license law of the state was unconstitutional. The legislature had fixed the amounts of licenses for the counties to collect. Chinese laundrymen contested the validity of the law and caused its defeat.

Best Little Purgative

I ever used," writes one lady, in regard to Hood's Pills. "They are so mild and do their work without any griping. I recommend them to all suffering from costiveness. They will certainly bring your habits regular. We use no other cathartic." Hood's Pills are rapidly increasing in favor. 25c.

A NOBLE LIFE

SPENT FOR AND WITH SUFFERING WOMEN.

A Life's Work Perpetuated through a Faithful Daughter, and Records of Priceless Value.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

What a vast amount of misery and suffering has been prevented by the clear-headed foresight of one noble woman!

She had struggled, labored, and sacrificed for the welfare of her sex.

The eyes of the women of the world were upon her.

As she recalled the past, and tried to penetrate the future, a smile of supreme satisfaction passed over her honest face as she remembered that her life's work would be perpetuated.

The room in which she sat contained hundreds of volumes of records; and, turning to her daughter, she said,—

"My daughter, this room, as you well know, contains the records of my life's work, in which for many years you have so diligently assisted me.

"By earnest application you have compassed my methods; and it is a happiness to think that when I leave, the glorious work will, through you, go on.

"The mission is a noble one. Do as I have done: never permit a woman's appeal to go unheeded.

"These records tell of every case ever submitted to me; and it is my wish that the facts they contain shall in time prove a much-needed education to the women of the world."

Thus did Lydia E. Pinkham hand over to her daughter, Mrs. Charles H. Pinkham, what may be termed the salvation of her sex; and that wonderful remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which all druggists consider as standard as flour, goes on redeeming hundreds of women from the fearful consequences of female diseases.

THE SCHOMBURG LINE

Facts in Connection with That Famous Boundary.

Provided for Great Britain by a Young German Who at One Time Was a Resident of the United States—Knighted by the Queen for His Services.

Washington, Dec. 23.—An interesting fact in connection with the famous Schomburg line which has escaped observation is that the man who provided the British government with that boundary came to this country from Germany when he was 22 years old and, after working for some time as a clerk in Boston and Philadelphia, became a partner in a Richmond, Va., tobacco manufactory in 1828. The factory was burned and Schomburg drifted to the West Indies where after unsuccessful ventures his botanical work attracted the attention of the London geographical society and secured means to explore the unknown region of the Orinoco, where he traveled from 1833 to 1839, when he discovered the Victoria Regia lily and numerous other plants. This work led the British government to commission him to suggest a boundary between Venezuela and Guiana and to make further explorations. The line was drawn and he was knighted by the queen for his services. Schomburg, until his death in 1865, continued in the British consular service, but devoted himself chiefly to geographical studies, being a member of the principal American and European learned societies.

MASSACRES IN TURKEY.

Men, Women and Children Murdered at Mehil.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The Turkish legation received from the sublime porte the following telegram under yesterday's date: "The insurgents of Zeitoun attacked the Mussulman village of Mehil, killed and burned two men, five women and three children, and carried away the cattle and other property belonging to the inhabitants, the survivors of whom fled to Kensoun. With the exception of Zeitoun, perfect order reigns in the whole empire."

FIVE WERE DROWNED.

The British Steamer Alicia Sunk in Collision.

London, Dec. 23.—The British steamer Alicia, from Middlesborough for Bilboa, has been sunk in collision with the British steamer Netly Abbey, from London for Blyth. All the people on the Alicia, with the exception of five, who were drowned, were rescued by the Netley Abbey. The latter vessel was somewhat damaged.

Willing To Aid Cleveland.

Shamokin, Pa., Dec. 23.—John Glowa, president of the Russian National society of the United States, stated that at a meeting of the officers of that association it was resolved to lend all possible aid to President Cleveland in case the United States became involved in war with England. There are said to be over 200,000 members of the society in this country, many of whom are trained soldiers.

Von Holst Scored.

Chicago, Dec. 22.—Prof. Herman Von Holst of the University of Chicago is being roundly scored by the faculty for his recent expressions against President Cleveland and his attitude on the Venezuela question. The officers of the university fear Prof. Von Holst's opinion will be interpreted as a sentiment of the university, which, in fact, is directly opposed to that of the German student of American politics.

Killed by a Train.

Paterson, N. J., Dec. 23.—A passenger train on the Erie railroad yesterday afternoon killed Mrs. Luigia Canova, 54 years old, and slightly injured her husband, her son, Flavia, and the latter's wife, near Hawthorne, a mile north of this city. They were walking on the railroad and stepped from the west track at the approach of a freight train when they were struck by a passenger engine.

Wm. Heard, Dwarf, Dead.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 23.—Wm. Heard, a dwarf who has been traveling with shows for several years, died Saturday at the Grady hospital. He came here sick from Chicago, where he had an engagement. Heard was one of the smallest men in the world. He will be buried at Union Point, Ga., his old home.

S. T. Shugert Dead.

Bellefonte, Pa., Dec. 23.—Samuel T. Shugert, an ex-member of the legislature, and commissioner of patents under President Buchanan, and who was editor of the Centre Democrat of this place for almost 30 years, died Saturday night in Phillipsburg, Pa. He was 67 years old.

Braine Called To Account.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The secretary of the navy has called upon Rear Admiral Braine (retired) for an explanation of his recent criticism of the administration in the matter of its application of the Monroe doctrine to the Venezuelan dispute with Great Brita in Must Pay a Tax.

Indianapolis, Dec. 23.—The supreme court has reversed the decision of the lower court and held that the express companies must pay a tax, thus holding valid the act of 1893, taxing express companies upon each mile of "route" within the state.

NORTH ATLANTIC SQUADRON.

Its Departure for Southern Waters Delayed.

Washington, Dec. 23.—Secretary Herbert had a conference yesterday with Rear Admiral Bunce, commanding the North Atlantic squadron, in regard to the sailing of that fleet for the West Indies and nearby South American waters. The admiral was at the department Thursday to receive verbal instructions preparatory to the sailing of his ships, but owing to the absence of the secretary in New York, failed to get them. He was notified, however, to meet the latter yesterday for a conference. In the meantime as a suspicion would likely attach at this juncture to the sailing of the squadron for the vicinity of the Venezuelan coast, Secretary Herbert, of course, consulted with the president as to the best course of action to be adopted. The interview between the secretary and admiral lasted for quite a while, the latter having come on from Fortress Monroe, his squadron being anchored in Hampton Roads. The admiral was originally given sailing orders for Saturday last, but they were subsequently amended and it is learned today that the time of departure is indefinite. The present composition of the fleet will be augmented by the addition of the Maine and possibly the Texas, both battleships.

PITTSBURG MAIL ROBBERS.

Chief of Police and Postmaster Confer About the Many Thefts.

Pittsburg, Dec. 23.—Superintendent Roger O'Mara of the Pittsburg police and postmaster John C. O'Donnell had a conference relative to some robberies and forgeries that have been committed in Pittsburg recently. A daring system of robberies has been carried on in Pittsburg during the last six months and the police and the postoffice authorities have been working in opposite directions in their efforts to run down the criminals. Postoffice inspector Hooten said that no less than fifty robberies in which the postoffice is concerned have occurred in Pittsburg and adjacent towns with in the past year and as a result of the robberies the railroad mail service and the Pittsburg postoffice are being investigated continually. Special officers have been on duty at the Pittsburg office for nearly a year.

BERLIN IN COLLISION.

Cruiser Blake of the British Navy Reports Speaking Her.

Plymouth, Dec. 23.—The British cruiser Blake arrived here last night from Chatham. She reports that while off Portland, at 5 o'clock yesterday morning, she passed a large steamer named Berlin, which signalled that two of her boats had been searching for three hours for the British bark Willowbank, bound for Glasgow, with which vessel the Berlin had been in collision. The Blake afterwards saw an empty boat belonging to the Willowbank. The Berlin had a hole in her bow. She proceeded up her Channel. Those on the Blake could not say whether or not the Berlin was the steamer of that name belonging to the American line. This steamer sailed from Antwerp for New York Saturday, and was reported to have passed Dover yesterday.

Berlin Badly Damaged.

Southampton, Dec. 23.—It is now known that the vessel that was in collision with the Willowbank was the International company's steamer Berlin. She passed Hurst Castle yesterday afternoon, bound for this port. She had sails over her bows, evidently for the purpose of keeping the water from entering the hole forward. She was hove to inside the needles, and this accounts for her delay in entering the Solent. She is badly damaged.

Gold Pouring Into the Sub-Treasury

Cincinnati, Dec. 23.—Gold is pouring into the sub-treasury at the rate of $10,000 a day and the local reserve is increasing at a rapid rate. The German National bank telephoned the sub-treasury that it was ready to turn over all the gold it had on hand if wanted. The gold on deposit here now is only a little less than $2,000,000.

Venezuelan Commission.

Washington, Dec. 23.—The names of the Venezuelan commissioners were not announced yesterday as acceptances have not been received from all of them. It is thought they will be given out this afternoon. There is, as yet, no authentic information as to who they will be, though guesses are plentiful.

Floods in New Hampshire.

Woodsville, N. H., Dec. 23.—Rain began falling here at midnight Saturday and fell continuously until noon yesterday. Mountain streams are rising rapidly. The boom of the Fall Mountain Paper company was broken by the pressure of ice and water and some 200,000 feet of logs went down the river.

Arrested for Horse Stealing.

Fonda, N. Y., Dec. 23.—An alleged horse thief giving the name of George Meade, which is probably fictitious, has been lodged in the Montgomery county jail. He was arrested at Tribes Hill while having in his possession a rig which had been hired from a Schenectady livery man on Thursday.

Population of the German Empire.

Berlin, Dec. 23.—The results of the completed census of Germany shows the population of the empire to be 51,758,364, an increase of 2,329,894 over the census of 1890. All of the states of the empire show increases.

Laurels for Zimmerman.

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

No Recess Over the Holiday Season.

Efforts To Provide Relief for the Financial Difficulty—The First Time Since 1823 That Work Has Been Continued Through Christmas—No Quorum of Senate Expected.

Washington, Dec. 23.—For the first time since the short session of the forty-seventh congress in the winter of 1982-83, congress will enter holiday week to-day with the intention of sitting through the season usually devoted to recess. The occasion for this apparent zeal and devotion to public service was President Cleveland's message of Friday last which asked that congress would not take its annual respite from labor at the season of the year, but remain and provide the legislation necessary to relieve the financial situation of the government. The house will enter upon this work promptly to-day, through its committee announced on Saturday. The ways and means committee will meet at 11 o'clock and proceed as rapidly as possible with the consideration and preparation of a bill or bills to meet the condition that confronts them. The measure of relief which it is expected the committee will propose will include, either in one bill or several as may be deemed most expedient, brief amendments to the tariff law law, not involving general tariff revision, such amendments to expire at the end of thirty months; authority to the secretary of the treasury to issue 3 per cent. bonds as a popular loan, to maintain the gold reserve and for no other purpose, with a proviso that the redeemed greenbacks shall not be used to meet current expenses, but be retained as long as necessary as part of the redemption fund; authority to issue to national banks circulating notes up to par of the bonds deposited as security therefor and to reduce the tax on national bank circulation; and authority for the issue of certificates of indebtedness to meet temporary deficiency in receipts until the revenue can be provided. It is estimated that the proposed tariff changes will add from thirty to thirty-five millions to the income of the government.

To Remodel the Financial System.

While it is not probable that the committee will be ready to report to the house before Wednesday or Thursday at the earliest, there will be no adjournment of more than a day or two at a time, until the proposed relief shall have been enacted. Should this be accomplished this week the house will probably then indulge in three day recesses over the New Year holiday. In the meantime the committee on banking and currency will be at work on a bill to remodel the financial system of the country in the hope that it will be ready for report to the house when business shall be regularly resumed in January.

No Quorum of Senate Expected.

Although the senate will be nominally in session this week it is believed there will at no time be a quorum present. A financial debate may be precipitated to-morrow if Mr. Vest presses resolution for which he asked immediate consideration Saturday. This resolution directs the secretary of the treasury to coin the silver bullion in the treasury and apply the silver dollars so coined to the redemption of the treasury notes issued in payment for the bullion under the Sherman act. If the senate should be in a humor to permit the resolution to come to a vote it will surely pass, for the silver men are in a majority of at least a dozen, and possibly fourteen votes. The resolution of Mr. Butler, pop., N. C., directing the secretary of the treasury to meet the obligations of the government with silver, whenever the money is of less value than gold is also on the table and may be made the subject of speech at any time. It is likely that the senate will meet only at intervals, for as all legislation relating to finance and the revenue must originate in the house, until some measure is sent over from the house there will be little occasion for the senate to remain in session. Now that the holiday recess has fallen through the republicans may urge the democrats to at once fill their committee list, but there is little prospect of this being done until the New Year is inaugurated.

Heavy Firing Near Managua, Cuba.

Madrid, Dec. 23.—A dispatch to the Herald from Colon, Cuba, says that heavy firing has been heard in the direction of Managua. It is believed that the insurgents have entered the province of Matanzas by way of Palmasola, after a sharp fight with the government troops under the command of Col. Hernandez.

Spree Floated.

Southampton, Dec. 23.—The North German Lloyd steamer Spree, which stranded on Thursday last on Warden Lodge, near Totland bay, Isle of Wight, was got off yesterday afternoon and arrived here under her own steam, but assisted by tugs. She is taking no water and has apparently sustained no serious damage.

Stock Barns Burned.

Boston, Dec. 23.—Two barns in the Brighton stock yards were destroyed by fire last night. They contained twenty sheep, ten calves and three hogs, and all were burned. The total loss is estimated at $7,000.

Dungan Rebellion Crushed.

Pekin, Dec. 23.—The Dungan rebellion has been crushed. The rebels are now fighting among themselves.

Senator Hill's bill to remove the disability of Confederate veterans for service in the army and navy of the United States has apparently struck an answering chord in the popular sentiment, irrespective of its obvious relation to the war talk in and out of Congress. The bitterness engendered by the civil strife of a past generation has been ameliorated and well-nigh forgotten, and the proposed enactment would only set the seal of public and official recognition to engagements of National accord between sections once hostile and estranged. The Confederates were great fighters, and their services would be gladly tendered if the Republic should on occasion require them.—Newark News.

A DEFENCE OF THE MICROBE.

A Vassar Girl Rallys to the Support of the Bacteria.

The following is a newspaper report of a paper read by a Vassar girl on Bacteria, and is especially interesting to Plainfielders now that so much discussion is going on about this subject:

Miss Bessie Eliza Boyd, who is already known to fame for two or three recent magazine articles about Vassar, cheered and encouraged every bacteria hater present by a bright and vigorous defense of the dreaded microbe. "Bacteria are dreaded as mankind's most persistent, most relentless and most cunning foe," she said. Thanks to that little learning which is a dangerous thing, most people regard microbes, according to Miss Boyd, as ravenous beasts going about seeking whom they may devour. "Every cubic inch of space," she said, "teems with deadly bacilli. Microbes lurk with fell intent in every glass of milk. They riot in the dust of the roads and swim in the Croton water. But when science comes to cast up the account between humanity and bacteria there will surely be a balance in favor of bacteria. If they destroy life they also support it. Natural processes are largely dependent upon bacteria. Decomposition, fermentation and even digestion would not go on without bacteria. Nature for every new creature must sacrifice an old one. Her materials are limited and must be continually transformed. The particles which compose us were used before for other creatures. The one of us who is supposed to have the least of the old Adam may in reality have the most. All this transformation is the work of bacteria." Then Miss Boyd proceeded to particularize. She told of the efficient aid given the agriculturist by microbes and of their service in the making of butter. Cream is converted into sour cream through the labor of bacteria. There are 500,000,000 of them to the drop. "With every slice of bread and butter," said Miss Boyd, "we must swellow as many microbes as there are people in Europe." She closed her defense of microbes by paraphrasing the nursery rhyme and saying that they were "our brewers, our bakers and our cheese-stick makers." The applause which greeted this showed plainly that the American public, as represented at Vassar, was only too glad to do justice to the maligned and slandered microbe.

A game is being arranged between a five men team of the younger bowlers of the Crescent Wheelmen and the Y. M. C. A. team. It will probably be rolled on Thursday evening.

William M. McCutchen and W. J. R. Theirs have challenged any two men bowling team in the Park Club to a series of games during the winter. They are both rolling and excellent game, making 418 together in a practice game.

After the Bachelor-Benedict game at the Park Club Saturday evening, Wm. M. McCutchen bowled some remarkable practice games. In his first he rolled 213, making seven strikes and four spares, five of his strikes being made in succession. His other scores were respectively 188, 193 and 197.

Amid great enthusiasm the Benedicts of the Park Club defeated their old rivals, the Bachelors, for the first time in three years, by the narrow margin of 24 pins. The Park Club alleys were lined with the friends and rooters of both teams and they made things lively, especially at the start and finish. When the first representatives of the two teams opened the battle there was pandemonium for a few moments; everybody yelled, stamped and cheered, while the roar of the balls and the crash of the falling pins added to the din. The married men seemed to be harder to rattle and led for the first three frames. Then their opponents began to roll a winning game, but it was not to be, and the scores began to draw closer until the ninth frame came. It was a Waterloo for the single men and the other team began to make strikes and spares like veterans, while the rooters began again. The usually dignified Benedicts danced about and hugged each other in the excess of their joy. The game was not decided, however, until the last ball was rolled, and then the victorious Benedicts went completely wild. The mascot of the Bachelors was a little mask which had been hung on the scoreboard, and one of the other team suggested that it should go to the winners. Peter Matthews objected to that and started to walk off with the mascot. There was a general rush for him and a lively scrap ensued, which equalled any football game. If the Bachelors couldn't bowl they certainly could play football, and at last Louis E. Waring escaped to the dressing room with the coveted mascot. Then the most of audience adjourned to the main hall, where dancing was enjoyed.

The individual scores were as follows:

BACHELORS.		BENEDICTS.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Cut Friendship

'Tis said, but don't you believe it—it's all nonsense. If your friend offers you one of these handsome knives Christmas morning, take it, and let it cut away any small differences which may have existed between you.

If you are a trifle superstitious and believe there's truth in the old saying, just give a penny in return and that will break the bad omen, but it's simply an old saying and don't mean anything.

SENSE AND NON-SENSE IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Gifts really beautiful and useful show SENSE: Gifts of "Gew-Gaws" and trinkets show NON-SENSE, and, the more costly they are the worse they are. Can you choose a more sensible gift than a fine HAIR BRUSH; A SHAVING BRUSH a HAND MIRROR? Or a more beautiful one than an Elegant CUT GLASS BOTTLE, empty or filled, as you please? Of such goods and their like we have a big stock at lowest prices, and, because of changes in styles, we are selling many fine articles at half the cost of manufacture.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many cnanges, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. THEIR QUEER SIDE.

A REGION OF THINGS THAT IS QUITE FERTILE IN SURPRISES.

The Irresistible Fascination of Seeming Paradoxes—Why Do We See Everything Upside Down?—Is Seeing Good Reason For Believing?

Fact being stranger than fiction, there will always be, as there always has been, a "queer side of things"—a region quite as fertile in surprises as that explored by Alice in Wonderland. The difficulty is not so much to know how to select as to know where to begin in the way of illustration.

Curiously enough, not a few scientific paradoxes are to be found in the economy of human vision. There is that old puzzle paradox, for example—one which even the intellect of a Kepler did not despise—to wit, how it is that we see objects erect, notwithstanding the well known fact that the pictures on the retina of the eye are inverted. Kepler, in his "Supplement to Vitellio," was thin to conclude that the inverted image, somehow or other, but chiefly with the aid of the other senses, such as that of touch, was "rectified" by the judgment of the observer. Later physiologists have exercised their ingenuity over the selfsame problem. Quite lately, in a scientific journal of no mean repute, the position was gravely maintained that the observer, having really no other criterion of up or down than the evidence of his own (inverted) vision, upside down was really the same thing as down side up, or, in other words, erect.

Another authority in the same medium had a still more ingenious solution of the difficulty. Noticing that the image of a lighted candle reflected on the retina of an excised eye appeared to him inverted, he reasoned that as his own sense of vision perceived the image thus upside down, therefore upon the retina of the percipient proper it must really be in exactly the reverse position—namely, erect. A clever guess certainly, but one which leaves the problem very much as it was before. The real explanation is apparently the view given by Professor Cleland of Glasgow university in his "Animal Physiology," that the inversion of the retinal image is really no reason why the landscape should appear to us inverted and that what we perceive is not the retinal image, but a number of sensations excited by it. If we are to explain, he adds, why the landscape is not seen inverted, we must explain why it is not seen inside our heads. But in spite of this lucid rationale of erect vision—probably the only true one—a popular paradox the question will doubtless remain, at all events for some time to come.

He was an acute observer who once remarked, "The more knowledge, the more paradox." This would seem to be true nowadays, seeing that it is seriously doubted in scientific circles if we see with our eyes at all. Professor Hirth, a recognized authority on such subjects, contends that it is only in a very limited sense that we can be said to see with our eyes, and that, in any case, we do not perceive with them, this latter function being reserved for certain important organs of the brain, termed by him the "internal eyes." The functions of the retina, Professor Hirth maintains, have in the past been very gravely overestimated. Should this apparent paradox be substantiated, it will no longer be the conclusive argument it once was considered to be to aver that anything happened because we saw it with "our eyes!" It may be added that the above paradox is rendered, if possible, still more paradoxical when it is soberly affirmed, in sundry quarters—among others by Drs. Luys and Rosenthal—that it is not impossible to imagine, theoretically, a state of matters in the human organism in which ear gate might upon occasion play the part of eye gate and vice versa, the discrimination of sound from color, etc., depending, not upon the external nerve terminations, which receive, as we are led to believe, a wholly uniform stimulus, but upon the central apparatus situated within the brain. According to this theory, observes a recent commentator, sound might for us be literally translated into color, a sonata by Beethoven might seem a picture by Raphael, and we might enjoy a symphony in blue and silver or a nocturne in black and gold.

After such a startling paradox as the above we may be pardoned for being somewhat skeptical of anything connected with the pair of organs which we are accustomed to call our eyes. And rightly so, for paradox once more confronts us here. Of having two eyes most of us are tolerably assured. It seems, however, that our remote ancestors were credibly possessed of three, the third being situated at the back of the head. Unfortunately all that remains to us of this doubtless highly useful organ is represented by the pineal gland, a soft body about the size of a pea, situated at the base of the brain. This rudimentary structure, however, in some lower forms of life—notably in one kind of lizard—has an opening to the light and is undoubtedly susceptible of visual impressions.

Even space itself—empty space, as we are accustomed to call it—is no longer a void. It literally teems with paradoxes. A 22 ton armstrong gun hurls a solid shot a distance of 12 miles, the highest point in the arc described by the shot being 17,000 feet above the earth's surface. Imagine, now, that the projectile, instead of returning to the earth in a gradually descending curve, were to continue its flight into what is commonly called infinite space, what would be the ultimate result? We might naturally conclude that its prolonged flight would lead it ever farther and farther away from the point of departure. This, however, is by no means so certain as it at first sight appears. The refinements of mathematical investigation have led several inquirers to question whether the shot might not, of course after a lapse of time indefinitely great, return to the place from which it was fired from precisely the opposite direction, just as a vessel circumnavigating the globe might sail eastward round the Cape of Good Hope, returning from the westward via Cape Horn. It all depends upon the essential nature of space, whether its "curvature" be "zero" or otherwise, and that is a moot point. For the benefit of the curious it may be added that the matter mainly hinges upon the still undecided question whether the three angles of a triangle are greater than, equal to or less than two right angles—a point which most persons believe to have been settled long ago.—Chambers' Journal.

An Appropriate Keepsake.

"I presume you carry a memento of some sort in that locket of yours?"

"Precisely. It is a lock of my husband's hair."

"But your husband is still alive?"

"Yes, sir, but his hair is all gone."—Lo Spirito Folletto.

THE SAME OLD STORY.

The painter brings his ladder and his paint and brushes fine:
He starts in work at 8 o'clock and disappears at 9;
Comes back at just 11:15—he'd "gone to get a brush"—
And then until it's 12 o'clock works with a feverish rush.
Knocks off at 12 and eats till 1, then has to mix his paint,
Producing awful odors that make everybody faint;
Flirts with your servant for one hour until you interfere
And uses twenty minutes more to get a can of beer,
Then says the job will take two days as he goes off to sup,
Leaving his pots and brushes just where they will trip you up.

New York Recorder.

A NARROW ESCAPE.

The Story of a Man Who Fell Into a Water Tank.

"While you're talking about narrow escapes from horrible deaths just let me tell mine," remarked a well known capitalist yesterday. "I had about as tough an experience right in this city as a man ever had, but I got out all right, and few people ever heard of it.

"One day I was up on the roof of a building I own in Pine street, just looking it over to see that it was all right. I climbed up and looked into one of the big water tanks in the building, and seeing a dead sparrow floating on the surface of the water bent over to take it out. I lost my balance and fell in. The water in the tank came right up to my chin when I stood on my feet, and the top of the tank was three feet above my head. The water was running all the time, and I could see that it usually stood about a foot higher than where it was. It occurred to me that unless I got out pretty quick or turned off the water I would be drowned.

"I soon found that getting out without help was next to impossible, so I got out my pocket knife and went to work cutting a hole in the side of the tank as low down as I could work and keep my head above water. Cutting through three inches of pine was no easy job. The water was slowly rising, and before I got a hole through the side of the tank I was standing on tiptoe with just my nose out of the water and every blade broken out of my knife.

"I made the hole big enough so that the water ran right down to its level. And the next thing was to get out. It was impossible to climb out without assistance, and I couldn't cut my way out with a broken penknife. I knew I must attract some one's attention. I pulled off my shirt, tore it into strings, tied my lead pencil to my knife and both to the toe of one of my shoes, and then, putting my undershirt on the pencil waved it slowly and laboriously over the top of the tank. I waved for hours and still no one came.

"Then it occurred to me to dive down and stop up the pipe leading from the tank to attract attention. It wasn't half an hour till people came up to see why the water would not run, and I was helped out after I had been standing in the cold water over six hours."—San Francisco Post.

Training Hawks.

The instinctive fear of man is the first obstacle to overcome, and, as usual in taming all wild creatures, hunger is the first and foremost means to bring it into subjection. As soon as it will consent to take food from the hand and submit to be handled, stroked and hooded without much struggling or "baiting," as it is termed, the first step is made in its education. Much tact and gentleness, together with perfect quiet, will work wonders in inducing it to feed. The first form of hood used is called a "rufter hood," being looser in shape and softer and having a larger opening for the beak than the hood proper.

This hood, which every hawk has to become accustomed to wear at all times, except when flying, is stiff and blocked to fit the head, care being taken that the prominent eyes are not rubbed or injured by imperfect fit, and is gayly ornamented on top with a tuft of scarlet or other colored wool, surmounted with a small bunch of feathers. It is of the first importance in training hawks, and by means of it they can be handled and carried anywhere, among all sorts of sights and scenes that, were they not blindfolded, would cause the hawks to bate so violently that injury to themselves would result.—Good Words.

Well Up In Slang.

The late Professor Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen is said to have had a remarkable knowledge of slang. Although he never wrote in dialect, it was not from want of familiarity with it. He was well up in the hobo talk of trampdom, he knew something of the gypsy patter, and from the pigeon English of Chinatown to the thieves' slang of the dock rats, there was not a slang spoken in New York of which he had not a basic knowledge. When he was professor in Cornell university, two juniors out driving one day overtook him walking along a country road, near Ithaca, in company with a most tattered and disreputable tramp. As the collegians drove slowly by they overheard part of the conversation. To their great surprise, they discovered that the professor and the tramp were indulging in a hot and heavy slanging match, and, from what they could hear, the tramp was coming out second best.

Peter's Record Broken.

A good fishing story—not quite in the usual acceptation of the term—used to be told of himself by Sir Algernon Borthwick—to wit: Seven days' fishing with his son, Mr. Oliver Borthwick, at Sir Algernon's Aberdeenshire place, Invercauld House, resulted in the big kill of 55 salmon. The information was sent to The Morning Post, and an enterprising subeditor, in acknowledgment of the receipt of the news, telegraphed to Sir Algernon that it was intended to give the item the heading: "Miraculous Draft of Fishes! Peter's Record Broken!"—Westminster Gazette.

A Wise Man.

"Bunkins, I guess, is about the smartest man of his years in this community," said the citizen who observes.

"Knows a great deal, does he?"

"Knows a great deal? I should say so. Why, sir, that man knows almost as much as his 19-year-old daughter, who is in the high school."—Washington Star.

At Sevastopol the opposing commanders exchanged civil courtesies. Sir Edmond Lyons sent Admiral Machinoff the present of a fat buck, and the Russian admiral returned the compliment with a large cheese.

Wedderburn, the first Lord Ashburton, used to place a blister on his chest when he had to make a great speech, after which he presumably spoke with warmth.

The street accidents of London amount to about 3,500 a year—nearly ten a day.

MACHA.

By ROSA MULHOLLAND.

There is a lone upper world among the Connemara hills seldom visited by any wayfarer from the ordinary paths of life. Mountains form bulwarks around it; the gates into it are narrow defiles between rugged crags; the centers of its silent valleys are deep lakes, cold and gray as steel or black with the shadow of the raineloud. By the water's margin the dark, sullen earth, with its gorgeous clothing of purple and embroideries of emerald green, upheaves in curious knolls and bosses or stretches away in wind-swept levels. The peaks around take fantastic shapes, and in twilight the place is like some region of hades, where disembodied souls walk in shadow and muse upon the mysteries that death has unfolded to them.

Uncongenial as it appears to human life, there are a few inhabitants of this world of silent gloom and barren beauty. Here and there the infrequent traveler will come upon an isolated cabin built of rude stone and roofed with the sod, hardly distinguishable from the heather capped rock except for the curl of smoke that steals through a hole from the hearthstone within. On a summer morning an inquisitive explorer of this lonesome world passed by one of these smoking hovels, and while gazing on it in dismay, almost expecting to see a gnome or monster issue from it, was startled by the appearance of an exquisite face which shone on him for a moment and vanished. The solitary rambler in so eerie a spot was at the moment in an imaginative mood, and open to all influences of the beautiful and supernatural, and almost believed that a sprite of the mountain had crossed his path, and that she had a fateful message for him in her eyes, but shaking himself into a more rational frame of mind he went on his way, with only a lingering look at the cabin, which seemed to retreat into the fastnesses of the rock. Yet, in spite of common sense, the wild beautiful eyes of the mountain girl pursued him, the message that lay a mystery in their depths bewitched him, and finally, as the sun shot forth long shafts of flame and glances of gold, setting fierily behind a cluster of blackening mountain peaks, he turned upon his heel and retraced his steps in the direction of the enchanted hovel.

Macha, the owner of the beautiful face, had withdrawn it hastily into the interior of the cabin, scared at the unwonted sight of a stranger, as lowland dwellers might be scared by a ghost. The cabin was so poor that, only for the red hearth and the warm smell of smoke, it might have been mistaken for a shed for cattle. The earthen floor was uneven and full of holes; the roof, of heather and sticks, was blackened with smoke; the hearthstone was broken.

One crazy table, one chair and two or three other nondescript seats, a kettle, a pot, a battered tin can, and a few mugs and plates—these were the chief contents of the dwelling's principal room. Looking around, one might well ask by what means life could be supported in this place. Patches of potatoes that struggled for existence between bog and rock close by, and a black cutting, that showed like an ugly wound on the face of a distant level and was the turf mine—these gave the only answer to such inquiry.

An old woman sat spinning in the corner of the cabin, lean and smoke dried, like a mummy, her dark red garment and the yellow handkerchief wound turban wise round her head making a spot of subdued color in the murky picture. The contents of a pot of potatoes had been turned out on the table, and Macha, who, with a peculiar cry, had summoned the family from their work at the bog to dinner, stood on the middle of the floor, with a slant light falling on her from the sky, across the mountain peaks, through the smoke stained doorway. Her skirt of crimson wool, spun by the grandame in the corner, and dyed with madder by Macha herself, was short enough to show her white feet, shining on the earthen floor. Over it she wore a short brown bodice, and a few yards of coarse yellow white calico were wound about her shoulders and had been about her head, but the drapery had fallen back in a sort of cowl behind her neck.

No white lily or golden rose was ever so beautiful as the face of Macha, crowned with its honey colored hair, set with eyes dark and blue, with a look half sweet, half troubled, a rose red mouth, tinted to match flowers the girl had never seen, and creamy, satin smooth, dimpled cheeks. The way in which her head was set on her shoulders, the pose of her figure and the movements of her white bare arms recalled the goddesses in marble of the early Greeks. With her almost superhuman beauty, where had Macha come from—to battle with the elements for life, to grow sun tanned, weather beaten, lean and withered in the struggle to force the potato out of the rock and peat out of the reeking bog.

What was she doing in this dreary upper world of the barren Irish hills. How could she be the granddaughter of the unlovely crone in the corner, and why had generations of ignorance and hunger and rude toil produced her? It must be that nature had created her for a whim, making her a sort of image of the wild beauty of this picturesque wilderness.

The afterglow of the sunset was abroad when Macha went out again, to roam round the lake in a fashion of her own. A strange amber and red reflection illuminated one side of the sky and the mountain peaks, intensified by gloomy fringes trailing along the horizon. Delicate green tints overspread the other, and in this fairer skyey field had blossomed the round white moon, brightening momentarily and shining among the early stars like a lily among daisies. Earth and heaven were pictured in the lake—the gemmed meadows and luridly illuminated deserts on high, the blackening hills and the moving shapes of orange, brown and purple that caught and rent the fringes of the approaching night.

Macha clasped her hands over her head and gazed round her half fearfully, enjoying and understanding the beauty of it all. She had heard of a shining city beyond the gold and silver gates of the sun and the moon, also of earthly cities, wonderful, too, but not so beautiful, that lay down below the mountains in the busy world of men. She meant to go to the one, but she did not care to visit the others. Her mountain home, with its inhabitants, contained the desires of her heart. The old brown crucifix on the cabin wall was her passport to the final happy destination of all patient souls, whither she and all she loved would depart when the Master should send them a message to come. Nothing natural or supernatural dismayed or disgusted her. If there were spirits in the rocks and fairies in the lake, the Almighty knew what they were doing there, and everything was all for the best.

"Macha, come in," called her mother from the cabin. "Something will get you."

"Aye, mother, I am coming," said Macha, but still she lingered, looking hard at a piece of rock that seemed to be taking the shape of "something." The clouds are alive and move and change—why should not the rocks? Suddenly a living person seemed to emerge out of the rock and come beside her, and, startled, she would have fallen into the lake had not a strong arm seized her and swung her into safety.

"Holy mother! I nearly drowned you!" cried Macha, looking at the same traveler who had passed the cabin in the morning.

"I nearly drowned you," said the stranger, gazing in wonder at her beauty, which seemed to have become almost unearthly, as the still warm glow from one side irradiated her hair, and the greenish moonlight from the other whitened her round cheek and the drapery of her shoulder.

"I thought you were—him who lives down in the lake," whispered Macha.

"Who is he?"

She looked all round in the air, and her lovely face caught a thousand reflections of flitting colors and lights. Then she signed with her hand toward the lake.

"The water is deep," she said, "and there is many a thing down there. But you are a living man, for I saw you in the morning."

The person addressed felt a strange thrill as she spoke and put out her round gleaming arm and touched his hand with her warm fingers, as if to assure herself that her own words were true, and that he was indeed a living man.

"And you are a living woman," he said. "I almost thought you were a spirit moving along the edge of the lake. Why do you keep so close to the edge? I thought I saw you walking on the water."

"I like to look in and see what I can see," said the girl mysteriously.

"Do you aways walk here in the evenings?"

"Yes, and sometimes a bit at dawn. Mother says something wicked will meet me. But I have only met you, and you are not wicked."

"I am not as good as I ought to be," said the man tremulously, answering the look of simple faith and approval in

"But I have only met you, and you are not wicked."

the girl's wonderful eyes. "But I hope I am not altogether wicked," and the strangeness of his own humility escaped his notice.

"I do not much believe in wickedness myself," said Macha, "except, of course, in the great dhiaoul" (devil), crossing herself. "But he will never hurt me unless I do something wrong."

"What do you see when you walk here in the dawn?"

"I see the blessed spirits trooping up and down the skies. Anybody could see them. Sometimes they come down upon the hills, but they change into white clouds and run away when they come too near me. There is my mother calling me, and the supper is ready."

"By what name is she calling you?"

"Macha is my name. If you will eat a few potatoes, I will bring them out to you."

"I am not hungry, Macha, and I am going back to the inn. But if you offer me some another day I will take them."

The girl went in to her mother, and the stranger returned through the brightening moonlight down the rugged mountain, retracing the steps he had made in the morning. The inn lay under the hills, a few miles below the wild region where Macha had been born, in which she had grown to womanhood, eating the potatoes she had helped to produce and watching the blessed spirits trooping up and down the skies.

"Something will get you," said Macha's mother for the hundredth time as the girl appeared for her supper, and she was not wrong, for fate had got hold of Macha.

Strange and unaccountable are the whims of men. Here was one with wealth and rank, accustomed to all that is cultivated, witty and beautiful among women, and yet, having gone fancy free till rather a late period of bachelorhood, he had climbed a savage mountain in an isolated corner of what he considered an uncivilized country, to fall in love with a wild girl with a wild name, who lived upon potatoes in a hovel under a rock!

And he did not feel ashamed of himself. Contrast and inconsistencies had always possessed a fascination for him. Did not the spotless white flower of the bog flourish there as purely as though it had not sprung out of the black slimy substance that held its root? And Macha, with her shining bare feet and arms, and her face like a poet's dream, was all the more enchanting to his imagination because she had sprung, with her spontaneous loveliness, out of the mountain and had been nourished and perfected between the wind and the sun without help from "civilization" or a lesson from "art."

He was going back to the inn that he might have further opportunities of seeing this girl, and yet he told himself that his admiration for her was merely an abstract idea; that after he had seen her a few times and studied her exceptional beauty and character he would go on his way contented, rejoicing to have perceived that nature can be still so lovely and unspoiled in her own secret fastnesses, beyond the ken of the world. His rest was broken that night by a new excitement, and he wakened in the dawn to fancy he saw Macha walking with her bare white feet in the rosy light round the margin of the lake. He wanted to hear her voice again and feel the touch of her hand. It struck him as remarkable that she had shown no shyness of him, speaking to him as naturally as if he had been her brother, and he divined that this was so because she knew nothng of ranks and classes. Only the supernatural had power to awe her, and she had felt safe and happy as soon as she had assured herself that he was a living man. Accustomed to the attentions of women, he would have felt less attraction toward Macha had she shown any desire for his return. The absence of all coquetry in her delighted him.

isn't saving time any more than going to a cheap place is saving money, because they charge less. Our business is the scientific cleaning and dyeing of clothes. We do this work for as little money as good, honest work can be done for. The money's worth isn't in how the clothes look when you first get them, it's in the wear of the dye, the goodness of the color, the careful cleaning that means keeping clean. Grease spots come back sometimes. That's the cheapness of it. They can be taken out and be made to stay out. That's our way our cheapness. Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Marion Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, is kept at home with a slight illness.

Irving Brady, who attends college in Virginia, is at his home in this city for the holidays.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck and family will spend Christmas at the home of Mrs. Schenck's mother, at Philadelphia.

Miss Addie Parker Jackson will assist in the Christmas service to be held in the First Baptist church next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. John Emmons, of Washington, near New Brunswick, Middlesex county, will celebrate their golden wedding on New Year's Day. P. A. and J. P. Emmons, of the borough, two of their sons, will attend with their families.

The home of Editor A. V. D. Honeyman, of Duer street, was honored today by a call from Senator Hundley, for twelve years State Senator of Alabama, and a member of the World's Fair Columbian Commission. He was the member who made the motion for and carried through the resolution to close the Fair on Sundays.

Baker's Wagon Wrecked.

A horse and wagon belonging to Mangels & Schmidt, the Newark bakers, and in charge of Driver J. Lynch, came to grief this morning in the borough. The horse was standing on Manning avenue untied when he became frightened and ran away. He turned into Somerset street at full speed. The wagon struck an electric light pole and was wrecked. A large quanity of bread was thrown out. This did not stop the animal, and down the street he went until he collided with a wagon belonging to Mr. Bonnell, of the borough; besides wrecking two wheels, the latter's coachman was thrown out but not injured. The baker wagon was a complete wreck, but the horse escaped injury. The driver came along in a little while and took charge.

Emancipation Day.

There will be a reunion of the original scholars of Bethel chapel Sunday-school Thursday night, January 2d, under whose auspices will be celebrated the thirty-third anniversary of the emancipation proclamation. An interesting programme, with appropriate music, is being prepared. The oration will be delivered by Rev. W. A. Alexander. The public are cordially invited. Admission free.

A Nice Christmas Gift.

This morning City Treasurer Alex. Titsworth sent a check for $56,838.43 by Chosen Freeholder J. F. Hubbard to County Collector E. M. Wood to pay the State and county taxes.

THEATRICAL.

Salambo and Clivette's new wonders, a complete organization, direct from the principal theatres and courts of Europe, will appear Christmas day, matinee and night, at the Stillman Music Hall. The Salambos performance of holding two uninsulated carbons in their hands, making an arc light, is one of the most extraordinary acts ever produced. The great Clivette is one of the finest shadowgraphists in the world, having just returned from a six months tour through Europe. Besides these stars, several new features will constitute as entertaining a performance, and possibly as novel, a one as has ever been seen.

Funeral of John P. Symons.

There was a very large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral services of the late John P. Symons held from his parents home on East Third street, yesterday afternoon at 2:30. Dr. Barnes officiated and spoke very highly of the young man, who had been taken away in his youth. A beautiful pillow bearing the words "Our Son" from the parents, rested on the casket.

The pall-bearers were Venor Forgie and Pierre Black, of Belleville, John Beekman and J. Hewitt, of this city. Interment was in the Methodist cemetery.

Orphan Children Invited.

The Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer will hold their Christmas festival Saturday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The children from the Children's Home have been invited to attend.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak.

EXCITEMENT AMONG SHOPPERS.

A Runaway Team Upset a Carriage on Front Street Last Evening.

At the hour when West Front street was the most crowded with its throng of Christmas shoppers last night at about five o'clock, the horses attached to J. E. Bailey's truck ran away. They started on West Front street near Plainfield avenue, becoming frightened while standing by the curb, and ran toward the business section without anyone to guide them. They dashed through the throng of carriages and in front of Harry Werner's clothing store struck the rear wheel of George H. Burgess' two-horse carriage, which was standing by the sidewalk, upsetting it. Mrs. Joseph Yerkes and her little child were in the carriage. Patrick Connolly, the coachman, was thrown under the carriage and had his head slightly cut. The other occupants of the carriage were more frightened than hurt. The carriage itself was scratched and bent and some of the equipments broken.

A GROVE STREET WEDDING.

Miss Florence Walker Joined in Wedlock to Harry Sherar, of Westfield.

A very pretty home wedding took place last night at the home of Duncan Walker on Grove street, when his daughter, Florence, was wedded to Harry Sherar, of Westfield. Dr. Yerkes, of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a number of the bride's and groom's immediate relatives.

The bride was becomingly attired in white silk while the groom wore the conventional suit of black. Miss Martha Walker, sister of the bride, was the bridesmaid and was charmingly attired in white silk. Both the bride and maid carried handsome bouquets of white roses. Robert Love was best man.

After the ceremony a collation was spread, after which a varied programme of vocal and instrumental music was rendered in an entertaining manner by some of the guests. The couple received a large number of useful and costly presents, which were arranged in one of the rooms and were much admired. After a short honeymoon the happy couple will reside in Westfield, where the groom is well and favorably known and where he is engaged in the oil business.

An Appeal for Help.

While our hearts are tender towards the suffering in other lands and localities, let us set aside a due portion for the victims of the licensed saloons in our own immediate neighborhood. We never ask for help while we can answer our own prayers. Now our treasury is empty and we need clothing for men and boys, to make it possible for several to attend church and Sunday-school next Lord's day; we need comforters, pillows and mattresses for two cots. Supplies will be called for or sent directly to Reform Hall. A quick response is urged.

Mrs. George F. Opdyke,
Pres't W. T. A. S., Reform Hall.

Danbury Troubled About Sewage, Too.

The city of Danbury, Conn., is in trouble over the sewage question. A number of years ago a combined system of sewers was put in, taking in both sewage and rain water, although they were advised against it by good engineers. The people living down the river into which the sewer empties, have been complaining of the pollution of the river, and the people of Danbury are against the idea of providing beds for the large amount of sewage and drainage water.

We Never Know.

We never know till Christmas skies above our land have shown
How great and varied are the proofs that make its presents known,
Nor can we know how choice they are, how beautiful and rare,
Until we go to Collier's and inspect the bargains there.

—Central Lodge, No. 48, A.O.U.W., will on Thursday evening and have a big time.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

For punctual attendance at Sunday-school—Miss Anna Ryan.

For improvement in sewing—Misses Anna O'Keeffe, Mary Smith, Lizzie Flanagan, Maria Carty, Agnes Kelly, Lizzie L. Day, Julia Lutz.

After the exercises were concluded most of the children went to the club house of the old C. Y. M. L., where the firemen tendered a reception to those who had assisted in the dances at the firemen's fair. Gifts were distributed from the teachers, and then ice cream and cake were passed to the young people. The members of the firemen's fair committee present were Second Assistant Chief J. A. Martin, A. H. Martin, L. M. Dunavan, Abner Bartlett, Jr., and W. T. Newman. W. J. Stephenson was the caterer. Sam Frazee furnished the music.

In the evening the reception was continued and was largely attended by the young people. A very pleasant evening was spent, dancing adding to the enjoyment.

Convention of Teachers.

The Primary Teachers' meeting held yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. building was conducted by Mrs. Powlison. There were twenty members present. The public meeting to be held next Monday evening in the First Baptist church was discussed, and it was stated that Mrs. Barnes, of Jersey City, Mrs. Clark, of Newark, and Mr. Ferguson, of Trenton, would make addresses. Previous to the meeting the members will serve tea in the parlors of the church for their guests. It is earnestly desired by the members that all who possibly can will be present at the meeting. Invitations have been sent to several Sunday-school teachers in adjoining towns to attend.

Malicious Stone Thrower.

It costs the Pond Machine Tool Company a few pennies to keep glass in the windows of their works that face the railroad, owing to the fact that men and boys who steal rides on coal trains persist in breaking them with stones or pieces of coal. One evening recently while Andrew McArdle was seated in his office a stone was thown through the glass and just missed hitting him in the head.

Borough Barbers Pleased.

The North Plainfield barbers are much pleased with the move made by the Council to close their places on Sunday.

BIG REAL ESTATE DEAL.

Wealthy New Yorkers Buy Farm Property for Unknown Purposes.

The real estate market in the vicinity of Oak Tree and Marconnier has had a boom in the last sixty days that has startled the natives. About 100 acres of the best land in that locality has been sold, amounting in cash to about $25,000. The property was owned by Mr. Noe and Mr. Randolph. The buyers are New York bankers and brokers, one of whom is Mr. Clinch. The rumor gained currency that it was to be used for dairy and farming purposes, but those living in that vicinity hardly believe that to be so. It is rumored that a gigantic scheme of some kind is in tow and that the place is to have a big boom. A large house is now being erected on a piece of the property for residental purposes. There is considerable mystery surrounding the deal.

A $3,000 BLAZE.

Tramps Supposed to Have Started a Disastrous Fire in a Barn.

The large barn, belonging to J. H. Havens on Plainfield avenue just beyond the city line, was burned to the ground last evening. Shortly after ten o'clock, Officer Totten, who was stationed at the corner of West Sixth and Liberty streets, saw a bright light in that direction. After making sure that it was a fire, he sent in an alarm from box 37. The fire department responded promptly, only to find that the nearest water was half a mile away. No attempt was made to extinguish the flames, but all their efforts were directed in saving the house, as the wind was blowing the flames in that direction. The extinguishers were used and a bucket brigade was formed.

The barn, worth about $800 to $1 000, was utterly destroyed, as was the contents of about $2,000 worth of carriages and farming utensils. There was no live stock in the barn. The paint on the house was badly blistered, but the building was saved. Mr. Havens and family are spending the winter in New York and Ed. Barry and wife are taking care of the house. Barry was down town when the fire occurred. The fire is supposed to have been started by tramps.

Funeral of Mrs. J. T. Case.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. John T. Case, which were held yesterday at her home on Vine street, were attended by many of her relatives and friends from Elizabeth, Somerville, Phillipsburg, Bloomsbury, Dunellen and this city. Rev. H. R. Randolph, of the Grace M. E. church, officiated, and spoke feelingly of the patience she showed during her four years of suffering. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery. The floral tributes were beautiful.

The New Business College.

This commercial school, which opened in this city October 1st, has made a good start and a good record. It is steadily growing in numbers and popular favor. It now takes a holiday vacation for eight days and will resume work January 2d. This will be a good time for a large reinforcement of new students and it is hoped the young people will be prompt to improve their opportunity.

GOVERNMENT MACHINERY.

FINE WORK NOW BEING DONE AT THE POND WORKS.

Working on the Disappearing Gun Carriage Will Soon be Commenced—They Are Marvels of Mechanism and Invention.

Through the courtesy of Andrew McArdle, superintendent of the foundry at the Pond Machine Tool Company, a representative of The Daily Press was shown through the works yesterday afternoon and had an opportunity of seeing some of the important machinery now in course of construction for the government. The foundation upon which the eight disappearing gun carriages will be erected is now about completed and the work of building the carriages will soon commence. The idea of this new style of carriage is to place them in a fort, and after being discharged they will recede from the gun-hole and drop a certain distance to where the men are located who have charge of the gun, thus preventing a disastrous attack by the enemy.

They are marvels of mechanism and one of the greatest invention of the age. Considerable time has been spent in erecting the foundation, but now that it is about completed the other work will move along more rapidly, though it will be some time before the carriages are finished.

The last one of the four turning and boring lathes for twelve and sixteen inch guns is rapidly nearing completion and it weighs 330 tons and is 138 feet long. For beauty of workmanship and mechanism it stands as a model. It is capable of doing the very finest work for which it is intended and the company have certainly taken the greatest pains to have it meet the requirements, which it will no doubt do. The lathes were started about one year ago. When this one is completed representatives of the government, and leading journalists will visit the works and a photograph of the machine will be taken, after which they will be the guests of the company at dinner.

This machinery is to be used at the Watervliet Arsenal at Troy, New York, and no doubt more will be built if the test is satisfactory.

TWO LICENSES GRANTED.

The Somerset County Court Grant Licenses to Two Borough Dealers.

The Somerset County Court opened at Somerville today. The members of the Grand Jury from North Plainfield township are Charles P. Sebring and David F. Randolph. The petit jurors are George Collins, Isaiah Coriell, F. N. Brown and B. R. Cain.

Hotel licenses were granted to Rudolph Spiegel, of the Crescent Hotel, and Richard A. Boyce, of the Somerset House in the borough of North Plainfield.

The case of Thompson against Hummer was called, and on consent was put over the term. The jury was discharged until Jan. 6th. Chas. A. Reed represented the plaintiff, and Wm. K. McClure, the defendant.

A Good Glee Club.

The Fitchburg Sentinel of November 30th says of the Brown Glee Club concert given in that city: "A good-sized audience greeted the college boys, Friday evening at Y. M. C. A. Hall, and came away delighted with the concert. Without question they can be ranked among the best of the glee clubs. The work of the mandolin club was especially fine, the addition of a flute and violin rendering it better than usual." The club appears under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in Association Hall next Saturday evening.

Young Men's Association Elect.

The Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue chapel met last Friday evening and elected officers for the ensuing year. They were as follows: President, Blanchard Randolph; vice-president, Mr. Arthur; secretary, Henry Apgar; treasurer, Adam Neuman. The rest of the meeting was spent in talking over the work for the next year and arrangements were made for some future amusements for the young men. The committees were appointed for the different branches of work.

Music at Mt. Olive Church.

The concert in the Baptist church last Friday evening was much enjoyed by those present. This remarkable family of musicians are two brothers and two sisters. The variety of instruments used, together with vocal selections, make this entertainment one of great interest.—Vermont Journal, Windsor, May 4, '95. These musicians appear at Mt. Olive Baptist church tomorrow night.

ASSISTANT POSTMASTER SELECTED.

John Whitenack Will Fill the Late George Godown's Place.

Postmaster John M. Hetfield this morning made the changes in his office staff made necessary by the death of Assistant Postmaster George Godown. John Whitenack, who has for several years been money order clerk, has been promoted to the position of Assistant Postmaster, and will assume the duties of the position January first. Mr. Whitenack's long connection with the local postal service has made him an efficient employe and his acquaintance with the routine work of the office particularly qualifies him for the new position. He will also superintend the work of the letter carriers. Mr. Whitenack is a Democrat but his appointment will meet with approval of all parties. Letter Carrier William Sharp will be promoted to the money order department, and one of the eligible substitutes will take his place among the carriers.

WANTED MONEY FOR CHRISTMAS.

Julius Stahl's Borough Candy Store Burglarized Last Night.

Between the hours of 11 o'clock last night and 7 o'clock this morning some one, evidently a boy, entered Stahl's candy store on Somerset street by a rear window, and took between $5 and $6 in money, $4 of which was good, and the remaining was old coins and lead money, which Mr. Stahl had taken in at different times.

The thief was inexperienced as shown by the manner in which he entered. He cut the sash with a pocketknife and then removed two small panes of glass which would not allow enough space for a man to get through.

Mr. Stahl has a very large stock of candy on hand for the holiday trade, and is not able to tell whether or not any was taken. The money drawer was broken into and thrown on the floor. A few cigars were also taken.

This is the second time Mr. Stahl's place has been broken into, but he has no idea who the guilty ones are.

SABBATH REFORM WORK.

Tract Board Anxious to Take Definite Action About Dr. Lewis' Work.

The Seventh-Day Baptist church tract board is very desirous of taking intelligent and definite action at its next meeting, which occurs January 12th, 1896, in reference to the employment of Dr. Lewis in Sabbath reform work, and to this end they have been canvassing the churches. At the last Board meeting eight churches had reported. The result so far is encouraging and indicates a purpose to carry out the recommendations of the society and of the general conference.

The relations of Dr. Lewis to his church and editorial work, the pressing need of a revision of the tracts on the Sabbath question, and the importance of the work in general all demand that a decision of some sort be reached promptly.

Officers Chosen.

At the regular meeting of Mizpah Lodge, No. 1, I. O. L., last night two candidates were elected and one proposition received, and the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: P. L., Mrs. Mattis; N. L., vice L., Mrs W. R. Mattox; chaplain, Mrs. A Corwin; recording secretary, Mrs. L. Snyder; L. reporter, Mrs. D. Page; financial secretary, Mrs. E. Demarest; treasurer, Mrs. Brokaw; senior warden, Mrs. A. Randolph; junior warden, Mrs. M. Sweeney; conductor, Mrs. H. Angleman; guardian, Mrs. M. C Terry; senior representative to governing lodge, Mrs. E. Radin; junior representative to governing lodge, Mrs. E. Cox. The installation of officers will take place on the evening of January 13th, 1896.

—Putnam & DeGraw will make a specialty tonight of table linen, napkins, and all holiday goods.

—Christmas candies, every kind and flavor, at rock bottom prices, are selling fast at Tier's Palace of Sweets.

Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

THE STRIKE SETTLED

Philadelphia Traction Company Gains the Victory.

Only One Point Partially in Favor of the Men—Amalgamated Association Not Recognized in the Settlement—Two Million Dollars the Cost.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24.—After lasting seven days the ruinous strike of the motormen and conductors of the Union Traction company came to an end last night by the employes accepting the terms of the company. The men struck for a working day of ten hours, $2 per day and the recognition of the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes. The terms of agreement are as follows: 1. We do not propose to govern the membership or connection of any employe with any lawful association, but such connection with such association of any character whatever must not enter into the rules between employes and the company; and cannot be recognized in the business conducted between us. 2. That any grievance of whatever character that any man or men may have will always be considered fairly and promptly before such men and the officers of the company, and the company will afford such men an opportunity to examine the records of such employes to their entire satisfaction. 3. We accept your statement that all men discharged since Dec. 10, 1895 (except those discharged for just cause) will be reinstated upon the examination of the records of such employes. The committee representing the employes to furnish the list of names of those they believe to have been unjustly discharged; and the men allowed to divide the runs, other than the runs laid out for the present employes, meaning those who have entered our service since the evening of Dec. 17.

The Strikers' Reply.

The employes of the Union Traction company have conferred with their committee who presented the communication of J. R. Beetem, general manager, making three propositions of settlement of the strike now pending. They desire to say in reply in view of their anxiety to meet the views of the company and in reliance upon the fairness of the traction officials in considering their workmen and because of the general desire for a quick and peaceful adjustment of existing difficulties, they accept the three propositions as stated, earnestly asking, however, that because of the losses already incurred by such a large body that the president, directors and managers of the Union Traction company will endeavor to find an honest settlement of all contracts with new men, so that the old men may find employment as soon as possible, and until such time they will equalize the employment of all the men as far as possible.

How It Was Effected.

The settlement of the strike is the result of numerous conferences between the executive committee of the strikers and Union Traction company officials. Through all these conferences the Union Traction company resolutely refused to recognize any one in the negotiations but its own employes and the officers of the Amalgamated association were not permitted to be present at any time. The victory is with the company. The only point partially gained by the men is the unofficial recognition of its association. On other points for which they struck they have gained nothing, and are worse off by a week's salary and the occupation of the places of 1,900 of them.

The Cost of the Strike.

The Christmas shopping trade was killed and directly and indirectly it is a fair estimate that the seven days' strike cost the traction company, its employes and the merchants of Philadelphia $2,000,000.

No Interference with Mails.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Second Assistant Postmaster General Neilson, who is at the scene of the Philadelphia street railway strike telephoned the postoffice department that while there is great disorder there, the street car mail service suffered no interference.

Says Holland Has a Better Claim.

Vienna, Dec. 24.—The Paris correspondent of the Neue Freie Presse telegraphs to that paper an interview he has had with General Palacio, ex-president of Venezuela, who said that Holland had a far more justifiable pretension to the disputed area than Great Britain. Venezuela, he added, had never been averse to arbitration.

Shot His Landlady and Himself.

Philadelphia, Dec. 24.—Louis Goffimet, aged 30, a French cook, shot his landlady, Mrs. B. H. Meafie, aged 30, in the head and then blew his brains out. Mrs. Neafie's wound is not serious and she will recover. Jealousy is supposed to have been the cause of the crime.

Fired Into a Passing Train.

Newark, N. J., Dec. 24.—While a train on the Pennsylvania railroad, bound for New York, was passing through Harrison last night a bullet crashed through a window of one of the coaches. Timid passengers dropped between seats fearing a hold-up.

TO INVITE ALL AMERICA

A Conference Proposed Regarding Monroe Doctrine.

A Bill To Be Proposed with the Commendable Intention of Making the Famous Doctrine a Part of International Law—Reciprocity Also a Feature.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Representative Beach of Ohio will introduce into the house to-day a bill authorizing the president of the United States to invite the governments of the other American republics to appoint plenipotentiaries with full powers to meet in conference in the city of Washington within one year from the approval of this act, for the formal acceptance and declaration of the Monroe doctrine as a principle of international law. The bill names the secretary of state as the plenipotentiary for the United States and appropriates $50,000 for the expenses of the conference. Also a bill providing for the reciprocal interchange of products between the United States and other nations. It reads: The duties imposed by the tariff laws of the United States shall not apply to food products and raw materials imported from such nations as may make equivalent reciprocal concessions in favor of merchandise imported from the United States. The president of the United States, after the passage of this act shall, through the proper diplomatic agents of the government negotiate commercial arrangements upon such basis with any and all foreign governments. The provisions of this act shall not apply to any article upon which an export tax is imposed.

TWO CLEVER TRAMPS.

They Pass a Cancelled State Bond Coupon.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 24.—Two tramps worked a smooth scheme on the state treasury here. One of them who gave his name as A. W. Lawrison and his home as New York, appeared at the paying teller's desk and presented a state bond coupon for $20 which was promptly cashed. A moment later the teller found it had been cancelled and that by the aid of mucilage and a hot iron it had been so smoothed that the cut made by the cancelling stamp did not show until the coupon was handled. It was found that several days ago the treasurer had burned many cancelled coupons in the open fire place, but that some of those intended to be burned had passed up the chimney and fallen on the ground. These the tramps had picked up. Lawrison was arrested and told the mayor he did not own the coupon, but that another man who was at the gate of the capital square had sent him to cash it. The police saw the man at the place his fellow tramp indicated and arrested him.

AMERICAN VESSELS WRECKED.

The Bark Mary E. Russell and the Schooner Island Queen Lost.

Nassau, N. P., Dec. 24.—The American bark Mary E. Russell, Capt. Nickels, from Milk river, Jamaica, for Boston, with logwood, stranded on December 12 on Beak cay. The vessel is a total loss, but most of her cargo and materials have been saved. Her crew have arrived here. The American schooner Island Queen, Captain Jones, from Boston, December 3, for Grand Cayman Island, with a general cargo, went ashore December 15 on Andros island. The vessel is a complete wreck, but a portion of her cargo and her materials were saved. Captain Jones and his crew are here.

Only Seven Lives Lost.

New York, Dec. 24.—Boulton, Eiss & Dallett, agents of the Red D line to whom the steamer Nansemond belongs, have received a cable in reference to that vessel's collision with the Spanish line steamer Mexico, off the island of Oruba. The disaster occurred on the 19th inst. and the number of lives lost was seven and not fourteen as at first reported. The lost were four passengers, two of the crew and Captain Laksy. Four passengers and thirty-one of the crew were saved.

Reserv Reduced to $67,500,000.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The withdrawal of $1,050,000 in gold at New York yesterday rednces the treasury gold to $67,500,000. Of the gold withdrawn $250,000 was in bars for export. The gold deposited in various subtreasuries during the day aggregating nearly $200,000, does not yet appear in the treasury figures.

Twenty-five Years for Forbes.

Charlotte, Mich., Dec. 24.—Frank Forbes, the actor, proprietor of Forbes dramatic company, who murdered his wife at Grand Lodge in September, changed his plea of not guilty to that of guilty in the circuit court here and was sentenced to hard labor at Jackson for twenty-five years.

Canadian Pacific Steamer Wrecked.

Vancouver, B. C., Dec. 24.—The steamer Signal just arrived from Portland, Ore., brings word that the steamer Islander, plying between Victoria and Vancouver, went ashore some time yesterday during a fierce gale. It is stated that the stranded vessel will prove a total wreck.

Asquith Says War Is Impossible.

Paris, Dec. 24.—The Gaulois has an interview with the Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, who was home secretary in the late liberal government in England, in which he said that he believed that war between England and America was impossible.

GRAND RIVER FLOOD.

Worst Ever Known in That Section of the Country.

Wagoner, I. T., Dec. 24.—The Grand river flood continues to rise and now averages a depth of seventy to eighty feet in the channel and great desolation is being done. Houses, wagons and farm animals of all description are seen floating down the river torrent. Men and women were found in the tree tops where they had been for thirty-six hours without shelter or food. They were rescued by a party in boats. One woman was seen in a wagon box going down stream and calling for assistance, but so rapid was the current that nothing could be done to save her. The St. Louis, Iron Mountain and Southern iron bridge at Fort Gibson, fifteen miles east, went down last evening. All through traffic is abandoned and it will require several days to establish a transfer. No such flood was ever known in this part of the country.

MANITOBA POLITICS.

The Greenway Government To Go Before the People.

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 24.—The Greenway goverment has resolved upon the immediate dissolution of the legislature. The nominations will take place on the 8th of January and the elections one week later, on the 15th. It is understood that while the government has had in view for some time the possible early dissolution of the house it was only when they learned definitely that the dominion government was bound to make the attempt of forcing separate schools upon the province that they decided upon consulting the country and obtaining the people so that they would have a warrant to go upon in resisting the claims and contentions of the Dominion government.

OUTWITTED THE MOB.

A Sheriff and an Assassin Have an Exciting Experience.

Glasgow, Ky., Dec. 24.—After an exciting chase Sheriff Hathitt and his deputies succeeded in getting Booker Steinberger on board a train here and took him to Louisville for safe keeping. Steinberger is the 19-year-old boy who on last Wednesday night, it is charged, assassinated his pretty cousin, Anna Belle Steinberger. Steinberger waiving examination, the intention of the sheriff to take the prisoner to Louisville was not known until he was actually on the train then at the depot. A crowd quickly gathered and tried to prevent the posse from making the train but was not successful. Several stones were hurled at the prisoner.

SUICIDE IN JAIL.

Mrs. Martin Hangs Herself with a Towel in Her Cell.

Watertown, N. Y., Dec. 24.—Mrs. Celia Martin, aged 21 years, who was arrested for shoplifting in this city Saturday night and who yesterday was committed to the house of refuge for women, at Hudson, for five years committed suicide by hanging herself in the Jefferson county jail here late yesterday. Mrs. Martin seemed deeply affected when she was sentenced. She secured a towel and made a noose with it, tying one end to a steampipe on the wall, then, it is supposed, she stood on a chair, adjusted the noose and jumped off.

BURNED BY MOULTEN METAL.

Eight Persons Injured by an Explosion at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, Dec. 24.—By an explosion of gas at Schoenburger's rolling mill, on Fourteenth street, yesterday morning, eight men were burned, one of them fatally. The men were working at the bottom of a blast furnace. When the gas exploded it forced the hot slag which accumulates in the cupola, over the sides. Before the men could get out of the way the hot metal poured out over them.

APPEAL TO OUR PEOPLE

Money Needed for the Red Cross Relief Fund.

Rev. Judson Smith, D. D., Wants the People of Boston to Lead a Subscription with $50,000 To Be Followed by the Rest of the Country.

Boston, Dec. 24.—The Rev. Judson Smith, D. D., secretary of the American board, has furnished the following: "Appeal to the people of the United States: Letters from Turkey and personal communication with officers of the Red Cross impel me to make an appeal to the people of the United States. This appeal is made at the instance of the ministers' meeting convened in Pilgrim hall to consider relief for Armenians. The multitudes of the suffering and perishing in Armenia have not been in the least exaggerated, and their distress deepens daily. Whatever is done for their help must be done now, or it will be too late. The demand is imperative for large sums to be sent immediately on their way. The National Red Cross has publicly announced its readiness to undertake this work of relief. But the Red Cross cannot move in this work until it has sufficient funds with which to make a beginning, and these funds ought to be instantly placed at its disposal. Will not Boston without delay by large gifts set the pace for the country in this matter and put $50,000 at once at the command of the Red Cross? The expedition can then be on its way before the week ends, and the ministry of relief which it is to render be promptly begun. What do the men and women of Boston say? What response shall be made by the people of the United States?"

Sad News for Lynn Armenians.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 24.—Intense excitement prevailed among the Armenian residents of this city when an Armenian visited the Morocco factory of Ira S. Franklin of Broadway, Wyoma, and exhibited to his twenty-five fellow countrymen employed there a letter informing them that many of their wives and children had been slaughtered and their homes and property destroyed. The Armenians at once called upon their foreman and asked permission to leave the factory and held a meeting at one of their boarding houses where the letter with its heartrending details was read to the assembled men.

THE LAST SLAVE FREE.

Trone Wilson, an Aged Convict, Has Just Been Pardoned.

Atlanta, Dec. 24.—Trone Wilson, an aged negro convict, who was pardoned from the Georgia penitentiary by Gov. Atkinson yesterday, is probably the last slave to receive the benefits of President Lincoln's emancipation proclamation. Wilson was in jail in Liberty county as accessory to a murder when the negro race was freed. He was afterwards sent to the penitentiary and now enjoys the first breath of free air he has ever known.

INDORSED BY NICARAGUA.

Cleveland's Message Pleases the President and Other Citizens.

Managua, Nicaragua, via Galveston, Tex., Dec. 24.—President Cleveland's message on the Venezuelan question is gratefully indorsed by President Zelaya and all Nicaraguans. The citizens of the United States resident in Nicaragua are delighted with Mr. Cleveland's action and are preparing to return north in order to join the army of the United States should such a step be necessary.

Sale Postponed.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 24.—The sale of the Chattanooga Electric railway which operates all street lines in and about this city has been postponed to Feb. 24, 1896, on a petition of the second mortgage bondholders on the plea that the interests involved would be jeopardized by a sale during the present financial flurry. A hot scene followed. Judge Geo. M. Meade of Brooklyn, a holder of 104 bonds, protesting that such action was unwarranted and declared he was ready to purchase over all bidders.

Large Sawmill Burned.

Egg Harbor City, N. J., Dec. 24.—The large sawmill and residence of Henry Kramer were totally destroyed by fire at Folsom, near here, yesterday. All Mr. Kramer's furniture and household effects were burned. The loss is estimated at $13,000; partly insured. The family barely escaped with their lives. Origin of the fire unknown.

Lasker and Tschigorin Draw.

St. Petersqurg, Dec. 24.—Yesterday Lasker and Tschigorin played their game in the chess tournament postponed from Saturday. The contest resulted in a draw after forty-five moves. Lasker played a Ruy Lopez. The score stood yesterday: Lasker and Pillsbury, 3 1-2 each; Steinitz and Tschigorin, 1 1-2 each.

To Accept the Katahdin.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Mr. Cummings, dem., N. Y., has offered the house a joint resolution directing the secretary of the navy to accept the ram Katahdin and to make her a part of the navy.

French Steamer May Be Raised.

St. John's, N. F., Dec. 14.—Reports from St. Pierre state that divers have surveyed the bottoln of the wrecked French cable steamer Pouyer Quertier and think it very probable that she can be got off.

HIS HORRIBLE CRIME.

Executive Reward Offered for Murderer Payne in North Carolina.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 24.—An executive reward has been offered for James Payne, whose crime was one of the worst murders ever committed in North Carolina. He was in love with the daughter of Mrs. Sarah Anderson, in Madison county, but his character being extremely bad, had been told he could not visit her house. He did go, however, at a time when he knew the family were absent, save the mother and some little children. Though refused entrance, he succeeded at last in gaining entrance into the room where Mrs. Anderson lay with an infant beside her. He was ordered to leave but again refused and then the woman struck him with a shovel. Payne then drew a pistol and shot her in the back, holding the pistol so close to her that it set fire to her clothing. The bullet passed through her heart. Payne has fled into Tennessee. Mrs. Anderson was 50 years old and leaves over a dozen children.

BATTLESHIP BIDS.

Recommendation of the Board for Constructing the Kearsearge.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The recommendation of the board, as shown in the formal report, is that the bids of the Newport News Shipbuilding and Drydock company for constructing the Kearsearge and her mate on the plans prepared by the navy department, be accepted; provided, however, that the Union Iron Works of San Francisco be given the opportunity of scaling its bid to a figure acceptable to the secretary, in which event it is recommended that the Newport News company be given the contract for building one ship and the Union Iron Works the contract for the other.

ITALIANS MAKE TERMS.

Will Make Peace with the King if He Recognize a Protectorate.

London, Dec. 24.—A dispatch from Rome to the Central News says that Gen. Baratieri, commander of the Italian troops operating against the Abyssinians, has been authorized to conclude peace with King Menelek II. of Abyssinia on condition that the treaty of Uecialli, which virtually places Abyssinia under protection of Italy, is recognized. The conditions also provide that King Menelek II. must admit the validity of the Italian possession of the country to the Mareb river, and that the Tigre country shall be an Italian dependency.

JUDGMENT FOR $4,000,000.

The Title to All the Land in the Town of Las Vegas Involved.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Chief Justice Bingham of the district supreme court has delivered an opinion of great importance in which the title to every foot of land in the town of Las Vegas, N. M., the property of the town and 20,000 citizens, all valued in the aggregate at probably $4,000,000, in which he confirmed the title of the complainants and reversed an opinion rendered by Hon. John W. Noble as secretary of the treasury. Judge Brent, of counsel for the government, gave notice of an appeal.

CHICAGO CONGRATULATES.

Speaker Reed Receives a Message from the Board of Trade.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—The Chicago board of trade sent the following telegram to Speaker Reed: "We congratulate the house of representatives of the United States upon their prompt and patriotic action to relieve the treasury as requested by the United States." Messages were at the same time sent all over the country to the leading boards of trade and chambers of commerce requesting them to follow the example set by Chicago.

Congressmen Notified.

Washington, Dec. 24.—Chairman Dingley, of the committee on ways and means, has requested the sergeant-at-arms to telegraph absent members of the house that there presence in the house on Thursday was necessary to consider a financial measure which would be reported on that day. Acting upon the suggestion telegrams were sent to 120 absentees.

HIS CHOICE RESTRICTED

Men of International Repute for the Commission.

The President Is Searching the Colleges for Men Who Are Not Politicians—Names May Be Given Out in a Few Days—Daily Consultations with Olney.

Washington, Dec. 24.—The Venezuelan boundary commission will probably not be announced by President Cleveland until the latter part of this week or the first part of next week. It will consist most likely of three members. The president's aim is to put on the commission only such men as will inspire respect and confidence on both sides of the Atlantic, and whose acquirements will be acknowledged by the world of statesmanship, science and letters. In making the selections, men with whom politics is simply an incident and not their profession, will be preferred, and one close to the president is authority for the statement that probably not a single name so far mentioned will be found on the commission. The president, it is known, is searching the universities and colleges of this country for suitable men. The high standard which the president has set for the commission, restricts the circle from which the members can be chosen, and in this sense simplifies his work. Secretary Olney is in daily consultation with the president on the matter.

TURKEY AND RUSSIA.

The Petroleum Monopoly Granted to the Mavrocardato Syndicate.

London, Dec. 24.—The Constantinople representative of the United Press telegraphs under date of Dec. 22 that the negotiations for the acquirement by private parties of the alcohol and cigarette paper monopolies have failed. The correspondent also says that the petroleum monopoly has been granted to the Russian Mavrocardato syndicate through the influence of M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador to Turkey.

FIERCE FIGHTING AT ZEITOUM.

Turks and Insurgent Armenians Said To Have Lost Terribly.

Berlin, Dec. 24.—The Frankfort Zeitung publishes a dispatch from Constantinople saying that there has been fierce fighting at Zeitoum between the Turkish troops who surrounded that city and the insurgent Armenians. Both sides are said to have lost terribly. The Turks were 10,000 strong and had twenty-four pieces of artillery. The Armenians numbered 15,000, but they had no artillery.

MARIA BARBERI'S CASE.

Gov. Morton Will Not Interfere While It Is Before the Courts.

Albany, Dec. 24.—Amos Evans, counsel for Maria Barberi, has written to Gov. Morton saying that if the governor will commute the woman's sentence he will withdraw the case from the courts, where it is now pending. Gov. Morton has replied that he will not interfere while the case is before the courts.

THE CUBAN REBELLION.

Large Force of Insurgents Routed in the Province of Matanzas.

Madrid, Dec. 24.—A dispatch received here from Colon, province of Matanzas, Cuba, confirms the report that the Spanish troops have routed 4,000 insurgents on the Calmena river. One hundred of the rebels were killed.

Pitched Battle in Cuba.

Santiago de Cuba, Dec. 16, via Key West, Fla., Dec. 24.—The rebel leader Higinio Vazquez with 400 men had an engagement on December 14 near the coffee plantation, La Aurera, jurisdiction of Hongolosongo, with a Spanish column 700 strong. The fight lasted two hours. The Spaniards dislodged the insurgents from their position. The rebels had nine killed and fourteen wounded, and left ten horses and some ammunition on the field. The Spanish column had two killed and seven wounded.

Street Railway To Be Sold.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 24.—Judge Jenkins has signed a decree of sale in the foreclosure proceedings against the Milwaukee Street Railway company. The amount of the consolidated mortgage to be foreclosed is $8,906,000 with interest due and on which default was made.

American Schooner Ashore.

Parrsboro, N. S., Dec. 24.—The American schooner George E. Dale, Captain Speight, which left here Saturday morning for Gardiner, Me., has gone ashore at Spencer isle. The vessel is high on the beach and badly damaged. The crew were all saved.

Hannigan Released.

Newburgh, N. Y., Dec. 24.—David F. Hannigan, the slayer of Solomon H. Mann, his sister's betrayer, has been released here by Judge Brown. Hannigan was recently tried for the murder of Mann and acquitted on the ground of insanity.

To Give a Reception.

Albany, Dec. 24.—Gov. Morton will give the members of the legislature and the members of the State Bar association a reception at the executive mansion on the evening of January 22.

Withdraws from the Association.

Atlanta, Ga., Dec. 24.—The Seaboard Air line has given sixty days notice of its intended withdrawal from the Southern States Freight association.

No Daily Press tomorrow.

Santa Claus reigns tonight.

Editor Runyon is eight years ahead of Plainfield. Wonderful! It must be so, because he says so himself.

Assemblymen-elect Codington and Reed ought to and doubtless will come in for good committee places in the Legislature soon to assemble.

Readers of The New York Sun may soon expect to hear of the gubernatorial canvass in Nebraska. A man with the euphonious name of Meikle-john is in the field for the nomination.

Since Richard Croker failed to qualify as a Sachem of Tammany Hall, and John Sheehan was chosen to fill the office, the latter is now the conceded leader of that powerful political organization.

Those sturdy and industrous little fellows who carry The Daily Press routes through sunshine and rain and warmth and cold, carry with them this evening the prettiest and most appropriate calendar ever issued by a local firm, which they are presenting to The Daily Press subscribers.

From time immemorial it has been an unwritten, but none the less effective, law that lawyers should uncover their heads when addressing a court. But with the advent of the woman lawyer a new code of decorum and reverence seems imminent. In the Court of Chancery at Jersey City, yesterday, Miss Mary Philbrook, New Jersey's first woman lawyer, asked the court if it would be necessary for her to remove her hat. The court replied in the negative. Some of the other lawyers were unkind enough to say that they thought she asked if her bonnet was on straight.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—Special sale of tinted writing paper this afternoon and evening at Harper's, 411 Park avenue.

Wife—Here's an account of a man who shot himself rather than suffer the pangs of indigestion. Husband—The fool! Why didn't he take DeWitt's Little Early Risers? I used to suffer as bad as he did before I commenced taking these little pills. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

If You Doubt the Popularity of the "Clyde Line" from New York to Jacksonville, Fla.,

without change, just call at their Pier 29, East River, New York, any sailing day, Monday, Wednesday or Friday, at 3 p. m., and see for yourself the number of passengers on board. There are many reasons for this, a few of which are because there is no change between New York and Jacksonville, Fla.; they make the run in about two-and a half days, including half a day's stop in Charleston, and because their officers are such courteous, genial fellows they make you feel right at home as soon as you get aboard. Their rates are the lowest and it will pay you to write "Clyde Line," New York, for descriptive matter, if you anticipate going to Charleston, Jacksonville, Fla., or any interior points in the south or southwest.

A loud ring of your doorbell in the dead hours of night is alarming. So is the first hollow sound of a cough from one's husband, wife, son or daughter. It is disease knocking, with perhaps a certain silent visitor waiting not far away. Arrest that cough. Stop it. Stop it at the start. A few day's use of Ely's Pineola Balsam and the danger is past. Relief is immediate; a cure certain. This remedy is rich in the curative principles of the balsams and also contains certain ingredients that are new.

The game between the Crescent Wheelmen and the Plainfield Catholic Club has been arranged for Thursday evening.

The Crescent Wheelmen will send a five-men team to Rahway on January 16th to roll a game with the Union County Roadsters.

The next game in the Central Journal Bowling League that the Crescent Wheelmen will bowl will be on January 2d, when a postponed game will be rolled with the Elizabeth Athletic Club at Elizabeth.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

William Tallman and James L. Anthony, of this city, have been chosen among the judges for the coming New York dog show.

Charles Krewson, of this city, who is considered one of the best pool players in the State will enter the ten-men pool tournament for the State championship, which will be started next week at Newark.

Three games have been played in the Park Club billiard tournament and Chas. H. Lyman has come out victorious in two of them. Mr. Lyman gave S. St. J. McCutchen 20 points and defeated him 120 to 96. He gave Wm. M. McCutchen 20 points and also defeated him 120 to 84. Charles A. Reed, who was allowed 20 points by Mr. Lyman, defeated him by one point.

A movement is now on foot among the leading schools of the country for the organization of a National Interscholastic Association. The promotors of the scheme have called a preliminary meeting for Saturday morning at 10 o'clock at the De La Salle School, New York. These interested ones in the Plainfield High School Athletic Association are much in favor of joining the new association, and a meeting of the P. H. S. A. A., is to be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. building to discuss the question and appoint a delegate to attend the meeting in New York on Saturday.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The latest invention in the way of cycles was recently sent to Percy Ohl, of this city, by its patentee, who desires the principle of his invention demonstrated. The motive power is to be obtained from an animal who works in a tread mill. Calculation has been made which shows that twenty to thirty miles an hour can be made by the cycle carrying a horse of 1,000 pounds weight, working and walking in the machine at the rate of three miles an hour. This speed is calculated on 1,000 pounds extra weight for the occupants. Dog power has been used to demonstrate the principle, and very satisfactory results have so far been given. We may soon be using it for engines. F. C. Phoebus, of the Greenbrook kennels, is breaking the dogs for its use.

BASKET BALL.

The High School basket ball team will play its first match game for the Y. M. C. A. championship of Plainfield on Friday evening, when it meets the regular Y. M. C. A. team.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

George Squier, of the borough, the expert pigeon shot, has accepted a position with the Bridgeport Gun Implement Company, of Bridgeport, Conn.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Coughing irritates the delicate organs and aggravates the disease. Instead of waiting, try One Minute Cough Cure. It helps at once, making expectoration easy, reduces the soreness and inflamation. Every one likes it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

THEATRICAL.

Novelties are scarce in this big city of London, which undoubtedly accounts for the overwhelming success made last evening by Salamby & Clivette's "New Wonders," the celebrated continental experts. Their entertainment consists of many astonishing things: Laughable pantomimes, with finger shadows; amusing and bewildering conjuring feats; wonderful juggling; mental and electrical tests beyond the comprehension of our learned scientists. This performance can not be appreciated until seen.—Pall Mall Gazette. This play will appear at Music Hall tomorrow afternoon and evening.

"My Jack" is undoubtedly the ablest, strongest, most picturesque and most consistent melodrama ever sent us from England. Ablest—in that its literary merits are unsurpassed; strongest—in that its dramatic episodes and climaxes are intense and thrilling, but at the same time absolutely rational; most picturesque—in that its scenic embellishments outshine those of any play upon the American stage today; consistent—in that not a flaw can be found in its dramatic construction. At Music Hall Friday night.

—Pedestrians on Grove street are glad to see the new sidewalk being laid in front of Mr. Embury's vacant lot. This pavement will complete the flagging on the west side of the block between Mercer avenue and Park place.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

JUVENILE DEPRAVITY.

A Learned Theory That Boys Are Savages at a Certain Age.

The history of our public schools affords plenty of examples of boys who have tortured their fellows in a way which would have disgraced a savage. It is to be feared, indeed, that it is accident more than anything else which saves boys of this kind—boys whose feelings have become petrified—from actual crime. They are unable to feel, and their lack of experience of the world makes the fear of punishment but a small detriment. It is not to be wondered at that boys in such a temper of mind may be converted by a series of unlucky chances and opportunities into the thoughtless perpetrators of really grave iniquities.

Fortunately these boys of petrified feelings do not necessarily grow into bad men. The hardening of their nature as often as not undergoes a complete change with manhood. Their characters grow sensitive again, and the lad of 20 would be utterly incapable of doing things which the boy of 14 could undertake without the faintest touch of remorse. We believe that schoolmasters of experience will bear us out in this and say that they have known plenty of utterly callous boys who later have entirely lost the savage taint and have turned into normal men. In this dangerous insensibility to which boys are so prone at 13 and 14 the boy is not the father of the man.

It is difficult to say whence this insensibility comes and why the child may be full of right feeling, the boy almost callous, and the man again perfectly sensitive to the promptings of the heart and conscience. Though we are not among those who would make the normal nature nothing but an affair of physical well being, and the soul a matter of clinical treatment, we are inclined to believe that the temporary and partial petrifaction of the feelings and the moral sense during boyhood may be due to the great physical changes that are current with it. Those changes affect the boy's whole body and absorb all his energy left with which to give his heart its rights. Every one knows how difficult a thing is a 2 o'clock in the morning courage, and how hard it is to feel kind and self sacrificing when one is half 'aslcep. Sleepiness or extreme weariness makes one, to a certain extent, callous and indifferent and insensible to the fate of others. Well, the boy who is growing up and down and across all at once and with a speed which takes one's breath away, is physically as much oppressed as the man who is weary from overwork or loss of sleep. It is true that the exhaustion of rapid development takes a very different form, but it exists none the less. No doubt there are boys whose insensibility is deeper and can only be explained on the same lines as defects of character in nature. For the ordinary normal boy, however, whose insensibility is not permanent, but temporary, the best explanation is, we believe, that which we have suggested. The stress of growth, to a certain extent, puts the normal nature under a sort of chloroform.—London Spectator.

Told by the Thumbs.

"When I went to a nerve specialist first," said a man who was once an invalid, "he told me that one way to judge of the condition of a person's nerves was to watch his thumbs. Ever since that time I have found the greatest fascination in looking at people's thumbs. The doctor said that if they moved involuntarily outward it was a sign that the nerves of that man or woman were not in the best condition. I find myself now sweeping the line that sits opposite me in a car, and if that doctor's test is a good one there is a surprising number of people in this town whose nerves need looking after. There are few among the women who do not involuntarily move the thumbs outward at intervals of every few minutes, and when your attention has once been attracted to it the process of watching their gloved hands grows very interesting. I have found that habit much less frequent among men, but take the average number of women in a cable car, and it will be a surprise to you to see how many of them indulge unconsciously in this little habit. I only hope it does not mean anything as serious as it might indicate if that nerve specialist's diagnosis was a good one."—New York Sun.

Mental Geography.

The most populous country is Obligion. Many go there; few return.

The largest river is Time.

The deepest ocean is Death.

The region where no living thing hath habitation is called Yesterday.

The most highly civilized country is Today.

The highest mountain is called Success. Few reach the top save those who watch sharply for the passing of the spirit of the mountain, Opportunity, who carries upward all those that seize hold upon him.

The region where no man hath ever set foot is called Tomorrow.

The greatest desert is called Life, and it hath many oases. These are called Hope and Ambition and Love and Charity and Home. And of them all the last is most beautiful. Besides these are many others, smaller in extent, whence the traveler obtaineth refreshment during his journey through Life.—Chicago Times-Herald.

MUNYON!

Dr. King Tells How He Was Cured of Rheumatism.

Positively Successful Cures for Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney and All Blood and Nerve Diseases—At All Druggists, 25c a Bottle.

On October 18, 1894, Dr. King, father-in-law of the late Hon. Henry W. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Journal, obtained a bottle of Munyon's Remedies. On October 24, he gave the following testimonial to the Atlanta Constitution: "You may say to the Munyon Remedy Company that their Rheumatism Cure is the most wonderful medicine I ever heard of. It has in one short week cured me entirely, and you know how I suffered for years with rheumatism. I feel as if I could dance a jig."

Munyon's Rheumatism Cure never fails to relieve it in 1 to 3 hours, and cures in a few days. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed to cure all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Kidney Cure speedily cures pains in the back, loins or groins, and all forms of kidney disease. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Vitalizer restores lost powers to weak men. Price, $1.00.

Munyon's Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect positive and permanent cures. A separate specific for each disease. At all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

Personal letters to Prof. Munyon, 1505 Arch st., Philadelphia, Pa., answered with free medical advice for any disease.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

YOUR PALATE IS YOUR STOMACH'S CONSCIENCE.

Your Stomach Knows What is Good For You.

Thin people are thin because the food they eat is not absorbed. Reasons, either wrong food, or right food undigested.

Fats, oils and grease will not make any one fat. This is because they are indigestable. Thin people find it hard to digest their food. Fatty foods make it still harder.

Have you ever noticed that almost without exception, thin, pale, dyspeptic, anæmic people have an aversion to fat? This is of itself proof enough that such foods are bad for them.

Let your palate tell you what to eat. Nature makes very few mistakes and we seould listen to what she says.

Thin people may become fatter and dyspeptics more comfortable by taking the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It agrees with the weakest stomach. It helps the weak stomach digest other food. It is fattening and invigorating in itself, for it contains artificially digested food

The Mount Lebanon Shakers have made a great many interesting discoveries within the past hundred years, but none more important than this ingenious cure for all diseases which are traceable to faulty digestion. A single 10 cent bottle will tell whether it is adapted to your case, and can be had through any druggist.

MACHA.

By ROSA MULHOLLAND.

The girl thought of him, lying on her straw bed in the dead of the night. There was a hole in the roof above her head, a hole that would be thatched over with heather for the winter, but at present it was good to let in the air of heaven. Through it Macha could see a star shining in the sky, like a little island of splendor in an ocean of dark blue, and the rugged twigs of the broken heather made a rough frame for the bit of glory. The beauty of Macha's face lay quenched in darkness beneath, but her soul escaped through the opening up to the kindred mystery of the star, carrying with it the memory of the event of the evening. Her mind rested with placid wonder on the occurrence of her meeting with the stranger. She had not fallen in love with him, as he with her, nor did she dream of such a thing.

Roundabout her lay her mother, her grandmother, her little sisters, sleeping soundly, with the love of Macha asleep in their hearts. She loved them passionately and had no thought or hope for herself apart from them. To work with them, hand and foot, that they might all have enough potatoes and turf to enable them to live together without more pain than they could endure—this was the one object of her existence. Vague splendors and delicious rest and joy were, she knew, awaiting them all beyond the gates of the sun. The only thing to be desired was that they might not be parted meanwhile in their purgatory on the lonely mountain. As the night crept on and the stars waxed brighter Macha owned to herself that the "living man" might have been "him who lives down in the lake," after all. Pondering this doubt, she fell asleep.

The stranger reappeared next day and for many days afterward haunted the mountain. Macha had leave from her mother to accompany him in his search for the wild flowers which, he explained to them, he wanted for scientific purposes. The little sisters frisked about them and took their share in the search, dancing like young kids on the edge of precipices, with wild bright eyes and flying locks. Potatoes boiled in the cabin were eaten on the heather, and the long summer days went past like the beads on a golden rosary, told brightly through the fingers. The man was brotherly and kind with the little girls and the elder women, but he recognized a gulf between them and Macha.

Their speech, translated literally from the Irish, though poetical and musical enough, was not delicately correct, as his ear imagined hers to be. Their swift feet were not white, nor was their clothing spotless. Macha, who bathed in the lake every morning and hung out her yellow hair to dry in the first beams of the sun, and who wore her well bleached draperies like a princess, could not keep young nor old from dyeing their skins and garments in the bog holes. An instinctive personal delicacy had come to Macha with her exceptional beauty. At the end of a fortnight the stranger told himself that this mountain flower was worthy of being transplanted into the brightest parterre ever cherished by man. And what a month ago would have appeared to him only madness seemed now most sensible.

Macha came into [illegible] cabin one evening in the gloaming [illegible]th a face of dismay.

"Mother!" she said, grasping her mother's arm.

"What is on you, child?"

"The sassenach is asking me to go away with him."

"Away with him?"

"He wants to give me a satin gown and a ring and to take me to his home."

"Well, mavourneen," with a long sigh, "if he makes you a true wife and is good to you, you would be better with him than here."

"Mother," cried the girl passionately, "have I vexed you, have I angered you, that you would turn me from your door?"

"Turn you away, asthore machree! Macha, are you mad? Wouldn't it be only to see you happy and well? I suppose the man has a good farm and can pay his rent. And you would be well warmed and fed, my Macha, though your mother's hearth would be blank."

"I don't want to be well warmed and fed. I am as well off as you and the grandmother and the girls. He would take me out to England, over the sea—away, away to the other side of the world!"

And the girl sobbed wildly on her mother's shoulder.

"Send him off, then, acushla machree. Why need you break your heart about what nobody is going to bid you do? Your mother before you never wore a fine gown, and we will be hungry together as we always were."

Macha's weeping subsided a little, but only to break out again as fiercely as before.

"I cannot send him away, mother! I love him as well as you. Oh, why did he ever come over the mountain? Better it had been him that lives down in the lake!"

The mother stood aghast. "Holy Virgin!" she cried, "and 'tis only a score of days since we saw him first. Then, if you love him like that, my daughter, you are bound to be his wife. You must go, even to England over the sea!"

"You don't know what you are saying, mother. How could I live without seeing your face?"

"As many have to live, my Macha. Maybe he would bring you back to see us. And you might be able to send us the potato seed or a piece of the good flannel to keep us warm."

Macha looked piteously in her mother's eyes and then round the familiar cabin. The storm came down again upon her heart, and she flung up her arms and fell into a swoon. Her lover, arriving up the mountain, found her lying white on the heather outside the door, with her head on her mother's knees, and was thus led into uttering promises which else he might never have made.

"It's only the heart that is too strong in her," said the poor mother sorrowfully. "It is ill to love a stranger that must part you from your own."

"I swear to bring her back," said the man eagerly. "She shall come whenever she pleases and bring as many good things as she likes. We might even build a house in the valley below."

At this the color began to return into Macha's cheeks, and the comfortable promises sank deep into her mind.

Little by little the struggle between the new love and the old was softened away. The will of the stranger prevailed, and the marriage took place in a little rude mountain chapel, where Macha had been baptized, and where, traveling through hail, rain and storm, she had knelt every Sunday since she had been able to walk At the church doors the husband reiterated the promise that he would bring her back—very soon she would return to the mountain. He almost tore his bride away, weeping and half fainting, from the embraces of her people, from the clinging of their thin brown hands and the kisses of their weather beaten faces. And in spite of the promises he had just repeated he was glad to think that he had probably seen the last of this wild mountain tribe.

* * * * * *

Sir Humphrey Gilbert dressed his wife in a lady's garb and surrounded her with all the appointments that were suited to her new station. The first jar to his happiness was given by his perception that, beautiful as was Macha in her silks and laces and trinkets, musical as was her speech, graceful as were her movements, there was yet something wanting in her to make her a bride that could be presented, without risk of criticism, to his friends. The enchanting mountain girl, with her picturesque beauty and wild charming ways, was no more. The lovely Lady Gilbert was a little too unconventional, with her soft brogue, her vivid and figurative language, her quick natural gestures, her little slips in grammar and artless habitual utterance of the truth. But Sir Humphrey was very patient with her and set to work to polish his precious gem in the rough.

A long time passed over, and the husband felt no desire to revisit the highlands of Connaught.

"Dear," said his wife to him one day, "when are we going back to see my mother?"

She was standing before him in a flowing robe of soft white stuff, with her honey colored hair dressed by a French maid, with jewels in her ears and flowers at her breast, looking such a picture of beauty and refinement that even the peculiar intonation that still clung to her speech could not declare her other than a lady. Macha possessed in a high degree the power of adapting herself to the ways of those around her. Her husband recognized this power in her and relied upon it to carry him through the consequences of his own rash and extraordinary conduct. He was grateful to his wife for the persistent efforts he saw her make, knowing she was influenced solely by love for him, for she took but little interest in the pleasures that surrounded her. He did not know how far she was influenced by another motive also, the desire to earn a reward, in the fulfillment of his promise to bring her back to her native hills.

So long ago did it seem, that folly that had married him to a peasant wife, that all recollection of the details of the circumstances had almost passed away from his mind. He was a man of quick, overpowering impulses and memories that faded with ease. Things that were full of pathetic interest to him yesterday were very likely to be follies to him today. Yet he was faithful in his affection for Macha, and the sight of her struggling with her difficulties, laboring to make herself all that he could wish and succeeding by the inspiration of something like genius touched and delighted the best feelings of his nature. He was the more disposed to be satisfied with the results of his marriage because his wife's low extraction was a secret from his associates. It was believed that she was the daughter of a noble but impoverished Irish family; that she had been neglected in her early years and educated by her husband. A pretty romance had been constructed, how or by whom Sir Humphrey did not know. His wife's gentle grace was the real foundation for it, and, at all events, he had not the courage to contradict the tale.

With all this good luck there was something wanting to their happiness. Macha did not fall into raptures with the splendors of her home, not with the amusements of society, nor with the flatteries and triumphs that fell to her share. She only half lived in luxury by her husband's side; the other half of her lived on the mountain among the privations to which she was born. Under her rich sables she shuddered at the cold on her mother's limbs, and by her own glowing fireside she kept counting the sods of turf that might have been saved from the rainy season to keep warmth in the aged grandmother's withered frame.

She heard the little sisters saying: "What is Macha doing? Macha is so happy she has forgotten us!" The heart within her was getting every day more chilly, because as yet her husband's promise did not seem likely to be fulfilled. At last she had summoned courage and asked him the question, "When will you let me see my mother?"

Sir Humphrey was troubled. He was quite resolved never to let Macha return to her people, and he had hoped that the desire to go to them would have faded away from her before now. There was something in her face which he could not understand, but which made him feel that he must deal very gently with her.

"It is out of the question at present, love," he said, "but you shall send her any present you please."

She shut her eager lips, seeing that her husband would not bear to be urged. He went hurriedly out of the room, and Macha stood silently by the fire, with a strange gray cloud overshadowing her face. The third summer had gone by, and now again the winter was passing, and she seemed farther than ever from attaining the great desire of her heart. A minute she stood where he had left her, with closed eyes, climbing in spirit the rough ascent to the mountain cabin. In imagination she threw herself at her mother's feet, begged her forgiveness, assured her of her love, pleaded her inability to keep her word.

Then, with a long sigh, she unclosed her eyes, unbent her brows and patiently went about her occupations. She took advantage of her husband's permission to send a present—a cloak for the grandmother and flannel for the mother and the little sisters. There was much trouble about addressing the parcel so that it might reach that distant and isolated cabin, but the trouble was taken, and that the parcel went safely home was known by the arrival of an acknowledgment of the gift—a grotesque scrawl in pen and ink, scarcely legible, but expressive of love and gratitude. Sir Humphrey read the curious document with a curling lip and threw it in the fire. Allow his wife to go back among these savages! No; it was not likely he could be so foolish. One such folly in a lifetime was surely enough. They must learn to forget Macha, and Macha must learn to forget them.

How was she to be taught to do it, though? Why was she so stupidly, so obstinately blind to the exigencies of the case? Full of intelligence on every other subject she could not be brought to see that between Sir Humphrey's wife and the wild tribe of her people there could not and must not be any further personal intercourse. How slow she was in taking up his meaning when he tried to bear it in upon her without putting the fact before her in uncomfortable words! With her beautiful serious face, her outward and inward refinement, in her soft white draperies and delicate laces, how could she contemplate a visit to that abode of poverty which he remembered only too well? Fancy the wild, brown little sisters hugging the elegant Lady Gilbert; the meager, weather beaten mother weeping over her; the mummylike grandmother mumbling Irish into her ears! There was a grotesqueness in the picture as presented to Sir Humphrey's imagination that brought the indignant color to his face.

Macha's obtuseness was aggravating. From time to time she would say to him imploringly, "When will you allow me to go?" and when answered unsatisfactorily would turn away with that dull look of patience that was becoming habitual to her countenance. She lived in a state of painful suspense, of silent expectation, which showed she had not taken in the idea that he was resolved never to grant her request. The memory of his promise was still so fresh in her thought. Her stupidity was the blindness of perfect faith.

"When will you allow me to go?"

PRINTING.

Some Curiosities About the Art Preservative of All Arts.

China, the "cradle of the arts," claims the honor of the invention of printing. Away back in the year 593, nearly 1,000 years before Gutenberg issued the first volume of his famous Bible, the Chinese were using the "block system" of printing, and in the tenth century, 400 years before Europe had become acquainted with the "art preservative," the almond eyed Celestial typos were better versed in the science of setting movable types than were the American printers of the days of Benjamin Franklin. The "block system" of printing, which was so well known in the Flowery Kingdom less than six centuries after the birth of Christ, did not find its way to Europe until about the first of the fifteenth century, when "devotional manuals" each bearing a portrait and a few lines in printing, became popular. These cuts and printed lines were taken from engravings made on a single block, the very earliest dated specimen of that character made in Europe bearing date of 1423.

There is still a question as to who was the first European printer to use the movable types. It is not a question as to what European invented movable types, for it is known that the honor belongs in the far east. The honor of being the first to adopt the system appears to rest between Laurenz Coster of Haarlem (died 1440), John Faust and John Gutenberg. In the above list some include the name of Peter Schoffer, a son-in-law of Faust. Dutch authorities claim that Coster was the first to use the movable types, and that Gutenberg, who was at one time a workman in Coster's shop, stole the idea from him. The Germans give Gutenberg the honor and set the date of his first successful practice of the art at 1436. The first entire European book ever printed from movable types bears the name of Johann Faust on its title page. It bore the name of "Tractatus Petri Hispani" and was printed at Mentz in 1442. As Gutenberg did not put his name on all of his books, or the date when they were issued, there is some doubt when the first appeared or how many were issued. Gutenberg's great work was his Latin Bible, which appeared in 1456, and which is often catalogued as the "first book ever printed on movable types."—St. Louis Republic.

GARIBALDI'S NERVE.

The Daring and Dramatic Method of His Entry Into Naples.

A writer who reached Naples a few days after the event heard from the lips of the people an account of the taking of that city by Garibaldi. The king was still there, the Neapolitan police were sullen and inactive, what the action of the military would be was not known and upon it depended the fortune of the hour. The people turned out in a body to witness the arrival of Garibaldi. Numbers of them climbed upon the engine and cars of the slowly approaching train which bore the general and his staff to the city. Entering a carriage with Cozenz, Garibaldi started, followed by three other carriages containing his officers of staff. The fortress of St. Elmo bristled with guns and gunners, and they were ordered to fire and clear the streets with grapeshot as soon as the Garibaldians were within range.

On the carriage came slowly, amid a roar of "vivas." As it approached the guns of Castello Nuovo the artillerymen, with lighted matches in their hands, pointed the guns. At that moment the voice of Garibaldi rose above the uproar, commanding: "Slower! Slower! Drive slower!" This he reiterated until the frightened coachman instinctively obeyed the man whom no one disobeyed. Then, under the very mouth of the guns and before the gunners who were already under orders to fire Garibaldi rose to his feet in the carriage, with one hand on his breast, and looked fixedly at the artillerymen. A silence fell upon the tumultuous crowd. Those who were present declared it was as if Garibaldi magnetized them. Three times the order to fire was given, and with his own fate and Italy's in the balance the general stood looking upon the men. At the third order the gunners flung away their matches, threw their caps in the air and shouted, "Viva Garibaldi!" The city was taken.—San Francisco Argonaut.

Luther's Bible.

It has seldom fallen to the lot of any man to bequeath to his country so costly a legacy as Luther did in his Bible, and we can understand, even while we lament, the superstitious reverence which so sadly frustrated the recent attempt at a revision of this great version. But Luther himself was not trammeled by any such sentiment for his text. He does not scruple, for instance, to substitute limes and beeches for poplars and terebinths in such passages as Hosea iv, 13, and Isaiah vi, 13, not because he had any reason to suppose the prophets alluded to these trees, but because German people were more familiar with them than with those mentioned in the original.

The same motive probably accounts for his ark being made of pine wood and his tabernacle of fir and for the introduction into the somber landscape of desolated Edom (Isaiah xxxiv, 14) of the grotesque and very German Kobold in place of those dim terrors, the Hebrew Lilith and the Lamia of the Vulgate.—Macmillan's Magazine.

How She Looked.

There are those who wear the mantle of prosperity and ease after a life of privation and hard work and there are others to whose shoulders it is not quickly adjusted.

A western man who had been unsuccessful in one venture after another at last made money in a mine, and shortly after his wife and daughter were seen riding in a handsome carriage behind a coachman.

A person past whom the pair were driven noticed the look of painful self consciousness that overspread the features of the miner's wife as she sat bolt upright, looking straight before her.

"Now, ma," came in clear tones from the daughter, whose keen face was alive with enjoyment too strong to be concealed —"now, ma, can't you loll back and not look as if the water was b'illin over?"—Youth's Companion.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Leader of the Republican Party.

1896.

Are You Willing to Listen to a Suggestion?

The New York Tribune's broad columns and large print make it the easiest paper in the country to read, either on the cars or at home.

Henry Romeike, proprietor of the largest Newspaper Clipping Agency in the world, testifies in a published card, that his clippings for over 4,000 clients show that The Tribune contains, "day by day and week by week, far more original matter than any daily newspaper in New York City." He proves the fact by figures. The Weekly ranks the same.

Business men find the market reports of The Tribune absolutely without an equal. The Tribune is the only newspaper in New York City whose reporters actually visit all the different markets in person.

The Tribune now prints the best and freshest humorous pictures of the day from the comic press of two continents, and supplies plenty of other entertainment.

By its special telegrams and correspondence, its able editorials and high literary character, The Tribune maintains a splendid position in the regard of Republicans and lovers of music, art, and good books.

The Tribune's society news is known everywhere for excellence. Its Fashions have always been of special value, and changes of style are, as a rule, foretold in The Tribune sooner than in other newspapers.

The New York Tribune is recognized, officially as the leading newspaper of the Republican party.

As for Farming and Labor, The Tribune has for 50 years demanded, and yet demands, that every possible dollar's worth of food and commodities, consumed by the American people, shall be produced by the American people. For this cause, The Tribune labors in its various editions 365 days in every year.

A man is judged by the newspaper he takes. He who reads The Tribune is wide-awake, progressive, respectable and capable, worthy of the confidence of business and social friends. If you are a young man, you will live in a rut all your life (except by catering to that which is base) if you feed your mind upon newspapers, full of scandal, vulgarity and inanity. Think for a moment of the people who read newspapers of that class. On the other hand, The Tribune has probably the largest clientele of the very people who can help to improve a young man's position of any newspaper in the United States. Associate yourself with them.

Mr. Horr continues to write for The Tribune.

RUM AND RAZORS WON'T MIX.

PAT STACK SLASHES WM. GILLES IN THE CHIN.

The Pair of Them Get Into a Quarrel and Stack Tries to Cut Gilles's Throat—Assailant Held for Grand Jury.

Two men celebrated Christmas with a bottle of rum, yesterday, and one is now in jail and the other just out of the hospital. Wm. Gilles, a native of Nova Scotia, is employed by Daniel McCarthy, the truckman, and boards at his house on East Second street. Yesterday morning, in company with Patrick Stack, of Somerville, he went visiting at a house on the corner of West Third street and Arlington avenue. The liquor that they had drunk began to boil and so did their temper. A quarrel arose on nothing in particular but everything in general, and the two men went out in the street to settle the scrap. Nature's weapons were used at first and then bricks and stones began to fly. Finally Stack drew his razor and began to make things lively for his opponent.

He swung the sharp weapon, striking Gillies in the hat and cutting his scalp slightly. Next time he aimed lower and would have caught the Nova Scotia man in the neck had he not lowered his head and caught the razor on the chin, making a long and deep wound. Tom Martin, ex-special policeman, lived opposite and appeared on the scene after the cutting was over and while the stones were still flying. He saw the blood, but thought it was caused by a bloody nose. He ordered Stack to refrain from heaving rocks, which the Somerville man finally did, and disappeared.

Martin assisted the wounded man to a hack, when he was conveyed to the hospital, where Dr. E. W. Hedges dressed the wound.

The police were notified at once and Sergeant Kiely and Officer Flanagan started after the man from Somerville. He fled to Grant avenue and then returned by the way of the railroad track to get his clothes. He was captured by the officers at the Madison avenue bridge and confined until this morning in the lockup. This morning he was taken before Justice Nash and held for the Grand Jury.

DIDN'T GO HOME TILL MORNING.

He Refused Officer Flanagan's Advice and Spent the Night in the Rookery.

He declared there was no policeman in the country that could arrest him on Christmas night, and he however, wandered up Liberty street singing and shouting, where he was met by Officer Flanagan who told him to go home, that his brother was waiting for him, but the intoxicated man consigned his brother to a warm region, and called the officer unpleasant names. At last, at the corner of Fourth and Liberty streets, Flanagan took him in charge and had to drag him all the way to the lockup amid a shower of abusive language. The prisoner spent the night in the cell and appeared before Judge Coddington this morning, giving his name as Jacob Conde.

"I don't know nothing at all about it," he told the Judge, and the latter gave him the choice of a fine of $15 or forty days in jail. He preferred the fine.

Earnest Workers.

The five little girls that held a fair at 117 West Second street, last June, gave two gallons of ice cream to the Children's Home during the summer, and then sent $6 to the Fresh Air Fund. Now they have presented to the Children's Home, as a Christmas gift, a check for $12.50, the balance of the amount raised by the fair.

On Christmas Eve.

There was a narrow escape from a serious fire at the residence of W. L. Titsworth, of East Sixth street and LaGrande avenue, Tuesday evening at about half-past six. Smoke began to show itself and two ash barrels were discovered blazing in the cellar. Luckily the beams overhead had not yet caught and a pail of water extinguished the flames.

Second to None.

The Brown University, Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Clubs give a concert in Y. M. C. A. Hall, Saturday evening, and this is an extract from the Providence Telegram: "Brown's musical clubs have won the name of being second to none in the country, and the concert last evening left no doubt as to how they acquired this reputation."

A Stiger's Alley Scrap.

There was a lively scrap on Stiger's alley yesterday when an intoxicated individual tried to make free with an old man. The son showed up and kicked the offender out of the house. In the city court this morning, sentence was suspended on them both.

THE DEVIL'S CROWBAR.

Rev. J. W Richardson Thus Characterizes the Cigarette.

One of the last things done in the High School previous to the celebration of the Christmas festivities was the organization of an Anti-Cigarette League by Principal Travell. He recognizes the fact that the power to concentrate thought, so essential to the student, is always weakened by tobacco.

From Jay Seaver, College Physician of Yale, in University Magazine for June 10th, 1891, it is learned that according to carefully prepared data covering a period of four years, the men who were non-users of tobacco showed an increase of weight 10.4 per cent greater than that of the regular user and 6.6 per cent greater than the occasional user. In height the advantage was an increase of 24 per cent more than the occasional user. In growth of chest girth the non user has an advantage of 26.6 per cent over the regular user and of 22 per cent over the occasional user. Last and most important of all, the lungs, especially of the non-user, shows an increase of 76.5 per cent above that of the regular smoker, and 49.5 per cent above that of the occasional smoker. The student who smokes never seems to excel in literary work or in athletic sports.

Rev. J. W. Richardson says: "The cigarette is the devil's crowbar to pry apart a boy's integrity."

Col. Hadley says of a murderer, for whom he was retained, that his salutation was, "Well, Colonel, it is almost over," and when asked what he meant, he replied, "The smoke that begun in a cigar in disobedience to my mother will soon end in the smoke of hell."

There is no law in New Jersey to oppose the ravages of this widespread evil of smoking, but we have faith in the young men who take the pledge, not only of abstinence but of influence, that they will join in a crusade of extermination. The league is endorsed by the leading clergymen, physicians and the Board of Education.

Collided With the Trolley Car.

Car No. 1 of the street railway, in charge of Motorman Wilbur Berrill and Conductor Nevins, ran into a hay wagon on West Front street, near Liberty street, Tuesday night about 9:30. The motorman claims he did not see the wagon till too close to it to stop, but shut off the power as soon as possible. The headlight on the car was wrecked, but the damage to the wagon was slight on account of the speed of the horses. It is thought the driver of the wagon was asleep. He was not known and turned off on a side street and disappeared.

A Good Santa Claus.

H. F. Ritterbusch, the Central Railroad detective, went to Port Oram yesterday on business and reports a novel, but very appropriate, Christmas scene in the streets of that place. One of the townsman arrayed himself in robes and other parts of dress to resemble Santa Claus and paraded the streets, singing carols and throwing candy and little gifts to the hundreds of children who followed him all over the town, at times joining him singing.

Open House on New Year's.

The Y. M. C. A. will hold open house on New Year's afternoon and evening. In the afternoon a team of Juniors from Plainfield and North Plainfield will play basket ball. An entertainment will be given in the evening from 8 until 9 o'clock and then the Spartan and High School basket ball teams will contest in the gymnasium.

Why This Faith?

The taxpayers of North Plainfield borough need not lose any sleep at present on account of the talk about consolidating with Plainfield. The mere fact that the next Legislature will be Republican in both branches is a sufficient reason for the faith that is in us concerning this matter.—Somerville Messenger.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

KIRMESS DANCERS ENTERTAINED.

The Juvenile Participants Enjoy a Visit From Santa Claus.

The children who took part in the Kirmess were enjoyably entertained at the residence of Percy F. Phillips, of Madison avenue, last evening, at a Christmas party. The house was charmingly decorated with greens, while an immense Christmas tree, bedecked with lighted candles and handsome ornaments, occupied one corner of the spacious parlors.

About sixty children were present and spent part of the evening in playing games. Toward the close Santa Claus appeared, after having made his other calls, and presented each of the children with a choice gift. Dancing added to the pleasure of the evening.

The excellent music was furnished by George E. Rogers, the musical director of the Kirmess. The party was a most successful one, and all were sorry when it was necessary to say good bye.

CHRISTMAS PRAYER MEETING.

Christian Endeavorers Held a Consecration Meeting Yesterday.

The Christian Endeavor societies of this city have this year inaugarated a new custom—that of holding a union prayer meeting Christmas morning. Such a service was held yesterday at 10 o'clock in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The meeting was led by Miss Florence G. Hawkins, Secretary of the Local Union, whose helpful words added much to the interest of the service. There was a good attendance, and many earnest words were spoken, showing on the part of the Endeavorers a true consecration, and a deep desire to be used of God in the work of bringing others into the Kingdom of Christ.

Bright Borough Boy.

Young Andrew Carney, of Emily street, who has been in the New York hospital in East Fifteenth street, for some time past and who was discharged from that institution on Sunday last, was present on Christmas Eve at the festivities held in the children's ward which was beautifully decorated with evergreen wreaths and holly, while a large revolving Christmas tree, lighted with incandescent lights, stood almost in the centre of the room. As the tree revolved the lights changed from red to white, from white to blue, then to green, and many other harmonizing colors. To the right of the tree was a revolving wheel, which formed kaleidoscopic pictures of various colors as it was turned. The youth was the recipient of many valuable presents.

At the Traps.

The Independent Scheutzen Corps held a very successful shooting yesterday afternoon which was largely attended. The result was as follows: First sweepstakes, Mack, first, Williams, second; Second sweepstake, Williams, first, Mack, second; Third sweepstake, Bandleberg, Van Dyke, Trust, Williams, first, Mack second, Frentz, third; Fourth sweepstake, Bandleberg, first, Hui and Van Dyke second, Wedemeyer and Williams third; Fifth sweepstake, Trust, first, Williams, Van Dyke and Bendleberg second, Hui and Blatz third. In the above blue rocks were used. The last match was at live birds and resulted in Bandleberg securing first and Williams second. Next Wednesday afternoon there will be rifle and trap shooting for prizes.

A Christmas Tree Party.

Master George Miller entertained thirty of his juvenile friends in a sumptous manner at his home in the Hotel Grenada last evening with a Christmas tree party. The hotel parlors were transformed into a veritable fairy land for the little ones, and their beaming faces and joyous voices gave evidence that they were having a glorious time. A supper was served to them in the dining room.

A Watch Meeting.

A watch meeting will be held at the First M. E. church on Tuesday evening, New Year's Eve, which will be preceded by a sociable. The social will begin at 10 o'clock.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. CHRISTMAS AT THE HOSPITAL

FIFTEEN AFFLICTED PATIENTS MADE HAPPY YESTERDAY AFTERNOON.

A Christmas Tree One of the Features, While Words of Consolation for Their Unfortunate Position Gave Them Hope

"It is more blessed to give than to receive" is the divine injunction, and those who were present at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon know the meaning of the above words. The hearts of all were delighted beyond measure to witness personally the joy and gladness brought to the hearts of the fifteen patients now at that institution. The large Christmas tree was beautifully decked and when illuminated at 3 o'clock, it presented a scene long to be remembered. Shortly afterward the following members of Grace P. E. church choir appeared in their robes: Kendall Mason, Harry Messerschmidt, Chas. Sheppard, Willard Martin, Harry Limbarger, Charles Bryan, Malcomb Barnes, Wm. Hockridge, W. R. Cock, F. J. Pope, and Charles Angleman. Under the direction of Mrs. W. A. Freeman, they rendered several appropriate selections. A delightful violin solo by Miss Nellie Whiton was grandly rendered.

E. B. Clark, for the Board of Gavernors, then made a few remarks to the guests and patients. He took his text from the fourth chapter of the First Epistle of Peter and ninth verse: "Use Hospitality," He spoke of the difference, generally speaking, in the hospitality of olden times and today, how willingly people used to be to assist and help those who were in want. He stated that the hospital was intended for the sick and needy who couldn't help themselves. Those in charge would take anything from a penny to a $1,000 if anyone felt disposed to give. It wanted to be done without grudging, though. He congratulated the patients on being able to have such good care, and the nurses for the profession they had adopted. Mr. Clark paid rich tribute to the Woman's Auxillary, and said that if they dropped the hospital he would also drop it, for it could not get along.

After some more music by the choir the patients were handsomely remembered by the guests present, of which there were a large number, including the Women's Auxiliary and a number of the King's Daughters. The nurses and assistants also received substantial recognition, and thus a joyous Christmas afternoon was passed in making others happy and helping them to forget their suffering and pain.

Quiet Home Wedding.

A very pretty home wedding was held at the residence of Charles A. Hunter on Tuesday at noon, when Miss Jennie Adele Hunter was united in marriage to Edward Follensbee Many, of New York. The wedding was a very private one and only the most intimate friends of the couple were present. C. A. Hunter, Jr., brother of the bride, was best man, was best man. Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. William A. Masker, of New York, an uncle of the bride. Holly, smilax and cut flowers were tastefully arranged about the interior of the house. A delightful wedding dinner followed the ceremony. The newly wedded couple started on a three weeks trip through the south. On their return they will take up their residence in New York.

Meritorious Music.

The Mt. Olive Baptist church was filled with an appreciative audience last evening when the DeMoss family gave one of their excellent entertainments. Each one is a thorough artist in playing the large number of instruments which they do with perfect ease and harmony. Should they ever come to this city again a very much larger audience will greet them.

Frightened No More.

The drilling of Captain Ross' Home Guards in the Revere House office every evening, and the threatening war talk nightly in the Red Parlor, frightens U. S. Consul Demarest no more. He was offered a transfer to a consulate in France this morning.—The Brockville Times.

A Serious Charge.

James Frazer, of Plainfield, was before Justice Collins at Westfield Tuesday on a serious charge made by Annie Brady, of Westfield. He gave bonds for his future appearance and Overseer of the Poor Decker dropped the proceedings against him.

Colored People Dance.

The dance given in T. A. B. Hall last evening by the Victor Wheelmen was attended by 200 people, and was a swell affair among the colored elite. Prof. Frazee furnished the music.

A FAMILY AFFAIR.

Drama of Husband, Wife and Brother-in-Law Aired in City Court.

There was war on West Third street yesterday and in its wake came sorrow. Charles McCann lives there with his wife and his brother-in-law, Robert Wallace, boards with them. At least that was the state of affairs before Christmas. Yesterday morning, McCann drank more liquor than was necessary and began to make things lively at home. His wife left weeping for the home of her mother and, after turning things upside down, McCann stopped. Mrs. McCann persuaded her brother to eat at their mother's home. Then he went after his clothes. What happened then is not exactly known, except that Wallace chided his brother-in-law for acting in such a disgraceful manner and a scrap resulted, which ended in Wallace assisting McCann from the house before he had entirely ruined it. The two men were arrested on the charge of fighting and appeared before Judge Coddington in the city court this morning. Wallace looked all right, but McCann had a terrible looking face. It was cut and scratched and both eyes were black. Wallace pleaded guilty, but McCann did not. Several witnesses were called and it was clearly shown that Wallace had not been to blame in the affair. Sentence was suspended on him, while McCann was sent to jail for sixty days.

MERRY WITH THE BOTTLE.

Christmas Was Unusually Prolific With Drunks For The City Court.

Merry Christmas was not an unmeaning term to some Plainfielder's yesterday and they did their best to make merry with the bottle. But the effects were not as pleasant as they might have been and quite a number had to spend the night in the jail to pay for their little spree, besides sundry fines.

James Smith, a vagrant, was arrested by Policeman Cooney. He was sent to jail for forty days.

"I was pretty happy," owned up Edmund Scott, a colored drunk who tried to own Liberty strret, until officer Flynn collared him. His sentence was a fine of $5 or a twenty days trip down the road.

Armstead Jackson, another colored offender, drank too much of the fiery liquid and did things which he ought not to have done on Liberty street last night. Officer Vanderweg gave him a night's lodging in the rookery and Judge Coddington gave him his choice of adding $5 to the city treasury or pay Sheriff Kyte a twenty days visit. He preferred the gift to the city.

Young Hearts Made Glad.

The Sunday-school scholars of the German Lutheran church met last evening at 7:30 and participated in the Christmas festivities which comprised recitations and singing. Mr. Menzel presided at the organ. About fifty scholars received presents of candy, handkerchiefs and many useful articles. A beautiful Christmas tree added much to the pleasure of the occasion. Those in charge were Rev. Mr. Borsum, Miss Borsum and Miss Miller.

Presents and Dances.

The children of the members of the Saengerbund Society enjoyed their annual Christmas tree last night in the hall. The decorations were exceedingly pretty and the little ones had a good time. Each one received a very nice present. One of the surprises was the presentation to Mrs. Metzenbach of a handsome arm chair by the members. It was given in recognition for her faithful services to the societies. After the festivities a dance was enjoyed.

Fair Dates Set.

Hope chapel has selected February 12th, 13th and 14th, as the days for holding a grand fair and loan exhibition in their chapel on West Fourth street. It promises to be a very successful affair.

A Pastor at Home.

Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church will be "at home," 403 East Second street, New Year's Day from 3 to 9 o'clock, to meet the members of his congregation.

Signed the Pledge.

John Mullin, for being drunk and disorderly, was arrested by Marshal Wilson last night on Brook avenue, and fined $5 by Justice Crosley this morning, after which he signed a pledge not to drink for one year.

Christmas Services.

Special exercises were held in all Episcopal churches yesterday. Music was a feature of the services in Holy Cross and Grace churches.

TO MANUFACTURE WHEELS.

CLIMAX STOPPER COMPANY'S SHOP TO BE MADE A BICYCLE FACTORY.

A New Wheel to be Called the "Jersey" Will be Manufactured—George H. Cobb, of New York, at the Head of the Scheme.

To Plainfield's many industries is to be added a high grade bicycle manufacturing establishment. The Climax Stopper Company's factory at the corner of East Fourth and Washington streets, will be the home of the new enterprise, but it is expected that greatly increased quarters will be needed in a short time. The preliminary work necessary in bringing out the new wheel will begin on January 1st.

The new company will be known as the "New Jersey Stamping Works," and is backed by George H. Cobb, chairman of the racing board of the Harlem Wheelmen, and several other wealthy New York men. The new enterprise will be under the management of Mr. Cobb, who is well and favorably known in the bicycle trade.

The wheel which is to be put on the market by this new concern will be called "The Jersey," and will embody many new and meritorious features. The mechanical department will be presided over by A. J. Doty, as superintendent, a skilled mechanical engineer of wide experience. The line of goods heretofore made by the Climax Stopper Co. in their factory will be continued, Mr. Cobb having taken a contract to manufacure them in connection with the new industry.

This new enterprise has been pending for sometime but definite action has now been taken. Mr. Cobb and his son, G. B. Cobb, Jr., well-known among the racing men of this district as one of the fast riders of the Harlem Wheelmen, have been in Plainfield some time making the necessary arrangements.

Painless Dentistry, With no "After Effects."

Dr. C. R. Thiers, of 13 Grove street, is having a rush of visitors just now. For several days he has been advertising his methods of painless dentistry in The Press, and scores of Plainfielders with aching teeth have had them removed without pain. Pharmacist Shaw says in a letter to Dr. Thiers:

Dr. Charles R. Thiers, My Dear Doctor: I am glad to have an opportunity to bear testimony in praise of your painless extraction process. Having had personal experience in its application, I can justly say the dental chair has lost all its horrors.

Respectfully,
R. J. Shaw,
Ex-President State Pharmaceutical Association of N. J.

Meeting of Teachers.

The First Baptist church has been secured for the first public meeting of the Plainfield Primary Teachers' Union on Monday evening, December 30th at 7:30 p. m. Three of the best Sunday-school workers in the State will address the meeting. Mrs. Samuel W. Clark, president of N. Y. P. U., will give an illustrated talk on the power of crayon in the hands of primary teachers. Mrs. J. H. Barney, President of the Newark P. U., also State Primary Council, will give a lecture on Primary Union work. Rev. E. M. Ferguson, State Secretary, will deliver an address on Sunday-school work.

A Christian Dead.

Mrs. Clara V. Crone, of 110 Somerset street, died yesterday morning suddenly after a short illness from pneumonia. She was a faithful attendant at the First M. E. church where she was a member, and possessed rare Christian qualities. The many friends of Arthur Crone extend their deepest sympathy in the loss of his mother. The funeral services will be held tomorrow evening from the house.

Sunday-School Entertainment.

The entertainment of the Sunday-school of the Trinity Reformed church will be held in the auditorium of the church this evening, at which time Rev. T. Logan Murphy will give stereopticon views of Ireland, the same as recently given at the Camera clubrooms. The exercises of the primary department were held this afternoon in the parlors of the church.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it. Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

TARIFF AND BOND BILLS

They Will Be Favorably Reported To-day.

Appeal of the Democrats for Delay Met with Stern Opposition by Republican Members of the Ways and Means Committee—No Minority Report Expected.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Despite democratic appeals for delay and the assertion that such legislation is unnecessary, the tariff and bond bills prepared by the republican members of the ways and means committee were ordered to be favorably reported at the full meeting of the committee yesterday by a strict party vote. All the members of the committee except Mr. Grosvenor of Ohio and Mr. McLauren of South Carolina were in attendance. The session lasted two and one-half hours. The democrats made a general protest against both measures. The tariff bill was first considered. As each section was read Mr. Turner of Georgia moved to strike it out, the democrats voting in the affirmative and the republicans in opposition. Mr. McMillin of Tennessee then entered an earnest plea for more time to consider both bills. He argued that on account of the holiday the departments were closed; that it would be impossible to secure from the treasury department before to-day the data necessary to support the democratic contention, and closed with a motion that further consideration of the measure in committee be postponed two days. This motion was defeated, as was also his motion for twenty-four hours' delay. After this the discussion for a while became general. The democrats contended that the treasury now contains a cash balance of $170,000,000; that this was ample to meet any deficiency that might arise for several years; that the receipts before the close of the fiscal year would equal expenditures.

Republicans Had Made Concessions

To this Chairman Dingley responded with a general disclaimor. He stated that $70,000,000 of that amount was in greenbacks which had not been received as revenues, but which were redeemed with gold, and that they belonged pratically to the redemption fund. They were a part really of the cash balance and ought not to be used for current expenses. He showed that the greenbacks were used as an "endless chain" to draw gold from the treasury and approved the policy of the secretary in locking them up. The purpose of the tariff bill, Mr. Dingley continued, was to furnish the money needed for the expenses of the government without trenching on the gold reserve or the greenbacks which had been redeemed in gold. He admitted that in offering these revenue measures the republicans had waived for the moment their protection principles and they make this concession hoping that the president would be equally unselfish in putting his own objections behind him. Mr. Dingley insisted that the bill was not intended as a party measure. It was, he explained, non-partisan in character, and he hoped that it would poll the full vote of congress in order to save the credit of the government, which, according to the president's message and disclosures made in private by Secretary Carlisle, was in great danger. The condition of the treasury, he insisted, demanded prompt action. Every day's delay added to the embarrassment of the administration. Inasmuch as no revision of the tariff was attempted in the measure in question no discussion in committee at this time was necessary.

No Minority Report.

The republicans, he said in conclusion, had taken the tariff law of 1894 as a basis, and according to the importations of the year the new bill would add $40,000,000 annually to the revenues. Of this sum $12,000,000 would be derived from duties on raw wool; $14,000,000 on manufactures of wool, and $14,000,000 additional from the horizontal increase on the remaining schedules, except sugar, which was not changed, and lumber, the duty on which would be sixty per cent. of the McKinley tariff rate. The first and only break in the democratic column was the motion of Mr. Turner (dem., Ga.) to strike out the second section of the bond bill authorizing the issuance of $50,000,000 certificates of indebtedness. On this motion Mr. Tarsney, dem., Mo., voted with the republicans and the amendment was lost. Thereupon, Mr. McMillin, dem., Tenn., offered an amendment that the certificates issued should be subject to taxation as are the greenbacks and other moneys, but this amendment was also rejected, the republicans voting against it. Chairman Dingley has been authorized by his republican associates to prepare the report of the majority, which he will pesent to the house today. There is no indication that a report will be presented by the minority, inasmuch as they have not been furnished with copies of the bill, as amended in committee yesterday.

The Proposed Increases.

It may be stated in explanation that tariff schedules A, B, C, D, F, G, H, I, J, L, M, and N of the act of 1894, specifically mentioned in section four, on which a duty equivalent to 15 per cent. in addition to that imposed by the present law shall be added, are the schedules pertaining to chemicals, earthenware and glassware, metals, manufactures of woods, tobacco, agricultural products, spirits and wines, cotton manufactures and flax, hemp and jute, silks, pulp, papers and books, and, lastly, sundries.

CHRISTMAS CELEBRATIONS.

Services at the Different Churches in New York City.

New York, Dec. 26.—New Yorkers probably found as many different ways of observing Christmas this year as there are people in the city. Probably that large portion of the city's population which attends the religious services weekly were in a better position to enjoy the holiday than any other class. The churches furnished by far the most beautiful show to be seen in New York. In addition to the most elaborate decorations that have ever graced temples of worship, a number of the more famous churches had been fortunate enough to secure some of the best vocal talent in the country for the day's choral services. Christmas would not be the popular day it has come to be without the Tarrytown end of the programme being followed out religiously. For years the Goulds, and especially Miss Helen Gould, have been active in aid of the poor children of New York city. Miss Gould usually has her young proteges come to Tarrytown on Christmas, and this year was no exception, and twenty orphan children tasted the sweets of a very worthy understudy of paradise, from a child's point of view. They were the guests of Miss Helen Gould at Woody Crest, the Tarrytown home of the late financier's daughter. A drive, a dinner and a Christmas tree were some of the attractions provided for the orphans.

CONVICTS MAKE MERRY.

Choice Food, Sweetmeats and Relaxed Rules at Sing Sing.

Sing Sing, N. Y., Dec. 26.—The thirteen hundred odd convicts in Sing Sing prison enjoyed Christmas by making merry. The warden suspended all work and relaxed the rigid rules of that institution to a great extent. The inmates were allowed to talk to each other and to sing at will for an hour in the morning, and they did make Rome howl with their glee. In the afternoon they were given two hours to do as they pleased, under the watchful eyes of the guards, but not one took advantage of the freedom given him. For breakfast they had chicken in all sorts of ways, potatoes, bread and coffee. They were also given sweetmeats, fruits and cigars to take back to their cells. Nearly all received Christmas boxes from friends, among the most prominent being Biff Ellison, Parson Howard and James Fanshaw. George Nesbitt, the forger, received a pardon from Gov. Morton for his Christmas gift, and was released yesterday morning. Maria Barberi also received several boxes containing gifts.

DUNRAVEN ARRIVES.

He Brings Along an English Lawyer and Several Affidavits.

New York, Dec. 26.—Wyndham Thomas Wyndham-Quin, Earl of Dunraven, owner of Valkyrie III., accompanied by his legal adviser, George Asquith, a noted London barrister, and Arthur Glennie, ex-commodore of the Royal Portsmouth Yacht club, arrived in American waters on board the Teutonic last night. Lord Dunraven's visit is for the purpose of substantiating the charge of fraud which he made against the Defender after his return to England. The owner of the Valkyrie brings with him a number of depositions of members of his crew and Lord Dunraven's legal adviser Mr. Asquith will probably be permitted to appear before the committee and conduct the earl's case. He is famous on the other side as a cross-examiner. The men who were Dunraven's most hospitable entertainers on his previous visits are the ones whom he has now accused of conduct which, if true, would debar them from the society of gentlemen.

Bloody Christmas in St. Louis.

St. Louis, Dec. 26.—Yesterday was a busy Christmas for St. Louis policemen and the crime record is at high tide. The blood-letting began at an early hour in the morning in "Timbucto" at a negro merry making. Two murders resulted. Later another negro was killed in a saloon in Morgan street, and during the afternoon in a court yard on Twenty-second street, known as a "Fort Lookout" and peopled with negroes, Simon Wind, a negro, was shot fatally by Policeman Tom Moore.

Christmas Day Murder.

Berea, Ky., Dec. 26.—A bloody duel between Billy Johnston and Less Mitchell occurred at this place early yesterday morning. Johnston was killed and Mitchell fatally wounded. There has been bad blood betweed the two for some time, and when they met at a Christmas entertainment the trouble was renewed and the murder followed.

New Battleship Contract.

Washington, Dec. 26.—It has practically been decided by Secretary Herbert to award the contract for the construction of the battleship Kearsarge and her unnamed sister vessel to the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock company of Newport News, Va. The bid of the Virginia firm was $2,250,000 for each vessel.

Armenian Priest Arrested.

Washington, Dec. 26.—The Turkish legation received from the sublime porte the following telegram under yesterday's date: "An Armenian priest belonging to the revolutionary committee was arrested at Marsch. His whole correspondence with the chief of the Zeitoun insurgents was found on him."

Another Pitcher for the New Yorks.

New York, Dec. 26.—The New York Baseball club has signed another pitcher. This makes the thirteenth. The new twirler's name has not been given out, but, according to those who know, he is a "star."

PREPARING FOR WAR

Venezuela Calls on Her Neighbors for Aid.

Wants To Combine Forces To Be Prepared To Resist British Aggression—The Militia Will Be Recruited from All Classes of Citizens—Crespo Denies an Interview

New York, Dec. 26.—The Herald's correspondent at Caracas says that the Venezuelan government has ordered that the national militia be recruited from all classes of citizens. The authorities have cabled to all of the South and Central American republics asking their assistance in the case of a war with England and proposing that their forces be combined. A great mass meeting of citizens was arranged for yesterday (Christmas) to pledge the support of the people to the government in resisting encroachments of Great Britain. The city was profusely decorated with American and Venezuelan flags. All the church bells were rung, and the clergy of the city took part in the meeting. The commercial warfare of Venezuelan firms against English houses and English goods is in full blast, and the leaders in the movement have called upon the general public to make suggestions as to the best methods to be pursued to make the warfare successful. The alleged interview with President Crespo published in the London Times has been officially repudiated. Leon Ponte, editor of Pregonero, has been arrested for republishing the interview. Much excitement has been caused in Caracas by a report that the concession to the Hastings Anglo-Venezuelan bank is to be extended. Minister of Foreign Affairs Rojas says the report is a mistake and the concession will not be extended.

TRAGEDY AT HARTFORD.

A Demented Man Wounds a Negro and Kills Himself.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 26.—Thomas Ryan, an employe at Cheney Brothers silk mill at South Manchester, entered the house of George Mallen yesterday afternoon at 5 o'clock and drawing a revolver fired two shots at a colored man named Fred Williams, who was playing on a banjo and singing at the time. One shot entered Williams' mouth and lodged in the back of the neck and the other struck him in the side of the head. His wounds were dressed and he was brought to the hospital in this city. After the shooting Ryan ran to the steps of the town hall, where he sat down and fired a shot into his right temple. A crowd gathered and Ryan, who was just breathing, was put upon a stretcher and taken to his house, where he died soon after. Ryan had no grudge against Williams, but at times has acted strangely and threatened people. There has been no insanity in the family. Williams is seriously, but not necessarily fatally injured.

ACCUSED OFFICERS TO GO FREE

Final Chapter in the Recent Lexow Investigation in New York

New York, Dec. 26.—District-Attorney Fellows will to-day make an application to Judge Ingraham to dismiss the indictments against several police officers in the court of oyer and terminer, transferring a few of them to general sessions for future consideration. The dismissal of indictments in cases where a jury has disagreed will also be recommended. Among the indictments to be dismissed are those against ex-Captains Devery, Doherty, Siebert, Price and Schmittberger, all of whom figured prominently before the Lexow investigating committee.

Nervous Prostration

Could Not Sleep — Had No Appetite

Cured in Body and Mind by Hood's Sarsaparilla

"I suffered very much for a long time with nervous prostration. I had about given up all hopes of ever getting better when Hood's Sarsaparilla was recommended to me and I believe it my duty to let other sufferers know the benefit I derived from it. I Could Not Sleep at night, was without appetite, and what little I did eat I was unable to keep on my stomach. After taking the first bottle of Hood's Sarsaparilla, which seemed to do me some good, I tried a second and continued to feel better. I got up feeling

Stubborn ✲ Ulcers

due to disease, or an impoverished condition of the blood, are a source of annoyance to the medical fraternity. While continually growing deeper and larger the circle of diseased flesh surrounding them is all the time extending, closing up the ducts through which replenishment of tissue should come. For such troubles physicians everywhere are praising the results obtained by the use of

Bovinine

In the first place the system needs re-invigorating, new flesh tissue should be formed, new and pure blood created, in fact, a new and well nourished body where room for disease does not exist. Food is the thing, and Bovinine, that greatest concentration of the vitalizing elements of lean beef, is the most fitting nourishment of all for speedy results. Then applied externally it nourishes by absorption, where the disease is most apparent, thus striking the enemy on all sides. Ask any Druggist.

THE STORY ABSURD

Russia's Reported Offer of a Big Gold Loan.

Secretary Carlisle Declines To Talk for Publication, But Other Officials Discredit the Rumor—The Application of the Monroe Doctrine Would Prevent Acceptance.

Washington, Dec. 26. — Secretary Carlisle declines to say anything for publication regarding the story printed here that Russia stands ready to loan the United States $400,000,000 in gold, and that the United States was considering the acceptance of the offer. The story goes further, and says the offer has been pending since early in the present administration. A high treasury official, possessing the entire confidence of Secretary Carlisle, says he never heard of the original offer and does not believe such an offer is in existence. Other treasury officials say the story is absurd, as the United States has already during the past two years sold $164,315,000 of bonds to obtain gold, upon which it is now paying a high rate of interest, and if our policy permitted it the United States had certainly rather have borrowed from a friendly power than to have increased its national debt as it has. It is pointed out, too, that the application of the Monroe doctrine, which prevents our interference in European political affairs, as well as it prevents European powers interfering in territorial affairs on this continent, would estop the United States as a nation from dealing with Russia as a nation in financial matters. Russia is on a paper basis, but the government has about, according to the official report of the director of the mint for 1895, $500,000,000 visible gold, besides large credits in London, Paris and Berlin. During the past two years Russia has accumulated, through gold production and by excess of gold imports over gold exports, about $255,000,000.

HONOLULU'S CONSPIRATORS.

Sheridan and Underwood Wanted To Restore Queen Lil.

San Francisco, Dec. 26.—The United Press correspondent at Honolulu writes as follows, per steamship China: Examination of Sheridan and Underwood postponed to Dec. 22, awaiting arrival of witness Hayselden from Maui. The chief testimony against them is that of Hayselden and Paul Neuman. They solicited Hayselden to give them the use of his island, Mauri, for the purpose of colonizing there a nnmber of men suited to the end in view, under the guise of agriculturists. These should be ready to move upon Cahu at the proper time and co-operate with a force to be landed there from San Francisco to overthrown the government and restore the queen. They sought to get Neumann's services in general arrangements for forces here to aid the invading force, but especially to negotiate with the ex-queen for a lottery franchise. A strong gambling syndicate in San Francisco would provide the means of arming and sending a force of filibusters to restore the queen.

DECISIVE BATTLE EXPECTED.

Campos, with 10,000 Men, Will Try To Prevent an Invasion of Havana.

Kew West, Fla., Dec. 26.—Passengers on the steamship Olivette last night report that Martinez Campos left Havana Tuesday night for Matanzas with 10,000 troops to meet the insurgents under Gomez and Maceo, reported marching on the province of Havana. It is said that a big battle will take place within the next fifteen hours, which will decide the fate of the Cubans. All communication with Cardenas has been cut off, and no railroad tickets are sold beyond the city of Cardenas, as all the tracks beyond that city have been blown up.

22 PROBABLY LOST.

The Number of Persons Believed To Have Been on the Victoria.

Halifax, N. S., Dec. 26.—A dispatch from Newfoundland says it is now learned there were in all twenty-two persons on the ill-fated schooner Victoria, Capt. Bridbury, believed to have foundered with all on board off Cabot island, on the Newfoundland coast. Among them was a family named Noseworthy, husband and wife and five children. The stem of the Victoria has been picked up at Horse island.

New Cuban Gunboats Arrive.

Santiago de Cuba, Dec. 18, via Tampa, Fla., Dec. 26.—The new gunboats Pizarro, Hernan Cortez and Vasco Nunez de Balboa arrived here Dec. 17 from Porto Rico. They were accompanied by the first-class cruiser Marques de la Ensonada. These vessels will at once be placed on the active list and be sent to their several posts on the coast of Cuba.

Over a Precipice to Death.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 26.—James Farrell left his daughter's residence yesterday afternoon to procure some supplies for a Christmas dinner, and was shortly afterwards found at the bottom of a gas well dead, having fallen from a precipice to the river flats and rolled into the water.

Declines a Call from New York.

Buffalo, Dec. 26.—The Rev. R. A. Kaehler, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran church of this city, has declined the call extended to him to become pastor of the leading English Lutheran church in New York city and successor of the Rev. G. F. Krotel, D. D., L. L. D.

BILTMORE HOUSE OPENED.

Big Gathering of the Vanderbilt Millionaires at Asheville.

Asheville, N. C., Dec. 26.—George W. Vanderbilt, youngest male member of the New York family of millionaires, formally opened his country home near Asheville yesterday. All immediate members of the Vanderbilt family now in this country were guests at Biltmore house. Among them are Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, mother of the owner of the Biltmore; Mrs. Bromley, his aunt; Mrs. Kissam, Miss Kissam, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick W. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. W. Seward Webb, daughter and son, Cornelius Vanderbilt and family, W. K. Vanderbilt, W. D. Sloane and family, and others. All of these persons came here in their own private cars and brought with them an army of servants. For the past two weeks G. W. Vanderbilt has personally directed corps of carvers, joiners, decorators and florists in giving the finishing touches to the great mansion, and it doubtless stands today, in connection with its surrounding park and outlying hunting and fishing preserves, the most valuable, as well as the most extensive, private property in America. The house tract contains 80,000 acres, upon which seventy-five miles of unrivalled driveways have already been constructed, while the hunting preserves embrace 37,000 acres.

CHRISTMAS IN WASHINGTON.

How the President and Family and Cabinet Members Spent the Day.

Washington, Dec. 26.—The president and cabinet and official Washington generally, with the exception of the republican members of the ways and means committee who labored to complete the text of their tariff and bond bills, spent a quiet and enjoyable Christmas, free from the anxieties and excitements of the past six or eight days. The president and Mrs. Cleveland had provided a large Christmas tree for the three little ones, Ruth, Esther and Marion, and spent most of the day making merry with the children and their numerous presents. The vice-president and Mrs. Stevenson were the guests of Mrs. Stevenson's sister on Sixteeenth street. The members of the cabinet remained at their homes, and nearly every one of them had members of his family or kinsfolk with him. The day was unusually mild and the weather heavy and foggy.

RECRUITING FOR THE CUBANS.

A Colored Man Raising an Army in Chicago.

Chicago, Dec. 26.—William Campbell, colored, and until last year a student in the law school of the university of Michigan, is recruiting soldiers in Chicago for the army of the Cuban insurgents. The departure of fifty men in the last two weeks, ostensibly for Mexico, but in reality for some port on the gulf coast, from which they will be taken to Cuba, is said to be the result of the young man's work. Another batch is expected to leave this week.

SHOT HIS HIRED MAN.

A Hackensack Farmer Spends Christmas Day in Jail.

Hackensack, N. J., Dec. 26.—Yesterday morning Elmer E. Williams of Hasbrouck Heights, a well to do young farmer, shot Charles Malone, his hired man, who, he declares, attempted to strangle him. Malone, who is now in the Hackensack hospital, is in a critical condition. He declares that he did not even touch Williams, although the latter, previous to the shooting, handled him roughly because he had overslept. Williams spent Christmas day in jail.

DEAD, AGED 101 YEARS.

Mrs. Mary Morey, Plymouth's Oldest Resident, Passes Away.

Plymouth, Mass., Dec. 26.—Mrs. Mary Morey, Plymouth's centenarian, died yesterday, aged 101 years and four months. She was born in Plymouthton, Mass., the daughter of Joseph and Eunice Churchill. In 1816 she married Ichabod Morey of Plymouth. Two sons were lost at sea. Mrs. Morey has resided in Plymouth since her marriage. She remembered the war of 1812.

ITALIAN TROOPS MASSING.

An Expedition of 10,000 To Advance on the Abyssinians.

Rome, Dec. 26.—A dispatch from Massowah says that two battalions of Italian troops arrived there yesterday. All the reinforcements will be in the field by January 4. An expedition comprising 10,000 men will then be ready to start. The Abyssinian forces are advancing slowly. They seem to have given up the siege of Makalle.

War Talk Deprecated.

Washington, Dec. 26.—Certain army officers who have appeared in recent interviews in the newspapers in discussions of the possibilities of war and outlining their ideas of what should be done in such an event have received personal letters from Secretary of War Lamont severely deprecating such talk.

The Vatican and Austria.

Rome, Dec. 26.—The relations between the vatican and Austria have been harmonized. The pope will recall Nuncio Agliardi, and the Austrian ambassador to the vatican, Count Revertera-Salandra, returns to Rome at the end of the present month.

Work of an Incendiary.

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., Dec. 26.—The club house of the Hasbrouck Heights Field club was burned to the ground yesterday, entailing a loss of $6,000. The fire is due to the work of an incendiary.

Marshal Bigelow Dead.

Constantinople, Dec. 26.—J. A. Bigelow, marshal at the United States consulate here, died yesterday.

12,000 DRUSES SLAIN

Killed by Turks in a Battle Near Suedich.

Only Seventy of the Government Forces Said To Have Perished—Powers Make Another Demand—The Kadi of Mush's Recall Insisted Upon.

Constantinople, Dec. 25, via Sofia Dec. 26.—Advices to-day from Beirut report that a severe conflict has taken place between the Turkish troops and the Drueses near Suedich. The fight took place on Dec. 21, and, according to the official report, the Druses lost 12,000 killed while only seventy Turks were killed and fifty wounded. The representatives of the powers yesterday entered a protest before the commission which controls the execution of the reforms, and Sir Philip Currie, the British ambassador, demanding the immediate recall of the Kadi of Mush, who is accused of inciting the Mussulmans to disturbances. It is reported from Marsus that disturbances have occurred between the Mussulmans and Christians. The outbreak was soon quelled. The disturbance is believed to explain the arrival of the missionaries and Christian families at Mersine on Dec. 16.

MANY CARS WRECKED.

Philadelphia's Traction Trouble Is Renewed with Increased Disorder.

Philadelphia, Dec. 26.—The disturbances on Girard avenue yesterday were as serious as any that occurred during the time the strike was on. Every car manned by a non-union crew was wrecked by the mob, and the arrival of the police in one instance probably saved the lives of the motorman and conductor, who were being beaten severely by the crowd. The withdrawal of the non-union men from the cars temporarily put a stop to the trouble, but there is much dissatisfaction among the men over the settlement of the strike, and it is not such a remote contingency that the strike may be declared on again. During the rioting the police made nine arrests. The Girard avenue division men openly state that if they are not given their regular runs they will tie up the whole system of the Union traction company again. The officials of the Amalgamated association of street raily employes and the more conservative members of the association are opposed to a renewal of the strike and are doing everything in their power to persuade the dissatisfied men to give the company time to adjust their grievances.

SPAIN IS SATISFIED.

No Cause for Complaint Regarding Our Attitude Towards Cuba.

Havana, Dec. 18, via Tampa, Fla., Dec. 26. — Madrid cable advices of December 17 state that the Duke of Tetuan, minister of foreign affairs, has sent an official note to the Spanish press saying that the government is satisfied with the attitude of the United States congress regarding belligerency for the Cuban rebels. On December 14 Senor Castelianes, colonial minister, asked the bank of Spain for a loan of $10,000,000 secured by Cuban bonds. A part of the money, which is a war loan, is now en route to Cuba. Reports that Gen. Neglar would be sent from Madrid to Cuba have not been confirmed. Now that the disturbing forces in the cabinet, Senores Romero y Robledo and Bosch, have resigned, Premier Canovas del Castillo will support the plans of Gen. Campos.

350,000 BUSHELS OF COAL LOST.

Most Disastrous Wreck the Pittsburg Fleet Has Met in Years.

Pitsburg, Dec. 26.—The largest and most disastrous wreck the Pittsburg coal fleet has known in years, was piled up at Merriman's bar, in the Ohio near Clearfield, about ten miles below Pittsburg Monday night and Tuesday. Over 350,000 bushels of coal have been lost and nineteen pieces of loaded stuff reduced to total wrecks. The wreckage was dynamited yesterday and a passage for boats was made.

War They Believe Impossible.

London, Dec. 26.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, the Dean of St. Paul's, the Dean of Westminister and preachers at Christmas services generally yesterday touched upon the Venezuelan crisis. They all deplored the idea of a war, expressed the belief that such an outcome of the controversey was impossible and enlarged upon "peace and good will."

Bled to Death After Losing a Tooth.

Arcade, N. Y., Dec. 26.—Mrs. Elida Dawley Beebe of Sandusky, N. Y., died yesterday from exhaustion due to a hemorrhage that followed the extracting of a tooth. Mrs. Beebe had been troubled for several days with a severe toothache. Wednesday afternoon Dr. Merrill pulled the tooth and an artery was ruptured in the operation.

Minister Ransom Returns Home.

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 26.—M. W. Ransome, minister of the United States to Mexico, spent Christmas at his home in Northampton county. He says he is not as well as he would like to be, but much better than he had been earlier in the year.

Prisoners Not Forgotten.

New York, Dec. 26.—At the city prisons the inmates were not forgotten yesterday. In the Tombs an exceptionally good holiday was furnished the prisoners.

Well, was it a Merry Christmas?

We are on the last lap to leap year.

How nice it would be if Plainfield could only start the New Year without any cider joints.

Barney Ford has returned with eight indictments hanging over his head. But if he fares no worse than the others who faced similar charges he will not suffer.

There is talk about schemes being on foot to make two additional counties in New Jersey. The proposition is to form one out of the western part of Hudson county and the other out of the city of Newark.

In Michigan, where fifty-three persons in each one thousand of the voting population can neither read nor write, a movement to restrict the suffrage by providing for an educational qualification has already gained considerable headway. This agitation, which usually follows after the accession of a large immigrant population, is resisted in Michigan on the ground, chiefly, that the native-born citizens are almost as illiterate as are the foreigners. But it is likely that the nativists will have their way in the community; and thus, perhaps, illustrate a new method and policy in dealing with the swarm of undesirable immigrants who annually descend upon our shores.—Newark News.

The church was prettily decorated with evergreens and cedar and two very pretty Christmas trees adorned the platform, which were prettily decorated with dolls and workbaskets for the infant class, while Santa Claus distributed the presents for the older ones. Santa Claus made his appearance by entering a window in the pulpit. The programme was opened with a very pretty anthem, which was sung by the choir. The rest of the programme was very interesting to all present. Rev. F. S. Custard delivered an address at the beginning and closing of the services, and also the superintendent, T. J. Todd, at which both addresses were enjoyed.

A Good Paper.

The Legislative session of 1896 promises to be one of more than ordinary interest.

The inauguration of a new Governor with new ideas and new promises, will work many changes.

The Trenton True American has made arrangements for thoroughly covering the field. Besides the full current reports of Legislative proceedings, the under-current of opinions and actions which precede and lead to the Legislative act will be carefully watched and faithfully reported. The subjects will be intelligently and independently discussed, and the full standard of our Legislative reports will be maintained.

The True American will publish the important session laws as soon as they are approved, and so furnish to lawyers, public officials and observing citizens an exact and early knowledge of the new laws during the Legislative session, which cannot otherwise be secured under the new law.

The publishers will send the daily paper, postage paid, during the entire session for $1.50, or the daily during the session and the weekly for the rest of the year $2.50. Address True American, Trenton, N. J.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Plainfield dog fanciers are now at work preparing their dogs for the coming show at Madison Square Garden, which begins on Feb. 18th.

William Tallman, of Leland avenue, who went South some time ago with his string of setters and was injured several weeks ago in an adventure with a runaway horse, has recovered from the effects of his accident and is all right again.

Among the entries for the big New York dog show is the celebrated greyhound "Norway Star" and three other dogs from the kennels of Walter S. Gibson, of New York. They are now being prepared for the show by F. C. Phoebus, of the Green Brook kennels. There are also quite a number of other valuable dogs which are being prepared for the show, among which is the Russian wolf hound "Ivan Romanhoff," bred by the Czar of Russia, and now belonging to Percy C. Ohl, of this city.

BASKET BALL.

The regular Y. M. C. A. team will meet for practice every Wednesday evening from 8:30 until 9:30.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

The Climax Gun Club went to Yardley this morning to meet the Keystone Gun Club, of Philadelphia, in a shooting contest. Neaf Apgar, Daniel Terry and Scott Terry from Plainfield were in the party.

The special match at the grounds of the Climax Gun Club yesterday at twenty-five live birds resulted in a victory for Terry, who killed 19 to Benner's 17. In the sweepstakes that followed, Neaf Apgar was high man, killing 15 out of 15.

Mrs. E. Alberti Whiting and family, of East Sixth street, spent Christmas with relatives in New Brunswick.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

—Edsall's Commercial Palace will close at 7 o'clock p. m., except Saturday as usual. It will remain open next Monday and Tuesday night.

—The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield, will meet tomorrow night at the home of the Misses Benton, of Dunellen.

—The usual Christmas entertainment for the members of the Boys Club will take place Saturday evening at their rooms, corner of Park and North avenues.

—The record of remarkable cures effected enables us truthfully to say that Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only true blood purifier prominently in the public eye today.

—By dispensation from the Grand Chancellor, Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, will not meet on New Year's Day. The lodge will meet again on January 8th.

—A joint installation of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., Woman's Relief Corps. No. 10, and John Hand Camp, No. 28, S. of V., will be held Tuesday evening, January 14th.

—The twenty-eighth annual convention of the National American Woman Suffrage Association is to be held in the Church Of Our Father, at Washington, D. C., from January 23d to 28th.

—Michael Wolf, T. B. Penton's coachman, had a unique "Merry Christmas" in white sand and colored paints in the wagon house of his employer in Washington Park that was much admired.

—Here is a chance to put on your thinking caps and make a few dollars. E. E. Marshal & Co. will paper a room free to the first one who will solve a rebus which appears in his new ad in today's Press.

—Among the numerous gifts made yesterday were two mince pies by Mrs. John Kitchen, of Somerset street, and a cake by Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, of Elmwood place, to the motormen and conductors on the street railway.

—The women of the Westfield W. C. T. U. gave a Christmas treat to the Italians who attend the Italian church services in Etta Hall. After singing and short addresses in Italian and English, gifts were distributed to about thirty men and women.

Washingtonville.

William Demler, of Washingtonville, spent Christmas with his cousins at White House.

Miss Nettie Wilson and Miss Jennie Simpson spent Christmas at the home of Mrs. William Demler, of Washingtonville.

Mrs. McKensey and daughter, of Newark, spent Christmas with Mr. and Mrs. Speer, of Washingtonville.

Mrs. H. Stewart, of Washingtonville, will visit friends at Trenton for a week.

Mary E. M. Chaple entertained a large number of friends at a Christmas entertainment last evening.

Gifts for Others.

The Christmas festival of the Crescent Avenue church Sunday-school will be held this evening and during the afternoon and evening useful gifts will be received from the scholars to be distributed among those who are not as fortunate.

Wife—Here's an account of a man who shot himself rather than suffer the pangs of indigestion. Husband—The fool! Why didn't he take DeWitt's Little Early Risers? I used to suffer as bad as he did before I commenced taking these little pills. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

Excellent Service.

The mysterious Christmas packages handled by the United States Express Company during the last few days were more numerous than usual, but despite the fact, every package that arrived on Christmas day was delivered that day. A few delayed packages are still arriving. Agent E. W. Mills has long been preparing for this occasion and was assisted, when the rush came, by seven extra men and two extra wagons. His arrangements proved very successful. This Christmas was also noted on account of the small number of misdirected packages.

Yuletide at German Reformed.

The Christmas entertainment of the German Reformed Sunday-school was held last evening and consisted of singing by the choir and scholars, also recitations by the latter. Presents, consisting of books, candy and fruit, were given, and Miss Anna Doeringer received a present for faithful attendance. Rev. G. Hauser, August Wolff and Phillip Bach were in charge as a committee.

Christmas at a Mission.

This evening the Christmas entertainment will be held at the East Third Street Mission. There will be vocal solos by Mrs. Drake and Mrs. Force, of Scotch Plains, a reading by Miss Cooley, and a number of other attractions. Wm. N. Runyon is expected to be present.

A Morning Mishap.

A team of horses belonging to R. F. M. Chase, of Somerset street, took fright near Craig place on Somerset street this forenoon, resulting in the fall of one of the horses. In consequence the wagon pole was broken. Geo. Smith captured the team before they ran away.

Dislocated His Shoulder.

John Rafferty got a dislocated shoulder for a Christmas present. He started to descend the stairs in his place of business yesterday afternoon, slipped and fell with the result of sustaining the injury. He is able to be about, however.

Borough Thoughts.

The Italians who roost in Coddington's flats, on Race street, are being closely watched by the borough police force.

There is some talk of turning the Cracker Barrel Club headquarters into a recruiting office.

A Revival For Scotch Plains.

Rev. Arthur Crane, of Carleton avenue, has returned from Friendship, New York, and will hold a series of revival meetings at Scotch Plains, during the next two weeks.

Club Car Christmas.

The members of the club car "Netherwood," presented Conductor Johnson with $40 and the brakeman with $20.

Alan Wilson, who attends school at Wilkesbarre, Pa., is spending the holidays with his father Col. John T. Wilson at Tunlaw.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria,
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria,
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria,
When she had Children, she gave them Castoria.

A loud ring of your doorbell in the dead hours of night is alarming. So is the first hollow sound of a cough from one's husband, wife, son or daughter. It is disease knocking, with perhaps a certain silent visitor waiting not far away. Arrest that cough. Stop it. Stop it at the start. A few day's use of Ely's Pineola Balsam and the danger is past. Relief is immediate; a cure certain. This remedy is rich in the curative principles of the balsams and also contains certain ingredients that are new.

SENSE AND NON-SENSE IN CHRISTMAS GIFTS. Gifts really beautiful and useful show SENSE: Gifts of "Gew-Gaws" and trinkets show NON-SENSE, and, the more costly they are the worse they are. Can you choose a more sensible gift than a fine HAIR BRUSH; A SHAVING BRUSH, a HAND MIRROR? Or a more beautiful one than an Elegant CUT GLASS BOTTLE, empty or filled, as you please? Of such goods and their like we have a big stock at lowest prices, and, because of changes in styles, we are selling many fine articles at half the cost of manufacture.

THEATRICAL.

"My Jack" is undoubtedly the ablest, strongest, most picturesque and most consistent melodrama ever sent us from England. Ablest—in that its literary merits are unsurpassed; strongest—in that its dramatic episodes and climaxes are intense and thrilling, but at the same time absolutely rational; most picturesque—in that its scenic embellishments outshine those of any play upon the American stage today; consistent—in that not a flaw can be found in its dramatic construction. At Music Hall Friday night.

The scenery of "The Cotton King" is said to be of remarkable beauty and is made doubly attractive by such little but necessary stage artifices as the imitation of larks, robins and other English song birds. At Music Hall Monday night.

Mrs. Lucinda Stout and grandchild, of Hopewell, N. J., are visiting at the home of C. H. Frzaee, of Jackson avenue.

LAUGHED AT DEATH.

INCIDENTS IN THE LIFE OF THE FAMOUS GAINSBOROUGH.

His Portrait of the Beautiful Duchess of Devonshire—How He Catered to His Love For Music—The Request of Sheridan and the Artist's Peculiar Death.

One of the most eminent names in British art is that of Thomas Gainsborough. He was born in Suffolk, England, in 1727, and died in London Aug. 2, 1788, in his sixty-first year. He had a handsome face and easy, persuasive manners. He painted portraits, but was most distinguished as a landscape painter. Says a critic: "Nature sat to him in all her attractive attributes of beauty, and his pencil traced with peculiar and matchless facility her finest and most delicate lineaments, whether it was the sturdy oak, the twisted eglantine, the mower whetting his scythe, the whistling plowboy or the shepherd under the hawthorn in the dale—all came forth equally chaste from his inimitable and fanciful pencil."

He painted a portrait of the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire, but it was so little to his satisfaction that he refused to send it to Chatsworth. Her dazzling beauty and gay conversation took away, for the time, the readiness of his hand and the hasty happiness of his touch. Drawing his wet pencil across the mouth, which all who saw it thought exquisitely lovely, he said, "Her grace is too hard for me." The portrait is supposed to have been destroyed.

A certain lord once came to sit for a portrait. He had put on a new suit of clothes, with a well powdered wig. He took his seat with a practiced look of such importance and prettiness that Gainsborough began to laugh and was heard to mutter, "This will never do."

"Now, sir," said the lord, "I beg you will not overlook the dimple on my chin." "Confound the dimple on your chin," replied the artist. "I shall neither paint the one nor the other." He at once laid down his brushes and refused to resume them. He was not a flatterer with either his tongue or his pencil.

He had a love for music; but, while he possessed ear, taste and genius, he did not have application enough to learn his notes. He filled his house with all kinds of musical instruments. Having noticed a therbo in a painting he determined to possess one. He ascended to the garret of a German professor, who was found dining on roasted apples and smoking his pipe with his therbo beside him. "I am come," said Gainsborough, "to buy your lute. Name your price and here's your money."

"I can't sell my lute," replied the professor. "No, not for a guinea or two? But you must sell it, I tell you." "My lute is worth much money—it is worth 10 guineas." "Aye, that it is. See; here's the money."

So saying, Gainsborough took up the instrument, laid down the price and went half way down the stairs and then returned. "I have done but half my errand," he said. "What is your lute worth if I have not your book?" "What book, Master Gainsborough?" "Why, the book of airs you have composed for the lute." "Ah, sir, I can never part with my book." "Pooh, you can make another at any time. This is the book I mean. There's 10 guineas for it. So once more good day." He went down a few steps, when he returned again. "What is the use of your book to me if I don't understand it," he asked, "and your lute? You may take it again if you won't teach me to play on it. Come home with me and give me the first lesson."

"I will come tomorrow."

"You must come now."

"I must dress myself."

"For what? You are the best figure I have seen today."

"I must shave, sir."

"I honor your beard."

"I must, however, put on my wig."

"D—n your wig. Your cap and beard become you. Do you think if Vandyke was to paint you he'd let you be shaved?"

In this eccentric fashion he carried off the poor German professor to teach him the lute. He admitted to his table professors of all kinds of instruments except bagpipes.

Once when a gentleman played very finely, Gainsborough excitedly exclaimed, "Go on, and I will give you the picture of 'The Boy at the Stile,' which you so often wished to purchase of me." The gentleman proceeded, while the painter stood in speechless admiration, with tears of rapture on his cheeks. At the end of the music the gentleman called a coach and carried away the picture.

Sir George Beaumont, Sheridan and Gainsborough were to dine together on a certain occasion, says another. They met, but a cloud had descended upon the spirit of Gainsborough, and he sat silent, with a look of fixed melancholy which no wit could dissipate. At length he took Sheridan by the hand, led him out of the room and said: "Now, don't you laugh, but listen. I shall die soon. I know it. I have less time to live than my looks infer, but for this I care not. What oppresses my mind is this—I have many acquaintances and few friends, and I wish to have one worthy man to accompany me to the grave. I am desirous of bespeaking you. Will you come—aye or no?" Sheridan could scarcely repress a smile as he made the required promise. The looks of Gainsborough cheered up like the sunshine in one of his own landscapes. Throughout the rest of the evening his wit flowed and his humor ran over, and the minutes, like those of the poet, mingled their way with pleasure.

In view of this incident it was singular that about a year later Gainsborough went to hear the impeachment of Warren Hastings, in which Sheridan took such an important part, when he suddenly felt a peculiar sensation in his neck. This proved the cancer of which he died. He prepared himself for death with cheerfulness and composure. He remarked to Sir Joshua Reynolds, "We are all going to heaven, and Vandyke is of the company," and immediately expired. Sheridan was faithful to his promise and followed his lamented and talented friend to the grave.—New York Mercury.

Her Voluntary Act.

"You sign this deed of your own free will, do you, madam?" asked the notary public.

"What do you mean by that?" demanded the large, florid faced woman.

"I mean there has been no compulsion on the part of your husband, has there?"

"Him?" she ejaculated, turning to look at the meek little man sitting behind her. "I'd like to see him try to compulse me!"—Chicago Tribune.

MOUNTAINEER INGENUITY.

A Virginian Finds a New Field For One of Nature's Gifts.

"Speakin of snakes reminds me," began the man with the Loudon county whiskers.

"What does it remind you of?"

"Well, I reckon it reminds me of somethin I saw once when I was stoppin over night with a man livin up in the mountain, about four miles to the south of Ashby's gap."

"Something alive or dead?"

"Kinder betwixt and between. It was stuffed."

"What was it?"

"Well, the chap was like a good many other mountaineers. He wasn't a millionaire, but he had a tooth for good things, and not havin money enough to provide what he wanted he took to nature for his supplies. Fruit was plenty, wild and tame, and fruit ain't to be sneezed at in the way of good eatin. But cans cost money, and there wasn't any way of savin it that he could see until, as I say, he took to nature and got what he wanted. He had been tellin me about it, and one night when I went past his cabin, along about Christmas, he called me in to see what he had in stock. It showed up as soon as I got inside, and for a minute I was so skeert I didn't know whether I was afoot or horseback or had jimjams or what, for hangin down all around the room in festoons was the derndest lot of snakes I ever see. It looked like a regular snake den, and I made a break for the door at first, but he laughed and called me back and asked me to inspect his menagerie. I was mighty nervous, but I done what he said, and then I found that the snakes were only snakeskins stuffed with somethin or other.

"'What in thunder have you got into 'em?' says I.

"'Fruit,' says he.

"'Fruit?' says I.

"'Yes, fruit,' says he.

"'What kind?' says I.

"'All kinds,' says he. 'I couldn't buy fruit cans, so I jist went out in the mountain and picked up what nater put in my way, which was snakeskins, and them I made into fruit cans. I've got enough put up to last me all winter and sell off enough in the spring to pay my taxes with,' and, by gravy, it was so," concluded the man with the Loudon county whiskers.

"What did his wife have to say about living with a colony like that?" inquired the writer, knowing something about a woman's high esteem for the snake family.

"Nary a word," replied the story teller.

"What kind of a woman was she?"

"No kind. He was a bachelor." And the man with the Loudon county whiskers pulled at them reflectively and winked.—Washington Star.

Edison and the Kaiser.

While in Berlin Mr. Edison received an invitation to visit William the Warrior in his palace, and on the appointed day a state carriage, gorgeous in golden ornaments, drawn by six horses and with outriders, called for him. This display abashed the modest minded inventor, and he said that he would reach the imperial palace in his own way. He walked. When he reached the designated place, the flunkies in charge declined to take his card to the royal presence, his humble appearance making it seem impossible to them that he was to have an audience with their master.

Edison, no wise disappointed, returned to his hotel, where shortly he was waited upon by a court official conveying William's regrets for the mistake and a request that he would visit the palace next day and bring with him one of his phonographs. He did so. The emperor took him into his private cabinet, no one else being present, carefully closed all the doors and then besought him to take the marvelous invention apart and explain to him all its workings. This was done, and the inventor was invited to attend a court reception next day and to bring the phonograph with him.

Upon this occasion the great American found the emperor surrounded with a brilliant throng of nobles, each one decorated with the insignia of his rank. Edison, I think, calls them "dog collars." When he produced his mysterious invention, the emperor took it in hand, eyed it critically, as though he had never seen it before; then took it apart and explained to the amazed courtiers exactly how it performed its wonders. He never said a word about his instruction of the day before.—Philadelphia Times.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

YOUR PALATE IS YOUR STOMACH'S CONSCIENCE.
Your Stomach Knows What is Good For You.
Thin people are thin because the food they eat is not absorbed. Reasons, either wrong food, or right food undigested.
Fats, oils and grease will not make any one fat. This is because they are indigestable. Thin people find it hard to digest their food. Fatty foods make it still harder.
Have you ever noticed that almost without exception, thin, pale, dyspeptic, anæmic people have an aversion to fat? This is of itself proof enough that such foods are bad for them.
Let your palate tell you what to eat. Nature makes very few mistakes and we seould listen to what she says.
Thin people may become fatter and dyspeptics more comfortable by taking the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It agrees with the weakest stomach. It helps the weak stomach digest other food. It is fattening and invigorating in itself, for it contains artificially digested food.
The Mount Lebanon Shakers have made a great many interesting discoveries within the past hundred years, but none more important than this ingenious cure for all diseases which are traceable to faulty digestion. A single 10 cent bottle will tell whether it is adapted to your case, and can be had through any druggist.

MACHA.

By ROSA MULHOLLAND.

Every day her yearning grew deeper, and the look of it settled in her eyes. Her husband resolutely appeared to misunderstand her, refused to meet her pleading glance, persuaded himself that she was ill, out of temper, anything rather than homesick and lonely by his side. If his conscience smote him with the remembrance of an eager promise voluntarily made, he told himself that foolish vows ought never to be kept. The strangest part of it all to him was that she did not reproach him with having broken his word. But she did not think he had broken it—only that he was wearily long about beginning to fulfill it.

A bitter season set in, and Sir Humphrey, looking at his wife's thin cheek and the darkening trouble about her eyes, bethought him of taking her to some gay city, to a genial climate and the novelty of strange faces and places. He had watched her walking to and fro among his comfortable tenantry, in and out of their warm, wholesome dwellings, and he knew what brought the quiver of pain across her eyes. She was thinking of that dreary hovel among the Connaught hills. Where the sun always shines he thought she would forget how cold and hunger sting. So the Christmas guests were put off, and Sir Humphrey and Lady Gilbert went to winter at Florence.

Uncomplainingly Macha did her husband's bidding. She said to herself, "When we come back, early in the spring, he will take me or let me go."

In the mild air of Italy she did not realize so keenly the well remembered rigors of the Connaught winter. Her imagination was caught by the beauties that surrounded her, and for a little time Sir Humphrey thought his triumph was at hand. It was but an accident that turned the scale against him and made shipwreck of his plans and of Macha's life. Accident or fate led Lady Gilbert, who rarely looked at anything printed, to glance into the columns of an English newspaper, and a paragraph met her eye in which certain rough statements were made regarding a famine of food and fuel in certain parts of hungry and melancholy Connaught.

Instantly her long suffering patience gave way, and all the latent fire of her nature burst forth. She flew to her husband, with burning eyes, and laid her finger on the cruel lines. Sir Humphrey was in an irritable humor. Cut off from his customary country pursuits, idling in a foreign city, he had fallen into play and had lost heavily the night before this eventful morning. The sight of his wife's feverish emotion made him angry. Her passionate demand to be sent with succor to her people chafed and bewildered him. Macha! for whose good he had inconvenienced himself so seriously, left his home in winter, lowered himself to sit at the table with gamblers! Macha to rise and turn on him with those flaming eyes! He met her with a flat denial and uttered some bitter reproaches, upbraiding her with her imprudence and persistent folly. Having begun to give a little vent to his displeasure, he ended by saying more than he had ever meant to say. He refused to believe in the newspaper's tale of distress and forbade her to mention her people again.

Macha stood like one stunned, slowly taking in what his angry words conveyed. As she had believed his words before, so she believed them now. They fell upon her like blows, and when he had turned harshly away and left her under sentence of his displeasure one only desire and determination possessed her—to get away out of this cruel world of plenty and bring food and comfort to her famishing mother. She did not weigh the consequence of defying her husband. Her agony and longing blotted out even the memory of his existence.

How she made her way to Connaught who shall tell? As the lioness finds her stolen young, so did Macha scent the path to her native hills. Accustomed to rely upon her husband for everything, to follow his instructions and mark out nothing for herself, she must have made almost supernatural exertions to accomplish her end. But accomplish it she did. When her husband returned that night, half angry and half relenting, revolving plans for reconciliation, taking counsel with himself as to how he ought to deal with her, knowing very well that he meant to send a largess to those creatures on the mountain who were such a thorn in his side—when he came back to his home, Macha was gone.

Dismay, anger, terror, all passed through and over him. He first swore and condemned her, then remembered her sweet face and her former patience and almost forgave her. Uneasily he resolved to let her go and have her way. He had given her money yesterday, commanding her to spend it on her own amusement. For the present she could not want, and this reckless visit would be sure to tame her. Very soon she would be glad to return to him on any terms. Thus torn by distracting thoughts, Sir Humphrey went back alone to his English home. Pride, obstinacy and the conviction that his wife was wrong and required punishment and humiliation prevented his following her.

The sun was setting behind whitened peaks when Macha came wearily up the last ascent of the hills. There were the bare seamed levels, the weird rocks, the scant green patches, the dark mysterious looking lake. "Oh, God, I have returned!" broke from her. "There is my mother's cabin." The fierce ache that had gnawed her heart suddenly left it, and a glow of satisfaction went tingling through her veins. Strange, instinctive, unreasoning love of home and kindred that can forbid a human being to accept ease and pleasure in exchange for the suffering of want! Macha, who had been delivered over to abundance and luxury, cast them from her like broken fetters and rushed forward into the embraces of her old companion and foster mother, poverty.

This was the spot where she had danced and sung, wept and prayed, where she had been hungry and cold and full of care and had been necessary to the existence of those she loved. Here was where she had watched, half credulous, for the fairies among the rocks, and, wholly believing, beheld with delight the procession of glorified beings in the heavens. This was the home of her passionate devotion, the strait hard bed from which she could endure to yield up her mortal breath.

Only the eagles and whatever supernatural beings had been lurking near heard the clamor of wild cries that arose in the isolated cabin at sight of her.

"Mother, there is something beautiful coming that looks like Macha!" cried one of the little sisters. "Macha must be dead and coming from heaven to see us!" And they all stood solemnly in the doorway to watch the approach of the apparition. But when Macha's living lips spoke to them and her outstretched hands touched them then arose such cries as the rocks gave back.

The advent of mercy was not an hour too soon to bring the color of life back to pinched faces and to put light on the fireless hearth. A long battle with hunger and cold must soon have dolefully ended had not succor arrived. Rains had drenched the turf, and the sun had not shone to dry it, and the potatoes had been washed out of the earth. Macha had known how it would be, though her husband refused to believe in the tale. Who will take oil from the flinty stone or honey out of the rock? The very birds will not live in this barren world. Why should man cling to it with such an unaccountable love?

When Macha, having ministered to their bodily wants and comforted their hearts with her love, lay down that night on the old familiar bed of straw, she had time to remember the husband from before whose angry face she had fled. "He will never love me more," thought she "He will never come to seek me again." She tried to comfort herself with the thought that she was still the Macha of old and would work for her people, but the tears poured from her eyes, and her passionate heart was not satisfied yet.

Next day she went about her work in her old dress and tried to forget that she had ever been away from her home. Painfully she saw the misery and the squalor of it and planned such little improvements as might lie within her reach. But soft living had spoiled Macha for privation and toil. Hunger afflicted her, and her limbs were wrung with cold. She was come back to a state of things with which she was no longer fit to strive. Wandering round the dark water, she could not now feel an interest in "him who lives down in the lake," the "living man" whom she had displeased and forsaken, whom she had loved and made unhappy, absorbed all the dreams of her imagination.

Her experience of better things, her natural good taste and the money she had brought with her enabled her to make the projected improvements in her home, yet when they were made she had no pleasure in beholding them. They had cost her too dear to have the power of giving her any delight. In satisfying the fidelity of her nature on one side she had but inflicted a mortal wound upon it on the other. The blue pinched look of hunger had gone from her mother's face, the stars were no longer visible through the roof, yet lying there at night and thinking about it all Macha felt that the pinch of cold and hunger had settled on her own heart, and that the stars of love and possible happiness were forever shut out from her life. A hundred times a day she made, in imagination, impassioned acts of love and sorrow and appeals for pardon at her husband's knees. In fancy she uttered explanations to him, that in reality would have been impossible to her tongue. And she was too shy and too timid to attempt to write to him.

"When a wife leaves her husband," thought Macha, "of course he will not want her any more." She blamed no one but herself. "I behaved badly to my mother in leaving her at first," she reflected, "and badly to my husband in running away against his will. There must be a twist in me somehow, for I know I did not want to do wrong." Sorrow stricken, remorseful, perplexed, she lived through the long uneventful days and nights. The strength ebbed away from her limbs and light from her eyes. She made no complaint, for she was willing to endure bravely in expiation of the willfulness of her sins. Her one burning desire was to see her husband before she died. Yet, so self condemned did she stand, she could not summon courage to implore of him to come.

Sir Humphrey sat at home in the depths of what may be truly called a sulk. He had more than half forgiven his willful wife and was ready to receive her should she ask to return. He was willing to go and fetch her as soon as she should send for him, and it was not wonderful that he was at fault as to her motives and conduct, for her nature had always been a riddle to him. Why could she not write and tell him where she was? That much he had a right to expect from her. He was quite resolved not to go in search of her, not to attempt to communicate with her till her penitent cry should be heard and till her love should make her ask to be taken back to his home. He told all who required to know that Lady Gilbert was paying a visit in her native land and then sat in his loneliness awaiting some sign.

It was only a few weeks, after all, since she had left him and returned to her mountains, but many a heart has been broken in a far shorter time. The woman was one who in other circumstances would have made the happiness and well being of those she loved, but divided duty and fidelity rent her asunder, the ardor and tenderness of her nature consumed her, and all the powers within her wrought toward tragedy and death.

One evening Macha sat at the cabin door thinking of her husband, owning her trespasses and watching the sun set redly behind the mountain peaks, the sun that never was to rise for her again. That night she turned her eyes on the old brown crucifix which was to her as the passport of that region where the weary are at rest. She was not so glad to go as she might have been had she never met any one while walking in her girlish innocence round the margin of the lake. "Tell him I was sorry," were the last words she whispered in her mother's ear.

The sign that Sir Humphrey waited for came at last in the shape of a scrawled letter, with an unpronounceable name on the postmark. "Come to the mountain to see your son," it said. "Macha, the mother, is dead."

That sorrow is long past now. Sir Humphrey is married to a more suitable

"Tell him I was sorry."

wife, and life has gone pleasantly with him. His eldest son has Macha's eyes, with often a grave, sad, unaccountable expression in them, which, in the midst of mirth, will make his father start and sigh, while the words of the poor peasant mother in the mountains will come ringing back in his ears, "Tis only the heart that is too strong in her, and it's ill to love a stranger that must part you from your own."—Time.

The Perfumery Nuisance.

"Why doesn't some minister preach a sermon on that subject or some editor write an editorial about it?" asked a sandy whiskered man. He was on trolley car No. 287, going north at the rate of eight miles an hour.

"What subject?" asked a curious passenger, while four men, six women, two babies and a poodle dog opened their ears in order to catch every word of the answer.

"What subject? Why, the odor in this car! There's a stench of bergamot, attar of roses, Maria Stuart and a dozen other brands of perfumery aboard of this car, strong enough to drive a windmill. The excessive use of perfumery is a lesson necessary to teach to all wom"——

"If I was half as strong as the odor you complain of," interrupted an indignant woman, "I'd kick you off the car."

"You're an old crank," said another. The complainant slipped off the car at Virginia street and appeared to be well pleased.—Buffalo Courier.

science
Science is "knowing how." The only secret about Scott's Emulsion is years of science. When made in large quantities and by improving methods, an emulsion must be more perfect than when made in the old time way with mortar and pestle a few ounces at a time. This is why Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil never separates, keeps sweet for years, and why every spoonful is equal to every other spoonful. An even product throughout.
In other emulsions you are liable to get an uneven benefit—either an over or under dose. Get Scott's. Genuine has a salmon-colored wrapper.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randoloh, 143 W. Front st.

PAINTING PAPOOSES.

VERY HARD TO GET LITTLE INDIAN BABIES TO POSE.

A California Woman Artist Describes Her Method—First She Catches the Baby, Then Mascot Takes a Part—The Indian's Superstitious Fear.

"And you want to know how I get Indian babies to pose for me, do you?"

Mrs. Grace Hudson, the young California artist who has made herself famous by painting papooses, wiped her brushes and dropped into a chair in the ivy covered veranda of her studio at Ukiah.

"Now, I'll tell you all you want to know and more, too, perhaps. I have much to contend against, but with the exercise of a little ingenuity and a great deal of perseverance I am able to catch a snap shot of an Indian baby in some interesting attitude or occupation. There's the little fellow lying on his back, trying to get his little brown foot into his mouth," said the lady, pointing to one of her pictures. "That baby looks as if he never did anything but laugh, but I had to give him gumdrops to get the little rascal to look pleasant. That gave me the expression. The pose and coloring had to be done without the model.

"When I see a baby that I want to paint, I cannot borrow it for an indefinite period by telling its parents it's the sweetest thing on earth. I have to kidnap it first and then overcome the natural inclination of a baby to do everything except what is most desired.

"There is a popular superstition among the Indians, that neither arguments nor bribes will shake, that to be sketched or photographed is sure to bring some terrible calamity down on the head of the subject. If it is not a speedy death, it is disfigurement for life, or at the very least blindness. As all Digger Indians become blind in their old age from sitting all their lives over the smoke of their campfires, their superstition never lacks confirmation. Why, if these Indians here in Ukiah knew that I photographed and painted their babies, I would be regarded as a murderess and my studio would be shunned as a chamber of horrors. I once induced Captain John, a very old Indian whom I had known from my birth, to sit for me. He was so aged and infirm that he could not earn a livelihood and was in imminent danger of starvation.

"After a great deal of moaning and groaning he finally accepted a bribe of bread and boiled beef, but he insisted on eating it first, for fear he would not live to enjoy it. When he had devoured the last crumb, he took his seat and sat for hours staring at me stoically and awaiting his impending fate like a stoic. Great beads of perspiration stood out on his face, and every few moments he would draw a long breath and brace himself for another effort. He must have suffered untold agony in the few hours he sat for me, for no bribe that I could offer would induce him to pass through the ordeal again. He declares he would sooner starve. I have tried to induce him to bring his grandchildren to me, but he only shakes his head and mutters, 'No, bueno Muchacho.' Nothing will induce him to imperil their lives, for he is positive that he escaped death only because he was so old and tough.

"But about the babies. When I want a subject, I first have to find a squaw with a papoose. If the child's face suits me, I enter into negotiations with the mother to do some work, usually scrubbing or window cleaning. She leaves the baby strapped up in his basket and braced against the side of the house, where it will be under her eye. The next maneuver is to get possession of that papoose. I must make it cry, so that I may have some reasonable excuse for taking an interest in it. There is where Mascot 'does his turn,' as the theatrical people say. Here, Mascot, speak."

An orange and white St. Bernard, almost as big as a Shetland pony, bounced up out of the cool ivy and let out a roar that fairly shook the house.

"That will usually make an Indian baby cry," explained Mrs. Hudson. "If it doesn't frighten the baby, it does the mother, and I have to go to the rescue in any event. Mascot just loves to poke his cold nose into a baby's face when it is strapped up hand and foot and perfectly helpless. So the mother is glad enough to let me take the papoose inside, where it will be safe. I promise to take good care of it, to buy it a new dress, and to give it some beads. In a jiffy I have that baby propped up in the light against the front door of my studio. Then comes the task of getting one fleeting expression on the face of the baby indicative of interest in life. They are regular little stoics. They will sit and stare without blinking an eye or moving a muscle while I perform the most grotesque antics in order to provoke a laugh. I can occasionally interest them by giving them something to eat, but there is always something about the way they accept food from me that reminds me of the caged animal.

"I worked three days on a baby before I could get a smile, and only then by putting on a feather headdress and dancing around like an Apache medicine man. I worried, tormented, bullied and frightened one poor little fellow for two days trying to make him cry, but when I tried to propitiate him with candy and beads he yelled lustily, and I got a splendid photograph of him."

"Have any of the babies you painted died?" was asked.

"Yes, one. It was my namesake too. Its mother promised to name it after me, but it chanced to be a boy. Had it been a girl its name would have been Grace Hudson Billy-Bowlegs—the family name is quite up to date, being hyphenated. The poor baby struggled along under the name of Dr. Hudson Billy-Bowlegs for about a year and then died. If its mother knew that I had ever painted and photographed it, she would hold me responsible for its death."—San Francisco Call.

His Hat.

It is a pleasant European custom to lift the hat to gentlemen as well as to ladies. Out of this practice arose the remark of a well known London hatter, who met an acquaintance who owed him for the hat he wore.

The hatter, who was accompanied by a friend, lifted his hat to his debtor, but the latter made no sign of recognition.

"He does not salute you?" said the hatter's friend.

"No," said the hatter. "I think he might at least touch my hat to me!"—Youth's Companion.

"Will you take this here woman fer better or wuss and give me $2 fer marryin of you?" was the unique manner in which a Georgia justice united two lives.—Atlanta Constitution.

THE ART OF CORRESPONDENCE.

To Write a Charming Letter an Accomplishment—Wax and Sealing.

The most delightfully worth while of all accomplishments, writes Mrs. Roger A. Pryor, is, to my mind, that of writing charming letters. However sweet a song may be, it is evanescent as a breath and survives as a divine memory only. Conversation requires the actual presence of those who engage in it, and the pleasure it gives depends upon many things—a melodious voice, an attractive appearance, maybe cheerful rooms, congenial surroundings, freedom from the cares and interruptions of life. But it matters not how cold and bare a garret home may be, nor how forbidding its outlook upon the chimney pots under a wintry sky, or whether the lodge be in a wilderness or foreign land, given some measure of leisure, good stationery and a convenient postoffice, all the world may be ours. We may daily send forth on white wings our highest thought and most gracious words, and a full meed of appreciation will surely return to us.

Such a correspondence may be independent of the formalities of an introduction. No third person is needed if we wish to congratulate an artist or author or express our gratitude to a philanthropist, philosopher or poet. These dwellers in the realms of thought are peculiarly susceptible to this delicate form of flattery. Momentous consequences have occasionally been the outgrowth of acquaintances thus begun. I knew a happy marriage to result from such a correspondence with a poet, and we all have known friendships, ending only with life, which have been nourished as they were begun by letters only.

Of course, in the high thinking that must govern correspondence bringing about such results, formulas of expression and matters of stationery are quite swept into the background. And yet, I fancy, the initial letters in most cases must be immaculate—prim, trig little affairs, neat and trim as an epigram, producing something like the impression one receives from a perfectly gloved hand extended for its first greeting. The introductory letters must be happily worded—cela va sans dire—but I am sure they should also be neatly written. One should have an alcohol lamp or a roll of the wax tapers sold for the purpose and still air in the room to properly seal letters. With the seal and envelope before you, turn one end of the stick of wax rapidly over the flame, not near enough to ignite it, until it is creamy and ready to drop, then deftly rub it round and round over the point of the envelope flap until enough is deposited, when the dab of wax may be held a moment immediately over the flame. Then firmly press the seal into it. If a drop of the hot wax is first placed under the point of the flap, the seal will be less likely to break. A well cut seal will never stick and practice will insure a firm impression, with the wax molded neatly and evenly around the seal. In all this, pray be careful! Blazing wax in some hands is dangerous. Remember Mrs. Longfellow's sad fate from the lace of her gown catching fire as she sealed her letters!—Delineator.

The Free Fights of the Koreans.

Remarkable features of the social life of the capital, Cho-sen, are the various guilds and their great stone and stick fights. Neighboring towns and villages who are jealous of each other also settle their differences by a stone fight in the first moon, such period being universally set aside for fights, both public and private. Children are encouraged to fight by their parents, who hope to make them hardy and courageous; sides are made up, and they fight till they are exhausted. The butchers and the mud plasterers had a fierce feud, and it was decided to settle it by a pitched battle on a plain outside the south gate. On the day appointed some 1,800 men went down to fight, a stream dividing the two camps.

The battle began with volleys of stones as the belligerents neared each other, and when one party forced its way over the stream and all came to close quarters the fighting was carried on with clubs and knives. It was a drawn battle, so the leaders decided, and was renewed a few days later, victory eventually resting with the plasterers. Very few were killed, says Mr. Landor, though none escaped without a wound. But the whole affair sounds like one of Lucian's grotesque battles. The court patronizes these extraordinary duels, and the king is kept informed of the results. The police, of course, take care that the bystanders do not come in for any hard knocks. After the fighting moon has waned life in "the land of the morning calm" sinks back into the usual stagnation.—London Spectator.

There Could Be No Mistake.

Some time ago an amorous young man sent a letter to a German lady, and this postcript was added:

"That my darling may make no mistake, remember that I will wear a light pair of trousers and a dark cutaway coat. In my right hand I will carry a small cane and in my left a cigar. Yours ever, Adolphe."

The father replied courteously, stating that his daughter had given him authority to represent her at the appointed place at the time agreed on. His postscript was as follows:

"Dot mine son may make no mishdakes, I vill be dreshed in mine shirt sleeves. I vill vear in mine right hand a glub; in mine left hand I vill vear a six shooter. You vill recognize me by de vay I bats you on de head a goople times twice mid de glub. Vait for me at de corner, as I have somedings important to inform you mit. Your frent, Heinrich Muller."—Philadelphia Record.

Capsicum.

The capsicum plant, from which the diifferent varieties of pepper are produced, is indigenous to the tropical regions of Europe, Asia, Africa and America. It grows wild almost as well as under cultivation in all these countries, and in each is used by the natives as a seasoning for food. Its extensive employment has suggested to medical theorists the thought that it must be considered as a natural tonic for the stomach in tropical countries.

Carbolic Acid.

Carbolic acid was discovered by Runge in 1834 as a constituent of common coal tar. Its properties were fully investigated by Laurent in 1841, who termed it hydrated oxide of phenyl. This name, however, never met with favor, for, out of respect for Runge, the discoverer, the name he gave it has always been retained.

By the rules of chivalry all persons, male and female, old and young, in a town taken by assault, were liable to be put to death, and the men and boys seldom escaped the brutality of the victors.

The mother of the famous Constable Bourbon learned to fence in order to assist in the military training of her son.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE.

Leader of the Republican Party.

1896.

Are You Willing to Listen to a Suggestion?

The New York Tribune's broad columns and large print make it the easiest paper in the country to read, either on the cars or at home.

Henry Romeike, proprietor of the largest Newspaper Clipping Agency in the world, testifies in a published card, that his clippings for over 4,000 clients show that The Tribune contains, "day by day and week by week, far more original matter than any daily newspaper in New York City." He proves the fact by figures. The Weekly ranks the same.

Business men find the market reports of The Tribune absolutely without an equal. The Tribune is the only newspaper in New York City whose reporters actually visit all the different markets in person.

The Tribune now prints the best and freshest humorous pictures of the day from the comic press of two continents, and supplies plenty of other entertainment.

By its special telegrams and correspondence, its able editorials and high literary character, The Tribune maintains a splendid position in the regard of Republicans and lovers of music, art, and good books.

The Tribune's society news is known everywhere for excellence. Its Fashions have always been of special value, and changes of style are, as a rule, foretold in The Tribune sooner than in other newspapers.

The New York Tribune is recognized, officially as the leading newspaper of the Republican party.

As for Farming and Labor, The Tribune has for 50 years demanded, and yet demands, that every possible dollar's worth of food and commodities, consumed by the American people, shall be produced by the American people. For this cause, The Tribune labors in its various editions 365 days in every year.

A man is judged by the newspaper he takes. He who reads The Tribune is wide-awake, progressive, respectable and capable, worthy of the confidence of business and social friends. If you are a young man, you will live in a rut all your life (except by catering to that which is base) if you feed your mind upon newspapers, full of scandal, vulgarity and inanity. Think for a moment of the people who read newspapers of that class. On the other hand, The Tribune has probably the largest clientele of the very people who can help to improve a young man's position of any newspaper in the United States. Associate yourself with them.

Mr. Horr continues to write for The Tribune.

Sample copies free. Daily, $10 a year. Sunday, separately, $2. Semi-Weekly, $2. Weekly, $1. Tribune Almanac for 1896, 25 cents.

AN EVENING AT HEARTS.

A Charming Social Gathering in Washington Park Last Evening.

A delightful social gathering was held at the home of Miss Kate Overton, of Rockview avenue, last evening, in honor of her friend, Miss Gertrude Eddey. The first part of the evening passed very pleasantly in a game of progressive hearts, at which Miss Alice Thompson and William Coriell proved to be the most successful, while Miss Sarah Douglass and Edward Petrie won the booby prizes after a close contest. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing and conversation, while dainty refreshments were passed toward the close of the evening. Besides Miss Overton and her guest, there were present the Misses Grace E. Overton, Grace Petrie, Edith Lane, Lulu French, Sarah Douglass, Laura Wilkins, of Rochester, and Messrs. Carlos C. Gallup, George A. Horne, Walter Douglass, William Coriell, Raymond A. McGee and Edward Petrie.

AN UNLUCKY JUMP.

Peter Blimm Tries to Mount a Fire Carriage and Breaks His Leg.

Peter Blimm, of Somerset street, met with a serious accident last night when the alarm of fire was given. He ran from his home to the corner of Front and Somerset streets, and reached there just as Alert hose carriage was passing the latter street. In his attempt to jump on the rear of the carriage his left foot turned over and he was thrown with such force as to fracture the leg near the ankle. He was picked up from the street by his friends and taken home, where a physician was summoned. He found, as above stated, that the bone was fractured, and gave the proper treatment. Mr. Blimm will be laid up for sometime as a result of the accident. He is not a fireman.

An Evening of Whist.

The members of the Thursday Night Whist Club were charmingly entertained last evening at the home of ex-Councilman Arthur T. Gallup, of West Front street. The first prizes were won by Mrs. Horsley Barker and Doctor Carman, while Mrs. G. Amthor and Horsley Barker were the winners of the consolation prizes. The evening passed very pleasantly and was closed by a collation. The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Joseph R. Hall, of 19 Grove street.

NUMEROUS CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS IN VARIOUS CHURCHES.

Enjoyable Programmes Arranged for Sunday-School Scholars, Supplemented by Sweet Presents—Events in Detail.

Success was accorded the Christmas entertainment given at Grace M. E. church last evening under the direction of Mrs. John H. Carney and Miss Margaret Schuck. The chapel was prettily decorated with evergreens. Every seat in the chapel was taken while the following programme was rendered in a faultless manner;

Singing, "Glory be to God Most High," School; Recitation, Tiny Voehl; Recitation, Mabel Garey; Tableau, "Christmas Feast."—Turkey, Benjamin Schuck: Pumpkin, Fred Conroy; Potato, Herbert Simpson; Bean, J. Van Arsdale; Housekeeper, Ada Van Horn; Recitation, Alice DeMott: Tableau, "The Old Woman in the Shoe"—Old Woman, Nellie Valiant; Santa Claus, Charles Hummer; Children, Winnie Barroll, Addie Carney, Sadie Winckler, Grace Giddis, John Carney, John Valiant, Mary Woolston, Laura Woolston, Edward Krausse, Edna Sebring, Fred Krause, May Fairchild, David Fairchild, Eva Higgins, Willie Higgins, Ethel Most, Harry Schuck, Charles Powell, Grace Powell. During the rendition of the above a pleasing solo was given by Addie Carney. The entire affair was delightful and those present appreciated the efforts put forth to please.

A pleasant feature of the evening was the presentation of gifts by Rev. Herbert Randolph. Beside the children receiving candy, dolls, and toys, the older ones were remembered handsomely. He presented on behalf of the teachers an elegant arm chair to Mr. Griffin, secretary of the Sunday-school. Queen Esther Band gave $15 toward the library fund. Mrs. Lutkin's class gave her a handsome framed picture, while she gave each one in her class her picture. A handsome book was given Miss Alice Carroll by her class, and Mr. Valiant presented each teacher with a pretty calendar.

A charming Christmas festival was held last night by the Sunday-school of the Congregational church, and, despite the threatening weather, there was a very large attendance. The programme was as follows:

Organ voluntary, Walter Raynolds; Prayer, Rev. C. L. Goodrich; Recitation, Ethel Lorton; Instrumental trio, Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist, Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist, P. Ludwig Conde, violinist; Recitation, Amy Emmons; Vocal duet, "Santa Claus' Lament," Marion Dwight and Herbert Glaentzer; Whistling solo with banjo accompaniment, Miss M. E. Meredith, Recitation, May Parmele, Violin solo, "Gavotte," Hollander, Miss Nella B. Whiton, accompanied by Miss Margaret Tracy; Christmas tree drill, Master Joseph Robinson, leader, Clarence Steiner, Herbert Glaentzer, Ray Fuller, Carl Steiner, Roland Rockfellow, Vreeland VanAlstyne, Frank Emmons, Arthur Robinson; Vocal solo, "Bobolini's," Miss M. E. Meredith; Recitation, Katharine Dwight; Song, "Rock-a bye," Marion Dwight, Mildred Day, Ethel Weseman, Ethel VanZandt, Marguerite VanZandt, Ethel Lorton, Edith Glaentzer, Edna Scheud, Laura Baker. This song was sung by the little girls while seated on the stage in rocking chairs, with their dolls in their arms. Reading, "Annie Laurie," Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward. Miss Addie Parker Jackson; Whistling solo, Miss M. E. Meredith. Each number on the programme was excellently rendered, and thoroughly enjoyed. Specially pleasing were the charming "Rock-a-bye song," sung by nine sweet-faced and daintily dressed little girls, and the absorbing story of brave, true "Annie Laurie," told so graphically by Miss Addie Parker Jackson.

At the close of the programme, gifts, candy and oranges were distributed among the members of the Sunday-school.

The profuse decorations of evergreens and flowers at the East Third Street Mission presented a cheery sight yesterday afternoon and evening when the Christmas festivities were held. In the afternoon the primary department, under the direction of Miss Alice Woodlan, enjoyed the following programme: Piano solo, Clifford Braider; remarks, L. W. Randolph; recitations, Lucy Hepburn, Robert Runyon, Carl Ulmer, Walter Ulmer, Lucy Scott, May Ford, Josie Emmons, Marion Hurst and Edna Kelly; duett, Misses Freeman; soprano solo, Miss Jomini.

At the conclusion, Santa Claus, in the person of C. E. Hepburn, presented the scholars with candy, fruit, dolls, knives, etc.

A large number of persons, including the older scholars, assembled in the evening and listened to the following excellent programme: Piano solo, Clifford Braider; carol, school; Scripture selection and remarks, Rev. Dr. Yerkes; soprano solo, "Lovers Song," Mrs. B. R. Drake; alto solo, "Good Bye Sweet Day" and "The Small Boy With His Toot," Mrs. Force; reading, Miss Grace Cooley; recitation, C. E. Hepburn; duett, "Kind Words," Mrs. B. R. Drake and Mrs. Force; singing, school.

William N. Runyon then appeared as Santa Claus and amused all by his witty remarks. He also generously bestowed presents on the scholars, giving to each appropriate gifts.

Those in charge were as follows: Superintendent L. W. Randolph, R. E. Pease, Mrs. L. W. Randolph, Miss Mary Thorn, Miss Alice Woodland, Miss Thompson, Miss Martin, R. W. Barnes, Clifford Braider and Irving Brady.

An interesting entertainment for the children of Warren chapel was enjoyed yesterday afternoon. The scholars sang Christmas carols, Frank Whitely gave a pleasing recitation, and a dialogue, "The Christ Child," by members of the school, was a feature. After a song by Frank Whitely, a fan drill was given. The little ones dressed in white and wearing red sashes and caps presented a beautiful picture. A recitation by Alex Galloway closed the programme.

The scholars were then given candy and fruit, the boys receiving games while the girls were presented with dishes, toilet sets, etc. Those who arranged the entertainment were Mrs. A. D. V. Honeyman, Mrs. Yaeger, Miss Stella Place and Miss Mabelle Gillies.

Warren chapel was filled with scholars and friends of the Sunday-school last evening when a short, but interesting, Christmas programme was rendered. The exercises opened with singing by the school, after which a dialogue and fan drill was given by the following girls: Viola Maire, Clara Southasd, Edith Squires, Jennie Stites, Lizzie Davenport, Lena Wickser, Anna Wickser, Maud Sharkey, Edith Demarest, Flossie Demarest, Tillie Coddington, Minnie Bach, Bessie Fraley, May Coddington, Lillie Conover, and Mamie Davenport.

A very pretty selection, "Brightest and Best," was rendered by the Misses Ida Dunham, Lottie Coriell, Essie Smith, Minnie Smith and Maggie Sheppard, and the audience joined in the chorus. All were then provided with refreshments, the large room back of the platform having been arranged to accomodate those present.

Superintendent, L. N. Lovell was in charge, Edward Ryder led the singing, and Miss Stella Place was the pianist. Mrs. A. D. V. Honeyman deserves praise for having such an excellent entertainment, as does also Miss Yaeger for her untiring zeal and efforts in training the children.

Miss Randolph, Miss Maire and Miss Gillies assisted in the evening at the tables, and in the distribution of gifts.

The Christmas entertainment at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last night was a great success, inasmuch as it provided an evening of pleasure to all. Superintendent M. C. Dobbins was in charge, and the following programme was rendered: Reading of Scripture, superintendent; singing, Joy to the World, school; prayer, Rev. P. S. Gibson; stereopticon exhibition, C. E. Hepburn; singing, The Child Jesus, primary department selections, violin and organ, M. C. Dobbins and Wesley Brokaw. This was followed by a visit from Santa Claus, which was successfully impersonated by R. Walker, who pleased the little ones greatly by describing his trip from his winter home. He then presented the children with candy dolls, after which cake and ice cream were served in abundance. All were much pleased with the illustrated pictures taken from various parts of the world. This school is growing rapidly and is one of the most successful in the city.

Christmas with all its attendant festivities invaded the Seventh-Day Baptist church last evening and was duly celebrated by the young people. The progamme consisted of a cantata entitled "The Court of King Winter."

The cantata introduced the following characters: King Winter, Arthur J. Spicer; November, Miss Edith Titsworth; December, Miss Ethel Titsworth; Flowers, Dandelion, Violet and White Clover, the Misses Bessie Dunham, Grace Weeks, and Marie Rogers; Jack Frost, Charles Titsworth; Heralds, Bryant Randolph, Harry Rogers, Wendell Mosher, Charles Naegle, George Babcock and Fred Gorton; Elves, the Misses Edna Rogers, Isadora Randolph, Eva Rog-

WINDOW DECORATIONS ABLAZE.

Small Fire in the Shoe Store of Josephs Brothers Yesterday.

While Wm. Jaffery, a clerk at the shoe store of Josephs Brothers, was lighting the gas in one of the windows last evening about 4:45, the head of the match dropped into some cotton used for decorations, and immediately a flame shot upward to where some lace curtains were hanging. In an instant the whole window was ablaze. T. U. Smith, of Doane's shoe store, saw the fire and sent in an alarm from Box 12. The department responded very quickly, but when they arrived the fire was out. Mr. Josephs exercised good judgment by pulling the inflammable material out of the window where the flames could be extinguished by water without damage. The loss was $72 74.

THE WIND DID BLOW

It Whistled and Whirled Around in a Blustering Manner.

If it had snowed Plainfield would have seen a glorious old blizzard last evening, but, as it was, the violent wind tore around at a lively rate. Branches were torn from the trees, while, at the corner of West Eighth street and Madison avenue, a large tree was blown over, blocking Eighth street.

The many pedestrians returning from the church festivals received their full share of it and hats and umbrellas ran races down many of the principal streets. The wind, not satisfied with plaguing them on their way home, howled about the houses and even substantial brick houses shivered in the cooling blasts.

Grape arbors and the like were wrecked all over the city, while many windows were smashed by the gale.

STRUCK THE BRIDGE.

Another Central Railroad Brakeman Injured at Fanwood.

The Fanwood bridge over the tracks of the New Jersey Central Railroad had another victim last evening and had he been two inches taller it would have been death to the trainman. A west-bound freight train, drawn by engine 85, went under the bridge at about 9:30 and E. T. Walton, of Mauch Chunk, a brakeman, was standing on top of one of the cars when the edge of the bridge struck him just on the top of the head making a large scalp wound. He was taken to the North Avenue station and Dr. J. T. Fritts was called. He sewed up the wound and the injured man was sent home.

Santa Claus at Heavenly Rest.

On Monday evening the scholars of the Heavenly Rest Sunday-school had their Christmas festival in the Parish house on Clinton avenue. The children of the infant class and one or two invited guests of the same age, entertained all present with their songs and speeches.

Santa Claus made his appearance covered with snow on his high peaked cap, and to the accompainment of his bells, made a good speech and sang a good song; and then helped to give out the oranges, candy boxes, books, cards and little calendars, which the mission had provided, with the kind help of outside friends to whom they wish to return many thanks. All had a good time.

Fine Music.

In speaking of the Brown glee club concert, the Nashua Gazette of Nov. 20, 1895 says: "Although there were many other attractions in the city Thanksgiving evening, the Brown glee club sang, played and recited to a large and appreciative audience. The glees were sung very well and were much applauded. The instrumental music was excellent, especially the mandolin selections. Mr. Green, the humorist, made a great hit by his ludicrous recitals." Don't forget that the Glee, Banjo, and Mandolin club gives a concert under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. in Association Hall Saturday evening.

Coming of the King.

There will be special services at the First Baptist church next Sunday. In the morning the choir will sing a new cantata, composed by Dudly Buck, entitled, "The Coming of the King." Miss Marie Draeger, Contralto, of New York, will assist. In the afternoon the Sunday-schools connected with the church will celebrate the Christmas tide with appropriate exercises, including the singing of carols, accompanied by piano, organ and violin, and a recitation by Miss Addie Parker Jackson. Professor Rush Rhees, of Newton, Mass, will address the schools.

THE INCREASED TAX RATE.

A WRITER PROTESTS AGAINST HEAVY MUNICIPAL EXPENSE.

He Claims That Taxes Are Far Greater in Plainfield Than in New York, Philadelphia or Chicago—Argument of Figures

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—I wish to call special attention to the enormous and alarming increase in our taxes for the last quarter of a century. These figures (which will not lie) should arrest the serious and candid attention of every taxpayer in the city of Plainfield.

In 1870 the total valuation of taxable property in the city of Plainfield was a fraction over $3,000,000; the tax rate $1.86 per $100, yielding a fraction under $58,000. Even these figures were considered oppressive at that time, and in '71 or '72 I think, an independent citizens' ticket was formed with John H. Evans as Mayor, and as a result the tax rate was reduced to $1.43 per $100 in 1880, yielding $61,000, (only $3 000 more than that of 1870 on a valuation increased to say $4,300,000, the lowest rates of taxation ever established in Plainfield.

While the valuation continued to increase at the rate of $100 000 a year, the taxes gradually increased again up to 1886, when on a total valuation of about $5,000,000, and yielding over $90,000,000, the tax rate was increased to $1.86 per $100. In '88 and '89 they were still further pushed up to $2.18 per $100 and yielding a total income of about $122,000. The plea was then made that our assessment rate of valuation was entirely too low, and the proper way would be to increase that and thus reduce the ratio of taxes. Let us see the result. Fifty per cent. was added to the value of taxable property in the years 1890 and 1891. The total valuation of property was pushed up to $6,400,000 in '91, while the tax rate was run up to $2.24 per $100, and the total income to say $140,000; this amount was an enormous increase, but what do we have today?

For 1895 the total amount of taxable property is increased to $7,200,000, nearly 2½ times the amount of 1870, and the tax rate pushed up to $2.32, yielding the enormous total of about $167,000 subtracted from the pockets of the citizens of Plainfield. A proportionate advance in a few years would force our property subject to taxation to say $10,000,000, and a proportionate increase on the tax rate would probably reach $3.00 on $100. This is a frightful increase, and as already stated it challenges the serious attention of every citizen and taxpayer of the city of Plainfield.

It will be admitted that the municipal government of the cities of Chicago, Philadelphia and New York are the most corrupt of any cities in the known world. What the rate of taxation is in Chicago I am not able to say. In Philadelphia at the present moment an examination is going on into the notorious corruption that has prevailed in that city. As to New York, we all know what Tammany has done for that ill-fated city, and while I have not the exact figures before me, my impression is that the tax rate of these two cities is less than $2.00 per $100, say $1.85 to $1.90. Without making this communication too long, I may in a future one attempt to show what the effect of this has been, and will be on real estate in Plainfield and its influence on deterring others from coming in and being citizens with us in the future.

Observing Mr. Huff.

While on his way home Christmas eve at about twelve o'clock, Horace Huff, of West Fifth street, noticed a long string of fancy baskets hanging in front of Van Emburgh & Son's store. Although the store was closed he found Mr. Van Emburgh there and told him of the baskets which were immediately put in a place of safety. They were valued at about $10 and would undoubtedly have mysteriously disappeared had not Mr. Huff seen them placed out of the reach of night prowlers.

What We Shall See.

Dr. Lewis' theme tomorrow will be "Some Things Which 1896 Will See." Today the doctor is attending the annual meeting of the American Church History Society, which is held in New York.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A HORSE IN COURT.

Not the Steed Himself, But His Rightful Owner Was There Declared.

The case of David Anguerbauer against W. L. Hetfield in execution to try the right of property, which came up in Justice Newcorn's court yesterday afternoon, was the result of another case wherein W. L. Hetfield sued J. H. Blimm, Jr., in Justice Mosher's court for the sale of a horse. At that time judgement was given W. L. Hetfield, and an execution was at once issued for David Anguerbauer, as he claimed that the horse belonged to him, having purchased it June 14, 1895, prior to the suit. Justice Newcorn granted his application for a venure to try the right of property, and the case came up yesterday before the following jury: C. M. Fine, Henry Drake, H. Hatch, Isaac Runyon, A. P. Miller and A. C. Rogers.

Lawyer H. C. Runyon appeared for the complainant and W. L. Hetfield for himself. For the former, J. H. Blimm, Jr., as witness, was sworn and testified to his part of the deal, while Anguerbauer offered i evidence a bill of sale. On the other side J. E. Mosher and W. R. Mattox were sworn as witnesses. W. L. Hetfield based his claim on the admission of Mr. Blimm to sell the horse for the grocery bill and his admitting he owned the animal. The case went to the jury and after two hours deliberation they returned with the verdict that the horse belonged to David Anguerbauer.

Quashed the Writ.

The attachment case of Hand against Heroy was tried before Justice Newcorn yesterday afternoon and the defendant, through his counsel, John Powers, filed an affadavit applying to the Court to quash the writ on the ground that the property did not belong to the defendant. The Justice proceeded to try the facts in relation to the motion and after hearing the testimony granted the motion to quash the writ. Immediately afterward H. Hand had a writ of attachment issued against R. Kiley, a non-resident debtor.

Election in Jerusalem Chapter.

Jerusalem Chapter, No. 24, R. A. M., met last evening and elected the following officers for the ensuing year: H. P., C. M. Ulrich; E. K., W. J. Ford; E. S., D. C. Adams; treasurer, Henry Liefke; secretary, B. F. Coriell; C. of H., C. C. Howard; P. S., Walter H. Freeman; R. A. C., Edward Nelson; trustees, W. E. Alpaugh, Alex. Titsworth and H. S. Mason; representatives to Masonic Hall Association, for three years, W. H. Sebring, for one year, F. A. Dunham. The officers will be installed on Jan. 9th.

Charged With Stealing Wood.

On complaint of Daniel Schenck, Justice Newcorn issued a warrant to day for the arrest of H. M. Staats, charging him with carting wood from his place Monday, Dec. 23d, which was the property of Irwin Smalley. Staats was arrested by Chief Grant. He pleaded not guilty and asked for a hearing. The case was set down for Monday afternoon, December 30th, at 2:30, and he was released on his own recognizance.

Not a Tar Roof.

Work will be continued on the gravel roof for the Jackson building on Monday. Chief Doane, of the fire department, ordered work to be discontinued several days ago, but after visiting New York and Brooklyn, and consulting with the authorities there, has decided that it is perfectly safe.

A Quarrel Continued.

Daniel Galbraith had a warrant issued this morning by Justice Newcorn for the arrest of William Burden, colored, charging him with assault and battery. Both of the above were fined in the city court yesterday for fighting, as was so mentioned in the columns of The Daily Press.

Chiefs to be Elected.

Chiefs will be elected at the meeting of Miantonomoh Tribe, No. 118, I. O. R. M., this evening. There will also be an adoption of three candidates, after which there will be a literary and musical programme and a collation.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

ADRIFT TWO MONTHS

The Strathnevis Towed Into Port Townsend.

All Hope of Reaching Land Abandoned Several Times—Only Saved from Going on the Rocks by a Sudden Veering of the Wind—Fierce Gales Encountered.

Port Townsend, Wash., Dec. 27.—The Northern Pacific steamship Strathnevis is now in this harbor looking externally little the worse for wear as a result of her two months' battle with the winds and waves of the Pacific ocean, but the story told by her commander, Capt. James Pattie, sounds more like a romance than a reality. The Strathnevis was disabled on the morning of Oct. 20, when the shaft broke and the big steamer was at once helpless. Northerly gales were blowing at the time and the limited amount of canvas aboard was quickly spread, the vessel then heading for south and west. Slow progress was made, however, and in two days' sailing but 115 miles was covered. Whenever the breeze stiffened up advantage of it was taken and the vessel was steered in an easterly direction, the captain heading for the American coast. It was not until Nov. 19 that a vessel was sighted, that being the John Cambles, already reported. After she had passed on there was a weary time of it riding billows till Wednesday morning, Dec. 18, when the Canadian-Australian liner Miowera hove in sight on her westward trip and approached the disabled vessel, giving her a line with little difficulty. The steamer headed for Cape Flattery.

Gave Up All Hope.

After twelve hours the hawser parted and on account of the gale and heavy seas running at the time, it was thirty-six hours before another hawser was made fast. This one lasted just thirty minutes before it too gave way. But within a short time two hawsers were connected with the steamer, and once more they headed for the cape. At 1 o'clock last Monday morning when just fifteen miles off Cape Flattery the Miowera's two hawsers parted, and in the terrible sea that was running it seemed that it would be impossible to again get hold of the disabled steamer and accordingly it was arranged that the Miowera was to stand by and save life when the Strathnevis went ashore, as it seemed certain she would do in a very short time.

Saved by Wind Shifting.

When the squall had passed at 4 o'clock in the morning the Miowera was nowhere to be seen, and there was great consternation on board the Strathnevis. The captain did not think so serious of the disappearance of the other vessel because Captain Scott had told him that his steamer would be able to tow him only three days, owing to his limited coal supply. By noon on Monday the Strathnevis was thirty miles off Destruction island, making slowly but surely for the rocky shore, and it seemed to all on board the steamer that their doom was sealed. As they approached nearer the shore with the wind behind them, all hands began making final preparations for the expected dashing to pieces of the steamer upon the rocks, but when within seven miles of the island the wind shifted to the north, and, to the delight of all, the anchor, which was large, held fast. The chain soon parted, however, and the second and last anchor on board was sent down with what proved better success, for it held fast.

Reached Harbor Christmas Night.

About 9 o'clock Tuesday morning Purser McDonald and Third Officer Baynes and three Japanese sailors were sent off to the island in a boat with the hope that they might reach a telegraph station and wire for assistance. The men are still on the island. About noon the same day the collier Mineola, Capt. Pillsbury, hove in sight and bore down on the Strathnevis, soon getting a hawser on board and heading for land. When the Strathnevis arrived here Christmas evening the wires were down and there seemed no way of sending the news out. Capt. J. S. Libby, manager of the Puget Sound Tugboat company, volunteered to send the United Press dispatch to Seattle by the tug Tyee, and by this means the news was given to the world twelve hours earlier than it could otherwise have been. There are thirty-seven members of the crew of the Strathnevis and she has 168 Chinese and Japanese passengers on board. Among the Chinese are several wealthy merchants who had started home to purchase Christmas goods for the Pacific coast trade. There are also five Japanese Yale college students on board who started home to spend Christmas. Capt. Pattie says that to the Chinese merchants and Japanese students on board he is indebted for the general discipline and order on the steamer, one merchant in particular taking charge of and exercising wonderful control over all his fellow countrymen.

Alliance Against the United States.

London, Dec. 27.—The Daily News to-day says that as a result of Lord Salisbury's efforts, Great Britain, Holland, France and Spain will, it is believed, form a quadruple alliance to protect their American possessions against the United States.

Six Families Rendered Homeless.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Dec. 27.—By the fire at Rockton Wednesday night, which destroyed a double dwelling owned by William Hughes, six families were rendered homeless.

REBELS NEARING HAVANA.

Spaniards, Under Campos, Retreat After a Defeat with Slight Loss.

Key West, Fla., Dec. 27.—Advices were received from Cuba last night that a battle occurred Christmas afternoon between the vanguards of the insurgent and Spanish armies and that the Spaniards were repulsed. Col. Prat, who commanded the Spanish vanguard was killed. Martinez Campos was present and directed the retreat of the Spaniards to Joveklonos. Campos' forces are now entrenched at that place, expecting to be attacked by Gomez's main army. Campos has armed all the civilians in Jovellanos and is forcing them to do military duty. Advices received by the Cuban leaders via Olivette confirm the report of the entrance of El Roque by Gomez. The Spanish regiment stationed at El Roque surrendered without firing a shot. All of them were paroled except twelve, who were charged with having poisoned the water in the reservoir of the town. They were convicted and shot. After all the arms, provisions, etc., found in the town were taken the insurgents set fire to it and then left, going in the direction of Guanitana and Javellanos. They also destroyed all the sugar plantations near San Vicente and La Antonia. The vanguard of Gomez's forces under the command of Lacre has entered the town of Quintana, between Matanzas and Colon, and destroyed by fire the largest sugar plantation on the island. Columns of smoke could be plainly seen from Jovellanos. All telegraph communication between Las Villas district and Havana have been destroyed by the insurgents, and no trains have passed over the road since Saturday last.

Predicts Speedy Spanish Victory.

Santiago de Cuba, Dec. 20, via Tampa, Dec. 27.—Gen. Paonda on assuming command of of this, the eastern military department of Cuba, made an address to the inhabitants in which he expressed his belief that he war can be of short duration. In six months at the most he believes that Spain's efforts for peace will be crowned with success.

Are the Rebels in a Trap?

New York, Dec. 27.—The reports from Havana that the insurgents have fallen in a trap and that they will not only not be able to eventually enter Havana but that retreat can be easily cut off is scoffed at by the patriots' friends in this city.

LAST NIGHT'S STORM.

Particularly Severe in New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—The wind and rain storm last night, which the weather bureau says extended from Nashville, Tenn., to Buffalo, was particulary severe in Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York, doing great damage to telegraph wires. In this city part of the roof of the Mariner's Bethel church at Front street was blown off and a panic resulted among the 600 merry participants in a Christmas tree festival who were present. Several women and children were trampled under foot, but no one was seriously injured. A number of houses were also unroofed in different parts of this city.

BATTLE OF TRENTON.

Its Anniversary Enthusiastically Celebrated Last Night.

Trenton, Dec. 27.—There was an enthusiastic celebration here last night of the anniversary of the battle of Trenton. It was held under the auspices of camp 6 of the Patriotic Order, Sons of America. Camp 1 of Lambertville, camp 3 of Phillipsburg and camp 23 of Palmyra joined camp 6 in the exercises. They paraded through the principal thoroughfares of the city and when they reached the Trenton battle monument the gun squad of company A, Seventh regiment, N. G., N. J., fired a salute of forty-six guns and there was a brilliant display of fireworks. After the parade there was a banquet at Masonic hall to which 1,000 persons were invited.

CREW SAVED WITH DIFFICULTY

Schooner Trigg on the Rocks in a Dangerous Position.

Whitehead, N. S., Dec. 27.—The schooner George P. Trigg, Capt. Robertson, bound from Charlottetown to Halifax laden with oats, sprang a leak during a northwest gale and the captain decided to run to this port. When near Three Top island they found five feet of water in the hold; the vessel became unmanageble and went ashore on the island, where she now lies in a dangerous position. The crew were saved with great difficulty by the lighthouse keeper.

Our Insurance Companies Abroad.

Berlin, Dec. 27.—Poultney Bigelow, who arrived here on Monday charged with business referring to the prohibition of American insurance companies from doing business in Germany, has handed the government a detailed statement of the American position. Mr. Bigelow is acting simply as the representative of the insurance companies in the matter.

Killed by a Live Wire.

Amsterdam, N. Y., Dec. 27.—Livingston M. Combes, aged 28 years, employed by an electric light company in this city, was instantly killed last evening while at work on a light on Bridge street. The only mark on the body wa a scar on the chin. An effort was made to resuscitate the man, but it was without avail.

Armenians Flee Before the Turkish Forces.

Many Now Wandering in the Hills in Fear of Their Lives—Tales of Recent Massacres—Men, Women and Children Robbed of Their Homes and Even Clothing.

London, Dec. 27.—The correspondent in Constantinople of the United Press under date of last night says that it is reported there that Zeitoun which was in the possession of Armenians, has fallen before the attacks of the Turkish troops and that many of those who were holding the place against the forces of the sultan have fled to the hills in fear of their lives.

RAVAGES OF THE TURKS.

Recent Massacres Described by Eye-Witnesses.

Constantinople, Dec. 27.—The following has been received by the Constantinople correspondent of the United Press under date of Hadjin, Nov. 23: "On Saturday, Nov. 16, Shar, a village of about 800 Christians, fifty miles from Hadjin, was attacked by bands of Circassians and Turks from Sivas and Aleppo districts. The attacking party numbered 2,000. The sacking of the village occupied two days. The people, without food supplies or bedding, many of them stripped of nearly all their clothes, fled with their little ones, their aged and infirm, toward Hadjin. They were two days and two nights on the road in a snowstorm, with scarcely any food, and had no shelter. Six children were born on the way, of whom three died.

No Relief at Hands of Officials.

"On arriving at Hadjin they proceeded to the kaimakam's residence, to set their case before him, but they were roughly driven away, and some of them were beaten by the soldiers. There are at the present time in Hadjin at least 2,000 persons who have fled from the neighboring villages. The new kaimakam arrived yesterday, and it is to be hoped that he will execute judgment and justice better than did his predecessor."

The Massacre at Aintab.

The following description of the massacre at Aintab is furnished by an eyewitness of the occurrence, under date of Nov. 23: "All the west and south part of the city seemed to be in an uproar, crowds of people rushing in every direction. From our position we could see the narrow streets densely crowded with intensely excited people, now and then a rush made upon some house or gate; the rally of defenders on the roofs, among whom women were of the foremost, using stones, clubs and sometimes guns and pistols, as best they could. Sometimes the attack was beaten off and the assailants withdrew to organize a new assault. Sometimes a gate or wall was broken down and then the noise of conflict subsided and the work of massacre and plunder begun. Later on long lines of people could be seen laden with plunder, and later still the flames and smoke arose from burning houses.

Indescribable Roar of the Mob.

"What we heard was the indescribable roar of the mob, pierced by the sharp reports of pistols and guns, with now and then shrieks of agony and fear, and over all, and most horrible of all the loud shrill 'zullghat,' very like the cry of our northern loons, prolonged and sharpened, raised by the Turkish women crowded on the roofs and cheering on their men to the attack. The massacre and pillage began in the markets and in those parts of the city where Christian houses surrounded by Moslem neighbors offered easy points of attack. These places having been looted, the mob moved on towards what are known as the Christian quarters. Here at last the assailants were arrested and beaten off.

Beaten Off by Christians.

"Under such general conditions the storm of mob violence raged on without much abatement until the middle of the afternoon, when the tumult gradually subsided, and night at last brought quiet except in the vicinity of burning houses, where the uproar went on until midnight. Very early on the morning of the 17th crowds of villagers were seen hurrying toward the city from every direction, evidently eager to share the plunder of another day of riot. Then for an hour chaos was let loose again, and the horrors of the previous day were repeated, only that the Christians were prepared, and, being in a strong position, were generally able to beat off their assailants. At one point of the line of defense were a few Moslem houses, and the men bravely and heartily joined in the defense with their neighbors. The gallantry of this act was marred, however, by the demand which they made the next day for a large sum of money for this service. These men actually demanded and received about $5 apiece for this neighborly service.

THE
New York Times.

THE TIMES is a newspaper for intelligent men and women who want to read all the news of the world every day. The paper has distinguishing merits of its own. It is neither sensational nor dull. It is not sour-tempered. It is not frivolous or visionary. It sees plenty of good in the world an tells about it. It tells of the bad when it must, but not unwholesomely. It prints with fullness the record o human endeavor in many fields outside of business, politics and war—in literature, religion, science, art, sports, and household matters. No paper in the country prints so many book reviews and so much book news. No paper has so complete a financial page—a daily manual for investors and officers of financial institutions. Its market reports—wool, cotton, breadstuffs, farm products, etc.—are the best in the country.

The Democracy of THE TIMES is of the old-fashioned sort—as old as Thomas Jefferson; majority rule, no bossism, no machine tyranny, the divorce of politics from private money-making, a sound currency, industria emancipation, and every-day honesty. To promote the advance of the Democratic Party along these lines it labors with heart and conscience and all its might.

PHELPS AND LINCOLN

Invited To Serve as Venezuelan Commissioners.

The Third Member, Who Is Likely To Be One of the U. S. Supreme Court Associate Justices, Not To Be Chosen Until After the Other Two Have Accepted.

Washington, Dec. 27.—It is semi-officially reported that President Cleveland has asked Edward J. Phelps of Vermont, ex-minister to England, and Robert T. Lincoln of Illinois, also an ex-minister to the court of St. James, to serve on the Venezuela commission. The third place, it is rumored, will not be tendered to any one until Mr. Phelps and Mr. Lincoln have accepted. The full commission, it is expected, will be announced next Monday. The third member is likely to be one of the associate justices of the United States supreme court, probably either Justice Brewer or Justice Brown. The president thinks that the fact of one of the members of the supreme court temporarily leaving the bench to undertake this delicate task would add dignity to the commission. The appointment of either of these justices, together with that of Mr. Lincoln, would give the majority of the commission to the republicans. This fact would, it is stated, relieved the president from any suspicion that he was working for the aggrandizement of his own party in creating an international issue.

J. C. SMITH RETURNS.

The Buffalo Contractor Denies That He Eloped with Mrs. Tennant.

Buffalo, Dec. 27.—J. C. Smith, a well known contractor of this city, returned here last night after an absence of several weeks. A few months ago he was engaged on a municipal contract in Binghamton, N. Y., but was obliged to give it up. Shortly after leaving the city it was reported in the newspapers that he had eloped with Mrs. H. D. Tennant, wife of the hotel keeper with whom he had been stopping. In an interview with a reporter Mr. Smith emphatically denied the story that he went away with Mrs. Tennant. "I have not seen her since I came away from there," he said. "It is true that I gave up the city contract, but I did it in a regular and legitimate way. I notified my bondsmen and withdrew in a manner satisfactory to everybody concerned."

GIVEN UP FOR LOST.

Schooner J. H. Carey Has Probably Gone Down with All on Board.

Gloucester, Mass., Dec. 27.—The schooner J. H. Carey, owned by Foster & Oakes of this city, sailed from here Aug. 20 on a codfishing trip to Grand bank, and as she has not been heard from for a long time it is though she was lost in the heavy storms that prevailed in the early fall. The rest of the fleet arrived more than a month ago and this is the only absent one. All hope of her crew ever returning again is considered doubtful. She carried a crew of eleven when she sailed from here, but it is feared her captain shipped more men in the provinces.

BIG SNOW STORM IN GERMANY.

Streets Impassable and Traffic Much Impeded in Berlin.

Berlin Dec. 27.—A terrific snow storm prevailed in Berlin all day yesterday. The streets are rendered impassable because of their slippery condition, and traffic is necessarily greatly impeded, and in many cases wholly suspended. Friedrichstrasse yesterday afternoon was strewn with fallen men and horses, and the passengers in cars drawn by horses alighted and assisted the drivers. Several persons were injured by falling. The storm was predicted by Prof. Rudolph Falb, the celebrated German meteorologist.

PRIZE CHINESE SCHOONER LOST

Her Deck Officers and Sixty Men Probably Perished.

Yokohama, Dec., 27.—The formidable cruiser Kyan-Ping, one of the warships captured from China by the Japanese during the recent war, was wrecked on the Pescadore islands last Saturday. Nearly all her deck officers and sixty men are missing and were probably lost.

Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

Ashland, Wis., Dec. 27.—By the bursting of the boiler in the sawmill of the Sutherland Lumber company yesterday three men lost their lives. Two of them, Bill and Jack Noonin, cousins of Charkeek, the noted Cornish wrestler, were found dead in the boiler room four feet from the door, while the third was so badly burned that he died in agony.

Output of Flour at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Dec. 27.—The Northwestern Miller gives the output of flour at Minneapolis for this week as about 230,000 barrels. Observance of Christmas and low water power being in the main responsible for the drop.

Storm on the Jersey Coast.

New York, Dec. 27.—The marine observers at Sandy Hook reported this morning that it was blowing a gale on the New Jersey coast. It was impossible to board vessels coming into Quarantine last night.

Russian Bark Wrecked.

Dublin, Dec. 27.—The Russian bark Palme, Capt. Eriksen, from Liverpool Dec. 18, for Mobile, Ala., has been wrecked in Dublin bay. All on board were saved.

GOULD TAX CONTEST.

Value of the Estate Fixed by the Appraiser at $73,615,473 08.

New York, Dec. 27.—David McClure, who was appointed appraiser in the matter of the taxation of the estate of Jay Gould, has filed another report. The first was filed in January last, and this was referred back to him to take further proof and report back to the surrogate what amount the executors of the estate would be legally entitled to as their commissions before the amount of the tax could be actually determined. Mr. McClure finds that the total amount of the property taxable is $73,615,473.08; but, as the four executors of the will, George J., Edwin, Helen and Howard Gould, each received $10,000 a year as executors and trustees under the will, Mr. McClure holds that this amount, which is figured up as amounting to more than $600,000, is to be deducted from the principal, and is thus exempt from taxation. According to the report the Gould family are taxed $574,000, of which amount they paid in $300,000 at the time of the probate of the will, on which they received a rebate of 5 per cent. It is expected that an appeal will be made to the surrogate by the executors, who assert that the valuation of the securities is too high. The amount involved amounts now to about $100,000. It is said that the state contends that the expenses and commissions should not be deducted from the principal, as held by the referee, and be thus exempted from taxation, and that, both sides being dissatisfied, the case will go to the court of appeals.

ABYSSINIANS ADVANCING.

Italian Forces, 10,000 Strong, Will Defend Adigrat Against 60,000.

Rome, Dec. 27.—A dispatch from Massowah, the capital of the Italian colony of Erythrea, states that the Abyssinians began to advance yesterday, but their objective point is not known to the Italians. The Abyssinian force is said to number 60,000 men, including those who serve directly under King Menelik. Gen. Baratieri, the commander of the Italian forces, will defend Adigrat against the enemy. He has a force of 10,000 men. It is generally reported that the dervishes are approaching Atbara, Nubia, some 150 miles northwest of the Tigre province.

HER 109TH BIRTHDAY.

Mrs. King Was Born on Dec. 25, 1787, and Is Still Spry and Active.

Greensburg, Ind., Dec. 27.—Mrs. Margaret King celebrated her 109th birthday anniversary Wednesday by giving a great dinner to her descendants. Mrs. King was born at White Oak, O., on Christmas day, 1787. Almost forty years of her life were spent in farm toil with her husband on the farm. Although weak from old age, she is in good health. She goes about the premises with ease and frequently does light household work. She has not worn glasses for twenty years.

CRONIN TAKEN TO PRISON.

Father Fitzgerald Reported To Be Unable To Employ Counsel.

Rochester, N. Y., Dec. 27.—John Cronin, convicted of arson and sentenced to serve seven years, was taken to Auburn yesterday. Father Fitzgerald shook hands and bid him goodby at the depot. It is said that Mr. Raines has not been retained to defend Father Fitzgerald, indicted for the same offense. The accused priest is said to be embarrassed financially and unable to bear the further expense of counsel. His case will be called in about a week.

No Pardon for ex-Alderman Ham.

Boston, Dec. 27.—At the executive council meeting yesterday afternoon the pardon committee reported adversely on the petition for pardon and release filed by ex-alderman W. W. Ham of Haverhill who claimed that he was suffering from consumption, and confinement aggravated the disease. Ham is one of the aldermen convicted of boodling in Haverhill last spring.

Yale-Princeton Team Won.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 27.—The Yale-Princeton team won the football game here yesterday afternoon. Score: Yale-Princeton, 36; Memphis A. C., 0.

TARIFF BILL PASSED

House Will Approve Bond Measure To-day.

Will Then Take a Recess Over New Year's Day, as the Senate Will Not Probably Rush Consideration of the Relief Measures—Democrats Fought for Delay.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The house today after passing the bond bill will take a recess untill after New Year's day, as it is understood that the senate will simply refer the relief measures to the finance committee. The vote last evening on the bill reported by Mr. Dingley, rep., Me., from the committee on ways and means "To temporarily increase revenues to meet the expenses of the government and to provide against a deficiency" was 205 ayes and 81 nays. The bill was presented to the house immediately after the reading of the journal, and then Mr. Henderson, rep., Iowa, reported a resolution from the committee on rules, providing for debate on the bill until 5 o'clock, a vot to be then taken on its passage. In anticipation of this programme the galleries were crowded to the doors, even the diplomatic gallery being occupied by a representation of the official foreign countries residing in Washington. On the floor were over 300 members of the house and interspersed among them several senators who were interested in the proceedings.

Fought for Delay.

The rule was antagonized by Messrs. Crisp, McMillin, and Turner of Georgia on the ground that it afforded no opportunity for amendment and no sufficient time for debate; and was advocated by Messrs. Dalzell and Henderson, who argued that the situation admitted of no delay. It was finally passed—yeas, 213; nays, 85. Several republicans were recorded as voting against its passage. When this had been disposed of there remained three and one-half hours for the consideration of the bill itself. The debate was participated in for the republicans by Messrs. Dingley, Dalzell, Hopkins, Ill., Grosvenor, O.; Arnold, Pa.; Knox, Mass.; and Dolliver, Ia., in support of the bill; and by Messrs. Crisp, Wheeler, Ala.; McMillin, Tenn.; Dockery, Mo., and Turner, Ga., democrats, and Bell, pop., Col., against the bill. The opposition was based upon the theory that the remedy proposed—an increase of revenue—was not what was needed; that there was money enough in the treasury to meet all claims for two or three years to come, even if the present rate of deficit was maintained. It was also contended that the bill was a general revision of the tariff.

Duty in the Hour of Peril.

Republicans insisted that more revenue was the key of the situation and denied that the bill was in any sense a general tariff measure. It did not represent republican ideas on that subject at all; was intended only as a temporary revenue measure to meet a pressing exigency, and its passage was advocated on the high ground of patriotic duty in the hour of the republic's peril. That measure having been disposed of a joint resolution was passed, offered by Mr. Cannon, rep., Utah, providing for the transfer of territoral property to the new state.

OPPOSE HASTY ACTION.

Conference of Republican Representatives on the Bond Bill.

Washington, Dec. 27.—The conference of republican representatives who disapprove of the bond bill prepared by the ways and means committee, held last night, was well attended. While the majority of those present were western men, there was also a fair sprinkling of eastern republicans. The speeches made by the members showed a unanimous sentiment in opposition to the retirement of the greenbacks. They indicated a belief that the bill in question permits this, and that the amendment which Mr. Hopkins of Illinois will try to secure in the ways and means committee to-day will not successfully prevent it. The speeches further showed that it was not advisable for the United States to issue bonds in time of peace and that under no consideration should the greenbacks be retired, at least in the manner proposed. After a long debate it was decided that the committee on rules should be requested to bring in a resolution providing a reasonable time for the discussion of the bond bill and for the offering of amendments. It was thought that two days was the shortest time in which this could be done, while three days would be still more acceptable.

Philadelphia's Loan Closed Out.

Philadelphia, Dec. 27.—The new $1,000,000 loan at 3½ per cent. was closed out by the city treasurer, four local trust companies agreeing to take the balance of $834,600. Several New York capitalists were after a share of the loan, but were informed that they were too late.

Cholera in Russia.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 27.—For the week ending Dec. 21 there were ninety-seven cases of cholera and thirty-six deaths from the disease here, and for the week ending Dec. 7 there were seventy-four cases and forty deaths in the province of Volhynia.

Transfer of Insane Patients.

Albany, Dec. 27.—The state lunacy commission transferred yesterday 125 patients in charge of twenty attendants from the Willard to the Buffalo State hospital. The party consisted of twenty-five men and 100 women.

Oh, winter, how belated you are.

When will Congress get through tinkering with the tariff?

It seems as though every Government ill is dosed with a new tariff schedule.

The Green brook pollution problem seems to be working itself out to a successful and satisfactory end.

Venezuela has 2,131,998 population and eight States. Fifteen per cent. of the population are pure blooded Indians.

The cider joints close at sundown today, and open twenty-four hours later to become a barnacle to the fair name of Plainfield.

The statements about the tax rate made in the letter published in today's Press, will arrest the attention of every taxpayer.

Assemblyman Reed is rather in favor of having Plainfield annexed to Somerset county and consolidated with the borough. We would welcome the addition to our county.—Unionist-Gazette.

Newark is grappling with the trolley freight question. A number of manufacturers of that city have petitioned the authorities to grant franchises to the street railway companies to do freight hauling. They claim that the granting of such a right to the companies would greatly increase the facilities of manufacturers in shipping and receiving freight, from the fact that switches could be run direct to their buildings from the trolley roads, and would result in increased production and consequent benefit to the city at large.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

ers, Ethel Morris, Nettie Stillman, Nellie Williams, Florence Scriven, and Phillip Mosher and Boardman Mosher; Winds, the Misses Grace Van Sickle, Kizzie Naegle, Bertha Mitchel and Edna Randolph; Dame Nature, Miss Louise Lewis; Christmas Day, Miss Merdie Randolph.

The cantata opened by Dame Nature saying good bye to November and welcoming December. Then followed recitations and songs, while King Winter received his visitors one by one until they were all gathered, and the Heralds brought in large packages of presents which were distributed among the primary department.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Miss Grace Lewis, chairman, Mrs. H. M. Maxson, Mrs. J. P. Mosher, Mrs. George Stillman and Miss Ernestine Smith. The refreshment committee was composed of Mrs. Charles Dunham, chairman, Mrs. Will Rogers, Mrs. Will Mosher and Mrs. Amanda Maxson. The decorating was in charge of the following committee, Miss Louise Lewis, chairman, and Miss Mineola Tomlinson.

A large star of holly was suspended over the platform, while holly was tastefully bunched over the doors and windows and along the edge of the gallery.

Ice cream, candy, cake, fruits, nuts and other delicacies were arranged on tables and everybody was invited to help himself or herself, as the case might be.

The Christmas day services at the Church of the Redeemer called out a very large congregation, who listened attentively to a powerful sermon by Dr. Johnstone on the text: "Unto us a Child is Given; Unto us a Son is Born." At the early celebration and the later one, about one hundred persons partook of the Holy Communion. After the services Dr. Johnstone was presented with a valuable gold watch, the gift of his parishioners. The vestry have been compelled to utilize the annext to the church, and have placed therein a number of additional pews, to accommodate the rapidly increasing congregation.

Christmas was celebrated in Vincent chapel last evening by the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church in a very pleasing manner. The programme consisted of an appropriate cantata entitled "Santa Claus and the Fairies." The characters and those who took them were as follows:

Fairies, the Misses Carrie Meyer, Grace Webster, Mabel Smith, Nettie Bauersachs, Edna Moore, Lucy Jennings, Lucy Goeller, Florence McDonald, Martha Codington, Cora Harris, Mabel Vail and Mabel Jenkins; Busy Bees, the Misses Carrie Mulford, Mamie Divine, Nellie Apgar, Grace Ulrich and Lillie Sutton; Miss Margaret, their teacher, Miss Eva Jenkins; Miss Jack Frost, Miss Edna Harris; Santa Claus, Robert Davis; newsboys, Henry Hand, Irving Harned and Fred Lynn; waifs, Miss Louise Norrie and Harry Vail; little children, the Misses Edna Kennedy and Gertie Geyer.

The Busy Bees were a Sunday-school class and were packing a box for the poor and needy, while at the other end of the stage Santa Claus, Miss Jack Frost and the fairies prepared presents for them. After many pretty songs, solos and choruses, in which the newsboys, waifs and little children were introduced, they all finally gathered around Santa Claus and received their presents. Miss Raybert gave a pleasing recitation. Then boxes of candy and gifts were distributed among the members of the Sunday-school.

There was a large attendance of parents and friends who greatly enjoyed the delightful entertainment. The committee in charge consisted of James R Joy, chairman, J. McNaughton, N. Y. Hull, John Lewis, George R. Cornwell, Miss Ida Angleman, Miss Sarah Douglass, Miss Elsie Horne, Miss Etta Raybert, Miss Laura Mulford and Mrs. N. Y. Hull. The cantata was arranged by the following committee: Mrs. N. Y. Hull, chairman, Miss Etta Raybert, and Miss Gertrude Sharp. The decorations were looked after by J. McNaughton, John Lewis, Miss Angleman, Miss Douglass and Miss Mulford. The primary department will have their Christmas entertainment and spread this afternoon. It will be in charge of Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. J. R. Joy, Mrs. S. W. Clarke, Miss Bertha Whitney and the Misses Edna and Maud French.

At Trinity Reformed church there was a large attendance and a pleasant evening was spent in a visit and description of a tour through the principal cities and lakes of Ireland, by use of the stereopticon. The views were very successfully thrown on a large canvas by Messrs. J. Hervey Doane and Harry H. Coward, members of the Camera Club. Rev. T. Logan Murphy was present and kindly read a description of the pictures, and caused considerable amusement by relating bits of clever Irish wit and repartee. At the conclusion of the lecture the Sunday-school retired to the lecture room, where every scholar and teacher was presented with a box of candy.

The primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school held their exercises yesterday afternoon, and the little tots were enjoyably entertained by the following programme; Lord's Prayer; Welcome song School; Recitation, Daisy, Bessie Randall; Piano solo, Violet Beerbower; Song, Miss Kreitling, Miss Zeisz; Recitation, Santa's Cake, Annie Randall; Song, Rock a Bye Baby, by seven little girls; Recitation, Dora Wilson; Song, Bessie Randall, Elmer Bohan.

The chapel of the Crescent Avenue church was a place of enjoyment last evening, when the Christmas festivities were held. W. D. Murray, superintendent of the Sunday-school, introduced Mr. Durand, of New York, who made an excellent entertainer for the evening. He played on numerous instruments, told funny stories, gave various imitations, and gave a fine exhibition of ventriloquism. At the close of the entertainment the audience proceeded to the room below where refreshments were served.

The Christmas festival of the Bethel Mission Sunday-school was held in the chapel on East Fifth corner of Washington streets last evening, and a very pleasant time was spent.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Paul Ackerly, of Washington, D. C., was in town yesterday.

Mrs. Moore, of South Second street, is confined to the house by illness.

Ernest Perrine, of Orange, is the guest of relatives on East Second street.

Dr. Gedney has been taken from the hospital to his home on Orchard place.

Mrs. TenEyck, of North Branch, is a guest of Mrs. Holmes, of Grandview avenue.

Miss Mary VanEps, of Craig place, has returned from a visit in Hunterdon county.

Mrs. Vosseller, of 319 East Second street, has returned from a visit at Somerville.

The Misses Trimmer, of Liberty Corner, were guests of Plainfield relatives on Wednesday.

Miss Elsie Smith, of Westervelt avenue, has returned from a few days visit at Glen Cove, L. I.

H. P. Talmage and family, of Belvidere avenue, leave this week for New York to spend the winter.

Lawyer Charles A. Reed and family, of Myrtle avenue, went to Somerville for their Christmas holiday.

Councilman V. L. Frazee, of West Front street, is much improved from a recent severe attack of gout.

Wretched and Insane.

A man, dressed in the most wretched manner and with a wild vacant look in his eyes, was found on the Boulevard by the police last evening. Inquiries regarding his name and home elicited no satisfactory reply and the man looked helplessly around. The officers took him to jail where he is now lodged and will soon be examined by some physician regarding his sanity.

A Victim of Drink.

A badly demoralized individual was found drunk on the Boulevard last evening and was carried to jail. This morning he was arraigned before Judge Coddington in the City court where he gave his name as J. Wild. Sentence was suspended.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. The game between a five man team from the Crescent Wheelmen and a similar team from the Y. M. C. A., which was to have been held last evening has been postponed indefinitely.

The Crescent bowlers visited the Plainfield Catholic Club on the latters alleys last night and rolled the third and last game in the series. Each team had previously won a game and no one doubted but that the score would be a close one. However, the fact that Christmas had just been celebrated did not tend to help the Cresmuch, while the Catholic Club team was in the best of form for bowling. One of the latter remarked to a Daily Press reporter that it was not a question as to who would win, but to see how many pins they could beat them, which proved to be 157. The Catholic Club now claim the championship of Plainfield. Below will be found the score in full:

CYCLING COMMENT.

A. H. Barnett was in town yesterday afternoon.

The National Assembly of the L. A. W. is to he held at Baltimore.

The Eldridge Bicycle Company have a little Christmos tree in their window decorated with various bicycle sundries.

F. L. C. Martin will remain at his new store in Newark until about the middle of January to get the enterprise started. He will then spend every other day in each place.

The Manhattan Bicycle Club, of New York, which gave its race meet on the Crescent Oval last summer, will hold a novel run. The members will meet at the clubhouse on New Year's Eve at 11:30 and will see the old year out and the new year in on their wheels.

BASKET BALL.

A Basket Ball League has just been formed by five of the principal associations of Massachusetts.

Physical Instructor McPhie, of the Y. M. C. A., has received a challenge from the New Brunswick Y. M. C. A. for a bowling match between five-men teams.

An exciting game of basket ball was played at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Christmas night between the Commuters and the first team. The latter won by a score of 9 to 3.

The Too Too Tum basket ball team of East Twenty-third street, New York, has challenged the Y. M. C. A. team to a series of games. No action has been taken as yet.

Among the prominent candidates from which Captain George P. Smith will choose the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team are Wyckoff, Egan, Fred Smith, Thomas Smith, Schoonmaker, Dupee, McClure, Snediker, Brownell and Freeman.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

WITH ROD AND GUN.

J. Welch shot a chicken hawk in Lane's swamp on Wednesday that measured almost four feet from tip to tip.

Ten men from the Climax Gun Club met an equal number from the Keystone Gun Club, of Philadelphia, yesterday at Yardly, in the last of three contests, each having won a match. The stakes were $100 a side, 15 live birds each, and the shooting was excellent. The Climax Club won the match, making a score of 130 out of a possible 150, while the Keystones made 119. The three men from Plainfield scored as follows: Neaf Appar, 13; Scott Terry, 14; Daniel Terry, 12. After the shoot the Keystone Club served a very fine dinner to their guests, and a general social time was passed.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

Already the athletes of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. have turned their thoughts toward spring, when a field day, open to all Y. M. C. A. members of New Jersey, will be held at the Crescent Oval during May.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE

—My Jack at Music Hall tonight.

—Hoods Pills have won high praise for their prompt and efficient yet easy action.

—W. B. Fisk, of LaGrande avenue, has just purchased a new two-horse rockaway carriage

—Pargiter invites attention to his line of ladies' muslin underwear at New York prices.

—Mr. Work, of Carleton avenue, has purchased a grey horse to match the one he already owns.

—A tramp spent his Christmas afternoon in a drunken fit in the park behind the freight house.

—There will be Christmas services tonight for the Danish Lutherans in the house of Mr. Borup, Terrill road, Netherwood.

—The Christmas festival of the Sunday-school of the Church of the Redeemer will be held tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock.

—The young people of the Park Avenue Baptist church spent last evening in decorating the church for the Christmas festivities.

—Smalley Bros., of North avenue, will take possession of the butcher business of Mrs. D. I. Smalley, of Somerset street, January 1st.

—"The Cotton King," Sutton Vane's greatest melodrama, which has broken all box-office record's last season, will be seen here soon at Music Hall.

—Avoid Pneumonia, diphtheria and typhoid fever, by keeping the blood pure, the appetite good and the bodily health vigorous by the use of Hood's Sarsaparilla.

—In the Public Library there is on exhibition a map of South America which was drawn by Master Howard Armstrong, aged thirteen years. It is a creditable piece of work —An error was made in a letter in the rebus published in E. E. Marshall & Co's ad in yesterday's Press, but a correction has been made and the thinkers can now get to work.

—Frank Patience, the contractor, has about completed three new houses for A. E. Faber, corner of Grove and Howard streets. As a kindly remembrance Mr. Faber presented each man with a turkey for Christmas.

—Under the direction of Manager Charles Runyon, of the local telephone exchange, a gang of men are erecting several new telephone poles on Somerset street. The highest one measures 75 feet.

—Mrs. Cornelius H. Clark, of Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth, has presented to the Free Public Library volumes 13 and 14 of the valuable "Collections of the N. Y. Historical Society." With the exception of volume 7 the library set is complete through 1881.

—The Middlesex and Union Traction Company, now operating a trolley line in Rahway, will be offered inducements to extend their tracks to Linden and Elizabeth. All the roads and sidewalks in the town will be repaired, and a number of inducements will be offered builders to build and locate in Linden.

—The Mission Church of the Heavenly Rest looked beautiful on Wednesday with its Christmas decorations of cedar and English ivy. The music, beginning with beautiful carols, was well rendered under the direction of Miss Mary Graves, the organist, and an offertory solo was beautifully sung by Miss Etta Yaeger. Rev. Dr. Bonham, of New York, preached and had the Holy Communion, and he also had a baptism.

THEATRICAL.

"The Cotton King," which will be the attraction at Music Hall next Monday evening, can be classed among the big scenic productions. It takes two sixty-foot baggage cars to transport the scenery; one carries all the hanging pieces and the revolving scene of the second act, while the calico mill scene of the fourth act requires an entire car. There are thirty-five drops, or hanging pieces, seventy-five set pieces, three large calico presses, twenty-five feet by twenty-three feet, and fifteen rollers five feet in diameter. The elevator used in the mill is of iron and wood and weighs 1,500 pounds.

All the play-going paths now verge toward the Herald Square Theatre, New York, where David Belasco's newest triumph continues to sustain a furore not approached by any drama of the past half century. A brilliant playmaker before this achievement, "The Heart of Maryland," stamps Belasco a Sardou. A wonderously stirring tale is this Maryland idyl. Words quail before its recital. Stage reflection only can realize it. It opens in the green heart of the southern State. Its period is Gen. Lee's second invasion. It is a love tale told under apple blooms in old orchards pungent with battle haze. A mountain stream threads its way down a yel'ow hillside and dimples under an old wooden bridge. "The Lilacs," an old colonial mansion, faces your right. Maryland Calvert, a southern girl, and a fervid rebel, lives there. Her lover, also a southerner, Alvan Kendrick, a year before left to espouse the Union cause. This estranges them. Mrs. Leslie Carter appears as Maryland, Maurice Barrymore is Alvan.

Washingtonville.

The Washingtonville Sunday-school held their Christmas festival Wednesday evening. The friends of the Sunday-school filled the chapel to listen to the exercises, which consisted of Christmas hymns and several recitations. A Christmas story by Miss Bessie Bullman was well received. Stereopticon views delighted the audience the rest of the evening. Refreshments were served to all and a general good time had. The committee in charge deserve credit for so good an entertainment. Henry Speir, the chairman, was untiring in his efforts to make it a success.

THE SPICE OF LIFE.

Variety as It Is Seen In the Customs of Various Countries.

One of the most enjoyable things in travel is to notice how etiquette varies from land to land. In America, when a steamer leaves, the men shake hands and the women kiss each other and sometimes cry. In France and Italy especially the women weep, while the men kiss and hug each other almost as vigorously as if they were in a wrestling match. An American woman shakes hands with a man of her acquaintance, while in Spain she always gives her hand to be kissed. It makes the same sensation in Madrid for a man to seize a woman's hand and shake it as it does in New York for a foreigner to seize a New York woman's hand and kiss it.

In America it is rare for wine or beer to be seen on the table at a woman's luncheon or dinner party. In Europe not to have these would be considered the height of discourtesy. Among the western nations to offer a visitor a cup of tea is to invite him to prolong his visit. Among the eastern nations it is the conventional intimation that it is time for him or her to go. An American man removes his hat while talking to a woman, while the "cad" keeps it carefully perched upon his ear. In China a native man would sooner lose his head than be seen without his hat on when in company, while the ruffian takes it off as a mark of disrespect.

We put on our best shoes when our friends call or when we call upon our friends. In Japan a woman takes off her shoes at the threshold and makes her call in her stocking feet upon her hostess, who is similarly attired.

Among the Anglo-Saxons the most cordial invitation is "help yourself and be at home." This, in the tropical lands, is very bad form. You express the same pleasant thought there by saying, "My servants are yours, and that one" (pointing out the best one) "is your boy whenever you are here."

In western lands every guest has his or her own knife. In eastern lands to give a guest a knife is an insult, etiquette demanding that the labor of cutting be done by the cook and not by the guest. In America a woman will not expose her ankles to view, while an Arabian woman never thinks of her lower extremities, but regards the exposure of the face as a positive crime.—New York Mail and Express.

A LITTLE PROBLEM.

And Why the Man Who Tried to Solve It Waxed Angry.

"Are you good at figures?" asked Mr. Bentley of Mr. Groves, who occupied the next desk at the right.

"I used to be," replied Mr. Groves. "Why do you ask?"

"I have a little problem here. Take it down and see what you can do with it: 'A man has $100 with which to buy 100 head of stock. He pays $10 a head for cattle, $3 a head for hogs and 50 cents a head for sheep. How many of each does he buy?' "

"Do you know the answer?"

"Yes; it's very simple when you get it."

"I think it can be worked by algebra. I'm a little rusty, but I'll see what I can do."

Bentley turned to his routine of desk work, and Groves started in to solve the problem. In about half an hour, having covered several pages of paper with x, y and z calculations, he asked suddenly, "Is there any way to make it come out even?"

"Make what come out even?" asked Bentley, who had forgotten all about the problem. "So you're still working at that, are you? Can't you get it?"

"No, not yet; but it can be worked."

All morning Groves struggled with the live stock and at noon he was mad and discouraged.

"What's the answer anyway?" he asked.

"I'll show you," said Bentley, and he marked down:

5 cattle at $10	$50
1 hog at $3	3
94 sheep at 50 cents	47
100	$100

"How did you work it?" asked Groves.

"I didn't work it. A fellow told me the answer."

"What made you give it to me, then?"

"I thought you might be able to guess it."

"Well," said Mr. Groves, "you keep your fool problems to yourself."—Chicago Record.

The Small Boy's Interest.

"You should put your nickels and dimes into a savings bank and let them draw interest," said an indulgent father to his little boy out northeast who was continually calling for nickels and pennies to buy soda water and candy along in the early summer.

"What's interest?" questioned the little fellow.

The subject was fully explained to him by the father, and the boy was made to understand that with the interest he could in time buy all the sweetmeats he wanted. His mother bought him a toy savings bank, and he commenced business, demanding a dime or nickel from his father every night on his return from his office. Last Sunday, out of curiosity, the father examined into the little one's financial affairs and found just 13 cents.

"Why, George, where's all the money I gave you?" he asked the youngster.

"Been drawin interest," meekly replied the young hopeful.—Washington Star.

The "If" Is Rather Important.

Here's something that may save your life when a bull gets after you: When a bull charges, just before the final lurch he shuts his eyes, and if you have the presence of mind to stand stock still until he is about two or three feet from you all you have to do is to step aside, and he misses you. Any child with sufficient presence of mind to do this can let a bull charge all day with perfect safety. This is not a new thing, as it is one of the secrets of the bull fighter in the countries where the sport is practiced. The bull fighters say that a cow does not do this, and they would never try any such tricks with a mad cow. The writer knows that what is said about the bull's habit is true.—Philadelphia Record.

She Knew.

"You've heard of rounding the cape?" said Mr. Smuggins to his wife, who had asked him to explain points when he read.

"Oh, yes," answered Mrs. Smuggins cheerfully, "I should say I have. Why, they've done that ever since sacks went out of fashion." And the good woman chewed the cud of thought reflectively.—Detroit Free Press.

The Playwright's View.

Small Auditor (at a farce comedy)—Papa, what makes that man down there twist up his face in that queer way?

Papa (the author)—I presume he is one of the newspaper critics and is trying not to laugh.—New York Weekly.

THE MAN YOUR DAUGHTER KNOWS.

See If You Can Recognize His Portrait In This Picture.

His appearance is so eminently respectable that you feel the same satisfaction on finding him around the house as you experience on seeing a choice bit of Chelsea on your wall or a well bred horse in your stable. His eyes are sleepy, honest eyes enough, and if they rarely in your presence express anything more than vacant indifference you don't much care.

His hair is always beautifully smoothed, with a sadiron, you surmise, and the parting, indelibly in the exact center, has evidently grown there and is not, as are other partings, the result of artifice. An incipient mustache does honor to his expectations, and if you sometimes wish the ends were not so stiffly starched you never hurt his feelings by mentioning it. His attire is always faultless, immaculate, and his shoes especially win your warm and envious admiration. They are never spotted, creased nor cracked as are your own.

Personally your are not well acquainted with him. Your wife mentions his name sometimes, and your daughter is not averse to his society, you understand. Quite often you meet him on the doorstep when you return home from the office, whereupon he shakes hands with you quite affably, if in a somewhat high handed fashion, and you strive to recollect his name with but indifferent success, usually calling him by the appellation of his predecessor in the good graces of your daughter. Sometimes you run across him at your club, and more often your wife has him to dinner, and you sit over the coffee with him afterward, while he smokes your cigars a trifle condescendingly and kindly speaks a good word for your wine until the conversation dies away for the twentieth time in ten minutes and he excuses himself and returns to the ladies, the "ladies" in the case being your daughter, who, during the last half of the ten minutes, has been beckoning to him from behind the hall door, where she imagined herself unseen by you. You do not beg him to stay. Somehow it is very difficult to make conversation with the man your daughter knows.

And so you keep on meeting him at short intervals, until one day your daughter decides that he is absolutely necessary to her future happiness, and you purchase him for her at a figure which you consider quite modest, when you come to think of his shoes and hair. Whereupon your wife assures you that you have done well, and you experience a slight glow of pride as a result of her commendations, and you feel rather thankful that you won't have to talk to him again for at least a month.—Richard Stillman Powell in Life.

Harmonious Prose, but Not Verse.

The greatest danger which attends the would be writer of harmonious prose is the pitfall laid by his knowledge of the sweet expedients of verse. It can hardly be said of any other modern writer of English whose pages are as musical as Stevenson's that he always avoids this pitfall. But in Stevenson's we never come upon the smallest fragment of pseudo verse—a too prettily rounded paragraph and a too surely expected cadence, a too evident balancing of phrases, a too regular arrangement of words or repetition of sounds. Of course he is never seduced by the vulgar charms of the rhetorical, the grandiloquent or the sentimental mode, and it is almost an insult to take pains to say that he never descends to "cheap finish," is never caught by the prompt appeal of trite verbal formulas, by the attractiveness of superfluous words or of words which do not precisely reproduce the thought, or by those terrible brummagem devices, like loud alliteration, which are so often loved by English writers when they aspire to style at all and so generally accepted by the public as proofs of technical mastery. Perfect accord between sense and sound, perfect beauty of sound and a perfect avoidance of palpable artifice—these, with freshness and a very masculine vigor, are the qualities of Stevenson's prose style.—"Robert Louis Stevenson and His Writing," by Mrs. M. G. Van Rensselaer, in Century.

Rough on the Sentry.

One of the most amusing stories of the day treats of mistaken philanthropy. At a certain army post there was a sentry on duty near the hospital. The surgeon was preparing to go to bed inside, when he was annoyed and alarmed at the sentry's coughing. His experienced ear told him that the man had a severe bronchial affliction, needing a strong remedy.

He debated awhile with himself, and then, going into the dispensing room, compounded a powerful mixture. This he took outside to the sentry with instructions to swallow it immediately. The man refused. The surgeon insisted and finally commanded the soldier to take the medicine, which he did with much grumbling. Then the worthy surgeon went to bed, pleased to hear no more coughing.

Next morning, to his surprise, the commanding officer sent for him and said that the sentry had complained, declaring that the surgeon had forced him to swallow something he thought was poison. An investigation followed and revealed the fact that while the surgeon was mixing the medicine the coughing sentry had been relieved, and consequently the remedy had been given to the wrong man.—London Tit-Bits.

Chest Pains.

Chest pains usually cause great discomfort to a patient and are sometimes not sufficiently appreciated by the physician Dr. J. K. Crook relates a series of causes as illustrating the diagnostic value of chest pains. In some cases these pains are reflected from an overloaded or disordered stomach, in some cases it is neuralgia, and in exceptional cases the lungs themselves are at fault. Most persons with pains in the chest think they have some lung or heart disease. Pneumonia causes pain, but the other symptoms make the diagnosis clear. Consumption is not a disease accompanied by pain, and when it does occur it is from continual coughing.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Youthful Ambition.

Mr. Howell (of the firm of Gettup & Howell)—Well, little girl, what do you want?

Six-year-old Waif (tired of selling papers on the street)—Say, mister, don't you want to dress a little girl all up in fine clothes an put her in y'r front winder to look purty an dror a crowd?—Chicago Tribune.

There is something on earth grander than arbitrary power. The thunder, the lightning and the earthquake are terrific, but the judgment of the people is more.—Daniel Webster.

The wise prove and the foolish confess by their conduct that a life of employment is the only life worth leading.—Paley.

YOUR PALATE IS YOUR STOMACH'S CONSCIENCE.

Your Stomach Knows What is Good For You.

Thin people are thin because the food they eat is not absorbed. Reasons, either wrong food, or right food undigested.

Fats, oils and grease will not make any one fat. This is because they are indigestable. Thin people find it hard to digest their food. Fatty foods make it still harder.

Have you ever noticed that almost without exception, thin, pale, dyspeptic, anæmic people have an aversion to fat? This is of itself proof enough that such foods are bad for them.

Let your palate tell you what to eat. Nature makes very few mistakes and we seould listen to what she says.

Thin people may become fatter and dyspeptics more comfortable by taking the Shaker Digestive Cordial. It agrees with the weakest stomach. It helps the weak stomach digest other food. It is fattening and invigorating in itself, for it contains artificially digested food

The Mount Lebanon Shakers have made a great many interesting discoveries within the past hundred years, but none more important than this ingenious cure for all diseases which are traceable to faulty digestion. A single 10 cent bottle will tell whether it is adapted to your case, and can be had through any druggist.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

A BATTLE FOR WATER

FIERCE STRUGGLE BETWEEN AN ELEPHANT AND TWO TIGERS.

The "Rogue" Took Possession of the Pool, and His Claim Was Not Disputed Until the Thirsty Tigers Came on the Scene An Excited Guide Spoiled the Fun.

The tiger hunter does not hunt at random for his game. He knows that in the heat of the day the great cat sleeps the hours away in the deepest solitude he can find. His bed may be in the dense jungle, where he must worm his way in and out like a serpent, or in some dark ravine splitting the hills and offering him a hundred spots which have never been lighted up by the rays of the sun since the hills were created. When the sun goes down and darkness follows its setting, then the royal beast opens his eyes, yawns and stretches, and after a few snarls and growls lazily leaves his lair in search of supper. He may cross a dozen streams, but he will not lap at the water. It is only after he has eaten his fill and is ready to retire and sleep again that a great thirst seizes him, and he seeks the nearest creek or pool and plunges his head in until he must shut his eyes as he laps enough water to satisfy the thirst of an ox.

And the men who hunt the elephant as well as the tiger know that the largest animal on earth is as crafty and cunning and far more timid than the fox. If there is danger in the air, he may thirst until his mouth grows hot, but he will not leave the shelter of the forest to drink until after midnight. Then he makes his way through thicket and over fallen trees and up hill and down more quietly than the hyena who follows after. When they are in twos and threes and more, the tiger who has come down to the pool will skulk about, spitting and snarling, and wait for them to depart, but when there is only one the royal beast will assert his right to drink where he pleases and as long as he will.

After riding for two hours our native guide led us to a water hole on the edge of a great forest. During the rainy season it was a lake covering 20 acres of ground. In the dry season it was little better than a mud hole, but furnished the only water for miles around. We saw the track of the elephant, buffalo, deer and wild hog and doubted not that the tiger, panther, hyena and jackal came to the same pool to slake their thirst.

Ere the sun went down we had built our platform among the trees, eaten our supper and prepared to pass the night as comfortably as possible. We cared nothing for elephant, buffalo or deer. It was a tiger we had come to kill, and knowing that he would not appear until long after midnight the two of us slept and left it to the guide to watch and wake us at the proper hour. Soon after 12 o'clock he whispered to us that a "rogue" elephant—an outlaw from the herd and more to be feared than the tiger—had come down from the forest and taken possession of the pool. Standing in the center of it, he was trying to frighten all other comers away. We watched him for a few minutes and then slept again, and an hour later the native whispered in our ears:

"Sahib, it is time. The rogue is still here, but the forest has suddenly grown quiet. That means that a tiger is coming to drink. I think he will come by the path over the hill."

It was two hours yet to daybreak, but we had the light of moon and stars and could see everything almost as well as by daylight. It is never quiet in an Indian forest by night except when the tiger moves about. Then the very tree toads and insects seem to be warned of his presence and hush their notes for a time. The elephant was standing like a block of stone, his eyes fastened on the crest of the hill spoken of by the native, and for three or four minutes the silence was so profound that we could hear our watches ticking. Then the head of the tiger appeared above the hill, and half a minute later the beast came slowly walking down. He was a full grown male, and he was followed by his mate. There were defiance and contempt in their very gait as they slouched along, and before reaching the pool each gave utterance to a vicious growl to warn the elephant that they were not to be trifled with. He stood so quietly that you would have thought him asleep, and for a moment the tigers sat down on the edge of the pool and glared at him and struck out with a fore paw, as you have seen an angry cat. As he did not move, they lowered their heads to lap at the water, but at the first sound the rogue uttered a shrill scream and dashed at them.

We had looked to see the tigers stand, but his terrific rush frightened them for the moment, and they ran away, closely pursued to the top of the hill by the trumpeting elephant. After five minutes he slowly returned to take his place in the pool, but he had not yet reached the waters when the tigers, perhaps ashamed of their fight, came bounding down and upon him. As he wheeled to meet them and sweep the earth with his trunk one sprang upon his forehead and bit and dug and raked him, and the other alighted on his left hip and pursued the same tactics. The elephant made a rush into a grove of young trees, and the tigers were swept to the ground. Then he came crashing back in search of them. Huge as he was in bulk, his movements were wonderfully quick. With a sweep of his trunk he rolled one tiger over and over and into the water, and to rid himself of the other, which had mounted his back, he dropped down and rolled over and was up again before we had realized the trick. The beast knocked into the water swam out and together the pair again attacked. They fastened to his hind legs, they bounded upon his back, they were under and over him as cats play with a ball. We heard their teeth and claws tearing at his tough hide, and we heard them yelp with pain as he brushed them off or dealt blows with his trunk. Of a sudden, when the battle was fiercest, the excited native accidentally discharged his gun. There was a growl from the tigers and a blast from the elephant, and when the smoke had cleared away there was nothing in sight. Tigers and elephant had fled in terror from the presence of man.—St. Louis Republic.

Barbaric Dancing.

The queerest foe the women missionaries have ever encountered is the dancing habit in the Gilbert islands. The climate is salubrious, but warm, so that the natives dance by night and sleep during the day. The exercise provokes great hunger and thirst, so that gorging and excessive drinking are the result. The adults neglect and desert their work, the children their schools and everybody the churches. A dancing spell often lasts several months at a time. Both missionaries and merchants try to stop the practice, but this far with but little success. It seems to be a relic of some forgotten heathen faith or fetichism.—New York Mail and Express.

WONDERS OF LABOR.

Ten Remarkable Works In Masonry and Engineering.

The Stone Trade News considers the ten most remarkable works of human labor:

First.—The pyramids of Egypt, the largest of which, near Cairo, known as the great pyramid, built by Cheops, king of Egypt, took 350,000 men 20 years to build.

Second.—The artificial reservoir—Lake Moeris—built by Amenemha of the twelfth dynasty, which serves to store up the waters of the Nile during the season of floods and distribute them over the land during the dry season. Its circumference was 5,600 furlongs, and on its being allowed to fall into ruin the fertility of the region became to a serious extent a thing of the past.

Third.—The Taj Mahal, a tomb erected at Aga, in Hindustan, by Shan Jehan, over his queen, Noor Jehan. It is built of the purest white marble, and yet seems so airy that when seen from a distance it is like a fabric of mist and sunbeams, with its great dome soaring up, a silvery bubble about to burst in the sun, and even after you have touched it and climbed to its summit you almost doubt its reality. It cost over £3,000,000.

Fourth.—The temple of Baalbec, in the erection of which stones 62 feet long, 20 feet broad and 15 feet thick have been used—more prodigious masses than have ever elsewhere been moved by human power and much exceeding in size the stones used in the pyramids.

Fifth.—The temple of Karnak, described by Fergusson as the noblest work of architectural magnificence ever produced by the hand of man. It covers twice the area of St. Peter's, at Rome, and undoubtedly is one of the finest buildings in the world.

Sixth.—The great wall of China, 1,230 miles in length. It is 20 feet in height and in thickness 25 feet at the base and 15 feet at the top.

Seventh.—The Eiffel tower, erected in the grounds of the 1889 Paris exhibition, 984 feet high.

Eighth.—The Suez canal, with 88 miles of waterway, connecting the Mediterranean and the Red seas, and forming the principal route to India. It cost more than £17,000,000, and 172,602 out of 399,677 shares were purchased by and belong to the British government.

Ninth.—The railway bridge (the largest cantilever bridge in the world) over the Forth, with two spans each of 1,700 feet, erected at a cost of nearly £4,000,000.

Tenth.—The leaning tower of Pisa, which deviates 13 feet from the perpendicular.

The Adventures of Rochefort.

M. Henri Rochefort has written a characteristic introduction to his "Adventures of My Life." He describes the extraordinary vicissitudes of his existence—one day a minister, with enormous power; a month or two later on his way to a convict settlement on the other side of the world. But it is the ups and downs in the lives of others, and notably in the lives of great painters, that Rochefort depicts in the most interesting way. He lived in the same house with Corot and has seen the great master trampling in rage upon the pictures he could find no one to purchase. He met Millet once, in the street Notre Dame de Lorette, at a little dealer's, to whom he had just offered a picture for 300 francs which Rochefort has since seen sold for 87,000 francs. He publishes a letter of Millet containing the following passage: "I dare not pass before the butcher's. There are not 2 shillings in the house, and this has been my condition for some 20 years." Laughing at the English love of hunting and shooting, Rochefort tells how he used to go out hunting each morning in the London picture dealers' shops and how he recently unearthed a superb Gericault, which was given to him for a mere nothing.—Saturday Review.

Thought Without Reverence.

"Shall your science proceed in the small chink lighted or even oil lighted underground worship of logic alone, and man's mind become an arithmetical mill, whereof memory is the hopper, and mere tables of sines and tangents, codification and treatises of what you call political economy are the meal?" And what is that science, which the scientific head alone, were it screwed off, and, like the doctor's in the Arabian tale, set in a basin to keep it alive, could prosecute without shadow of a heart, but one other of the mechanical and menial handicrafts for which the scientific head, having a soul in it, is too noble an organ? I mean that thought without reverence is barren, perhaps poisonous, at best dies, like cookery, with the day that called it forth; does not live, like sowing in successive tilths and wider spreading harvests, bringing food and plenteous increase to all time.—Carlyle.

Polite Reproof.

A lady once ventured to publicly reprove a well known London society man for his overfondness of good living. The gentleman made himself conspicuous by the way he gorged himself at a dinner to which he and others of the upper ten had been invited. To make matters worse, he was sufficiently unwise or thoughtless enough to attempt to excuse himself with the remark that "in eating well I praise the food," thereby using a well known quotation.

It was an opportunity not to be lost by the somewhat disgusted and witty lady sitting at his elbow.

"Really, sir," she observed, with a sweet smile, "you should not carry praise to the point of flattery."

Her Query.

The Boston Budget tells a story of a little girl who went to church on a recent Sunday with her mother, a devout member and regular attendant of the Episcopal church. The little one sat very quiet and demure through all the long service, but her quick little ears and bright little brain were not so quiet as was indicated. After the service she looked up into her mother's face, and, "Mamma," she asked earnestly, "they say: 'Ah men' so much. Why don't they say, 'Ah lady?'"

Notice to the Conductor.

Chicago Passenger—I say, conductor, did you notice my ticket?

Conductor—Um! I don't remember it, sir.

"My ticket is for St. Louis."

"Well?"

"Well, I don't want you to forget to stop there, that's all."—New York Weekly.

The best rules to form a young man are to talk little, to hear much, to reflect alone upon what has passed in company, to distrust one's own opinions and value others that deserve it.—Sir W. Temple.

We have no right to say that the universe is governed by natural laws, but only that it is governed according to natural laws.—Carpenter.

Pretty Woman's Ways.

They were two women, and they were on the last lap of a shopping tour on the afternoon of bargain day. As they passed out from one of the big dry goods establishments the pretty woman remarked to her companion: "When I am on one of my shopping expeditions, I feel just as I imagine a man does who takes a couple of drinks and goes off on a spree. The attractions of the shops are too much for me. After the first few purchases I become intoxicated through my vanity and love of pretty things, and I begin to run up bills. Here I have been running up bills all the afternoon, and I guess I might as well wind up and go to the hairdresser and have my hair fixed up." They passed on, and the listener could readily imagine that the pretty woman's experiences would be quite as painful as those of the man who had gone on a spree, when her husband, provided she had one, and she was pretty enough to have one, began to receive the bills.—Buffalo Express.

The Seventh Son.

According to French tradition and belief, if a man is the seventh son of his father, without any of the feminine gender intervening, he is a marcou. He has on some part of his body the mark of a flower-de-luce, and, like the kings of France, he has the power of curing the king's evil. All that is necessary to effect a cure is that the marcou should breathe upon the part affected, or that the sufferer should touch the mark of the flower-de-luce. In holy week his power is particularly efficacious. A darker superstition concerning the seventh son exists in Portugal. It is there believed that the unfortunate being who is the seventh male in direct succession is in the power of the prince of darkness, by whom he is compelled on every Saturday evening to assume the appearance of an ass. In this guise and accompanied by a troop of dogs, he is compelled to race over moor and through village until the light of the Sabbath dawns, when he may resume his human shape for another week.—Bow Bells.

Demand For Grass Linen.

Imported and domestic grass linen has been well sold for ladies' and children's wear in the ecru and greenish linen shades. They are trimmed with a velvet or satin crush belt and collar and guipure laces in cream or ecru. The waist lining is of white lawn or the same goods, and the sides each have two bones, and one in the front dart keeps the waist down, though not as snug fitting as a basque.

The vandyke and medallion lace patterns are very effective on these dresses, the large collar covering the shoulders being one of the neatest trimmings. For a slight figure a bodice of lace fitted to the waist line, with the scallops reaching above the bottom of the armholes and fastening under the left arm, has a stylish effect.—Dry Goods Economist.

Hurling a Text at the Cook.

"Mary Jane," said the rector solemnly, "the steak is cooked to a crisp, and the potatoes are raw. You have left undone the things that ought to be done and cooked too done the things that ought not to be done."—Indianapolis Journal.

Weighing Common Air.

The weight of air has often been tested by compressing it in receptacles by the air pump. That it really has weight when so compressed is shown by the fact that the weight of the vessels is increased slightly by filling them with compressed air and that such vessels become specifically "lighter" as soon as the air contained in them is exhausted. Many elaborate experiments on the weight of air have proved that one cubic foot weighs 536 grains, or something less than 1¼ ounces.

The above experiment on the weight of air is supposed to be made at the surface of the earth with the temperature at 50 degrees F. Heated air, or air at high elevations, is much lighter.—St. Louis Republic.

On the Spot.

Charlotte Cushman was once filling an engagement at the opera house in Belmore. A man in the gallery created such a disturbance that it seriously impeded the progress of the play, and finally brought it to a standstill. Immediately the audience, furious with anger, cried: "Throw him over! Throw him over!" Miss Cushman stepped to the edge of the footlights, and in a sweet and gentle voice exclaimed: "No, I beg of you, dear friends, don't throw him over. Kill him where he is!" This story has been told of a good many other actresses besides Charlotte Cushman. But we will let it go at that.—San Francisco Argonaut.

At the siege of Jerusalem by Titus the captive Jews were crucified by the Romans in such numbers that, as Josephus says, there was no longer wood of which to make the crosses nor space for them to stand.

"For years I had suffered from falling of the womb, inflammation of the stomach, and weakness of the female organs. "I used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and found a perfect cure in it for these troubles." MRS. LIZZIE DECLINE, 224 Grand Street, Jersey City, New Jersey.

Scotch Plains.

The Sunday-school of the Baptist church rendered the cantata, "A Trip to Santa Clausville," last evening before a large and appreciative audience. The church was filled to its utmost capacity. The cantata was a pleasant surprise to those present, as it was a new feature in the way of celebrating the day which is so dear to the scholars. The excercises were opened with Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. Mr. Braker, after which the cantata was rendered by a chorus of thirty children, who were assisted by a quartette composed of Rev. and Mrs. Braker, Miss Hosingier and W. R. Buckley. Henry L. Hall, of Fanwood, made a good Santa Claus, and in a neat little speech presented the pastor with a purse from the members of the church, to which Mr. Braker responded and said he hoped the good feeling in the church between pastor and people would continue. He then presented the boys with books and the girls with work baskets. Candy and oranges was then distributed which brought the entertainment to a close.

Friendship Lodge Elects.

Friendship Rebekah Degree Lodge, No. 4, I. O. O. F., met last evening and after initiating one candidate elected the following officers: Noble grand, Mrs. Clark; vice-noble grand, Mrs. Hicks; secretary, Miss Lizzie Dunlap; permanent secretary, Mrs. Rugg; treasurer, Mrs. Joseph Sheppard. They will be installed Thursday evening, January 9th. The meeting last evening was an exceptionally good one and everyone had a pleasant time.

Heaviest in Years.

Never before in the history of the Plainfield post office have the mails been so heavy during the holidays as they were this year. The regular force of carriers, assisted by two substitutes and two delivery wagons, worked hard to decrease the ever-increasing influx of Christmas packages. Postmaster Hetfield and his staff deserve credit for the rapidity with which the great increase of mail was handled.

A Holiday Dance.

A delightful holiday dance was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Case, 945 Central avenue, last evening, by C. E. Case, Frederick T. Case and H. D. Bushnell, Harvard students. The rooms were prettily trimmed with Christmas greens and holly, while in the dining room there was a choice display of roses. About 125 were present, who enjoyed the dancing to Rogers' music.

Results.

A meeting of the joint committee on the Firemen's Fair was held last evening but, owing to the absence of several of the most important members, not much business was transacted. Although all the bills have not been received, the net proceeds are expected to amount to between $600 and $700.

A Delightful Invitation.

The young women of the Monroe Avenue chapel will entertain the young men of the chapel on New Year's Eve at the home of Miss Lottie Aldrich, of Sherman avenue, when they will see the old year out and the new year in together.

Two New Dwelling Houses.

Contractor John D. Smith has just completed the excavating for two cellars on the corner of New and Third streets, on which Hand & McIntyre will erect two new seven-room dwellings.

State Secretary to Speak.

Arthur Lucas, State Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of New Jersey, will speak to young men at the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday at 4:15 p. m. The Glee Club, of Brown University will assist in the singing.

Judgment for the Plaintiff.

The case of Frucht against Wolf, on contract, was tried in Justice Newcorn's court this morning and judgment was rendered far plaintiff.

Made a Break.

A broken limb on a tree at the corner of Arlington avenue and West Seventh street caused the one blow of the fire whistle last evening soon after ten o'clock.

Partnership Dissolved.

The partnership which has existed between A. Vanderbeek and Joseph Sattells has been dissolved, the latter continuing the business.

GODEY'S MAGAZINE

(ESTABLISHED 1830.)

Volume CXXXII begins January, 1896

During 1896 Godey's Magazine will contain

TALKS WITH SUCCESSFUL WOMEN

Valuable hints about various branches of industry which are open to women by women who have succeeded in them.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.

Discussions of musical subjects or people. Illustrated each month with portraits, autographs, and one or more pages of music. This music alone will make a valuable collection. This series of articles is a unique feature among monthly magazines. The papers are interesting to all readers, and are of positive value to those who play and sing.

THE STAGE.

Illustrated articles upon the best and newest plays and the foremost actors, particularly the best American productions. These are much more than gossip of players. They are entertaining discussions of the dramas that are talked about. Such treatment is not found in any other magazine.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

The Magazine will be well and thoroughly illustrated from cover to cover. Competent artists and improved methods of making and printing the plates will be employed.

THE COVERS.

The covers are different every month. They are designed by popular artists, and the covers for a year will be valuable as an art collection in themselves.

THE FASHION DEPARTMENT

which for years has given the latest fads and fashions, is of particular interest to women.

A HOME MAGAZINE.

Godey's is a magazine of this country and of today. It is a family magazine, with a larger scope than it had as the "Lady's Book." It is a monthly feast of wholesome, interesting reading, fit for every member of the household.

In addition to the features mentioned above each number will contain a liberal amount of fiction, by the best writers, articles on subjects of general interest, book reviews, etc.

GIFT GIVING AND RECEIVING.

IT STILL CONTINUES WITH THE LOCAL SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

Christmas Exercises Held in Many of the Church and Chapels Last Evening—The Various Programmes and Participants.

There was not sufficient room in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church last evening for the large crowd that desired to witness the Christmas entertainment. A beautiful Christmas tree, illuminated with incandescent electric lights arranged by A. V. Searing, was a decided feature. Mr. Lounsbury, the Superintendent of the Sundy-school, made a most excellent master of ceremonies. After a recitation by Miss Edna Burr, and the singing of carols by the scholars, a delightful canta entitled, "The Toy Makers of Wonderland," was rendered in which the following scholars took part: Beatrice Miner, Wm. Hepburn, Harry Messerschmidt, Donald Bechtel, Norman Hill, Jennie Dunham, Louise Kline, Leah Hammond, Lulu Kline, Martha Kline, Winnie Hammond, Ella Atchison, Belle Williams, Harry Hazeltine, Leslie Radford, Ethel Laing, Vincent Miner, Flossie Martin, Mary Dunham, Minnie Atchison, Marion Englehardt, Bertha Englehardt, William Mehl, Mamie Mehl, Minnie Line, and Edna Martin.

Rev. C. E. Herring then made a few appropriate remarks, which was followed with singing by the school. Mr. Lounsbury on behalf of the King's Daughters presented Rev. Mr. Herring with a very costly pair of gold linked cuff buttons and a candy cane about four feet long. The latter presented organist Wm. E. MacClymont with a silver mounted baton. Assistant Superintendent Mrs. Howard Pope received a handsome onyx lamp stand and banquet lamp in recognition of her faithful services. E. M. Case was the recipient of a pocketbook from his class. In conclusion those in charge, Mrs. Howard Pope, Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Maag, Miss Kellogg, Miss Messerschmidt, Miss Pruden, Miss Agnes Blair, L. L. Remsen, H. B. Lounsbury and A. V. Searing, distributed dolls, games and candy to the scholars. Miss Remsen was the pianist.

The delightful weather filled Hope chapel to overflowing last evening with those who came to attend the Christmas festivities. There was an especially large attendance of the Sunday-school scholars and a number of their parents and friends came to to see the fun.

The programme was as follows: Selection by an instrumental quartette composed of Gilbert Lovell, Lindley Hillman, Charles Davis and Walter Serrell; song by Miss Nettie Thompson; reading by Rev. Mr. Newell; selection by instrumental quartette; surprise by "Trilby;" song by Miss Nettie Thompson.

The gifts and candy and fruit were then distributed among the young people.

"Trilby" was a large cloth elephant, the motive power for which was furnished by two young men, which performed some most remarkable feats.

Santa Claus appeared at the close and distributed the gifts. He was impersonated by B. W. Hand.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of J. S. Schoonmaker, Fred H. Andrews, Miss Stewart, Miss Page, Miss Nash, John H. Cofes and Emill Troll.

As usual, the Sunday-school scholars of the Society of Friends on Watchung avenue had a most enjoyable Christmas entertainment at the meeting house last evening under the direction of Superintendent Mrs. Margaret F. Vail. The following programme was rendered: Twenty-Third Psalm, school; recitations, Ethel Lorton, Horace Vail, Clifford Vail; readings, Mabel Vail, Leslie Hallock, Caroline Hallock; recitations, Anna Morrison, Charles Peterson, Bessie Pound; recitations were also given by the Superintendent, Mrs. Vail, and Miss Grace Vail, of Dunellen, after which Aaron M. Powell made a short address. The scholars and their friends were then served with an abundance of ice cream and cake.

The Sunday-school room of the First Baptist church was filled to overflowing with the scholars and their friends last evening, at which time the Christmas entertainment was held. Secretary Charles Smith was in charge and announced the several numbers. The exercises opened with an amusing reading by Miss Grace Cooley, after which Howard Durand, of New York, appeared and for over an hour entertained the audience with humorous stories, trick violin playing, ventriloquism, bell playing, etc.

The programme was brought to a close with a finely rendered solo by Wm. N. Runyon, and candy was then distributed to the scholars.

The primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school had a jolly good time yesterday afternoon at the church when they presented a cantata entitled, "An Old-Time Christmas Party." It included singing by the school; reading of Scripture, Mrs. Harold Serrell; prayer and singing, school; dialogue, Harry Woodland, May Batchelor and Elsie Brokaw; song, Little Givers, school; recitations, Josephine and Marguerite Serrell; song, The Christmas Tree, semi-chorus; recitation, Santa Claus; recitations, Carrie Bird and Nellie LaRue; song, Christ at Bethlehem, semi chorus; recitation, Jeremiah Manning, Jr.; song, Bell Ringing, semi-chorus; recitation, May Batchelor, dialogue, Mamie Coddington, Emma Powers, Nettie Wise, Anna Allen; recitation, Mrs. Powlison; recitations, Helen Smalley, Jessie Clawson, Harry Allen, Russell Macintyre, Edna Cronce, Wallace Pierce, Cory Adams, Beulah VanWinkle; song, Away in a Manger. Santa Claus then pleased the scholars by distributing dolls, candy and games to them. Those in charge were Superintendent Mrs. Powlison, assistants Mrs. Harold Serrell, Mrs. E. VanName, Miss Susie Woodland and Miss Eudora Grant.

The children enjoy a good time as well as their elders and those of the primary department of the Sunday-school at the First M. E. church were given a very pleasant time in Vincent chapel yesterday afternoon when their Christmas festival was held. The programme consisted of carols by the children, recitations by Dorothy Douglass, Edwin Springer, Marian Overton and Gladys Peck. Miss Grace E. Overton read a Christmas story. Then followed the grand march, during which the children were presented with fancy paper caps and then all were marched to one of the rooms in the rear where a delightful supper was served to the little people. Those who assisted in serving them were Mrs. J. R. Joy, Miss Bertha Whitney, Miss Penny, Miss Douglass, Miss Edna French, Miss Maud French, Mrs. S. M. Clark and J. W. Jackson.

A delightful entertainment, pretty decorations and a large crowd made the Christmas festival of the Monroe Avenue chapel last evening a great success. The programme was divided into two parts, the first part of which was furnished by local talent. It was as follows: Carol, "Carol Loudly, Carol Sweetly" by school; prayer, dialogue "On Christmas Night," Agnew Dodd, Albert Cowling and Fred Phillips; recitation, "A Message to Santa Claus," by Miss Van Ness; carol, "Ring out, Sweet Bells," by school; recitation, "To Santa Claus in France," by Miss Kline; cantata, "A Jolly Christmas Eve," Walter McGee, Ella Rogers, Ada Rogers, Weona Dodd, Etta Randolph, Lulu Randolph, Sadie Elliott, Vauglin McGee and Stephen Aldrich.

Mr. Lyons, of New York, acted as entertainer in the last part of the evening and made a great success of his share. He first gave a "Punch and Judy" show, introducing several novel features and keeping his audience is roars of laughter. He then showed his expertness in conjuring and astonished everyone by eating oakum, then spitting fire and smoke, and finally removing several several yards of paper and a bone three feet long from his mouth. The programme devolved much credit on the committee which arranged it, and was composed of the Misses Grace Palmer, Lizzie Fostor, Hattie King, and Frank Batson and Fred Phillips.

The decorations were especially pleasing and consisted of greens artistically draped about the chapel while a large evergreen star lighted by different colored electric lights hung over the platform. The committee in charge of decorating was composed of Messrs Stafford, Praed and Quick. Mr. Quick was the electrician of the committee and is deserving of special credit for the successful addition of electric lights to the other decorations.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it. Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

AN OLD COMMUTER KILLED.

LOUIS B. MENGER WALKED ON THE TRACK TO HIS DEATH.

Struck By a West-Bound Passenger Train and Thrown Under a Moving Freight—Taken to the Hospital Where He Died.

There seems to be an unusually long run of casualties on the Central Railroad of New Jersey this winter, and this morning another victim was added to the already long list. Louis B. Menger, of 437 East Fifth street, was fatally injured by being run over by a freight train. Mr. Menger is a regular commuter and started this morning with the intention of taking the 8:27 train. Instead of going down Fifth street to Watchung avenue and thence to the North avenue station, he took the short cut through Washington, Fourth and Church streets, which is frequently used by the commuters of his neighborhood. The west-bound train which is due at Plainfield at 8:16, drawn by engine 374, was just approaching as Mr. Menger started to cross the tracks. He crossed the first two without trouble and seeing a freight train on the north outside track he started to walk down the west-bound passenger track. The engineer of engine 374 applied the air brakes and blew the whistle furiously, but the old man in front did not hear until too late. He was standing over the right-hand rail when the engine struck him and he pitched headlong under the wheels of the moving freight train on the next track. In another instant the wheels struck the back part of his head, opening a large wound, and crushed his right arm. The accident occurred about about seventy-five feet East of the Watchung Avenue bridge and in full view of those at the North Avenue station. He was picked up unconscious and carried to the station in the baggage car of the train. He was taken to the telegraph office where Officer McCue discovered a commutation ticket and a card that identified him as Louis B. Menger.

The ambulance was sent for and conveyed the injured man to the hospital where he died shortly after 9 o'clock.

Mr. Menger was an old man, partially bald and with long white hair. He was about seventy-five years old. He and his wife have been living with their daughter, Mrs. Dabriskai, since April when they moved here from Brooklyn. He has two sons and two daughters living but Mrs. Dabriskai is the only one residing in this city.

As soon as the accident occurred and his identity learned, his family were notified at once and his daughter arrived at the hospital in time to be present at the death of her father. His wife was almost prostrated by the shock.

Perseverance Elects.

Perseverance Lodge, No 74, K. of P., held a meeting last evening and elected the following officers: Chancellor-commander, Louis Mohring; vice-chancellor, Thomas Milligan; prelate, Robert Jackson; master of finances, John Wakefield; master of exchequer, William H. P. Drake; keeper of records and seals, Charles McGinley; master-at-arms, Edwin Mackey; representative to grand lodge, A. D. Pope; alternate, George Clark; trustee, C. W. Lines. The officers will be installed at the next meeting on Friday evening by the Deputy Grand Chancellor.

Mayor of Peapack.

Tunis J. Melick, the Mayor of Peapack, Somerset county, was in town today. He reports the lime kilns there as burning brightly and says that the recently discovered gold mines in that locality are not panning out very well.

—Fulper, the West Front street grocer, will continue the special Christmas cut prices until New Year's day. He is headquarters for butter, 22 cents, and full cream cheese 10 cents. All other goods at rock bottom prices.

De Witt's Little Early Risers for biliousness, indigestion, constipation. A small pill, a prompt cure. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

MIDNIGHT ALARM OF FIRE.

FLAMES DISCOVERED IN THE REAR OF FRENCH'S CITY MILL.

Prompt Response and Efficient Service of the Fire Department Prevents a Disastrous Blaze—Loss Was About $300.

That French's City Mill was not totally destroyed by fire last night is entirely due to Plainfield's highly efficient fire department. It has often been remarked that if ever the mill caught fire there would be nothing left of it, owing to the age of the structure and its contents.

Last night about 12:10, Night Watchman Geo. Rockafellow, while making his rounds, discovered a blaze in the rear of the mill and at once sent in an alarm from box 12. The fire department made one of their quickest responses and before Chief Doane arrived, which was less than ten minutes after the alarm, a stream of water was playing on the fire, and in about a half hour the flames were extinguished. The fire started in the second floor front of the old saw mill in a room containing a large quantity of burlap, paper bags, etc., and it is the opinion of both Chief Doane and French Brothers that the origin was spontaneous combustion, caused by the continual grinding. Nothing but the excellent service of the fire department saved the building. French Brothers estimate their loss to be $300.

There was no insurance on the contents of the building.

ENTERTAINED THE COTILLION CLUB.

A Happy Social Event at the Chestnuts Last Evening.

Miss Agnes Opdyke, daughter of Mrs. H. B. Opdyke, entertained the Cotillion Club at the Plainfield Seminary last evening. Miss Opdyke received with her mother, Mrs. H. B Opdyke, who was assisted by Mrs. J. Kirkland Myers and Mrs. Samuel Huntington. The rooms were beautified throughout with an artistic arrangement of Christmas greens.

The German was danced, Miss Opdyke and her brother, Howard Opdyke leading. Among those present were: The Misses Shepard, Holly, VanBoskerck, Tracy, Stewart, McCready, Smalley, Whiton, Durand, Walz, Cooley, Evans, Waring, and Messrs. Shepard, VanBoskerck, Percy Stewart, Rowland Cox, Jr., Clifford McGee, Harry Talmadge, Waller Murray, Dr. B. VanD. Heeges, Irving West, Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. VanBuren, Mr. and Mrs. John Doul Miller, Mr. and Mrs Howard Tracy.

During the evening a supper was served by Max Wiertz.

An Illustrated Lecture.

The illustrated lecture on Japan, to be given by A. C. Maclay next Monday evening at the Y. M. C. A., has been given for three seasons in the free lecture course instituted by the Board of Education of the city of New York, under the State laws, inaugurated with the idea of disseminating general information among the parents and friends of pupils attending the schools. The lecture met with the unqualified approval of the superintendent of the lecture course.

A Social Evening.

Miss Lucie P. Davis, of East Fifth street, entertained a few of her friends at her home last evening in honor of her guest, Miss Blodwin Sauvage, of Newark. The evening passed very pleasantly in games and conversation while refreshments were served in the latter part of the evening. Among those present were the Misses Mary A. Lnckey, Eleanor T. Van Deventer, Grace E. Overton and Messrs. Walter B. Rittenhouse, James A. Stafford, Wilbur F. Cornwell, Alvah Davis and Archibald Butler.

Special Rates to Trenton.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey have issued posters announcing a rate of one fare for the round trip from all stations in New Jersey to Trenton for the opening of the Legislature on Jan. 14th, and the inauguration of Governor-elect Griggs on Jan. 21st.

Glee Club Tonight.

Hear the humorous glees and fascinating music by the Brown University Glee, Banjo and Mandolin Club at Y. M. C. A. Hall tonight. Last season this club appeared in the Park Avenue Baptist church and was most favorably received.

No Choral Rehearsal Monday.

The regular rehearsal of the Choral Society will not be held Monday evening on account of the holidays. The rehearsals will be continued as usual on Monday, Jan. 6th.

Will Attend the Inauguration.

The Union Colored Republican Club met last evening and made arrangements to attend the inauguration of Gov. Griggs at Trenton.

THE GUN FROM PLAINFIELD.

It Fell Into Reckless Hands and Killed a Young Boy.

Sometime ago Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., had an old army musket in their rooms, which contained a charge of long standing. Everyone was cautioned not to snap the trigger.

The gun belonged to a Mr. Lum, a resident of this city at that time. When Mr. Lum moved to Greenpoint, L. I., the gun went along. His son together with some other boys in the neighborhood formed an organization known as the Greenpoint Rangers and the gun was brought into use. They would play Wild West, burglars, etc. The other day they were playing burglars, a boy named Lawless taking the part of the burglar, while the gun was in the hands of a boy named Babbington. The scene was around a woodshed. As Lawless was attempting to escape the latter boy aimed the gun and pulled the trigger. It went off and tore the entire left side of Lawless' face off, killing him instantly. The boy who did the shooting is frantic. He was arrested at once.

WINNERS AT EUCHRE.

The Young People's Club of Dunellen and North Plainfield Meets.

The Young People's Progressive Euchre Club, of Dunellen and North Plainfield, met last evening at the home of the Misses Benton, of Dunellen, and a very pleasant evening was spent. Miss Mattie Barrett and Miss Emma Marlow tied for the first ladies prizes, which Miss Barrett won on the playoff. Five of the young men tied for the masculine first prize and Robert Carpenter proved the lucky one of the five. Miss Bessie Benton and Will Terry received the second prizes. Dancing and conversation occupied the rest of the time, except when a collation was enjoyed.

The next meeting of the club will be held Thursday evening, January 9th, at the home of Miss Janie Churchill, of Dunellen.

An Out-of-town Christmas Remembrance.

A large fruit cake sent by Mrs. John Weir, from East Hamilton, New York, to Mrs. John Clapp, of Mercer avenue, to be dispensed to Mrs. Weir's North Plainfield friends as a Christmas remembrance, was the occasion of a pleasant gathering of many friends at Mrs. Clapp's home Christmas night. About forty guests were present and many were detained by previous engagements.

Get a Calendar.

Edward White will present to his customers tonight and Monday a very handsome calendar. It is well worth having. This house has just made some very advantageous purchases of fine dress goods and outing flannels and say that they will offer them at half their real value.

Running Two Markets Now.

Smalley Brothers, the North avenue butchers, yesterday afternoon took possession of the business belonging to the estate of their brother, Daniel Smalley, corner of Somerset and Race streets, and will superintend it for the estate until January 1st when they become the owners of the business.

Good Time for Foresters.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., met last night and received dues for the December month. A pleasant time was spent in good and welfare. On Friday, January 10th, the High Court officers will be present and install the officers elected. A collation and smoker will follow the installation.

In Honor of a Friend.

Miss Mabel Maxson informally entertained a few friends at her home at the corner of West Fourth street and Madison avenue, yesterday afternoon, in honor of Miss Mabel Stillman, of Westerly, R. I.

A Pastor Called.

Rev. C. L. Goodrich of the Congregational church has received a call to the pastorate of a Massachusetts church.

AGAINST THE CONSOLIDATION.

A BOROUGHITE WHO IS OPPOSED TO BECOMING A PART OF THE CITY

He Writes That the Advantages to be Gained in Government Are Not Worth the Increase in Taxes—A Bit of Sarcasm.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—The letter signed M, in your issue of last evening, in reference to the city tax rate, is indeed timely and furnishes to the borough taxpayer the strongest kind of an argument against union of the city and borough. In fact, the sentiment in favor of union seems to be almost wholly on the city side. So far, ex-Mayor Snunders is the only taxpayer who has spoken in favor of union and his reasoning shows that he is not familiar with the facts. He says that if union takes place the Borough taxpayer will get the benefit of the money he spends in the city.

On the contrary, the difference in rates (26 cents on $100 of valuation) this year would compel us to raise over $5,000 more than at present, and unless all signs fail the difference will become double what it is now. Any borough taxpayer can tell exactly how much it would have cost him this year by multiplying the valuation of his property by 26 cents on the $100. This represents the cost. Can we hope for corresponding benefit? The borough has equal postal and water facilities, the same light, equal fire protection, just as efficient, and a far handsomer, police force and far better roads. True we have no library nor high school. Would they be worth $5,000 a year to us? True we have no sewer beds. No! nor the disgrace of having put them directly under the nose of a neighboring town. Do we want to help pay the Union county road bonds, the school bonds and the sewer bonds, for the sake of saying there is no dividing line? Give the people on this side a chance to vote on the question and they will say no with emphasis unmistakable.

Borough Taxpayer.

An Informal Tea.

An informal, but very pleasant tea, was given by Miss Phœbe Lovell, of Crescent avenue, yesterday afternoon. She was assisted in receiving by Miss Laura Lovell, the Misses Gilbert and Miss Mabel Wilder, of New York. The table was presided over by the Misses Anthony and Miss Borden. About sixty were present during the afternoon.

Lectures by Mrs. Elwell.

Three lectures by Mrs. Maria Huntington Elwell have been arranged to be held at the home of Mrs. J. K. Myers, 139 East Seventh street, on Tuesdays at 4 o'clock p. m. January 14th. Dorothy Wordsworth's Diary; January 21st, Lowell, as known by his letters; January 28th, The Ethics of Shakespeare, as illustrated by Sear.

One Service Omitted.

The usual Friday evening service at the Church of the Redeemer was omitte last evening owing to the fact that the ladies were busily engaged in making preparations for the Christmas tree festival which is to take place this evening.

Milk Wagon Upset.

A milk wagon belonging to a man named Firstbrook, and in charge of a small boy, upset this morning on Orehard place in an attempt to turn the horse around. The wagon was damaged slightly but the horse did not run away.

Taxdermists.

Frank Hedden, the popular liveryman, and J. Welch, a professional taxdermist, have gone into partnership in the bird stuffing business. They already have a collection of twenty-six birds to which they are constantly adding.

The First Broad Tires.

E. H. Holmes, the coal dealer, is the first one in town to introduce the broad tires. He received a new wagon yesterday, the tires on the wheels measuring four inches.

He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

YACHT INQUIRY BEGUN

Dunraven Testifies Before the Committee.

Claims That Extra Ballast Was Put on Defender After Official Measurement — Asquith Conducts His Case—Sharply Cross-Examined By Choate—Guarding the Earl.

New York, Dec. 28.—The special committee appointed by the New York Yacht club to investigate the now famous charges brought by the Earl of Dunraven, part owner of Valkyrie III., against the people in charge of the Defender in the races for the America's cup last September, commenced the inquiry yesterday at the New York Yacht club on Madison avenue. J. Pierpont Morgan, George L. Rives, ex-secretary William C. Whitney, Hon. E. J. Phelps and Capt. A. T. Mahan, U. S. N., members of the investigating committee; C. Oliver Iselin, Woodbury Kane, W. Butler Duncan, jr., Latham A. Fish, S. Nicholson Kane, Commodore Morgan, Herbert C. Leeds, A. Cass Canfield, secretary of the America's Cup committee; captains Hank Haff and Terry, Mate Berry and Quartermasters Barbour and Staples of the Defender, and Billman of Boston, who rigged Defender's sails. Nat Herreshoff, who designed the Defender, and John C. Hyslop, the official measurer of the New York Yacht club, who measured both the Defender and Valkyrie, were present, as were also Lord Dunraven, Arthur Glennie, rear commodore of the Royal Portsmouth Yacht club; George R. Asquith, one of the best known admiralty court lawyers of the English bar, and I. A. G. Hamilton, Lord Dunraven's private secretary.

Conducted in Privacy.

The session was conducted in strict privacy, but a very clear idea of what transpired "in camera" was obtained, and the members who were also excluded from the investigation room gleefully discussed the manner in which "Choate handled Dunraven." The hearing was begun at 10.15. J. Pierpont Morgan acted as chairman and George L. Rives as secretary.

Asquith Presents Dunraven's Case.

Mr. Askquith opened the proceedings by presenting Lord Dunraven's case. He stated that no charge was made against any individual member of the Defender syndicate. Lord Dunraven did not claim that Mr. Iselin or any of the gentlemen having general charge of the boat were guilty of improper methods, but from his own observations and from what he had learned from others he was convinced that the load water line of the American boat had been increased after she had been officially measured just prior to the first race. This he believed was done by surreptitiously adding to her ballast so as to sink her four inches deeper in the water than when she was measured for the determination of her racing length.

Work That Attracted Suspicion.

Mr. Asquith referred to the positions of the two yachts on the night of Friday, Sept. 6 preceding the first race. He said that they were both in the Horseshoe inside Sandy Hook, and that the Defender's tender, the Hattie Palmer, lay alongside the American boat and her crew were at work on her until 1 o'clock in the morning. The next day those on board the Valkyrie and on board the City of Bridgeport noticed that the Defender was visibly deeper in the water than on the day before. After the first race Lord Dunraven spoke to Mr. Fish, the representative of the cup committee, and asked for a remeasurement of the Defender and a marking of the load-water line on the hull. Before this was done, Mr. Asquith said, the Defender lay off Bay Ridge all night with the Hattie Palmer beside her, and there was ample opportunity to remove the extra ballast. On the Sunday following the first race day when both yachts were remeasured their waterline length was found to be substantially the same as when first measured.

Dunraven on the Stand.

Lord Dunraven was the first witness. He told in detail the movements of the yachts before and after the first race. His counsel led him on from point to point until he had stated all that he knew of his own personal knowledge about the alleged change in water line. Lawyer Choate objected to any heresay evidence being introduced and the proceedings were held within legal lines. When Mr. Asquith finished with his client, Mr. Choate took his lordship in hand and put him through a rigid cross-examination. The Irish earl had a very uncomfortable time of it for an hour. Mr. Glennie was the second witness. He went over much the same ground as Lord Dunraven. Depositions made by Captains Cranfield and Sycamore and members of the Valkyrie crew were presented and then Mr. Asquith announced that Lord Dunraven's case was closed.

Herreshoff's Important Statement.

Mr. Choate then called Nat Herreshoff as the first witness for the defense. Mr. Herreshoff, who built the Defender, stated that between thirteen and fourteen tons of lead would be required to sink her four inches after she had been measured. He said that it was not possible to add that quantity of lead to the yacht's ballast and remove it without being seen by many persons. He had not finished his testimony when the investigation was adjourned until to-day.

Detectives Guard Him.

Lord Dunraven, Mr. Asquith and Mr. Hamiltan came out together and were followed by two central office detectives. Just what the detectives were there for would be hard to say. They fell in line about ten yards behind the visitors, but did not prevent a number of newspaper men from surrounding his lordship and his counsel. Lord Dunraven said that he had nothing to say, and Mr. Asquith said he would like to speak, but could not. The party, escorted by the detectives, then walked down to their apartments in East Twenty-fifth street.

BAYARD'S SPEECHES.

The McCall Resolution Calling for Information Modified.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The house committee on foreign affairs yesterday held a meeting and considered the Barrett and McCall resolutions relative to the speeches of Ambassador Bayard. The committee decided to report the McCall resolution in a modified form. It calls upon the president for information as to the alleged utterances of Mr. Bayard and the correspondence on the subject. The resolution has been very much toned down. It was thought that in view of present circumstances it would be much better to make the resolution simply one of inquiry, seeking information from the state department.

RETURN FARE REFUSED.

New Men Say the Philadelphia Traction Company Deceived Them.

Boston, Dec. 28.—Several men who went from Lynn to Philadelphia and supplied the places of strikers during the recent street car strike claim that the Philadelphia Traction company did not keep its agreement with them to furnish return transportation should the work prove not to be congenial, and threaten to bring suits against the company. One of them states that Supt. Schafler refused to pay his return fare and told him the best thing he could do was to get out, then threw him out bodily.

NO SUNDAY CLOSING.

Victory for Saloonkeepers in the Courts at Niagara Falls.

Niagara Falls, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The jury in the cases of Messrs. Mahony and Leary charged with violating the Sunday law by keeping their music halls open on that day, have rendered a verdict of not guilty. This virtually means that the Sunday closing movement is at an end, and that thereafter the Sundays here will be as they have always been, wide open, both as regards the saloons and the amusement places.

FOR LOSS OF HER HUSBAND.

Mrs. Hovenden Brings Suit for $50,000 Against the Penn Road.

Norristown, Pa., Dec. 28.—Mrs. Helen C. Hovenden, in behalf of her minor children, has begun a suit against the Pennsylvania Railroad company for $50,000 for the death of her husband, Thomas Hovenden, the famous artist, who was killed at a grade crossing on the company's line near here on Aug. 14 last. Mrs. Hovenden alleges that the company was negligent in not having a flagman at the crossing.

REV. DR. WHEELER DEAD.

An Aged Poughkeepsie Minister Killed by a Fall Down Stairs.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Dec. 28.—Rev. Dr. Francis B. Wheeler, who for over forty years has been the pastor of the Presbyterian church in this city, died yesterday afternoon. Yesterday morning he fell down a flight of stairs and, though making light of it at the time, he soon became unconscious and remained so until he expired. Concussion of the brain was said to be the cause of his death.

For Swindling Jewelry Firms.

Chicago, Dec. 28.—The grand jury, after hearing the testimony of Harry Leon, has voted indictments against Alvan W. Ketcham, O. C. St. Clair, John E. Budd and D. R. Tollman, charging them with being implicated in the Leon alleged conspiracy to swindle New York jewelry firms.

No New Bridge to East Hartford.

Hartford, Conn., Dec. 28.—Ex-Gov. Bulkeley, president of the Connecticut River Bridge & Highway District commission, said yesterday that the commission would not build a new temporary bridge across the Connecticut river to East Hartford as it had no funds for the purpose.

College Athletes Criticised.

New Haven, Conn., Dec. 28.—Prof. J. M. Hart, president of the Modern Language association of America, now in session here, in an address criticised severely the craze for athletics in the colleges, which, he said, infected good English with the coarse language of sports.

Treasury Gold Reserve.

Washington, Dec. 28.—The treasury gold reserve at the opening of business to-day with all withdrawals out stood at $63,868,320

TRAMPLED TO DEATH

Twenty-three Killed in Baltimore Theatre Panic.

At the Shout of "Fire" the Large Audience Began a Wild Scramble for the Exits and Men, Women and Children Were Crushed to Death or Injured.

Baltimore, Dec. 28.—Twenty-three bodies lie calm in death at the morgue this morning and twenty persons are in the accident wards of the city hospital as the result of a panic at Front Street theatre last night. The United Oriental Opera & Dramatic company of New York was presenting an opera in the Hebrew language to an audience of fully 3,000 persons. Shortly after the performance begun some one shouted "fire," and the immense gathering with one accord began a wild scramble for the exits. Men and women, boys and girls fought for a vantage ground, and a scene of the wildest confusion prevailed. The street doors were closed, and being hung to open inward, the struggling mass of humanity was brought to a standstill. Those in the rear climbed over the heads of the ones in front, and trampled the weaker ones beneath their feet. For several minutes the wild fight for liberty continued.

A Mass of Struggling Humanity.

When the policemen arrived on the scene they found a mass of struggling humanity five feet deep in the small foyer of the playhouse. One of the doors was forced open and the work of pulling out the dead and injured was commenced. An alarm of fire was turned in, followed immediately afterward by ambulance calls. Patrol wagons were also pressed into service and were soon hurrying to the city hospital with the unfortunates.

No Heroism Displayed.

An odor of gas was noticed before the curtain was rung up and an attendant made a search along the pipes with a lighted torch. Suddenly a small flame shot out and the cry of fire arose. The gas was turned off and the theatre left in darkness. This added to the wild panic which had already begun. The gas was quickly turned on at the meter, and as the theatre again became illuminated an indescribable scene of horror was presented. Men, women and children, crazed by fear, were fighting and struggling in the aisles and on the stairways in their efforts to reach the open air. Cries of "sit down" and "no danger" had no effect. Strong men climbed upon the shoulders of those in front, crushing the weaker men, women and children to the floor to be trampled to death by those still further in the rear. The excitement in the street around the theatre became so great that the police, fearing a riot, ordered a fire engine hose turned on the crowd and it was driven back.

Death List May Exceed Twenty-five.

A majority of the victims were young men, girls and children. Twenty-three dead bodies were finally taken from the theatre. Ten persons, more or less injured are at the city hospital, two of them may die Several others were taken to their homes in carriages suffering from contusions or broken bones. The death list will probably exceed twenty-five.

THOUSANDS SLAIN.

Armenians Die in Numbers Fighting for Zeitoun.

Constantinople, Dec. 28.—A semi-official dispatch from Mersina, near Adana, states that the Armenians lost 2,500 men and the Turks 250 in the fighting which resulted in the recapture of Zeitoun by the Turks. It has transpired that during the massacres at Marash a Mr. Leven, a teacher in the Protestant high school at that place, was subjected to the torture of being flayed alive and then deliberately killed.

St. Louis Makes a Fast Voyage.

New York, Dec. 28.—The American line steamer St. Louis arrived at the lightship at 10:40 o'clock last night, making the passage from Southampton in six days, thirteen hours and twelve minutes, thus eclipsing her best previous westward record by two hours and thirty-nine minutes. She encountered heavy gales.

New Electric Road Chartered.

Harrisburg, Pa., Dec. 28.—The Latrobe & Ligonier Electric Street Railway company of Westmoreland county has just been chartered. It will be twelve miles in length and the route will be from Loyal Hanna creek through the township of Unity and boroughs of Youngstown and Ligonier.

DISASTERS IN BUSINESS

Mercantile Failures for the Year Just Closing.

13,013 Suspensions Against 12,721 in 1894, an Increase of 2.2 Per Cent.—Failures in 1895 the Largest Ever Reported, with the Single Exception of 1893.

New York, Dec. 28.—Bradstreet's will say to-day regarding mercantile failures of the year: The usual annual report of business failures throughout the United States for the calendar year just closed, it will be understood, as explained in preceding years, covers a complete year, beginning a few days prior to the close of 1894. It should also be explained that the only business embarrassments included as failures are those in which total liabilities are in excess of actual assets, except in cases of banks in which instances a suspension of payment during business hours, for however brief an interval, is regarded as a failure. The total number of failures in the United States in 1895 is 13,013, contrasted with 12,721 in 1894, an increase of 2.2 per cent. This is the largest number of failures ever reported since the record was begun, with the single exception of 1893, when the aggregate was 15,560, compared with which year the falling off in 1895 is 16 per cent.

After Effects of the Panic.

An increase in the second year following one of panic is exceptional. In the panic of 1884 the total number of failures was 11,620; in the following year the aggregate was 11,116, and in the year succeeding it was 10,568, nearly 5 per cent. less than in the first year after the panic of 1884. The total amount of liabilities of failing firms, corporations and individuals in the United States during 1895 amounted to $158,842,445, more than $9,000,000 in excess of the total in 1894, an increase of less than 6 per cent. or three times the rate of increase in the total number of failures. The grand total of assets of failing firms, corporations and individuals during the year amounted to $88,115,530, or more than $8,000,000 in excess of the like total one year ago, an increase of more than 10 per cent., showing a relatively greater degree of solvency of those embarrassed than in the preceding year. This record of the total number of failures, together with gross liabilities and assets for 1895, makes it plain that the after effects of the panic of 1893 were more far-reaching than anticipated one year ago.

Business Population.

The total number of individuals, firms and corporations having a recognized place in business at the close of 1895, as shown by the preceding statement, was about 1,054,000, showing that the business population of the country has only fairly begun to show an increasing movement compared with a year ago, when the total was 1,047,000, and as compared with two years ago, when the total was only 1,050,000. In the panic year 1893 the ratio of commercial, industrial and financial deaths to the so-called total business population was about 1.5 in every 100 of those of the total engaged in business, while one year ago the commercial death rate amounted to about 1.21 in 100 of the total engaged in business. This year the totals already given indicate a commercial death rate of about 1.23 in every 100, as contrasted with an average commercial death rate during the five years 1890 to 1894, inclusive, of 1.20 in every 100 engaged in business.

Business of the Week.

As is the rule in Christmas week, wholesale trade has been quiet. The holidays, the close of the year and stock-taking tend to make business slow and promise only a light trade until late in January. At various cities, notably New York, Boston, Baltimore and Chicago, anticipations as to the character of trade early in the coming year are hopeful. The week's features in commercial lines are a rather better trade in Christmas specialties than expected, a check to business at the west from long-continued rains, extremely light stocks of goods in hands of retailers, the strength of wool and expectation of holders that it will advance should the proposed duty be placed on it, together with the pronounced movement of funds from the west east, not only to pay interest, but because of the better demand for currency at larger financial centers.

Believed Rustlers Murdered Them.

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 28.—Mrs. Susie Hess of Pueblo, Col., informed the police here yesterday that in her opinion her father, mother, sister and brother had been murdered by cattle "rustlers." The Donnelly family had started for Lewiston, Idaho, by wagon trail from Ellensburg.

Earthquake Shocks in Spain.

Madrid, Dec. 28.—Earthquake shocks have been experienced in the districts of Orense, Viana, Puebla de Tribes, Lugudini and Valderas, in the province of Galicia. Several houses collapsed, but no persons are reported to have been killed.

Want High Protection on Wool.

Oneonta, N. Y., Dec. 28.—The Cheviot Sheep Breeders' association of the United States and Canada at a meeting here yesterday passed a resolution urging the restoration of the full McKinley tariff on wool.

Cadotte Executed.

Helena, Mont., Dec., 28.—Joseph Cadotte was executed at Fort Benton yesterday for the murder of his trapping partner about a year ago on account of a girl.

VOTE THIS AFTERNOON

House Continues Debate on Bond Bill To-day.

Efforts To Rush the Measure to a Vote Failed—Johnson of California, in a Sensational Speech, Severely Criticized the Bill—Tilt Between Senators Hill and Teller.

Washington, Dec. 28.—In accordance with the decision of the committee on ways and means reached last Monday Chairman Dingley yesterday reported to the house the bill to provide for the restoration and protection of the gold reserve by the sale of three per cent. bonds and to authorize the issue of certificates of indebtedness to meet deficiencies in revenue. But under the protests of a large number of republican members, the bill was amended by the committee at a meeting held during the morning, and the programme calling for a vote on the passage of the bill at 5 o'clock in the afternoon was changed so as to give six hours' additional debate, three last night and three to-day, the vote to be taken at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The resolution from the committee on rules to this effect was adopted by a vote of 195 to 101, after it had been antagonized by Messrs. Crisp, Bailey and McMillin; the republicans refraining from discussing it.

To Redeem Greenbacks Only.

The debate on the bond bill was opened by Mr. Dingley, who advocated its passage in a speech of scarcely an hour's duration. He said its provisions would tend to strengthen and protect the gold reserve by making it a fund for the redemption of greenbacks only, and not a fund to be drawn upon for current expenses. The passage of the bill was also advocated in the course of the afternoon by Mr. Grosvenor, rep., Ohio, as a patriotic duty; by Mr. Lacey, rep., Ohio, and Mr. Johnson, rep., N. D. It was opposed by Mr. Turner, dem., Ga., who said the administration wanted all the paper money retired, and that if he had an opportunity to do so, would have offered to so amend the bill; by Mr. Patterson, dem., Tenn., who said the duty of congress was to restore confidence in the currency of the country, and by Messrs. Swanson, dem., Va. and Wheeler, dem., Ala.

Johnson's Sensational Charges.

The sensation of the day came at a late hour in the afternoon, when Mr. Johnson, rep., Cal., voiced in impassioned manner the opposition to the the ranks of the majority. He said it gave the lie to every republican speech and every republican platform, and he pleaded with his republican associates to vote against it. He was cheered by the democrats and many republicans as he predicted the defeat of the first section of the bill, and declared that the only true relief to be found was in the free and unlimited coinage of silver. Before the debate was entered upon by the unanimous report of the committee on elections, No. 1, which commended Mr. McGann for his fairness and justice in waiving his claim to the seat, Hugh Belknap was declared to be entitled to the seat from the third Illinois district, for which Lawrence E. McGann held the certificate. Mr. Belknap was sworn in by the speaker.

Financial Question in Senate.

The financial question came to the front in the senate yesterday in the form of a joint resolution introduced by Mr. Hill, dem., N. Y., to the effect that all bonds to be hereafter issued shall be made payable in gold coin or in standard silver dollars, at the option of the holders; and that no bond containing such shall bear a higher rate of interest than 3 per cent. He made a long, carefully prepared speech on the subject, winding up with the declaration that his proposition was a measure simply for temporary relief, but that as a measure of permanent relief it was reasonably clear that all United States notes and treasury notes should be redeemed and then cancelled.

Tilt Between Teller and Hill.

Mr. Teller, rep., Col., was wrought up to a state of indignation by Mr. Hill's proposition and speech; and in his invective against the president, the secretary of the treasury and treasury subordinates made a cutting allusion to "the tide-water waiter who now assumes to speak on the financial matter." Everybody believed that it was the New York senator who was thus referred to; but when Mr. Hill subsequently took up the offensive epithet he was assured in the most positive manner by Mr. Teller that he had had no reference whatever to the senator from New York, but had only meant to apply the epithet to such subordinates as the director of the mint and the assistant treasurer at New York. Mr. Hill apparently accepted the disavowal, but avenged himself in some degree by the intimation that the director of the mint was as competent to speak on the financial question as gentlemen who hailed from the wilds of Colorado.

No Action Taken.

The joint resolution remains on the vice-president's table to be taken up for further discussion, in connection with a substitute offered by the new populist senator from North Carolina, Mr. Butler, to make the interest and principal of all coin-bearing bonds payable in the cheaper of the two metals. A joint resolution for the acceptance of the ram Katahdin was reported from the committee on naval affairs and passed. The senate then adjourned until Monday next.

The Legislature convenes Tuesday, January 14th.

Among the things which it is hoped that the new year will see in Plainfield is the extension of the street railway.

It is evident that Roselle needs a building inspector. A $2,000 building, in which the post office was to be located, was razed by the wind Thursday night.

If our bankers and business men wish to avoid the mischief which menaces the country, and have any influence with members of Congress, they should at once use that influence to urge the necessity of pursuing the straightforward, manly course of offering to pay in as good money as that which it is desired to borrow.—Chicago Tribune.

Elizabeth people have been greatly troubled during the past few months over the unhealthy condition of the Elizabeth river, which has emitted such a stench as to be a menace to the health of the city. Unlike Plainfield with the Green brook pollution problem, they are unable to prevent sewage from flowing into the river, and in consequence it is proposed that the city spend $20,000 to remedy the difficulty by a new system of emptying the sewage into the river.

The news that Clara Barton has consented to go to Turkey to take charge of the distribution of the funds for the relief of the suffering will be welcome to all lovers of humanity. There are many reasons why the Red Cross Society is peculiarly well adapted for the work. It is purely humanitarian. No suspicion of religious or racial prejudice attaches to it. Should it find Moslems in need it will help them as quickly as Armenians. Most of all, however, it will carry the support of all civilized Governments, and it is scarcely possible that even the Turks will make any attempt to hinder, or refuse to protect, the agents.—Camden Democrat.

The splendid service which the Muhlenberg Hospital affords to the sick and maimed of Plainfield is recognized and appreciated by every citizen." The fact, however, that only allopathic physicians are allowed to practice in the hospital, while many paying patients are of homœopathic tendencies, seems to be an unwise, and, at times, an unfair rule. The action recently taken by the Board of Directors of the Passaic Hospital Association is opportune to this point. Formerly only members of the Passaic City Medical Society were appointed to the staff, and that society is composed of allopathic physicians. The reason given for the change is that many leading families refused to help the hospital because homœopathists were not recognized. The Daily Press would commend this action of the Passaic authorities to the attention of the Board of Governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital.

—U. B. Crane, the hatter, of 120 West Front street, has received three cases of the new 1896 hats, and to start them will give the best bargains ever offered.

—The committee to arrange for Union evangelistic meetings would report that they have arranged to begin the same in the First M.E. church, Monpay evening, January 13th. A fuller report will be given next week.

Walked with Crutches

Rheumatism—Eczema—Swelled Neck—Hood's Cured.

"For two years I have been sick, having been confined to the house for a year. I have had eczema for nine years, having skilled physicians, but received no benefit. Last winter I caught cold and became which put me on crutches. Last July I commenced to use Hood's Sarsaparilla, and before I had finished one bottle I laid the crutches aside. After taking two bottles the eczema had left me and I was almost entirely free from the effects of a swelled neck. I know that it was Hood's Sarsaparilla that cured me and I think it cannot be recommended too highly. Although 57 years old, I feel young again." MRS. S. P. SIMMONS, East Springfield, Ohio.

Commercial Palace - - Babcock Building.

December the 26th, 1895.

Thanks To the many friends and patrons of the Commercial Palace who so very liberally patronized the same during the year, and especially the holiday season, running the amount up in excess of last year.

Inasmuch as perhaps no other mercantile establishment in Plainfield has ever received public support to the extent of this house, and so many asking the proprietor about its good and welfare; we thought a few plain words might not be out of place at this time.

The second year has now so far elapsed that a pretty correct idea can be formed of its results. The first year's business, of course, was done under great disadvantages, and extra expense, and a large decline in prices, and notwithstanding all that a very satisfactory net gain was made, fully equaling the average yearly net gain of the business during the last thirteen years.

From the amount of business done during the second year up to date, with advantages in its favor over last year we are fully warranted in believing that the present year will show a very large increase over last year.

We are led to make these remarks: not to boast of our success; but simply because there are quite a number of people in Plainfield who thought when we took the Babcock Building, nearly two years ago, and opened it as we did with such a large stock of all kinds of goods, that we were about from ten to fifteen years in advance of the needs of the town and they feared that the town would not sustain such a Mammoth Store.

We think from the facts as stated above; the results of nearly two years business, there is no foundation in fact for such an opinion any longer.

The citizens of Plainfield and the surrounding towns and country have given their patronage and good will to a remarkable extent, and proven the success of the concern beyond all doubt. Thanks again for the same.

Now a few words about our grocery department, "new departure." Nearly a year has elapsed since it was begun, and we have found out some interesting facts in regard to it in that time.

FIRST: It does not perceptably interfere with other grocery stores, as upon inquiry they have told us so.

SECOND: Our "cut" prices at the outset, caused lower prices to prevail in our city, and consequently many who were buying their groceries at the New York department stores, because of high prices here, as soon as they learned of the change here, bought of the local grocer instead of going to New York.

THIRD: Thereby our "new departure" was an indirect benefit to the local grocer, and also to the consumer who got lower prices in consequence. That is plain solid fact, and a mighty strong argument in favor of our very neat, clean grocery department in our big basement, in our big dry goods store, and don't you forget it. The economical housewife and those who wish to make a little money go a good ways in buying fine groceries at low prices are with us every time. They like it.

FOURTH: The grocers we believe have come to look at it in a different light too. They were a little scared at first but now seem to have forgotten that we have a department at all.

Now the fact is, the Commercial Palace is not yet two years old: a mere baby you might say as to age, and if with the start it now has, and lives to be say ten or twenty years old what in the name of progress may be expected? Why Wanamaker will be nowhere.

We will soon be in the midst of our annual stock taking, and now is a good time to come in and look around for big bargains as all Winter goods and odds and ends must be closed out regardless of cost.

The conclusion of the whole matter is: The twin enterprises of Plainfield, the Babcock Building and the Commercial Palace are not so far ahead of Plainfield's needs as some people may have supposed, but on the contrary a "Jackson" Building a second Babcock Building is also needed, and a Powlison & Jones Building as well.

The Babcock Building is fast filling up with a good class of tenants; drawing citizens from out of town to our city, and the Commercial Palace is increasing its volume of trade right along; keeping thousands of dollars from going to New York that formerly went there, and drawing thousands of dollars of trade from nearby towns thereby benefiting other branches of business in our city as well.

Oh! Not too far ahead but just up to date. Plainfielder's are progressive people and require the best of everything, and if they have an opportunity will give their hearty support and right royally too as they have done in the above case.

Sergeant Kiely, of the P. C. C. bowling team, made the highest score of the season, 211, Thursday night on the C. Y. M. L. alleys. The Sergeant is a steady bowler and a strong man on the team.

The highest score ever made on the Park Club alleys or on any alley in Plainfield for that matter, was rolled last evening by William M. McCutchen. His score was 276. In the first frame he made nine and then put in ten strikes.

The Benedicts and Bachelors of the Park Club will meet again this evening on the Park Club alleys. The teams will be the same as they were last Saturday, and both will do their best to win the game. The Benedicts have already won one game.

The weakest game ever bowled by the Plainfield Catholic Club was that at Elizabeth last evening when they met the Y. M. C. L. A. team in the two-ball dioscean league tournament. The cause of it was attributed to the very poor light on the alleys, thus preventing their getting a bee-line on the head pin. The home team being used to the alleys put up a much better game. The score in full is as follows:

WITH ROD AND GUN.

Wm. Carman, the crack live-bird shot of the Dunellen Gun Club, will show the boys how to stop them all on New Year's day.

At the shoot at live birds held Christmas Day by the Dunellen Gun Club, Sisty, Brantingham and Lindsey made the best scores, the others following closely.

The Dunellen Gun Club will have another shoot on New Year's Day, and invites the neighboring trap shooters to attend. Rapid fire system at targets, and the live birds will be trapped from the latest and fastest traps.

The Dunellen Gun Club held an informal shoot at live birds and targets Wednesday. There was no programme adhered to, but pigeon, targets and dead mark shooting under different conditions. There was a very large attendence. There was 120 out of 140 of the fastest kind of pigeons killed from off of the latest improved traps.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The Victor Wheelmen will meet on next Thursday.

Bicycles make very good Christmas presents, and the trade felt the increase. The F. L. C. Martin Cycle Company sold three Crescents to T. V. Mimford, a lady's Cleveland Swell Special to George Evans, and a girl's Crescent to H. G. Runkle. Six Crescents and a Waverly were the Christmas purchases at the Newark store of Kerr & Martin.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

One Minute Cough Cure is rightly named. It affords instant relief from suffering when afflicted with a severe cough or cold. It acts on the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs and never fails to give immediate relief. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

A loud ring of your doorbell in the dead hours of night is alarming. So is the first hollow sound of a cough from one's husband, wife, son or daughter. It is disease knocking, with perhaps a certain silent visitor waiting not far away. Arrest that cough. Stop it. Stop it at the start. A few day's use of Ely's Pineola Balsam and the danger is past. Relief is immediate; a cure certain. This remedy is rich in the curative principles of the balsams and also contains certain ingredients that are new.

HOLIDAY CHEER.

In olden times, when glad-tongued bells proclaimed
The hallowing Christmas-tide, the yule-log famed
On hearthstones burned, to light with timely cheer
The day most jubilant of all the year.
Now from "Black-Diamonds" comes the radiant glow
That makes your households warmth and comfort know—
And these, of grades the purest ever mined.
At ruling prices and well-screened you'll find
Where yards of Geo. O. Stevens meets your view—
On Front street, west, and near Grant avenue.

ONLY A DREAM.

In future ages which we may not see,
When those that follow have begun to be,
What strange, eventful things will happen then!
And what great thoughts will stir the minds of men!
If Sunday papers keep right on and grow,
They'll cover houses, just like sheets of snow;

But if the houses keep on growing, too,
Perhaps their doors the papers may go through
And there'll be carrier boys of wondrous girth
And then they'll have to have a larger earth.
I had a vision. Quick across my sight
There sped a future carrier in his flight—
A train of gilded cars up in the sky
That flitted through the air as swallows fly;
The engine made of burnished brass, with wings
That reached toward heaven. They were wondrous things.
And with his hand upon the brake I gazed
Upon the future carrier boy amazed.
Behind him stretched in one long line the cars,
Packed full of papers that had come from Mars,
For so immense the printing presses grew
On Mars they had to run the papers through.
On came the train, and as it hovered round

Assistants dropped the papers to the ground,
Supplying newsstands. Then from door to door
The train proceeded, dropping thousands more.
So interested I became, alas!
I did not think of just what route 'twould pass
Until the train came over me. Great Scott!
I tried to run and found that I could not.
And then I woke, supposing I was dead.
That boy had dropped a paper on my head!

TOM MASSON.

You Must Not Waste Time.

"Dost thou love life?" asked Benjamin Franklin. "Then do not squander time, for time is the stuff life is made of."

Once when Franklin was in business as a printer and bookseller in Philadelphia a man came into his place and dawdled about, examining the books exposed for sale. At last, having made up his mind as to what he wanted, he inquired the price of the book chosen and the clerk said $1.

"Can't you take less than that?" said the man in feigned surprise. "One dollar is the price," said the clerk.

But the would be purchaser was not satisfied. "I want to see Mr. Franklin about this," he said. "Mr. Franklin is very busy in the pressroom," said the clerk. "But I must see him," said the man.

So the clerk called Franklin, and of him the man inquired the price of the book. "One dollar and a quarter," was the philosopher's reply. "But your clerk offered it to me for $1," protested the man. "True," said Franklin, "and I could better have afforded to have taken $1 than to have left my work at this time."

"Well," said the man, "what is the very best you can do in making a price on this volume?" "One dollar and a half," said Franklin. The man's eyes grew wide. "Why, you said only $1.25 a moment ago." "So I did," said Franklin, "and I could have better afforded to take that sum then than $1.50 now." The man paid the price without any further quarreling. He had learned a lesson that Franklin wished to teach—that time is too valuable to waste.

Sentiments of Famous Men.

Here are a few wise sayings:

When Peter Cooper was asked at an advanced age how he had accomplished so much and had preserved his strength of body and mind so well, he said, "I always find something to keep me busy."

A. Bronson Alcott crystallized a great truth when he said, "We mount to heaven mostly on the ruins of our cherished schemes, finding our failures were successes."

Charles Dickens uttered a sentiment that every young man who desires success would do well to lay to heart, "The one serviceable, safe, remunerative quality in every study and pursuit is the quality of attention."

John Wesley showed how foolish it is for men who hope to win to spend their time in fretting when he said, "I dare no more fret than I dare curse and swear."

Sir Walter Raleigh, when asked how he managed to achieve so many and such diverse things in such brief times as he required for accomplishment, said, "When I have anything to do, I go and do it."

The everlasting truth that character is sure to win success was put in concrete form when William M. Evarts said of a famous preacher, "The man behind the sermon is the secret of John Hall's power."

John Stuart Mill showed how possible it is for a man to rise above his environment in these words, "Though character is formed by circumstances, our own desires can do much to shape these circumstances."

THE PASSING OF THE NEW YEAR.

These Mile Posts on the Journey of Life Fly by Faster One by One.

It has no doubt often occurred to you, fellow traveler on Time's coach, that the milestones of the New Years fly past much faster now than they did in the early stages of your journey.

What an interminably long wait it seemed to be between the first New Year's day of your memory and the second. Perhaps you were 6 or 8 years old then and in school for the first term. If so, New Year's had its sorrow as well as its joy, for it was the last day of the midwinter holidays and next day you had to begin your wrestling with the intellectual arithmetic and the geography and maybe with the elements of the English grammar. Look back now and pity yourself. Do not make the mistake of most of our acquaintances and declare that particular New Year's to have been the happiest of your existence. Pshaw! It was perhaps the most miserable. The fact that you have forgotten your childhood's miseries does not make it true that you had none.

It was several years after that before the New Year began to move appreciably faster. Perhaps it was not till your sister and your pretty dark eyed cousin began to chaff you about the silky down upon your upper lip, and your portly, comfortable father, in speaking of some doings of yours of which he did not approve, referred to you as a "foolish young man." Then you noticed the flight of time, I'll be bound. No one had called you a "young man" before. You were ready to forgive the governor's chidings for that. You rejoiced that although you were very young indeed you had yet been called a man.

At that time you had great respect for your own opinions on most matters. You began to shave forthwith, and you fell into the habit of calling your chum, who was of about your own age, "old man." If any one called you "my boy," you felt resentful. It seemed so utterly out of place. But you had not yet learned that manhood brings with it certain definite and sometimes heavy responsibilities. It is possible you discovered this significant truth very soon afterward, though perhaps it was not till two or three more New Years had passed. At all events the knowledge came to you with somewhat of a shock—possibly pleasant, possibly otherwise. At all events, it was not long after that that you found out that your knowledge was not universal and your wisdom was not infallible.

And ever since the New Years have flown by faster and faster. After awhile your girth grew greater. Then there were lines in parts of your face that had once been smooth. The top of your cranium, that was once thick thatched, grew bare and smooth and shining. Glasses came next, and your hands wrinkled up. Then there were occasional twinges in your joints, and what hair was left grew gray, then white. Only yesterday you began to carry a cane—once you carried it for ornament—because it helped you when walking. Yesterday? you ask. Oh, yes, I remember. It was a good ten years ago, but you see the New Years fly so fast now.

What! Are you going to leave the coach? Is your life journey done? You amaze me. I thought you were good for several more New Years. Well, goodby, my boy; goodby.

So he is gone. But, bless me, he was only 75. He was a young man yet. Now, those of you who are yet on the coach with me—let us give the new year 1896 a rousing welcome! And may the road between here and 1897 be a smoother one for all of us than was that of 1895!

E. Y. K.

FIRST OF JANUARY RESOLUTIONS.

Notions That, Carried Out, Will Help to Make 1896 a Pleasant Year.

If you wish to avoid one fruitful cause of discomfort during the coming year, make a resolution not to grumble about the weather. Kicking and fault finding never made a hot day cooler or a cold day warmer; but, on the other hand, they always intensify the current weather trouble immensely.

If you want to make your husband good natured, resolve to help him to have his own way invariably. He probably will anyhow, and the adoption and carrying out of this resolution will save a whole lot of trouble.

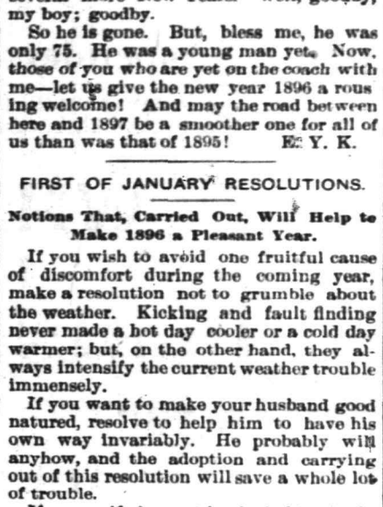
If your wife has got in the habit of asking you for money every day, resolve to make her a regular allowance and then keep your resolution. You'll be as much surprised by the result as she will be by the resolution.

If you have become disheartened by the depravity of your fellow men, resolve to stop thinking about it and try to do a favor every day for some one of them. It will amaze you to see how quickly the world at large will improve in your eyes.

If the new year finds you clean discouraged because of a lack of progress in 1895, review the 12 months carefully and see if wasted time has not been at the bottom of your failures. If it has, resolve to make the minutes count in 1896. A year is made up of minutes, and you cannot well fail to advance between New Year's days if you make every minute count.

If you have had hard work keeping your New Year's resolutions in the past, resolve this year to make none and to conduct yourself in such a way that none will be necessary. Good practice is better than good resolves always.

Handicapped.



Dashaway—Well, uncle, I suppose you will have roast chicken for your New Year's dinner, eh?

Uncle Ebony—No, sah. It's a leetle cold and de chickens dey doan' roost outside no mo'.

New Yer Greeting.

A gude New Year to ane and a',
And mony may ye see
And during a' the years to come,
Oh, happy may ye be.

What is CASTORIA

Castoria is Dr. Samuel Pitcher's prescription for Infants and Children. It contains neither Opium, Morphine nor other Narcotic substance. It is a harmless substitute for Paregoric, Drops, Soothing Syrups, and Castor Oil. It is Pleasant. Its guarantee is thirty years' use by Millions of Mothers. Castoria destroys Worms and allays feverishness. Castoria prevents vomiting Sour Curd, cures Diarrhœa and Wind Colic. Castoria relieves teething troubles, cures constipation and flatulency. Castoria assimilates the food, regulates the stomach and bowels, giving healthy and natural sleep. Castoria is the Children's Panacea—the Mother's Friend.

Castoria.

"Castoria is an excellent medicine for children. Mothers have repeatedly told me of its good effect upon their children."

DR. G. C. OSGOOD,
Lowell, Mass.

"Castoria is the best remedy for children of which I am acquainted. I hope the day is not far distant when mothers will consider the real interest of their children, and use Castoria instead of the various quack nostrums which are destroying their loved ones, by forcing opium, morphine, soothing syrup and other hurtful agents down their throats, thereby sending them to premature graves."

DR. J. F. KINCHELOE,
Conway, Ark.

Castoria.

"Castoria is so well adapted to children that I recommend it as superior to any prescription known to me."

H. A. ARCHER, M. D.,
111 So. Oxford St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

"Our physicians in the children's department have spoken highly of their experience in their outside practice with Castoria, and although we only have among our medical supplies what is known as regular products, we are free to confess that the merits of Castoria has won us to look with favor upon it."

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

TURNING NEW LEAVES.

"Now, what is that noise?" said the glad New Year.
"Now, what is that singular sound I hear?
As if all the paper in all the world
Were rattled and shaken and twisted and twirled."

"Oh, that," said the jolly old Earth, "is the noise
Of all my children, both girls and boys,
A-turning over their leaves so new,
And all to do honor, New Year, to you."

GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

BY VIOLA ROSEBORO'.

[Copyright, 1895, by American Press Association.]

"Papa, I want to talk to you a little." It was the last day of the old year when Mrs. Marmont, with these words, stepped into Mr. Leland's "den." Mrs. Marmont's low voice was sad, and her slender, dark clad, listless figure was sad, and her small, aquiline beautiful face was sad, and if there was anything Mr. Leland disliked it was sadness. He was finding things gloomy enough before Linda entered in this creepy way with this request for a little talk.

"God bless my soul, Linda," said her parent, "I don't want any solemn little talk now, with the old year dying under our noses."

The poor man threw himself back in his big leather chair and scrutinized his daughter resentfully and reflectively.

Mrs. Marmont got up from the rug, where she knelt, ministering to the fire, and stood staring at the light leaping flames. "I don't know why people think that only the old have any right to be serious," said she. "It seems to me it is when you are young and have all your life to make or mar before you that you have the best right to be serious."

"GOING TO GET MARRIED AGAIN?"

"Why, why, Linda, my girl! It isn't—you haven't come to tell me you are going to get married again?"

"Married again!" exclaimed the young woman. "No one ought to get married again; it doesn't sound pretty."

"I didn't mean to say that. I am an unfortunate, blundering old ancestor. Don't be too hard on me. You know, daughter, I'd love to see you happy, even if you did leave me to the mercy of the housemaids."

"Would you, father, would you?" Linda came and sat on the arm of his chair and stroked his grizzled hair.

"Out with it! Who is it? I'm braced," said the father grimly.

"Oh, I'm not going to marry. I'm not," cried Mrs. Marmont, with even unnecessary fervor. "You ought to know that. You know, I wasn't very happy, and—and I want to be a deaconness!"

"A what?"

"You know, the order of deaconnesses they have in the church, papa. They give their lives to good works."

"Lord, Lord! It sounds as if they wore bloomers. They don't, do they?"

"The costume is very becoming," said the widow, with frosty severity.

"Well, that's something to be thankful for."

"Papa, you must treat me like a grown person for three minutes. I want to tell you that I have made up my mind. I'm going to enter the novitiate. I'm going to be a deaconness."

She stood in the middle of the room, her hands clasped before her and looking terribly formidable for such a slender young beauty in good clothes. "It's my one resolution for the new year," she went on very quietly, but her breath coming in irregular pants. "I thought I ought to tell you as soon as I had made up my mind, and I made it up today, on this last day of the old year, and it's the last, too, of my old life. I'm tired of the frivolity and emptiness of the old life."

She moved toward the door; as she laid her hand on the knob she turned and said to the silent man:

"I'm not going to the ball tomorrow night, but don't let my movements disturb yours."

"I trust you have not at this hour concluded to throw over your Aunt Sarah's dinner, too," he said, with sarcastic intonations.

"No," was the answer. "I don't know how Aunt Sarah's dinners could ever be looked upon as festivities. I'm only trying to sober my mind, and I expect that to be a very sobering function."

Aunt Sarah's dinner was to be eaten that very evening, and the guests were to dance and play whist and watch the old year out. It was to be a family party with a sprinkling of such other people as could be brought to join a family party—certainly not likely was it that they would be very gay members of society.

"I don't care what you do with it," said Mrs. Marmont, when her maid was doing her hair. "It's not important how I look."

"Why, madame, it ees not a ladees' luncheon you dress for! There will be the gentlemen. Is it not so?"

The mistress laughed and answered that it didn't matter.

Mrs. Marmont went to the despised dinner looking uncommonly imposing and handsome. When she entered her aunt's drawing room, a little admiring hush and then a little admiring murmur greeted the softly draped white figure, such as was hardly to be expected from a company so familiar with the sight of her. But all were not equally familiar with it; an athletic, bronzed young man who was talking to Mrs. Lounders (his hostess, Aunt Sarah) contributed to the hush, so to speak, by stopping short in the middle of his sentence as his eyes rested on Mrs. Marmont, and then ejaculating, "Is it—it is"—

"Linda," interrupted Mrs. Lounders, "of course. Didn't you expect to see her?"

"I had heard she was abroad—she hasn't changed so much as I first thought."

"Oh, no, a woman doesn't change much between 24 and 26, Mr. Lester. The fashions change, but you mustn't talk to her as if you were surprised—she isn't decrepit—nor to me either; it's not flattering to a woman of my age."

"She's handsomer than ever, as, of course, she ought to be," he added, smiling with a little bow to the elderly lady.

"You must take her in to dinner, Mr. Lester. She'll think it a godsend to have a new partner in my house."

Mrs. Marmont seemed a little surprised, too, at seeing Mr. Lester. She looked for just an instant as if he were a ghost, and then she took his arm, saying gayly: "Why, I thought you were in South America. Are you sure you are not and that this is not your astral body here among your dull old friends?"

"I know too well that it is my very self," he answered quietly.

"I came back with a New Year's resolution to stay at home," he continued. "I suppose I ought to do that. My mother and my mother's affairs need me, and we always resolve to do what we ought at the beginning of the new year, don't we? But I don't know; already I'm thinking of flight, of going to Egypt on something that can be called business."

"Why, it's terrible to think how New York must bore you." Mrs. Marmont spoke half drawlingly—rather as if she were bored herself.

"Bore me? You don't remember me as a bored person, do you?"

Mr. Lester did not dance. He devoted himself to whist with ancient and nervous partners. Mrs. Marmont never played whist, and she danced eagerly for awhile with young cousins and old uncles, but she lost her interest in that exercise early. Perhaps it was too frivolous to suit a budding deaconness. She sat down at a piano in an alcove away from all the company and softly played bits of old melodies. Lester turned his head and listened to the faint sound of a "song without words" till an indignant partner sternly recalled him to business. Mrs. Marmont and her father were among the first to leave. She came up to Lester just after the new year began, looking very stately and yet very kind and put out a straightforward little hand.

"I hope you won't go away," she said, "and"—there was a little break in the continuity of her speech, then she went on—"and I hope you'll come and see me."

"Thank you," said Lester and nothing more.

"Let's not talk now," she said wearily when her father began to speak of her "wild scheme" on the way home. She dismissed her maid and quietly and swiftly prepared for bed, but after the lights were out, as she lay in the dark, she began to sob like a little lonely, famished child, and the gray winter dawn was creeping into the room before the sobs sank into long quivering sighs, that did not break the light slumber that at last blessed her.

The next day Lester was standing listlessly at a club window. He had tried to talk to his mother that morning about the probability of his again leaving her, and that lady had, first impatiently and then plaintively, refused to listen to any such suggestion. As he stood there Mrs. Marmont passed.

Lester's face flushed and paled. He turned from the window. He called a cab. "Drive where you like for ten minutes," he said to the cabby, and at the end of eight he told him where to go, and presently the cab drew up in front of one of the old fashioned, luxurious houses of North Washington square.

"Mrs. Lindsay," said Lester when he was shown into the presence of the white haired, bright eyed old lady he had come to see, a friend he had known from his childhood, "I'm not going to beat about the bush. I've come to ask you something. I"—

"Sit down. Once I'd have thought it must be an offer of marriage; now I suppose you've come to decide some wager according to my memory of ancient history."

"No, but I have come because you know everything, and because you are so discreet. This is it: Where—no! Who did Linda Marmont marry?"

"Which Linda Marmont?"

"What! There are two? Great Jove!" Lester only breathed this apostrophe. It was as if he had not strength left for vocal effort.

"Of course there are two. Though it is rather odd, with a name like that. You didn't meet—no, you weren't here that season that Tom Marmont's young niece came here from back in the country somewhere, and Linda, our Linda, brought her out and married her off to Mark Weber. They are traveling in Spain now."

"How in the world did she come to do such a cheeky thing as be named Linda Marmont?" Lester asked the question with deep resentment. The old lady's dark eyes twinkled as she looked at him shrewdly.

"Why, she was named for Linda Leland—the families were very intimate, you know. That was the way that marriage of Linda's came about; the families made it up. My son, your silence tells that you've said all you have to say, and I beg that no sense of the duty of politeness will keep you here. Perhaps your wager is a very important one."

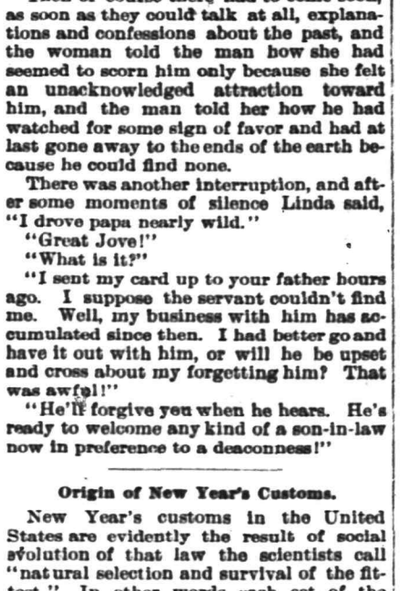
"You are the best woman in the world"—

"And very discreet."

"And very discreet." And with a happy laugh Lester stooped and kissed her withered hand and was gone.

But his happy mood was not to remain unbroken through that winter afternoon. When he sent up his card to Mrs. Marmont he received not even the politely fictitious message that she was "out." It came in the more brutal form—she was engaged and could see no one. Lester took out another card and was about to pencil a line on it, but he stopped. How should he dare to send the lady an imperious prayer for an audience. What right had he?

"What time will Mr. Leland be in?" The servant answered that he was to be expected in about half an hour. Three-quarters of an hour later Lester was again ringing that doorbell. He sent up his card to Mr. Leland and in his abstraction stepped, not into the drawing room, but into a little sitting room on the other side of the hall, and there, in a soft black gown and gazing motionlessly out of the window, sat Linda Marmont.



SHE SOFTLY PLAYED BITS OF OLD MELODIES.

"Linda," exclaimed the man in a queer, choking voice, "don't start! Oh, you must let me speak to you! Nothing can take away our happiness. You are not married, not married!" And he caught both her hands in his as she stood startled and silent before him. "You don't know what I've lived through since I heard that Linda Marmont was married."

"You thought that I was married to Mark Weber?" Linda found indignant voice at last, and she was trying to draw away her hands, but there was a new color and light in her face and a hint of a smile on her lips.

"I thought so, I thought so last night. No one at that place called you anything but Linda. It is the strangest thing how stupid I was. But, Linda, you looked sweet and kind last night—I thought you were willing to be sorry for me. Oh, be sorry for me now, but be something more—let me think you were willing to remember the past last night and to make it up to me a little."

"LINDA!"

At the last words his voice sank to a passionate whisper.

"You were very rude to me last night," said Linda plaintively, like a grieved child.

"I was what I had to be. I was knocked down when you came in. I wouldn't have risked meeting you for a fortune. I thought you were in Spain."

"With Mark Weber!" Linda made a little face.

Then of course there had to come soon, as soon as they could talk at all, explanations and confessions about the past, and the woman told the man how she had seemed to scorn him only because she felt an unacknowledged attraction toward him, and the man told her how he had watched for some sign of favor and had at last gone away to the ends of the earth because he could find none.

There was another interruption, and after some moments of silence Linda said, "I drove papa nearly wild."

"Great Jove!"

"What is it?"

"I sent my card up to your father hours ago. I suppose the servant couldn't find me. Well, my business with him has accumulated since then. I had better go and have it out with him, or will he be upset and cross about my forgetting him? That was awful!"

"He'll forgive you when he hears. He's ready to welcome any kind of a son-in-law now in preference to a deaconness!"

USHERING IN THE NEW YEAR.

Origin of New Year's Customs.

New Year's customs in the United States are evidently the result of social evolution of that law the scientists call "natural selection and survival of the fittest." In other words, each set of the early immigrants brought or devised its own customs, and those best suited to the nature of the country and genius of the people have become general, while all others have been quietly dropped. It is not easy to trace the origin of the Knickerbocker custom of gentlemen calling on their lady friends and taking refreshments, but it is evidently one of the "fittest," for it is becoming national.

Its progress westward and southward can be traced as certainly as any other social or any political development, and it seems subject to a curious law of action and reaction. A western village or small city takes up the fashion, and its observance becomes more general every year for some time; then it falls into disuse for a year or two, only to revive again with more style and more general observance.

JANUARY FIRSTLINGS.

Some Things to Ponder and to Be Thankful For.

The best time to rejoice, to feel great satisfaction, is not so much at the opening of the New Year as at the close of the old, when we know what we have gained, what we have achieved and what we have reason to be thankful for.

The exercise of memory, however gratifying the things we remember, never affords such pleasure as the exercise of hope, which pictures everything that might be, but has not been. The New Year, therefore, always appeals to us as promising the realization of the dearest wishes of our heart and is in consequence exuberantly welcome.

The profuse distribution of gifts on New Year's day was still the custom in England during Elizabeth's reign, and nearly her entire wardrobe as well as her jewelry was supplied in the form of presents. If the women of today were as bountifully furnished as was the vastly overrated queen, Jan. 1 would be more precious in their eyes than all the holidays together, but the present makers would be irretrievably bankrupt.

In mediæval times women enjoyed being kissed on New Year's day under the mistletoe. The modern, the contemporaneous woman, is not particular about the mistletoe or the day either. Time, place and the man being given, she relishes kissing generally.

Till within a few years the women of New York were in the habit of receiving their friends in town on New Year's day in grand style. Now those claiming to be fashionable fly on that day to the country, presumably to avoid their foes—in other words, to get rid of bores, who are socially the most formidable of enemies.

The Chinese at home gamble on New Year's night to a prodigious extent. In Wall street New Yorkers gamble enormously on most of the other days of the year.

The good resolutions made on Jan. 1 have generally proved to be bad performances before the end of February.

The men who are continually "turning over a new leaf" on New Year's day are apt to forget the leaf soon after, or that they have turned the leaf over at all.

The headaches that are felt the next morning after New Year's may usually be attributed to "treating" the good resolutions they have made on that day.

Many Americans outside of New York so detest the fulfillment of what it called social duties that they would be delighted to see widely extended the French custom, which releases Parisians from the obligation of making New Year's calls in consideration of their sending small presents instead. They would give liberally to be entirely exempt from the whole business of "visiting," be the date Jan. 1 or any other. They would much rather pay out than go out.

Expectancy is so strong in the human breast that it amounts almost to superstition, as New Year's day illustrates. No matter how ill success a man may have had in all the years that have past, he is pretty sure to believe that the New Year will bring him a change of fortune. And happily his belief will help him to bear his burdens if it does not make them lighter. What we believe may not happen, but it makes the present brighter.

It is a great pity that every day of the year does not inspire and cheer as Jan. 1 is apt to do. Then we should always carry a light heart and possess a cheerful mind.

In the cities of China the people on New Year's day offer up paper prayers in the temples. To use a commercial phrase, do they meet their paper when it falls due?

JUNIUS HENRI BROWNE.

Telling Fortunes From the Bible.

In Scotland an old New Year's custom is for people who wish to know what fortune the new year has in store for them to consult the Bible in the morning. The sacred book is placed on a table and opened at random. The particular passage on which the forefinger rests is supposed to forecast in some way the fortunes of the ensuing year for the person making the trial.

New Year's In Ancient Rome.

The Romans offered sacrifices to Janus and were very careful how they conducted themselves for the first few days, as upon their behavior depended their good or ill luck for the coming year. The Saxons celebrated the advent of the new year with special rites, and mistletoe cut in peculiar forms was a favorite gift.

A Beautiful Sight.

Perhaps the handsomest Christmas tree in Plainfield was a large one at the home of Mr. L. E. Cole, 78 Duer street, donated and personally decorated by Fred C. Cassell, of Brooklyn, in honor of the children of Mr. and Mrs. William Cadmus, one of whom, Edna, was named by Mrs. Cassell. As Mr. Cassell's business in Murray street, New York, is that of furnishing decorations for Christmas trees, no expense was spared in decorating the one above mentioned. The many friends and neighbors who looked on it last evening, lighted and decorated as it was, were loud in their praise of its magnificent effect.

Firemen Thanked.

To the Editor of the Daily Press:—Will you kindly allow us space in your columns to thank our firemen for the very quick and efficient service rendered us in extinguishing the fire that occurred in the City Mills last night. We think that a delay of five minutes would have caused the destruction of the entire property and, as the insurance was very light, we are especially grateful to the fire department.

Officers Installed.

R. W., W. A. Freeman, assisted by R. W., F. O. Herring, installed the officers-elect of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., last evening of follows:—C. C. Howard, W. M.; W. A. Coddington, S. W.; J. E. McClintock, J. W.; J. E. Turrill, treasurer; F. A. Rogers, secretary; Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. S. P. Simpson, Rev. J. W. Richardson, Chaplains; John S. Hyans, S. D.; H. C. Adams, J. D.; G. W. V. Moy, S. M. C.; C. A. Sturtevant, J. M. C.; B. E. Randolph, S. S.; F. B. King, Jr., J. S.; R. J. Shaw, marshal.

A Benefit Dance.

On Thursday evening, January 9th, a benefit dance for James McCormick, will be given in Sængerbund hall. Everybody connected with the dance has contributed their services gratuitously. Prof. Eugene O'Reilly will furnish the music.

—The Christmas festivities of the Grace P. E. church will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock.

—Many goods that are left over from Christmas displays are still seasonable, and this is what Reynolds' ad talks of today.

—The large wagon sheds at Manning's Hotel, between Dunellen and Bound Brook, were lifted from their foundation by the wind of Thursday night and deposited in the roadway, where it blocked traffic for several hours.

Cured His Woe.

A little pine in a young heart grew,
Listen to his tale of woe—
The Christmas season did accrue,
And a gift to his dearest girl was due,
But of what to choose he could get no clue.
Listen to his tale of woe.

Then an idea bored his cranium thro',
Lightening his tale of woe—
This idea's hint he did pursue,
And forthwith he to Collier's flew
And there was shown unto his view
The fitting thing for his sweetheart true,
And he garnered it, and bade adieu
Forever to his tale of woe.

During 1896 Godey's Magazine will contain

TALKS WITH SUCCESSFUL WOMEN

Valuable hints about various branches of industry which are open to women, by women who have succeeded in them.

MUSIC IN AMERICA.

Discussions of musical subjects or people. Illustrated each month with portraits, autographs, and one or more pages of music. This music alone will make a valuable collection. This series of articles is a unique feature among monthly magazines. The papers are interesting to all readers, and are of positive value to those who play and sing.

THE STAGE.

Illustrated articles upon the best and newest plays and the foremost actors, particularly the best American productions. These are much more than gossip of players. They are entertaining discussions of the dramas that are talked about. Such treatment is not found in any other magazine.

ILLUSTRATIONS.

The Magazine will be well and thoroughly illustrated from cover to cover. Competent artists and improved methods of making and printing the plates will be employed.

THE COVERS.

The covers are different every month. They are designed by popular artists, and the covers for a year will be valuable as an art collection in themselves.

THE FASHION DEPARTMENT

which for years has given the latest fads and fashions, is of particular interest to women.

A HOME MAGAZINE.

Godey's is a magazine of this country and of today. It is a family magazine, with a larger scope than it had as the "Lady's Book." It is a monthly feast of wholesome, interesting reading, fit for every member of the household.

In addition to the features mentioned above each number will contain a liberal amount of fiction, by the best writers, articles on subjects of general interest, book reviews, etc.

RALLYING TO THE ARMENIANS.

A Public Meeting to be Held to Secure Help for the Sufferers.

At a meeting held at the Crescent Avenue church a week ago last evening to take action in reference to the sufferings of the Christians in Armenia, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Mayor Gilbert and Isaac L. Miller were appointed a permanent committee on the subject. That committee has determined to hold a public meeting Thursday evening, January 2d, at 8 o'clock in the Crescent Avenue church, and will be addressed by Prof. Riggs, of New Brunswick, so well and favorably known in this city, Mayor Alex. Gilbert and possibly others. A collection will be taken, and it is also expected that suitable resolutions will be presented for the action of the meeting.

In view of the fact that hundreds of thousands of Christians in Armenia are in the direst suffering, many of them without shelter, food or clothing, it is hoped that there will be a large attendance and a generous response.

A FLEECE GAME.

Two Crooks Try to Get Wearing Apparel Without Settling.

An attempt was made last Friday and Saturday by two men to fleece L. Sternberg of an overcoat and a suit of clothes. One man gave the name of Burns and said he worked for Chapot, while the other one gave the name of Robinson and claimed that he worked on the sewer beds. When they received the goods a small deposit was left.

Saturday noon the company's collector and detective who had witnessed the sale, saw the two men at the North avenue station and learned that the men had purchased tickets for Pittsburg. He at once approached the men, demanded the overcoat which one had on and the suit of clothes which were in a trunk in their possession. The men reluctantly gave them up.

LAW INTERRUPTED LOVE.

Dave Hooper Caught and Held for the Grand Jury.

He was escorting a lady friend home when the mighty arm of the law came down on his shoulder. He, in this case, was Dave Hooper, the colored individual wanted by the city police for stealing a pair of horse clippers from Dan Roberts. The officers in the borough caught him last evening in the way mentioned and turned him over to the city authorities. This morning he appeared before Justice Mosher, and was committed to await the action of the grand jury.

Councilor Mrs. H. Robinson.

At the annual meeting of Lucetta Council, No. 28, D. of L., held Saturday evening in S. of T. Hall, the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Ex-councilor, Mrs. A. Wyckoff; ex-associate-councilor, Mrs. A. Angleman; councilor, Mrs. H. Robinson; vice-councilor, G. S. Martin; associate-councilor, Mrs. S. R. Mattox; associate-vice-councilor, Mrs. J. Huntington; financial secretary, Mrs. L. Mattis; treasurer, W. Koyer; recording secretary, Miss L. Johnson; assistant recording secretary, Mrs. O. Voorhees; guide, Miss J. W. Martin; inside guard, Mrs. W. Koyer; outside guard, Miss B. Rockafellow; trustees, G. S. Martin, 18 months; Miss L. Johnson, 12 months; Mrs. A. Wyckoff, 6 months.

Liberal Response.

Last Sunday evening a week ago at the Christmas service of the Sunday school of the Trinity Reformed church, Superintendent E. E. Anthony made made an appeal for toys, games, etc., that had been laid aside by the children of the school, stating that Mrs. W. A. Woodruff, of East Second street, knew of many homes where they would brighten the hearts of children too poor to buy such things. As a result of the appeal enough were sent to Mrs. Woodruff to supply forty-four different children.

Major C. T. Picton is manager of the State Hotel, at Denison, Texas, which the traveling men say is one of the best hotels in that section. In speaking of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy Major Picton says: "I have used it myself and in my family for several years, and take pleasure in saying that I consider it an infallible cure for diarrhœa and dysentery. I always recommend it, and have frequently administered it to my guests in the hotel, and in every case it has proven itself worthy of unqualified endorsement. For sale by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

LAST TRIP OF SANTA CLAUS.

HE PAYS A VISIT TO THE EPISCOPAL SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

In the Church of the Holy Cross He Came in on an Uptodate Bicycle and Distributed Presents With Twinkling Eyes.

"The Coming of the King," a beautiful cantata by Dudley Buck, was grandly rendered by the choir of the First Baptist church yesterday morning under the direction of C. W. McCutchen and organist E. J. Fitzhugh. The church was neatly decorated with Christmas greens, and especially around the organ were the decorations attractive. After the usual exercises the work of the cantata was taken up. The opening, "Prophecy," consisted of a solo by Miss F. May Grant, the chorus singing the "Advent," ending with a duet by Miss Grant and Miss Marie Draeger. In the "Annunciation," Miss Draeger sang the first solo, Mr. Smith the second, and the latter part was given by the chorus. An impressive portion was "Across the Desert,"—"The Caravan of the Magi," by the tenors and bassos, during which there were solo parts by Messrs. Barnes and Smith and a trio by Messrs. Barnes, Smith and Holmes.

"The Plains of Bethelem" was given by the chorus, in which Mr. Smith rendered a tenor solo. "The Departure of the Shepherds" consisted of solo parts by Wm. Holmes, Miss Grant and a part for the tenors and bassos. A beautiful selection was "The Virgin's Lullaby," by Miss Draeger, her rich full alto voice bringing out all the finer details of the work. "The Magi," by the tenors, bassos and chorus, was finely rendered, as was also "The Adoration" by Miss Grant and Wm. Holmes. The cantata closed with "Adeste Fiddles," by the choir and congregation.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes then gave a short appropriate talk on the significance of Christmas.

The offertory "Nazareth," by Gounod, was rendered perfectly, Mr. Holmes and Miss Grand taking solo parts.

The entire production of the contata was a noteworthy achievement by the choir who have gained a substantial reputation for classical work. Those who sang were: Sopranos—Miss F. May Grant, Miss Swain, Miss Petrie, Miss Emma Case. Miss Bessie Blair, Mrs. Harold Serrell, Miss Spear altos—Miss Marie Draeger, Miss Nancy Randolph, Miss Bertha Needham, Miss Agnes Blair, Miss Grace Bonney, Miss Overton; tenors—C. W. McCutchen. Mr. Smith, Mr. Douglass, E. B. Ryder; bassos—B. T. Barnes, Wm. Holmes, Nelson Hull, Geo. Snedicker.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the following programme was rendered: Prelude, "Song Without Words," organist, E. J. Fitzhugh; violinist, P. Ludwig Conde, pianist, Howard Case; carol, "The Day of all the Year," school; Invocation, Rev. D. J. Yerkes; carol, "Sweet Bells Ringing," primary class; Scripture selection, R. K. Case; carol, "The Winter Days Have Come Again," schools; prayer, Rev. P. S. Gibson; anthem, choir; recital, "The Star of the East," Miss Addie Parker Jackson; carol, "Jesus is His Name," schools; address, Prof. Rush Rhees; offertory, "Andante Religioso," violin, piano, and organ; Scripture selection, M. C. Dobbins; carol, "Christ is Born," schools; benediction; postlude, "Adagio," violin, piano and organ.

The selections by E. J. Fitzhugh, organ, P. Ludwig Conde, violin, and Howard Case, pianist, were superbly rendered as was the entire programme. The recital by Miss Jackson received the highest commendation from all its perfection and finish, and the address by Prof. Rhees was not only appropriate but exceedingly interesting for the grand thoughts presented. Miss F. May Grant, Miss Nancy Randolph and Miss Bessie Blair assisted Miss Jackson by giving a vocal selection.

"The Virgin's Lullaby was rendered at the afternoon service by request. Beside the home Sunday-school, the East Third Street Mission and Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday-schools were present and took part in the services.

Christmas services were held morning, afternoon and evening in the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church yesterday and all the services were largely attended. The regular choir, composed of Miss Annie P. Hardenbergh, E. E. Runyon and Charles L. Lewis, was assisted by a chorus choir of sixteen voices. Frank J. Smith occupied his usual position as organist and director. The music was very enjoyable and consisted of several anthems, the Magnificat and a contralto solo by Miss Hardenbergh. Rev. W. R. Richards, D.D., the pastor, preached from the text "Where," Matthew, 2:4. An offering was taken for the benefit of Muhlenberg hospital.

In the afternoon, the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church and the Sunday-schools from Warren, Hope and Bethel chapels held their joint Christmas exercises. Owing to the large number of scholars who completely filled the church, the congregation was not invited. The service began at 3:30 o'clock. The instrumental music was furnished by Frank J. Smith, organist; Miss Caroline Dewey, piano; W. Frazee, cornet; Gilbert Lovell, Lindley Hillman and Charles Davis, violins; Walter Serrell, flute. The programme was as follows: Prelude by organ and orchestra; Carol, "Rejoice! Rejoice!"; prayer and Lord's praper led by Rev. W. A. Alexander; responsive reading led by Rev. J. O. McKelvey; carol, "Christmas Bells are Ringing," recitation, "Crippled Tim," by Dudley H. Barrows; carol, "Sweet Bells,"; responsive reading led by Rev. J. O. McKelvey; carol, "Cradled in a Manger," by the primary department; recitation, "A Surprise," by Helen C. Moody; carol, "Brightest and Best,"; prayer by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell; carol, "Ring Merrily Bells,"; address by Rev. Wm. R. Richards, D. D.,; carol, "Jesus, Our Lord Will Ever Be,"; solo by Charles L. Lewis and chorus by schools; benediction by Rev. J. O. McKelvey, organ and orchestra.

To see jolly old Santa Claus riding a bicycle is a very novel sight, but that is just what happened when the children of Holy Cross Sunday-school had their Christmas celebration in the parish building on Saturday night. The good old saint was decidedly up to date, for he rode a wheel of the very latest pattern and, considering his portly size, he rode it very well. The traditional sleigh-bells, with which his famous reindeers were wont to be bedecked, now jingled merrily on the handle-bars of the bicycle, and as the popular old gentleman rode into the room and dismounted near the large and beautifully decorated Christmas tree, he was greeted with shouts of delight from the many little ones present. Superintendent Benjamin R. Western greeted him cordially and then the old saint told the children how glad he was to see so many of them there and that their Christmas tree was the finest he had ever seen. He then proceeded to give a handsome present and a box of fine candy from the tree to each scholar who came forward as the names were called. There seemed no end to the gifts. There were sleds, skates, dolls, books, toys and games of all kinds, beside many other presents. Superintendent B. R. Western was not forgotten, and he in turn had remembered the teachers and officers of the Sunday-school, as each received a tastefully bound hymnal as his gift. Rev. T. Logan Murphy received a handsomely bound library of books, presented by the men of the congregation. Mrs. Murphy was presented with a beautiful onyx table, the gift of the Ladies Auxiliary.

Previous to the appearance of Santa Claus an appropriate service was rendered and Christmas carols sung by the Sunday-school, and Rector Murphy made a short address. The room was tastefully decorated with evergreens and the building was so crowded with the parents and friends of the children that many were compelled to stand.

With music and singing Christmastide was duly celebrated at the Grace P. E. church on Saturday evening, while a large number of the friends and parents of the Sunday-school were there to attend their Christmas festival.

The order of service was as follows: Processional, "Ring, Ring, Ring the Bells;" general confession, absolution, the Lord's Prayer and versicles; carol, "Jesus, the Child is Born;" the lesson; carol, "Sing, O Sing, This Blessed Morn;" creed and prayers; carol, "'Tis the birthday of Our Saviour;" addresses by Rector Rev. E. M. Rodman and Superintendent H. C. Hooker; offertory; recessional, "Angels from the Realms of Glory."

The scholars and the audience adjourned to the chapel where a beautiful tree awaited them. The carol, "The Christmas Tree," was then sung, after which the gifts were distributed and the chimney of red bricks of candy tore down and passed among the scholars. The prizes, which consisted mainly of books, for the best attendance, behavior and knowledge of the lessons, were next awarded to the following: Emma Peterson, Grace Crane, Clara Crane, Charles Peterson, Nelson Peterson, Oliver Hill, Florence Hill, Elsie Smith, Clara Armstrong, Josephine Lapsley, Ada Woodruff, Leona Carl and Juliet Hill.

While most of the churches held their Christmas exercises on the Sunday before Christmas, the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church prepared theirs for yesterday afternoon. The classes assembled in their rooms and the services opened by the entrance of the primary department singing "Hear the Sound of the Children's Voices." The programme given in the Christmas service "Story of the Christ" was then followed with a few changes. It was as follows: Singing, "Gloria Patre;"; prayer by Deacon Theodore Runyon; carol, "Merrily Ring;" remarks by Superintendent Skaden; carol, "Hear the Bells;" responsive reading; recitation, "Calm and Clear the Stars are Shining," by Lillian Richardson; hymn, "Joy to the World;" recitation, "The Beautiful Story," by Olivia Male; carol, "Hail Blessed Tidings;" address by pastor Rev. J. W. Richardson; carol, "Hark, the Holy Angels;" scripture reading; recitation, "The Wonderful Christmastide," by Harold Smalley; carol, "Beautiful Star;" duet by Miss May D. Thompson, Miss Adelia Thompson and chorus by school; song, "Merry Christmas," by primary department; primary department exercise, "Jesus in His Name," by fourteen little children; recitation by Marion Dickinson; song, "I Would Be," by four little girls; recitation, "A Christmas Story," by ten little girls; song, "The Little One of Bethlehem," by primary department; offertory; responsive reading; carol, "Sing Ye Praises;" benediction. The usual Christmas decorations of evergreens were in evidence while four large bells covered with evergreens and lined with silver tinsel hung about the centre of the ceiling. A number of visitors were present at the exercises.

A handsomely decorated Christmas tree was the first object that attracted the attention of those that entered St. Stephen's church Saturday afternoon for the Christmas festival. It began at five o'clock with the carol "Ring Out the Bells for Christmas," and was then followed by devotional services led by Rev. Mr. Simpson, during which were sung "Hark! A Burst of Heavenly Music" and "List! List to the Chimes." A letter was read from Bishop Scarborough thanking the Sunday-school for an offering sent him, and then Rev. Mr. Simpson made a few remarks on the meaning of a merry Christmas.

While the carol "The Christmas Tree" was being sung, the many candles on the tree were lighted and the electric lights turned out, leaving only the soft light from the candles to illuminate the room. The gifts and candy were next distributed to the scholars by Rev. Mr. Simpson, Superintendent S. S. Guion, and assisted by N. P. T. Finch. The festivities closed with the carol "Hark! the Angels Singing."

The Sunday-school is quite a flourishing one, with one hundred and six children and eleven teachers. S. S. Guion is the superintendent while E. J. Phillips is musical director. Percy V. Whalen is the efficient organist.

The church was very prettily trimmed with evergreens, which were festooned and draped around the sides and chancel in an artistic manner. The Christmas tree, which stood between the pews and the rail, was a very handsome one. It was furnished by W. A. Lord. The decorating of the church was done Monday evening while Friday evening was devoted to the tree. The following assisted in the decorating: Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Beal, Miss Florence R. Beale, William Beal, S. S. Guion, Mr. and Mrs. N. P. T. Finch, Miss Ethel Finch, Percy V. Wheeler, Mr. Davidson, Miss Simpson, Miss Ethel Fuhrmann, Miss Lydia Fuhrmann, Clement Morgan, Richard G. Simpson, Mr. Duck, Mr. Squires and Robert Toney.

The Sunday-school scholars of the Church of the Redeemer enjoyed their festivities Saturday evening in the church. As an additional pleasure to the event the children from the Children's Home were present and joined heartily in the exercis s which opened with a Christmas carol by the scholars. Rev. Jocelyn Johnstone made a very interesting address, in which he set forth the qualities that should be possessed by every boy and girl. After the address, presents consisting of candy, toys and books were given and those from the Children's Home received neckties and books, also oranges. A feature was the presentation of a small drum to H. R. Phillips, Jr., who is about four months old. While the offering was being made to the Children's Home a very pretty solo was rendered by Orville Waring. The programme closed with the singing of a carol. Those in charge of the affair were Superintendent H. R. Phillips, Sr., Mrs. Perry, Miss Embury, Miss Woltman and Miss Helen Phillips. A very handsome Christmas tree, lighted, added much to the enjoyment of the scholars.

LITTLE MAMIE TRAVELED INCOG

A SEVEN YEAR OLD TOT ENJOYED A TRIP BY HERSELF.

Little Miss Green Sent on an Errand to Her Papa, and Then Boards a Railroad Train Just to Have a Ride

Little Mamie Green, the seven-year-old daughter of Larry Green, who opens clams and oysters at Sam Frazee's sea food market on Park avenue, took a trip all by herself Saturday afternoon, thereby causing much worry in the paternal home. About three o'clock Mamie was bundled up by her mother and sent from her West Third street home on an errand to her father. She did her duty all right, and, as was supposed, started to return home.

Whether or not Mamie had heard how Princess Euelia had traveled incog when she visited this country, is not known, but any rate she tried to emulate the royal personage. She went to the North Avenue station, and when the 3:45 train from New York rolled in she toddled up to a passenger coach just as though she was a veteran traveler, and boarded the car.

Before the train started Mamie had pre-empted a seat and by the time the conductor came to where she was, she was enjoying herself hugely by viewing the rapidly dissolving scenery as the train sped along. It did not take the conductor long to learn the situation, and then he concluded to carry Mamie through to Bound Brook, and have her parents notified from there. This was done through the chiefs-of-police of Bound Brook and this city, and at 7:01 Mamie jumped off the train at the North Avenue station into her father's arms.

Mamie says she had an awful nice time, but she was glad to get back home.

A WESTFIELD SUICIDE.

A Fifteen Year Old Grass Widow Commits Suicide.

Mrs. Leggett, aged 15 years, and living at the home of her stepfather, John Mack, which is about a mile from Westfield, committed suicide last night between 7 and 9 o'clock by taking a dose of strychnine, which she drank out of a bottle kept in a closet. She had asked her father to let her go out but he refused.

It will be remembered that the girl went to Waverly Fair last Fall with a young man named Leggett and while away they were married in Newark. Her husband only lived with her four days. Since then she has been living with her stepfather. The girl became involved in trouble and this it is probable has worried her into commiting the deed. Dr. Kinch, of Westfield, was sent for last evening but she died before he arrived. The County Physician arrived this morning and gave a burial permit.

A Satisfactory Test.

Sometime ago Chief Doane stopped the work on the roof at the Jackson building, until he was satisfied that the roof would be perfectly safe. This morning, Cumins & Evans, of 38 Dey street, New York, who are doing the work, sent for Chief Doane to witness a test between the tin and asphalt roofing. A fire was started on a long section, composed of tin roofing and asphalt roofing, and left burning for a half hour, during which time a hole was burned in the tin, but no impression was made on the asphaltum, and another test was made from underneath with the same results. The test being satisfactory the work will now proceed.

Hope Chapel Workers Entertained.

Last Saturday evening Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hansen, of West Second street, entertained about fifty members of Hope chapel at their home. The time was passed in a social manner, during which there were vocal solos by Mrs. Radin, Mrs. Cox, Mrs. Bowman and a recitation by Miss Eva Higgins. Refreshments were served after the programme was rendered and all left for their homes well pleased with their evening's enjoyment.

A Special Car.

A special car will be run tomorrow evening on the street railway leaving the First M. E. church at 12 o'clock for the accommodation of the residents of the West End who attend the watch meeting.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

A SINGUIAR COINCIDENCE.

Percy Cut Willie's Hand and Willie Then Cut Percy's Hand.

About two years ago Willie Myles, of Elizabeth, and Percy Giddis, of Regent street, this city, cousins, were visiting their uncle, George Mantz, of Warren township. While there they were cutting brush. Percy, who was nine years, accidentally let the axe slip and almost severed the finger off Willie's hand. Dr. Zeglio was called and dressed the wound. Willie, who was eleven years old, was marked for life, but by the skillful treatment he received he lost no fingers.

Strange to relate, these two boys again visited their uncle together yesterday. Percy wished to show Willie how his uncle cut corn for the cows, so he picked up a bunch of stalks, holding them on the block. Willie raised the axe in the air and let it fall, expecting to cut the stalks, but unfortunately for Percy, his hand was too close to the block, and the fall of the axe almost severed the index finger from his hand. His uncle at once brought him to Plainfield, where Dr. Zeglio dressed the hand, and hopes to be able to save the finger.

TRIPPED AND FELL.

Mrs. J. C. VanDyke Quite Seriously Hurt Saturday Evening.

Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, of East Front street, met with a very painful accident Saturday evening after choir practice at Trinity Reformed church. She had left the church, but was obliged to return for something. On leaving the church a second time a large dog belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cutter sprang at her, causing her to trip and fall. In the descent she came down with such force as to severely sprain her right knee and ankle. A. J. Moore, of Westervelt avenue, happened to be near and at once rendered valuable assistance. Mrs. VanDyke, though suffering intensely, was unable to determine the extent of her injuries till she reached her home and medical aid summoned. It will probably be two months before she will be able to walk again without aid.

Past, Present and Future.

The union watch night service of the Christian Endeavor and Epworth League Societies to be held at Vincent Chapel at ten o'clock tomorrow night promises to be a very interesting meeting. The first of the meeting will consist of short addresses by three of the pastors on the subjects, "The Past," "The Present" and "The Future." Mr. E. E. Anthony, the president of the local Union, will conduct the last part of the seavice. Refreshments will be served and a short rime given to social intercourse before the devotional exercises, and a cordial invitation is extended, not only to the members of the societies, but to all who may be interested.

A Flourishing Club.

A meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club was held Saturday night to elect officers for the ensuing year. The reports of the old officers were first heard from, and they showed that the club was in a very flourishing and satisfactory condition. Tne following officers were then elected: President, Otto Ahrens; vice-president, Harold Serrell; secretary, J. Hervey Doane; treasurer, Harry Coward; directors, Otto Ahrens, Harold Serrell, J. Hervey Doane, Harry Coward, W. H. Rogers, J. E. Stewart and W. H. Freeman.

A Big Christmas Gift.

The Christmas morning collection from the congregation of St. Mary's church amounted to $521.

—Thomas Parker, manager of Mrs. Conneely's saloon, resigned Saturday, and J. E. Wellton, of this city, has been secured to take his place.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Public Library on Tuesday morning, December 31st, at eleven o'clock.

—A. C. Maclay, who will lecture on Japan at the Y. M. C. A. this evening, resided for eighteen years in China and Japan. The lecture will be illustrated by sixty fine stereopticon views

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

GOSSIP FROM BERLIN

Confidence in American Securities Revived.

None Doubt a Peaceful Settlement of the Venezuela Matter and the Stability of the United States' Financial Standing—America Now Threatens German Insurance.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—The reaction toward confidence in the future of American finances, especially as affecting international monetary relations, has been surpisingly rapid within the last few days. Berlin and Frankfort took the lead of London in speculative buying of American stocks and operators here have on the whole benefitted by the selling which was done in London, and at no time during the Wall street panic have the German bourses been so much influenced as was the English market. The buying set in earlier here and even investors took a chance in securing stocks at low values. The bourse closed notably firm on Saturday after considerable buying of American railroad securities. The belief here in the permanence of peace between the United States and Great Britain is absolute and general conviction in the recovery of a healthy condition of American finances is as unshaken as at any previous time.

Hammerstein's Capture.

The capture in Athens of Baron von Hammerstein, the former editor of the Kreuz Zeitung, who absconded under charges of forgery and embezzlement created a tremendous sensation in political and social circles when his arrest became known. The arrest of this fugitive has cut the ground from under the feet of the socialist leaders and may even be said to have carried away the feet of some of them. All along one of the chief weapons of the socialist press and the socialist parliamentary leaders has consisted of insinuations that the government had connived at Hammerstein's escape and frowned upon genuine attempts to bring him back in order to prevent disclosures affecting the conservative supporters of the government. The capture of Hammerstein has taken the wind out of the sails of the socialist craft and rendered the Hammerstein letters which the socialists were holding over the heads of many conservative members of the reichstag almost if not wholly valueless as terrorizing measures.

Prospect of a Racy Scandal.

Berlin now has the prospect of an extremely racy scandal season, between the Hammerstein case and the revelations contained in the von Kotze documents, which are now in the possession of Fritz Friedmann, the absconding Berlin lawyer. According to current report, Friedmann is now in London, where he has prepared a pamphlet attacking high legal and political persons which he threatens to publish if the German authorities molest him anywhere. It is understood that Friedmann wants a formal permit to return to Germany, nominally incognito, in order to settle his affairs, and is now negotiating with the proper authorities in Berlin to that end.

Boom in Business.

The Christmas season, according to reports made by the leading shops in Berlin, shows a boom in business. The sale of the cheaper class of goods has been slack in favor of the higher and more costly class and the casual onlooker would consider that the merchants as well as the public have been having a fine time all round. The North German Gazette says that Berlin has received and sent out Christmas parcels far exceeding in number those sent and received during Christmas week of 1894.

The Poor Dined on Christmas.

The Countess von Waldersee provied a large number of widows and children with their Christmas dinner and had an immense tree upon which were hung parcels of clothing. Ex-Empress Frederick visited the Kaiser Friedrich hospital on Christmas day. She was received their by Dr. Virchow and Dr. Bosse, minister of ecclesiastical affairs, instruction and medical affairs. The ex-empress presided at the fete which followed her arrival and distributed the presents. Dr. Virchow interested her with a statement of the results of the treatment of the various patients by Prof. Behrings and Heilserum of the institution, which led her to compliment the professors upon the success of their remedial preparations.

Retaliation Threatened.

Official information from Washington has been received in Berlin that the United States government will close out all German insurance companies doing business in the United States unless Prussia rescinds her measures against American insurance companies preventing them from doing business here.

New Year's Day Fetes

Prince Hohenlohe will return to Berlin in time to take part in the New Year fetes. The New Year's day programme is as follows: At 8 o'clock in the morning there will be a reveille from the castle to Brandenburg gate and back performed by the massed bands of the Berlin garrison. At 10 o'clock religious services will be held in the castle chapel, and at 11 o'clock the court ceremony of filing past the emperor and the imperial party in the Weissen Saal. At 12 o'clock there will be a parole in the yard of the arsenal by the kaiser in the presence of all the commanders of the German army corps. When salutes will be fired in

THE WEEK IN CONGRESS

Programme One of Almost Complete Idleness.

Reorganization of Senate Committees To Be Effected To-day—Republicans Deny Any Deal with Populists—Lodge To Talk on the Monroe Doctrine Resolution.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The reorganization of the committees of the senate, upon which the steering committees of both the old parties have been working for the past three weeks, will be effected to-day by the passage of a resolution to be introduced by Mr. Mitchell, chairman of the republican committee. In violation of the precedents for a number of years a yea and nay vote will be taken upon the adoption of the resolution. The democrats say they intend to show the country that the republicans have more votes in the senate than the democrats, and therefore are entitled to take control, but there is a suspicion that the democrats hope by this vote to be able to show that a deal has been made by the republicans with the populists. The republicans meet this argument with the statement that they have permitted the populists to remain just where they were under a democratic administration of the senate, and a charge of a deal no more applies now than it was against the democrats when they assumed control. The reorganization will not go into effect practically until Wednesday, for the present employes, committee clerks, etc., have already been paid their salaries for the month of December.

The Monroe Doctrine.

Besides the reorganization resolution an address by Mr. Lodge, rep., Mass., is on the programme for to-day on the resolution now on the table relative to the enforcement of the Monroe doctrine. Mr. Lodge, who is an ardent advocate of the strict enforcement of that doctrine, will, doubtless, make a strong speech and command the attention of the senate and the country. It is understood he will go deeply into this subject and review the historical matters out of which it grew and the cases in which it has been applied by this government. It is probable that the senate will indulge after to-day's session in three day recesses until the holiday season is over.

Week of Idleness in the House.

The programme of the house this week is one of practical idleness. Under the working of the agreement announced Saturday by Mr. Dingley, chairman of the committeee on ways and means, the house will be called to order Tuesday to adjourn until Friday, when the operation will be repeated, adjournment being taken that day to Monday, Jan. 6, at which time the consideration of business will be resumed. The appropriations and elections committees expect to do some work in their rooms during the week, for the furtherance of matters committed to them.

NO DANGER OF TROUBLE.

A Proposed Peace Meeting in London Abandoned.

London, Dec. 30.—It was announced last week that the American society in London would hold a meeting yesterday to consider a resolution expressing hope and confidence that the difference between the United States and Great Britain would be amicably settled. The society has now decied that in view of the improvement in public opinion such a meeting is no longer opportune. The meeting will, therefore, not be held, the society being confident that the difference will be adjusted amicably and honorably by both nations.

SAVED A DRUNKEN MAN'S LIFE.

John Cuddy Dragged from a Railroad Track by a Young Woman.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., Dec. 30.—Mary McGill, aged 18, rescued John Cuddy from a horrible death Saturday night. Cuddy was drunk and had fallen on the Delaware & Hudson railroad track in front of an approaching train near Mill Creek. She sprang to his rescue, caught him by the collar and pulled him from the roadbed just as the train reached the spot.

TO BE A DEMOCRATIC PAPER.

Middletown Herald Will Change Its Faith on New Year's Day.

Middletown, Conn., Dec. 30.—On New Year's day the Middletown Herald, for eleven years a republican paper, becomes a democrat daily and changes back morning to evening. C. E. Wilson of the Hartford Times is the principal owner and manager and he will have a new staff throughout.

Gov. Morton Will Receive.

Albany, Dec. 30.—Gov. Morton, attended by his staff, will receive at the executive chamber from 1 to 2 o'clock on the afternoon of New Year's day. From 3 to 6 o'clock, January 1, Gov. and Mrs. Morton will hold a general reception at the executive mansion.

Canon Warr Dead.

London, Dec. 30.—Canon Warr died at Childwall, near Liverpool, yesterday, aged 81 years. He was formerly a pioneer at Oakville, Toronto, on behalf of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel.

Gomez and Maceo Retreating.

Madrid, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Havana to the Imparcial says that Gomez and Maceo are retreating from the Cienfuegos district.

A SAD MARRIED LIFE.

Story Told by a Prominent English Woman in Her Suit for Divorce.

Oklahoma City, O. T., Dec. 30.—A divorce suit involving prominent English people was filed in the district court here Saturday. It is docketed as Agnes M. Freeborn vs. Richard J. G. Freeborn. The petition sets forth that they were married in county Sussex, Eng., June 6, 1880, and that they lived together until April, 1892. The defendant is a graduate of Oxford college and the wife is a niece of Sir E. John Paul of Albany, Eng. The grounds set forth, among others, are non-support, cruelty and gross neglect of duty. The charge is made that, although in receipt of an excellent salary and holding high positions under government, the wife had to depend upon her relatives for support, Freeborn spending all his money in fast living and debauchery. As another ground she charges that he brought great disgrace upon her by being guilty of theft and forgery, the course of the law being stayed only by her intercession and that of her friends and relatives. The forgery was committed on Sir E. John Paul. After it was hushed up Freeborn was shipped to South Australia, his wife and child accompanying him. There he acted no better, and Mrs. Freeborn left him in Tasmania and came to America to be freed from him.

GOLD SHIPPED TO NEW YORK.

Coin to the Value of $14,000,000 from the Mint.

Philadelphia, Dec. 30.—Gold coin valued at $14,000,000 has been sent from the Philadelphia mint to New York within the past week. It is believed that most of this gold has been used in recent shipments to Europe. The mint received $20,000,000 worth of gold bars in August and all this has been made into coin. There is now on hand gold bars valued at $20,000,000 and as the work of coining is going on daily and there is no decrease in the demand, it is only a matter of a short time until it is all gone. Small shipments of gold bars are being received daily, but not in quantities sufficient to keep up with the demand for coin.

PEACE ASSURED IN SICILY.

Duties of the Military Commander at Palermo Reduced.

Rome, Dec. 30.—Prime Minister Crispi has issued an order revoking the decree giving the military commander at Palermo direction of both the police and military forces of the island of Sicily. The revoking of the decree is due to the fact that the authorities have at last succeded in improving the condition of affairs on the island and life and property are now everywhere secure, and no further trouble is apprehended from the machinations of the Farei dei Lavoratori and other secret socialist societies, which caused the government great trouble in 1893 and 1894.

GLADSTONE 86 YEARS OLD.

Many Messages of Congratulation Received at Hawarden Castle.

London, Dec. 30.—Yesterday was the eighty-sixth anniversary of the birth of Mr. Gladstone. Many of the liberal clubs throughout the united kingdom telegraphed congratulations to Hawarden castle, Mr. Gladstone's residence in Chester, from which place the messages were forwarded to Biarritz, France, where Mr. Gladstone has gone for the benefit of his health.

BRITISH EMPIRE DAMAGED.

Ran on the Rocks and Sustained Serious Injury to Her Bottom.

London, Dec. 30.—The British steamer British Empire, which sailed from Boston, Dec. 14, for London, has put into Falmouth in a damaged condition. During a dense fog Saturday, when off the Scilly islands, the British Empire struck a rock, and injuring her bottom. Her forward compartment is full of water.

Chief Justice Fuller at Chicago.

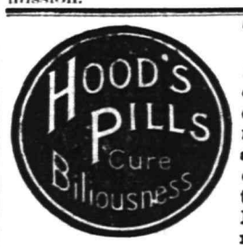
Chicago, Dec. 30.—Chief Justice Fuller of the supreme court of the United States arrived in Chicago yesterday from Washington and took apartments at the Palmer house. He will remain in the city until after New Year's day. To a newspaper man Justice Fuller had no comment to make on the Venezuelan situation or any of the questions of the day.

For the Blair Statue.

Jackson, Mich., Dec. 30.—Gen. R. A. Alger of Detroit and Dwight S. Smith and Gen. W. H. Withington of this city, comprising the Blair memorial commission appointed by Gov. Rich last spring to contract for a memorial statue to Austin Blair, Michigan's war governor, have closed the contract with Sculptor Potter of Enfield, Mass., for the work.

Justice Brewer Denies the Report.

St. Louis, Dec. 30.—Justice David J. Brewer, of the United States supreme court, was in this city yesterday en route from San Antonio, Tex., where he has been at the bedside of a sick daughter, to Washington. He denies the report that he had been asked to accept a place on the Venezuelan commission.



Tonight

If your liver is out of order, causing Biliousness, Sick Headache, Heartburn or Constipation, take a dose of Hood's Pills on retiring, and tomorrow your digestive organs will be regulated and you will be bright, active and ready for any kind of work. This has been the experience of others; it will be yours if you take Hood's Pills. 25c.

TELL-TALE FACES.

PINCHED AND CAREWORN,

As Worn by Many American Women.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

The "tell-tale face" is worn by many American women, and is a symptom of symptoms, a signal of distress.

While women do all in their power to hide their condition, the practised eye soon detects the trouble.

When pains and aches are felt in every part of the body, when faintness, dizziness, and that bearing-down feeling prevail, when loss of sleep and appetite are reducing flesh daily, when the society of friends is irksome, and the hopeless "blues" predominate, then the face is pinched, haggard, and careworn, and prompt relief is necessary, or a beautiful life will be sacrificed.

An American woman, Lydia E. Pinkham, a student of women and their diseases, twenty years ago succeeded in producing an absolute cure for all diseases of women. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound stands to-day as it did then, pre-eminent.

Mrs. H. Wampler, of Barabo, Wis., whose letter we were permitted to publish last year, writes that she hopes Mrs. Pinkham will continue to use her name, as the publication in newspapers of the account of her own wonderful cure and relief from years of misery has been the means of influencing many suffering women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and become well like herself. Mrs. Wampler feels, and rightly, too, that in this way she is doing a great good.

TALKS WITH SUCCESSFUL WOMEN
Valuable hints about various branches of industry which are open to women, by women who have succeeded in them.
MUSIC IN AMERICA.
Discussions of musical subjects or people. Illustrated each month with portraits, autographs, and one or more pages of music. This music alone will make a valuable collection. This series of articles is a unique feature among monthly magazines. The papers are interesting to all readers, and are of positive value to those who play and sing.
THE STAGE.
Illustrated articles upon the best and newest plays and the foremost actors, particularly the best American productions. These are much more than gossip of players. They are entertaining discussions of the dramas that are talked about. Such treatment is not found in any other magazine.
ILLUSTRATIONS.
The Magazine will be well and thoroughly illustrated from cover to cover. Competent artists and improved methods of making and printing the plates will be employed.
THE COVERS.
The covers are different every month. They are designed by popular artists, and the covers for a year will be valuable as an art collection in themselves.

VENGEANCE OF A MOB

A Man Shot and a Woman Burned To Death.

The Victims, W. A. Dever and Mrs. T. J. West, Surprised by the Lynchers in the House of the Latter, Near Lebanon, Ky., Whose Husband Dever Had Slain.

Lebanon, Ky., Dec. 30.—A mob inflicted a horrible vengeance on a faithless woman and her lover Saturday night when they burned Mrs. T. J. West alive and killed W. A. Dever at Mrs. West's house on Cartwright creek on the Springfield pike, three miles north of this city. The mob is said to have numbered about seventy-five, and it was about 12 o'clock when they appeared at Mrs. West's house. Mrs. West, Dever and his little daughter were the only persons present in the house, and when the mob called upon Dever to come out, Mrs. West and the little girl responded, but Dever remained inside. Just as Mrs. West reached the door several shots were fired at her and she ran back into the house, but the child remained on the outside. The mob then fired several shots into the house, none of which took effect, and after several attempts to get Dever to come out the mob fired the building.

Man Shot, Woman Burned.

The intense heat finally forced Dever to run out, and with a pistol in hand he started to a cornfield a few steps from the house, where he took shelter behind a corn shock and was shot to death. Mrs. West perished in the burning house, and in the morning her remains were found in the chimney where she had taken refuge. Her legs and the upper portion of the body were almost entirely burned off. The little girl gave the alarm, but only meagre information can be gained from her.

Dever Killed Mrs. West's Husband.

W. A. Dever is the man who shot and killed T. J. West, husband of the burned woman, at Beaver Green, on Cartwright street, Dec. 7. He had a preliminary hearing, and was released on the ground of self-defense. The killing is thought to have been caused by intimacy on the part of Dever and West's wife. After Dever was released he was charged with living with the woman. It is said that Dever had been warned to leave or he would be killed. He was from Knoxville and leaves a wife and several children. Mrs. West leaves a large family. The coroner's jury has so far failed to return a verdict.

THEIR LIFE FOR THEIR FAITH.

Several Protestant Pastors Die Rather Than Accept Islamism.

London, Dec. 30.—The Daily News will to-day publish a dispatch from Constantinople, saying that the house of the Protestant pastar at Chumkush, near Diarbekir, was set on fire by Kurds, and that the pastor was badly burned in seeking to make his escape. When he reached the outside of his burning home, he was seized by the Kurds, who told him that he must make his choice between accepting Islamism and being killed. He chose death. At Sivas a pastor named Kuenidjian met a simi,ar fate after refusing to abandon his faith. Eleven Protestant pastors in the Kharput district, who were connected with the American Board of Foreign Missions, gave up their lives rather than to abandon Christ.

MURDERED BY A MAYOR.

Weldon, Ill., Chief Executive Kills a Member of the Legislature.

Weldon, Ills., Dec. 30.—Dr. Wm. H. Taylor, a member of the lower house of the general assembly from the thirtieth district, was shot and instantly killed at 8 o'clock Saturday night by John H. Pace, the postmaster of this place. Pace pleads self-defense, while the friends of his victim assert that the shooting was premeditated and the result of jealousy.

Russo-Turkish Treaty?

London, Dec. 30.—The Constantinople correspondent of the Standard telegraphs that M. Nelidoff, the Russian ambassador, had a long private audience with the sultan on Wednesday. He adds that it would cause no surprise should it be learned that there is a secret Russo-Turkish treaty.

Barn and Contents Burned.

Norristown, Pa., Dec. 30.—The barn on William Rittenhouse's farm at Jeffersonville, near here, was burned last evening. Besides the loss of the season's crops, twenty-seven cows and four horses perished. The fire is supposed to have been started by tramps.

Stricken with Loss of Memory.

Youngstown, O., Dec. 30.—While delivering a sermon in Trinity Methodist Episcopal church yesterday the pastor, Rev. Dr. H. W. Kellogg, was stricken with loss of memory and the services were suddenly closed.

SAYS SALISBURY IS A BULLY.

Michael Davitt Pleased with the Stand Taken by the United States.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Michael Davitt, the Irish nationalist and member of parliament from south Mayo and east Kerry, was among the guests registered at the Palmer house yesterday. He has been touring Australia, and came to Chicago from San Francisco. He is on his way home and expects to be in his seat when parliament assembles. When asked about the position of the Irish on the Venezuelan controversy, he said that he did not think there was the slightest possibility of any actual conflict between the United States and Great Britain on that question. He said: "Lord Salisbury is known in Great Britain and in Ireland as a bully whose policy when he has been at the head of the government has been to try to intimidate little nations and powers throughout the world. He has been able to do this with impunity heretofore, but now he finds that behind little Venezuela stands America, and he will discover that he will not be allowed to carry on the same policy toward this small state in South America that he and other English statesmen have carried out toward weak peoples and small governments in other parts of the world. For myself I can only repeat that I am glad that such a stand has been taken by the United States."

THE PRESS GAGGED.

Armenian "News" Prepared at the Sultan's Palace.

London, Dec. 30.—The correspondent of the United Press at Constantinople sends the following under yesterday's date: Ths continuous publication and circulation of official falsehoods, together with the barricade against truth of every avenue of publicity, has become one of the most dangero - elements of the present situation at Constantinople. Censorship of the Turkish press exists. Latterly its sole object has been to suppress facts and to compel publication of "editorials" relative to the Armenians, which are prepared at the palace, and of "telegrams" written under physical torture by wretched Armenian prisoners in the dungeons of Asiatic Turkey. In reality the Turkish newspapers are thus edited at the palace. The result of this use of the press is that the Mohammedan populace and even moderately educated gentlemen at Constantinople find their chief reason for discontent with the sultan in his failure to order the destruction of Christians generally.

DEMOCRATS WERE WORRIED.

One of Their Kentucky Legislators Is Ill—Now a Republican Is Sick.

Louisville, Dec. 30.—Democrats have been very much worried over the illness of Senator Ogilvie of McCracken, who will hardly be able to attend the joint session to elect a United States senator, but now W. H. Stiglitz, a republican representative from this city, is confined to his bed with muscular rheumatism and the legislature will continue to be a tie on joint ballot until the republican house unseats Kaufman, dem. of Lexington, which proceeding will enable them to elect a senator.

BIG ORDERS FROM ABROAD.

A Buffalo Firm Receives Contracts for Horses and Other Supplies.

Buffalo, Dec. 30.—The largest contract of its kind ever made with one firm in this or probably any other country has just been entered into with the well-known commission house of Crandall & Co., East Buffalo, who have engaged to supply four of the largest bus and cab companies in London with 6,000 horses, to be shipped during the year 1896. This and other contracts entered into abroad by the East Buffalo firm represent purchases aggregating over $1,000,000.

WRECKAGE WASHED ASHORE.

Loss of a Vessel and All on Board Reported at Cork.

Cork, Dec. 30.—It is reported here that a large unknown vessel was wrecked yesterday at Tochead, and that all on board were lost. A number of boxes and other wreckage have been washed ashore.

Six Perished in a Burning House.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 30.—A fire occurred in a public house in this city yesterday and five girls and a man perished in the flames. It is believed that the victims were intoxicated and that their stupor prevented them from realizing that the house was burning or that they were in any danger.

Safe Blowers at Neshanic, N. J.

Flemington, N. J., Dec. 30.—Burglars blew open the safe in the office of John Cortelyon at Neshanic at an early hour Sunday morning, securing about one hundred dollars in money, several dollars worth of postage stamps and some valuable papers.

Carried to Sea on an Ice Floe.

Odessa, Dec. 30.—A dispatch from Yeisk, on the sea of Azof, reports that 800 fishermen, with 100 sledges and horses, were carried to sea on an ice floe. Half of the men have been rescued, and the rescue of the others is proceeding.

READY FOR AN ATTACK

Venezuela Mounting Guns and Drilling Soldiers.

Her Military Instructor Is Enthusiastic, and Declares Ten Thousand Men Can Prevent a Force Landing in Laguaya—Roads Are Fortified Against Invaders.

New York, Dec. 30.—The Herald's Caracas correspondent says that the Venezuelan military officials continue their preparations to resist any attack that may be made on that republic as a result of the contention with England, or any other disturbance. Officers of the army are drilled daily in the use of heavy artillery on the hilltops above the city. A new instructor is in charge there, and he has done much to raise the men to a high state of enthusiasm. This instructor, who is regarded by the Venezuelans as an authority, says that 10,000 soldiers properly placed and armed can prevent the landing of a hostile force in Laguaya. A much smaller force, he contends, can prevent a landing in Puerto Cabello and other sea coast towns.

Roads Fortified.

It is impossible, he says, for a landing to be made except in the far eastern part of the country. If a force should be put ashore there or sent into the country from British Guiana a long march would be necessary to bring it before the capital. The Venezuelans confidently declare that they would be able to resist any body of men that might be sent on such expeditions. The road between this city and Laguayra has been fortified, so that troops can resist a force that might be sent from Ciudad Bolivar.

UTE INDIANS STARVING.

The Government Has Failed To Keep Its Promise To Aid Them.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—A special from Denver says: Chief Ignacio and his band of Ute Indians are starving on the western end of the reservation set apart for them by act of congress last February, and all because the government has not kept its promise to establish an agency on the lands reserved. Early in the fall the chief received word that if he and his tribe would go to the agency at the eastern end of the reservation, a distance of seventy-five miles, they would receive their money and rations and the promised agency in their own district at Navajo Springs would be established before winter. But the government has not kept its word and the Indians have received no rations for months. Chief Ignacio says he has kept his agreement and wonders why "Washington" has not kept his. It is feared that some of his young men will forage on neighboring cattle ranges and this will precipitate bloodshed. The Durango board of trade has aided the Indians materially, and white settlers near them have fed them out of their scanty stocks.

WANTS $25,000 DAMAGES.

An Eastern Man Roughly Handled on a Train in California.

San Francisco, Dec. 30.—Mott C. Merker of Rochester, N. Y., wants $25,000 damages from the Southern Pacific Railroad company for rough treatment he claims he received from Conductor Hubbard. At Port Costa, Hubbard, who is on the lookout for scalper tickets, asked Merker to write his name to compare his signature with that on the ticket. Merker refused and the conductor started to eject him. Merker struggled to remain, and in the melee he was badly injured. Hubbard failed to eject Merker and afterward learned that Merker's ticket was perfectly regular.

RUSSIA A WILLING ALLY.

Will Support America in the Venezuelan Difficulty.

Berlin, Dec. 30.—A dispatch to the Tageblatt from St. Petersburg says that Russia will support President Cleveland in the difficulty between America and Great Britain diplomatically, and is also ready to afford financial assistance to the United States if necessary.

Conservatives Will Fight Greenway

Winnipeg, Man., Dec. 30.—The conservatives are organizing to make a strong fight against Premier Greenway at the elections on January 15. They do not expect to defeat him on his school policy, but are making an attack on his general administration work and alleging that all the registration lists have been stuffed.

News via. Turkish Sources.

Washington, Dec. 30.—The Turkish legation received from the sublime porte the following telegram under last night's date: "Two Armenians at Aintab having fired pistol shots with a view to again create a sedition, disorders were about to begin, but, thanks to the measures taken, the calm has been restored."

Sultan's Present to the Czar.

Constantinople, Dec. 30.—The sultan has presented to the czar a magnificent pair of horses and a quantity of the finest Turkish tobacco. Gen. Arif Pasha, accompanied by the third dragoman of the Russian embassy, has gone to St. Petersburg, where he will turn the gifts over to the czar.

Scored by Mayor Swift.

Chicago, Dec. 30.—Mayor Swift roundly scored Chicago's "prominent citizens" at a banquet Saturday night and charged the corruption of the city council and various departments of the city's service to them

It is generally conceded that Senator Thompson will be the next President of the Senate.

The season for the man who says his will power is strong is here. It is a part of the good resolutions, but it is the first part that fails.

A "Borough Taxpayer" says the borough marshals are much handsomer than the city police. Now that is drawing the comparison a little too strong.

Can it be that all the geese of the old woman up in the clouds have flown away so that she can not pick their feathers? From the absence of the beautiful snow it would seem so.

The New Jersey Contractor has the following to say in its last issue:

A study of the real estate transfers as published weekly by The Contractor and The Gazette show that more real estate changes hands, either sold, exchanged or given over in various transactions, in Plainfield, than in Elizabeth or any other city in Union county. This speaks well for Plainfield, but how does it look for Elizabeth?

Of course it speaks well, but it speaks still better when one realizes that in North Plainfield, where there is proportionately as many reality sales as in the city, the transfers are all recorded in Somerset county. Plainfield is easily the most desirable and fastest growing residential city in New Jersey.

Rahway has gone New Brunswick one better in the matter of cleaning streets. Tramps now perform that labor in that place.—Plainfield Press.

That is because there is no City Improvement Society there. Still it is a step in the right direction, as The Fredonian has advocated. Why should not the tramps and the short term prisoners be made to clean the streets of every city of New Jersey? It is not necessary to adopt the ball and chain system if it is considered objectionable, but some other method could be devised to utilize the unused labor which is stored up in the city and county jails.—New Brunswick Fredonian.

The Elizabeth Herald complains that that city, with 50,000 people, will not support one theatre as it should be. The Camden Courier remarks that with 65,000 people they are just as bad. It is doubtful if there is a city in New Jersey, with the exception of Newark, Trenton and Jersey City, that has a paying theatrical enterprise. This condition of affairs exists simply because most Jerseyites are able to witness performances in either New York or Philadelphia at an expense increased only by a moderate car fare over that which they would pay at home. The superior performances which are attended in these cities—the best that can be seen in the world—are considered amply worth the increased cost. Music Hall of Plainfield has to compete with every New York playhouse, and then some people wonder why Music Hall is not a howling success. If the $300 which Plainfielders spend every week in New York theatres was spent in Music Hall, perhaps Plainfield would see more metropolitan successes. The truth of this is evident when it is known that Frederick Warde and The Capitol gave two of the finest performances ever witnessed in this city and played to beggarly audiences, while Uncle Tom's Cabin played almost to a packed house and gave, in street parlance, a rotten show.

—The regular business and social meeting of the Epworth League will be held in Vincent Chapel, on Friday evening, at eight o'clock.

—The New York Press this morning prints a picture of Charles A. Reed, Assemblyman-elect of Somerset county, and also a brief biographical sketch.

The Crescent Bowling team will bowl the E. A. C. team at Elizabeth Thursday night next.

The Y. M. C. A. bowling team will bowl the Crescent Wheelmen Juniors on the alleys of the latter on Thursday evening of this week.

The bowling alleys at the Westfield Y. M. C. A. have been put in fine shape by James Moffett. New balls have been purchased to be ready for the opening under the new management, on New Year's Day.

Who says the Bachelors of the Park Club can't bowl? Certainly not the Benedicts, for the Bachelors did them up in the game on the Park Club alley Saturday night to the tune of 1575 to 1482. It was a lively game, for the single men came with a determination to reverse the result of the game of the Saturday before while the Benedicts, flushed with their one victory had decided to snow under their opponents. The Bachelors took the lead in the first frame by ten pins and gradually increased it. In the ninth frame the married men decided to follow their tactics of the other game and overcome their opponent's lead with a rush. But the other fellows had "made hay while the sun shined" and rolled up such a lead that they could not be caught, although the Benedicts drew nearer. During the last two frames, everything was excitement and the victorious Bachelors laughed at their excited rivals. The friends of both teams turned out in large numbers, completely lining the alleys. The rooting and cheering at times was deafening.

Neither of the teams were composed of the same men as in the game before, but the new ones all rolled excellent scores. Next Saturday evening when the deciding game comes off a great game may be expected, as both teams will exert every effort to win the match.

The individual scores were as follows:

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The National Interscholastic Athletic Association was organized Saturday morning at a meeting held in the De La Salle Institute. Among the delegates present was George Proctor Smith, of the Plainfield High School. A constitution was drafted. Only regularly organized and established interscholastic athletic association holding at least one outdoor track athletic meet each year, consisting of at least two schools, will be eligible to membership in the organization. After the constitution had been adopted an election of officers was held. The only other New Jersey school represented besides the Plainfield High School, was the Stevens Preparatory School, of Hoboken.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh That Contain Mercury.

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces, such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c per bottle.

One Minute Cough Cure is rightly named. It affords instant relief from suffering when afflicted with a severe cough or cold. It acts on the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs and never fails to give immediate relief. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

GOLF.

Articles incorporating the Morris County Golf Club, with a capital stock of $50,000, and the privilege of increasing this to $100,000 at pleasure, have been filed with the Secretary of State at Trenton. Bonds for $40,000 will probably be issued, and the remainder of the $60,000 to pay for the grounds recently purchased will likely be borrowed for the present. If deemed advisable later on, more bonds will be issued.

CYCLING COMMENT.

The annual meeting of the New Jersey Division, L. A. W., will be held at the clubhouse of the Elizabeth Athletic Club this evening at 8 o'clock. This will be one of the most important meetings in the history of the board. In addition to passing upon the usual routine business, it is probable that the board will take some action concerning the racing question, and the other questions which are agitating the League at large.

WHIST.

The Orange Whist Club comes to Plainfield tonight to play off a challenge game for the State whist trophy with the Park Club at the latter's club house this evening.

—The regular meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Public Library tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

—The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church will hold its regular meeting for sewing on Friday afternoon in the parlors of the church.

—Theo. F. Swayzee has purchased the house on the corner of Ninth street and First place and is remodeling it for his own occupancy.

—The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the Congregational church next Sunday. Several are expected to unite with the church.

—Rheumatism is caused by lactic acid in the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla neutralizes this acid and permanently cures rheumatism. Be sure to get only Hood's.

—The regular prayer meeting of the Crescent Avenue church will be held Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock, and will be followed by a meeting of the session.

—Wm. Addis, the plumber, received a check for $25 today from W. V. Mundy, agent of the Travelers Insurance Company, for injuries recently received.

—On Friday evening of this week the Epworth League of Grace M. E. Church will hold a business meeting at the home of T. W. Powell on Grandview avenue.

—There was a very large attendance at the East Third Street Mission last night. D. A. MacPhie conducted the service and his remarks were listened to with interest.

—The service at Holy Cross church yesterday afternoon was largely attended, and the special music rendered by the choir was thoroughly enjoyed for its excellence.

—The preparatory service and prayer meeting of the Congregational church, usually held on Wednesday evening, will be held this week on Friday evening instead.

—Rev. Dr. and Mrs. W. R. Richards will be at home to all members of the congregation of the Crescent Avenue church on the afternoon of New Year's Day from 4 until 7.

—Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., have received an invitation from Kilpatrick Post, G. A. R., of Elizabeth, to be present at their installation ceremonies to be held next Saturday evening at Elizabethport.

The Hope Chapel Bowling Club will roll the North Plainfield Club Thursday night.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

THEATRICAL.

William A. Brady will bring his big melo-dramatic production, "The Cotton King," to Music Hall this evening. The play has been seen in New York, Boston and Chicago, where it played in each city over 100 nights to large business. It is a presentation of melodrama, massive in scenery and mechanical effects and practical illustrations of the large cotton mills of Manchester, England. The story is of intense human interest. The scenic and mechanical effects are on an elaborate scale. In the fourth act is presented the interior of a cotton mill with looms and print presses at work and an elevator in operation. This scene is said to be a wonderful piece of stage ingenuity. It is in that act that the villain thrusts the heroine to the bottom of the elevator well and attempts to have her life crushed out by ringing for the elevator to descend. Manager Brady has secured an exceptionally strong company, and an excellent performance is promised.

From all reports the patrons of Music Hall on New Year's night may expect in "Temptation of Money," the four-act comedy drama, one of the best melo-dramas seen in Plainfield this season. The plot of the piece is as follows: Edgar Royal, nephew of Sir Gilbert Beresford and his supposed heir, is sent to America to bring over a grandchild of Sir Gilbert's, whose existence has just been found out. He goes to America and on her refusal to marry him, tries to kill her, and takes an accomplice back to England with him to represent the real heiress. Out of this the authors have constructed an interesting play, full of pathos and laughter, which fixes and retains the interest of the audience from the rise of the curtain to its fall. Of course the heroine is saved and the guilty ones brought to justice and everything ends happily. The excellent cast is headed by Alma Earle, a soubrette of more than ordinary ability.

DYSPEPSIA THE CHIEF CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

Facts With Which Few Are Familiar.

Dyspepsia or ordinary indigestion is seldom regarded as a dangerous disease, yet doctors now realize that any disturbance of the digestive function is but a stepping stone to the most dangerous and fatal of all diseases—dread consumption.

This appears very clear when we consider that consumption, as the name implies, is but a consuming of the body's substance. Weakness and emaciation naturally result.

The body of a person who does not properly digest food undergoes wasting, and you may safely assume that every pale, thin person of your acquaintance is not properly digesting and absorbing food. In other words, the substance of the body is being consumed and when the cough puts in an appearance they will be regarded as consumptives.

The symptoms of consumption and those arising from certain forms of indigestion are practical identical. Therefore don't despair even if you think your lungs may be affected. First try to repair your stomach and put it in order. This is best done by a very harmless though very ingenious remedy—the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

This product, prepared by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, aids the digestion of food in the stomach, and when food is once digested, it is quickly absorbed.

If you are dyspeptic, don't wait until some more dangerous disease has appeared. Correct the trouble at once.

A single 10 cent bottle of Shaker Digestive Cordial will be sufficient to convince you of its merit, and its continued use is almost certain to effect a cure. All drugggists keep it and can supply you with an interesting descriptive pamphlet.

The Bible Illustrated.

A very enjoyable illustrated Bible lecture on "The Lily of Israel," was given at St. Mary's R. C. church last evening by Father McCormick, of Paterson. Father Dunn, of Hoboken, was to have had charge of the stereopticon, but was suddenly called away at the last moment. Walter Freeman and J. Hervey Doane, of the Plainfield Camera Club, operated it. There were a large number present. The views were very handsome especially a set of twelve entitled "Rock of Ages."

—Buy your sister a pair of kid gloves at Peck's.

A loud ring of your doorbell in the dead hours of night is alarming. So is the first hollow sound of a cough from one's husband, wife, son or daughter. It is disease knocking, with perhaps a certain silent visitor waiting not far away. Arrest that cough. Stop it. Stop it at the start. A few day's use of Ely's Pineola Balsam and the danger is past. Relief is immediate; a cure certain. This remedy is rich in the curative principles of the balsams and also contains certain ingredients that are new.

A SOCIALISTIC EXPERIMENT.

Life and Rules of Work at Lane's Labor Settlement In Paraguay.

Cosine is the name of Lane's labor settlement in Paraguay, an outcome of the abortive socialistic settlement of New Australia. The Cosine Monthly gives some account of life at Cosine. Labor is roughly divided into outdoor and indoor departments. Bosses, not so named, are in charge of various subdepartments of each kind of labor. Workmen are busied in clearing, farming, gardening, dairying and several mechanical trades. The cooking is done mainly in a common kitchen, only two families maintaining kitchens of their own. Two cooks are on duty in the common kitchen, and there are three relays of cooks for this service. Married persons have their meals served at home, but single men eat in the large dining hall at tables seating four persons each. The women attend co-operatively to the washing and mending of the single men. Other such work in the colony is done in the family.

The colony works eight hours a day five days a week. No work is done on Sunday, and there is one other weekly holiday. Most persons take a half holiday on Saturday afternoon and the other half holiday at some other time. There is a midday summer siesta of three hours and two quarter hour "smakeha's" daily. Breakfast is at 5:30 o'clock in summer and 6:30 in winter. The cook's horn regulates everything in the settlement. Every adult has an allowance of three Paraguayan dollars weekly, and children have 1¼ Paraguayan dollars. Men must pay $2.75, women $2.50 and children 90 cents weekly to the kitchen. What is left may be spent at the settlement store. The women had for a time an extra allowance of $1 a week for the purchase of luxuries, chiefly flour, sugar and meat. The stock of these luxuries gave out, and the allowance was discontinued. Men may use the value of their holiday time in the purchase of articles made by holiday labor. No price is yet charged for boots. Men buy home grown tobacco at 20 cents a pound, petroleum, monthly magazines and soap. There are books and piles of newspapers in the dining hall, and these are free to every one.

Every night at dusk the colonists gather in the dining hall, which is also an assembly room, to hear "evening notes" read. These are articles prepared for publication in the press of the outside world, letters from friends and newspaper clippings. The dining hall is lit up at night, and the colonists read and play chess or checkers. There is a Spanish class going twice a week, and a dancing class has been formed. Every gathering now ends in a dance, though women, and especially single women, are scarce. There is a glee club, and the singing class meets twice a week. Saturday night is a gala time, and the Literary and Social union takes charge and provides entertainment.—New York Sun.

An African Cook.

Deria Ali was our swarthy chef, a little wizened up old fellow, much given to complaining of and quarreling with the other members of the outfit, but, on the other hand, a first class jungle cook. He had seen a good deal of the world, having visited Melbourne and other places in Australia. Not finding them to his liking, however, he had returned to his native jungle. His wardrobe was, like Sam Weller's knowledge of London, "extensive and peculiar." One day he would appear wearing a tarboosh, two yards of calico and a spear; the next day very tight trousers and an old military overcoat; another day an ancient and porous mackintosh, of which he said, "Him cost me £5 at Melbourne."

On the march his duty was to drive the sheep—poor, white, fat tailed things. They got so used to marching that after a few days they needed no driving and would follow like dogs, getting gradually killed off day by day till they were all gone, and a fresh lot had to be bought to fill their places. It was necessary to take sheep with us in order to keep the pot supplied when our time was devoted exclusively to the pursuit of lions. On such occasions it would have been fatal to sport to discharge a rifle in order to supply ourselves with food. One sheep marched with us for about 240 miles, his day of execution having been postponed to the very last because we had become so mutually attached. When he was killed, he was barely eatable.—Nineteenth Century.

Patriotic and Diplomatic.

In Sir Walter Scott's journal he speaks repeatedly of the superior appearance of English youths over those of Scotland. He theorizes that their manners ripened earlier and more thoroughly in a sunnier climate. We are accustomed to think of England as something other than a hothouse, but there may be a germ of truth in the idea. Every one acknowledges the grace and ease of even the most ignorant peasant in southern countries. In this connection may be cited a speech made to an American who attended some convention in Genoa some time ago. She wore pinned to the lapel of her coat a tiny badge which bore the Italian flag. While on a water excursion she noticed a vessel which floated the stars and stripes. A thrill of heim-weh shook her voice as she said impulsively to her boatman, "Did you ever see anything more beautiful than that banner?" With a courteous bow he answered, "Never, madam, except that which you honor by wearing over your heart."—New York Times.

English Churches.

The English people have a deep seated love for their old churches and cathedrals, and they spend money lavishly for their preservation. In the last 20 years not less than £10,000,000 has been expended in the restoration of these edifices, and this does not include any sum below £500?

In London alone £800,000 has been thus spent. In addition £9,000,000 has been devoted in the country at large to the erection of new churches. Another notable fact is that most of the money raised for these purposes has been derived from private gifts.—London Letter.

With Emphasis.

Neighbor—Bertie, your mother is calling you.

Bertie—Yes'um, I know it, but I fancy she don't want me very bad.

Neighbor—She has called you seven times already.

Bertie—Yes, I know, but she hasn't called "Albert" yet.—American Hebrew.

To criticise was originally to pass an opinion upon, whether favorable or otherwise, and the fact that most opinions are unfavorable is indicated in the present signification of the word.

We have more power than will, and it is often by way of excuse to ourselves that we fancy things are impossible.—Rochefoucauld.

THE SEA SHELL.

From out this pink fantastic shell,
Deep throated voices seem to swell,
And in long buried music tell
The hymn of the chanting sea.

The crested breakers on the shore
Roll grandly up with muttered roar,
And so they roll forevermore,
With mighty melody.

The soft winds in this spiral sing;
From out the pearly coils they bring
A sound of bells which faintly ring
And chime melodiously.

And now they whisper soft and low;
And now they come, and now they go;
They are where'er the breezes blow,
Those echoes of the sea.

With plaintive voice they sadly weep;
And now they slowly die to sleep;
But still the voices of the deep
Are chanting hymns of thee.
—Charles N. Myers in Detroit Free Press.

"THE RULES OF CIVILITY."

Good Breeding as It Was Taught In the Old Days.

The author of a quaint little book published in England in the year 1685, though manifestly of French origin, defines civility as "a science that teaches us to dispose of our words and actions in their proper and just places." With t is definition, based, as he honestly confesses it to be, upon the experience of the ancients, no one will feel disposed to quarrel. It is only when we come to examine the fruits of this philosophy that we feel tempted to enter a mild protest. Hear, for instance, the funny way in which the author of "The Rules of Civility" warns his contemporaries against making too abrupt an entry into the presence of a great person. Rule 2 says: "At the door of his chamber or closet it would be rude to knock. We are only to scratch, and when in a king's or a prince's lodgings our name is demanded by any of the officers we must give him our surnames only without the addition of master."

Apropos of ladies, the author of "The Rules of Civility" tells us that "it is not becoming of a person of quality, when in the company of ladies, to handle them roughly, to kiss them by surprise, to pull off their hoods, to snatch away their handkerchiefs, to rob them of their ribbands and put them into his hat, to force their letters or books from them or to look into their papers," etc.

With regard to the subject of "what we are to observe at the table" our author has many amusing things to say. "If a person of quality," says he, "desires you to help him with anything that is to be carved with a spoon, you must by no means make use of your own spoon, if you have eaten anything with it," but call for another, "unless he sends his own spoon along with his plate, where there will be no occasion for yours." "If we eat out of the dish, we must have a care of putting in our spoons before our superiors, or of eating out of any other part of the dish than that which is directly before us." "Having served yourself with your spoon, you must remember to wipe it, and indeed as often as you use it, for some are so nice that they will not eat potage or anything of that nature in which you put your spoon unwiped after you have put it into your mouth."—St. James Gazette.

"The Roaring Girl."

"Enter Moll in a frieze jerkin and a black safeguard." Thus in the old comedy Moll Cutpurse comes upon the stage, and truly it was by her clothes that she was first notorious. By accident a woman, by habit a man, she must needs invent a costume proper to her pursuits. But she was no shrieking reformer, no fanatic spying regeneration in a pair of breeches. Only in her attire she showed her wit, and she went to a bull baiting in such a dress as well became her favorite sport. She was not of those who "walk in spurs, but never ride." The jerkin, the doublet, the galligaskins were put on to serve the practical purposes of life, not to attract the policeman or the spinster, and when a petticoat spread its ample folds beneath the doublet not only was her array handsome, but it symbolized the career of one who was neither man nor woman and yet both.

After awhile, however, the petticoat seemed too tame for her stalwart temper, and she exchanged it for the great Dutch slop, habited in which unseemly garment she is pictured in the ancient prints. Up and down the town she romped and scolded, earning the names which Middleton gave her in her green girlhood. "She has the spirit of four great parishes," says the wit in the comedy, "and a voice that will drown all the city."—Macmillan's Magazine.

What Becomes of the Lead Pencils.

"I don't know that anybody ever gave a satisfactory answer to the question, What becomes of all the pins? but I think," said a father, "that if anybody should ask what becomes of all the lead pencils I could tell 'em. My two younger children have reached that age when they go to school and carry pencil boxes. A part of the equipment of the pencil box is a pencil sharpener, which can be bought now for the marvelously low price of 1 cent. Armed with this pencil sharpener the temptation to sharpen the pencil is, of course, great. When they first got the sharpeners, the children used to turn off little saucers full of the fragrant cedar shavings just to look at and smell, and now at the least blunting or breaking off of the point the pencil is carefully turned down again. And that's what becomes of the pencils—my children turn 'em into shavings."—New York Sun.

Stanley's Glasses.

Mr. Stanley told a New York reporter how he came to wear glasses. "This very pair of spectacles," he said, "I took from the table of the missionary, Bishop Parker, in Central Africa, put them on carelessly to look at a manuscript and discovered that my sight was no longer in its normal state—for reading, at least." He uses the bishop's glasses still.

No Use.

Mrs. Phunnel's Sister—Stella, if I had a husband that drank as hard as John does I'd make him buy a plaster and stick it over his mouth.

Mrs. Phunnel—It wouldn't do any good, Jennie. He'd buy a porous plaster.—Chicago Tribune.

The use of cannon and bombs at their first introduction was pronounced diabolical by the church authorities, and from one end of Europe to the other the pulpit orators thundered against these weapons of the evil one.

Truth is the most powerful thing in the world, since even fiction itself must be governed by it and can only please by its resemblance.—Shaftesbury.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

Matildy Perkins' Opinions

By GERTRUDE F. LYNCH.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

"So Ezry's dead at last!"

"Yes, died last night. It didn't seem possible he could ever surprise 'em in that way, they'd been lookin for it so long, but he did. They were eatin their supper in the kitchin. Left him jes' for a minit, and when they hurried back there he was—gone."

Mrs. Crocker straightened her sunbonnet, drew her shawl about her shoulders and rose to depart. At the door she paused.

"What do yer suppose, Lize, that daughter of his'n'll do?"

"Matildy?"

"Yes."

"Waal, I've thought of that, but don't seem to come to eny mind consarnin her. She's so all fired queer. Perhaps it'll onsettle her."

"Do yer think she'll go to Bostin?"

"Shouldn't be a bit surprised ef she did. She's never be'n the same sence her visit there that air time."

"Likely though."

"Yes, smart's a whip."

As they turned to part each glanced curiously down the hill, where from the door knocker of a small white house a long black streamer hung in dejected folds to the stoop.

"Looks like new crape."

"Waal, it's about time. That old piece's be'n in use ever sence the year my John was born. Remember jes as well. Miss Edgcom' left off mournin for her ma and put on that sprigged muslin. Sort o' neat, but too young for her. Waal, Mr. Edgcom', he jes took her old veil, yanked out the creases and has used it ever sence for every funeral he's ever tended."

In the white house lay the corpse of Ezra Perkins. As his neighbors had gossiped, he had been left for a few minutes by his daughter and nurse, and when they returned he had passed beyond their care. The hard work, the exposure, the fever, to all of which the New England farmer becomes an early inheritor, had done their work. At 50 he had been a wornout man; at 60 he was dead.

In the spareroom the nurse, a comfortable looking, middle aged woman, was tying a black ribbon around the stem of a goblet which held a few sprays of ragged robin and young man's love, viewing her work with approval and wondering how soon she could with decency leave the house of mourning to enter her term of service at the next place, where she had seen six young Browns into the world and was ready and eager to help along the seventh.

Down stairs Matildy was putting back the disordered chairs, straightening an unruly window shade and trying vainly to end the struggles of a huge bluebottle fly that buzzed distractingly about the dusty panes. The coffin stood in the middle of the room, and now and then as she wandered about she would glance at it apprehensively, as if she feared its contents would still question and disapprove in querulous accents.

Ezra Perkins had been a stern parent and hard taskmaster. Even death could not blot that from her mind. Her thin frame, whose close fitting garment of black emphasized the stoop engendered by years of daily labor, the knotted hand and careworn face, were each mute witnesses of the bitter experience life had been to her. She had been a slave many years, but she was free at last—free from the gibes and jeers, the constant supervision, the necessity for accounting for trifles, the ever overhanging dread of a daily tribunal for sins of omission and commission. There had been no love between father and daughter, but the Puritan rigidity of principle which showed each the straight path of duty to the other and their little world gave their stern lives the empty appearance of family affection.

A little time was her own, in which she could enjoy the hard earned reward of reflection—a scanty reward, but one which overworked body and tired brain had ere this denied her. Her dreams were not poetical. The drudgery of a farmhouse does not produce poets, but in the arid soil of her prosaic mind had been planted the seeds of an ambition which seemed to approach fruition.

As if it were yesterday, she recalled the one experience in her life which furnished her with these materials of future hope and present uneasiness—an experience which caused her even now to be spoken of admiringly by her neighbors as "Ezry's daughter, the one who went to Boston." For them, in their monotonous existence, time was limitless, and this event, which happened when she was but 12—she was now in her thirty-fifth year—was still important enough to be chronicled in daily conversation.

The circumstances of her visit were perhaps extraordinary enough to excuse the forcible impression it had made. Standing one day by the bars of the "medder," swinging her empty berry pail and digging among the briers and stones with her bare toes, she had witnessed a frightful runaway, horses and driver alike frantic with fear, and the only occupant of the carriage, an elderly lady, powerless but brave and self possessed in the face of present danger and future disaster. With unchildlike presence of mind Matildy tore off her sunbonnet and ran into the road waving it furiously before the eyes of the frightened animals. The maneuver was successful. The horses reared, pranced, then suddenly became quiet in a tremor of ungovernable rage before the weird little figure. Seizing his opportunity, the driver gained control of them with no greater damage than a bad fright. The occupant of the carriage, a wealthy woman, visiting amid the fashionable element of a neighboring summer resort, from which she had been drawn by a fit of exploring curiosity, on her return to her city home took Matildy with her to ease her mind of its unaccustomed burden of curiosity by showing the country bred child the wonders and fascinations of a luxurious existence. For weeks Matildy dwelt in dreamland, her open eyes and ears drinking in the mysteries of this new life and receiving impressions which were destined to influence her whole career. Then came the awakening. Her hostess, believing her debt discharged, sent her home laden with gifts and seductive promises, which proved chimerical, her identity being forgotten in a month.

Soon her life assumed a new aspect, and dreams were forced to make way for the realities of existence. Her mother's death and the subsequent burdens which fell on her shoulders took from her the gayety and life of youth, and in a few years she was a prematurely old woman, known and respected only for her common sense, industry and thrift, but restless and dissatisfied, ever cherishing the secret hope of a return some day to that paradise around which her youthful dreams centered.

Now that her desire was so near gratification she grudged every moment that passed. The fact that she had waited years only made the moments pass more slowly. As she fidgeted about the front room eying the red and yellow pattern of the gaudy carpet and the gaunt inmate of the coffin the joy that she felt at her hard won freedom was tempered by the necessary delay she must experience before availing herself of its privileges.

Her reverie was broken into by officious offers of assistance, and soon she was deep in the mysteries of planning and contriving how to seat her expected guests, how to make useful the black bombazine, which Mrs. Stoddard, who loaned it, remarked "jest wanted a hitch in the back to make it fit," and other necessary details.

CHAPTER II.

But time passed, as time will. The funeral services, in which nothing was omitted or shortened, from the interminable prayer and eulogy on the deceased to the melancholy "airth to airth," were all duly rehearsed. Then came the final preparations, the packing up, the goodbys, the tacking of the sign "To Let" on the exterior of the small house.

The last night Daniel Macquirk sauntered up to the door.

"Evenin, Matildy," he remarked.

"Evenin, Dan'el," she responded quietly.

He removed the corncob pipe from his stubbly lips. "So yer really air goin, Matildy. I didn't believe it."

Matildy turned on him fiercely. "Why didn't yer believe it?" she asked.

Daniel looked helplessly. "I dunno," he responded lamely, "but ain't it rather sudden?"

"It don't take me all my life, Dan'el, to make up my mind to do a thing," Matildy sarcastically rejoined.

This was a home thrust. For 15 years Daniel Macquirk had sauntered up every evening with his corncob pipe in his mouth and his hands in his pockets to see Matildy. She knew and he knew that he intended asking her to be his wife, but the word had never been spoken. He had needed only an encouraging glance, but her proud, obstinate nature forbade this yielding. Her New England training had taught her that it was the woman's privilege to hold back, and she had held back rigidly. Now she was glad. To be Daniel Macquirk's wife seemed as nothing in comparison with the future of which she had been dreaming.

Daniel held her hand a moment as they stood together on the stoop. "I hope you'll never regret it, Matildy," he said as the roughened palms parted.

For the first time a faint doubt assailed her and a faint premonition of coming homesickness, but only for a moment. "I'm sure I shan't, Dan'el," she answered, softened by the coming separation.

"Ef yer should ever want any help, Matildy"—he began.

"I never shall, Dan'el," she interrupted quickly. "Hev I ever?" and visions of her unhelped childhood, youth and womanhood again hardened her voice.

The next day the little white house at the foot of the hill was closed.

A scanty store of money, the name of the woman who was the innocent cause of her exodus—this was the capital with which she had determined to make a new start in life, never doubting that her future experience would be a repetition of the past. Her ignorance made her sanguine. The expressions of lifelong obligation and epithets of affection still lingered in her ears, as when, an excited, happy child, she had left the luxurious home where she had been for weeks the source of secret amusement and half concealed boredom.

When Matildy landed in Boston, she experienced that peculiar feeling of helplessness and bewilderment which overpowers the country bred in the presence of the bustle and noise of a great city. She stood looking helplessly about, alarmed for her safety in the midst of the incoming and outgoing trains, the hurrying crowds, the inharmonious murmur of the neighboring streets. A long time she waited; then as the momentary paralysis of thought and action passed she followed the throng of new arrivals into the street. Here a new terror assailed her. A mob of haranguing drivers yelling, "Cab, cab, cab!" surrounded her. One more enterprising than the rest seized her large carpet bag and hurried her toward his waiting vehicle. Matildy yielded to her persistent cavalier and seated herself on the comfortable cushions with a sigh of satisfaction.

"Why didn't yer believe it?" she asked.

"Where to?" the cabman asked, after waiting a reasonable time for directions.

"I want to go to Mis' Ellis', " Matildy responded.

"Come, none of that!" the man coarsely answered. "Where do you mean?"

Matildy folded her hands primly in her lap and began, "Yer see, when I left Mis' Ellis she told me that any time I was able to come, to come right back, I'd be sure of a welcome, and so I'm goin to surprise her."

The man, too practical to be touched by this childlike inexperience and faith, seized her roughly by the arm, angry, as he saw the possibility of a fare fading into nothingness. "I haven't any time," he ejaculated, "to waste. Come, get out of here!"

So Matildy was again left standing helpless and alone.

She walked up and down and finally wandered into a store, where she seated herself on one of the vacant stools. The crowds of busy shoppers passed her by, the floorwalkers and clerks looked at her curiously, but believing she was waiting for some one did not disturb her. The moments passed. Finally she got up and wandered again into the street. No one looked at her or paid her the slightest attention. A great feeling of loneliness and dread began to assail her. She mustered up courage to approach an apple stand kept by a matronly woman, whose ruddy cheeks seemed to have borrowed the roseate flush of her fruit. "Can you tell me," she hazarded timidly, "where Mis' Ellis lives?"

The woman, busily rubbing her apples, looked at her curiously.

"Bless my soul! I don't know any Miss Ellis. I guess you've made a mistake." Then, with the quickness of her class, used to all the sights and scenes of a great city, she took in the situation.

"You're from the country, I guess?"

Matildy nodded.

Thoughts of her own country bred childhood prompted her to offer Matildy a seat and an apple while she listened to her story. When it was finished, she saw her duty stretch plainly before her. In her simple life she had no time or place for moral wanderings or splitting of hairs. Things were either right or wrong. This woman had come to her friendless and inexperienced. She must do what she could to assist her.

This she found to be considerable. It consisted in her taking her protege home, and, after finding the addresses of all the Ellises that the directory afforded, in her spare moments going with Matildy to each house where it seemed possible her former protectress might reside. This took many days and resulted in disappointment and failure. The old lady who had unconsciously played such an important part in Matildy Perkins' life had long since died, her house had passed into the possession of distant relatives, who were too absorbed in the round of fashion to feel more than a passing interest in the quaint story and its quaint teller.

Then came a long season of trial for Matildy. Too proud to return to her village home, she daily fought the battle of homesickness amid her strange surroundings. The old apple woman was her only solace, and she alone was a witness of the gradual disappearance of the little hoard of money, the inaptitude for a city life, the pathetic longing and homesickness Matildy tried so bravely to hide.

Boys Club Christmas.

About eighty members of the Boys Club enjoyed their Christmas entertainment Saturday night. The programme included a piano solo by Miss Frost, vocal selections by the Silver Leaf Quartette and an address by Rev. Hobart Clark, after which candy, peanuts, oranges and cake were distributed to the boys. Superintendent G. E. Marx was in charge.

LONDON'S WATER SUPPLY.

The Great City Gets an Enormous Flood of Clear and Filtered Fluid.

The whole of greater London, covering an area of about 630 square miles, is supplied by these organizations, whose powers and districts are defined by law. The six Thames companies are allowed to draw a maximum supply of 120,000,000 gallons a day, the East London is allowed to take 33,000,000 gallons, and the New River 22,500,000 gallons a day from the Lea. The rest comes from the chalk wells. There is also, however, a supplementary supply drawn by several companies from the gravel beds by the side of the Thames, and in times of flood or drought this natural supply is very useful.

The daily total is about 220,000,000 gallons, or 40 gallons per head. Every drop of the water is carefully purified, with the exception of that from the wells. For this purpose the companies have 114 filter beds, covering 117¼ acres. Every company, except the Kent, has storage reservoirs, in which water is kept in readiness for emergencies. There are storage reservoirs for unfiltered water, covering 474½ acres and holding 1,280,000,000 gallons, and 60 filtered water reservoirs, holding 217,000,000 gallons—that is to say, if every source of supply were cut off, London would have enough water in store for little more than a week.

The pumping operations represent an enormous expenditure of force. The Southwark company, for instance, pumps 12,000,000 gallons every day a distance of 18 miles to Nunhead, with a rise of 215 feet, for distribution thence to the other parts of the district. The pipes, too, are often enormous in size, some of the tunnels being 9 feet in diameter. As for the length, there are in all London 5,000 miles of water pipes, on which there are some 27,625 hydrants. It is hard to gain from mere figures an adequate conception of the extent of London's water supply, but the enormous stream of water flows steadily into the houses—over 800,000 of them—day after day, carefully filtered and purified, and the system contrasts curiously with the old New River water carts and Chelsea's wooden pipes.—Chambers' Journal.

An Interesting Mexican Village.

Tetxtcingo is the euphonious name of a village of 1,000 inhabitants, in the district of Morelos, state of Morelos, which has preserved the customs and the language of its founders, who settled there in the remote past. The inhabitants are all Indians of the purest Mexican or Aztec blood. They scorn the idea of intermixture or intermarriage with any other race. Their boast is that they are pure Mexicans. They all speak the native language. A few understand Spanish, but the great majority do not know one word of it.

The men wear their hair long and plaited in a tail like a Chinaman. They wear short pants, like those used by bathers, made of deerskin or of cotton woven by their women. The shirt, or body dress, is made of cotton cloth, also woven at home. The women dress entirely in homespun material and never comb their hair, which they wear rolled up in a ball on the top of the head, and over it they put a jicara made from a common gourd. They live upon corn and fruits and the flesh of animals and birds trapped in the forests and hills. They consume nothing whatever that is imported, and they support themselves entirely by their native productions. Governor Alarcon of the state of Morelos told a Herald representative that robberies are totally unknown in the village.—Mexican Herald.

JUSTICE TO THE PUPPY.

It Is Time That His Name Should Be Cleared of Contumely.

It is high time that a word should be spoken in apology to the much abused puppy, who has for years been made to stand as an emblem of the most despicable member of the human family.

When a man discovers traits of meanness, when he betrays a meddlesome, prying, caddish disposition, we are too prone to characterize him as a "puppy" without stopping to think of the contumely thereby heaped upon the canine animal of immature years.

Instead of being a term of reproach, "puppy," properly considered, is a high and undeserved compliment bestowed upon the object of our contempt, but while we thus unintentionally honor the cad, we do a distinct and unwarranted injustice to the puppy, for it is a sort of insinuation that he is no better than the man to whom he is likened, inasmuch as by calling a cad a puppy we as much as say that the puppy is a mean, sneaking upstart of a creature, which he is not.

The puppy is frank, free and frolicsome, always in the best of humor, with nothing underhand or mean about him. He never sulks in his kennel nor complains because things do not go just as he wants them to go. He makes friends with everybody, the rich and the poor, the high and the low, the good looking and the ugly, and he is no respecter of silk, satin and broadcloth above cotton or fustian or rags.

He is not squeamish as to his diet, and takes what is given to him gladly, and as much more as he can get hold of.

He may and does rend your doormat and demolish stray rubbers and make ravelings of your raiment, but he does all this jocosely and without malice. It is his safety valve, the instinct given him whereby he may blow off some part of his exuberant liveliness.

The puppy is the very quintessence of animated good nature. His is the genial temperament, his the merry making disposition that would have all nature, animal and vegetable, share in his joys.

Therefore, to call a mean spirited fellow a puppy is a gratuitous and unwarranted libel upon the four footed ingenu, and it is time that justice was done to the puppy by no longer making him the emblem and the analogue of the man we call by his name.

A puppy does not put on airs, nor turn up his nose at people whom he fancies are below him—if, indeed, he ever considers anybody below him—neither does he indulge in liquids more potent than milk, nor make himself odorous with cigarette smoke.

The puppy is mischievous, but never malicious. He tries to be everybody's friend and was never known to speak ill of any one.

Then why has he been maligned all these years? Come, let us no longer degrade a good fellow, and a merry, by employing him as a simile of all that is mean and despicable in human nature.—Boston Transcript.

Prices Two Centuries Ago.

The question of prices in the first quarter of the seventeenth century is full of interest to every one, and it is satisfactory to find that food was not as fabulously cheap in the days of our forefathers as we are often led to believe. Mary Verney writes to Ralph at Blois complaining bitterly of the dearness of provisions in London. Beef is fourpence, veal and mutton eightpence, while Pen Verney reckons 8 shillings a week too much for her diet, which is afterward fixed at £6 a year. Twelve pounds a year seems a great deal for willful little Betty, aged 13, to spend on her dress, but country bred as she was she declines, Mary writes, to wear anything but silk. The sum of £50 claimed by Nancy Denton, who was a spoiled child and rich man's daughter, is far more appropriate to her position. In fact, the fees earned by physicians in those days were far in excess of what we should give now, in spite of the exceeding simplicity—not to say remarkable unpleasantness—of their pharmacopœia and treatment.

Dr. Theodore Mayence, the fashionable doctor, left £140,000 (equivalent to over $500,000) behind him, and Sir Ralph is miserable because he cannot afford to pay Dr. Denton the £50 which is the ordinary fee for a confinement. A Venetian mirror costs £40, a portrait by Vandyke £50. A maid's wages come to £3, but the pair of "trimed gloves," with which it is the fashion to reward any extra services on her part, comes to £1 5s.—an absurdly disproportionate payment. The price of Sir Edmund's Covent Garden house is £100, and many horses fetch as much, while £200 a year is the usual price for a boy's board and teaching in a good French family.—Longman's Magazine.

He Took the Case.

Somebody—perhaps it was Postmaster Willett—told a good story about Campbell Carrington the other day. Carrington, it seems, had a client who was almost absolutely sure of going to the penitentiary. The facts were dead against him. But the lawyer talked with him awhile, impressed upon him the narrowness of his chances for acquittal and finally asked him this question:

"Would you rather plead guilty and take the sentence which the court will impose, or would you prefer to go upon the stand and give your own version to the jury?"

"Nyther," said the man coolly.

Carrington looked at the accused with astonishment. "My friend," said he, "any man who can stand here and say 'nyther' when the shadow of the penitentiary is upon him gets my services for nothing. You will be acquitted yet."

The result proved the prediction. Carrington went in, fought the case, and the man was acquitted.—Washington Post.

Mermaids.

All the world over there are legends about mermaids. The Chinese tell stories not unlike others about the sea woman of their southern seas. Mankind is taught on the most excellent evidence that a mermaid was captured at Bangor, on the shores of the Belfast Lough, in the sixth century, while another caught at Edam, in 1403, was carried to Haarlem and kept there for many years.

Gay Jackets of Fishskin.

The Eskimos of Alaska make jackets of the skins of the red spotted trout of that region, known as the Dolly Varden, which they tan for this purpose. The Dolly Varden is a handsome fish of a pale purplish gray color; it attains a length of 2½ feet and a weight of 10 to 12 pounds. The skin is waterproof, and with its bright red spots it makes a very showy jacket.—New York Sun.

The word preposterous originally meant a process of reversing the natural order of things, such as indicated by the common expression "putting the cart before the horse." By an easy gradation it has come to be used in its present significance.

Alaskan Curios.

Seekers of the "quaint and curious" are beginning to think of American Indian decorations. An acquaintance who visited Alaska not long ago made a collection of bags, boxes, paddles and "totem" poles, with an eye to the decoration of his reception hall. He found his first treasures at Fort Wrangle in the form of a handsomely carved paddle, a bark rug, horn spoons and bone daggers and stowed them away in his stateroom. That night he did not sleep a wink. The odor from those Indian things was something not to be described. The purser had to put them and the rest of his collection down in the hold for the remainder of the trip. When he reached home, he had to have the things unpacked in the back yard and thoroughly cleansed with soap, water and a scrubbing brush before he dared have them brought into the house.—Upholsterer.

An Elizabethan Tomb.

A superbly rich Elizabethan tomb is left to us in Boreham church, Essex. This was erected to the memory of Thomas Radcliffe, earl of Sussex, lord chamberlain and known as the stern opponent of Leicester. Three knights in martial costumes lie on the tomb slab, one of which is his son and the other his grandson. Walpole incidentally states that the earl bequeathed £1,500 to be expended on this tomb, and that his executors agreed with a Dutch sculptor, Richard Stevens, to execute his part of the work for £292 12s. 8d. The earl and his son were first buried in the Church of St. Laurence Poultney, in the metropolis, and then removed to Boreham at the instance of the grandson.—Cornhill Magazine.

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. WORK OF THE PRIMARY TEACHER.

Important Points for Teaching Juveniles in Sunday Schools.

The first public meeting of the Plainfield Primary Teachers Union was held in the First Baptist church last evening. A small, but deeply interested audience was present. Miss Beeching, president of the union, presided. The meeting opened with a hymn, after which Rev. Mr. Ferguson, general secretary of the State Sunday-school Union, read a selection of Scripture. Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., led in prayer and was followed by Superintendent Case, of the Sunday-school of the First Baptist church who spoke a few words of welcome and introduction. In referring to the primary department, he called it the most important branch of the Sunday-school. After another hymn, Mrs. Samuel Clark, of Jersey City, was introduced and told of her first experiences as a primary teacher. She was one of the very first to introduce the use of the blackboard into primary class teaching. She gave some very interesting examples of work on the blackboard and showed the way in which she has accomplished her wonderful work in that line. The chalk work for next Sunday's lesson she also gave. The principal point she made was that the drawings were not to be artistic, but to mean something to the children, and she recommended the most simple outline sketches.

A question box, filled with queries on the work of the primary teacher, was turned over to Mrs. Barnes, of Newark, who Miss Beeching introduced as "A perfect enclypœdia of primary work," and such she proved. The great variety of questions were answered with a perfect readiness, which testified to her familiarity with the work. Her answers were all brief, bright and to the point, and were greatly pleasing to her audience. Among the questions that she touched on were those of a separate room for the primary department, the work of the assistant teachers, the lesson cards and what to do with them, the use of the offerings of the department for only benevolent work, and the use of objects in teaching.

A collection was taken up while Miss Bessie Blair sang the solo "Sowing the Seed," all singing the chorus.

Rev. Mr. Ferguson was the last speaker. His talk was filled with good advice and common sense. He gave his idea of the theory of primary teaching. It was based on four principles, according to his views, which were economy, meaning the adapting of the means to the ends; ignorance, the study of the needs of your own children and "don't know too much;" subordination, the running of the primary department in touch with the rest of the Sunday-school and the church; and dependence on each other.

The meeting closed with a hymn and the benediction.

The Dog Not to Blame.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Permit me space in your paper sufficient to correct that part of your statement, in last night's issue, which says, "The dog sprang at Mrs. J. C. Van Dyke causing her fall." We were waiting for her, while the dog was standing to one side, and in Mrs. Van-Dyke's hurry to catch us, she ran into the dog, causing the fall. We are very sorry that the accident happened, but feel justified in making this correction, as the animal in question is not vicious. F. S. Cutter.

FOR STREET IMPROVEMENT.

COMMON COUNCIL HEAR SUGGESTIONS AS TO THEIR WORK.

Councilman Fisk Recommends an Appropriation of $20,000 for the Coming Year—The Report of Mr. Meeker

At the meeting of the City Council last night all the members were present except Mr. Bird. The newly elected Councilmen were also present as guests and watched with considerable interest the proceedings. The regular order of business was suspended and the street railway ordinance was taken up and adopted on third reading as was also the building ordinance the one to create the the office of building inspector, and the one to regulate the licensing of inns and taverns. They are all ready for the Mayor's signature. Council then adjourned and immediately reconvened in regular session. After the minutes were read and approved, a communication was read from J. P. Homan asking for permission to build an extension on his house at 120 West Fifth street. It was referred to the Fire and Building Committee with power.

A petition from Woolston & Buckle and others of North avenue asked for permission to connect to the sewer at once, and another one from L. B. Woolston, Chas. Lyman and others of the Board of Trade, asking the Council to protect the taxpayers of North avenue from any injunction that might be served. Both were referred to the Sewer Committee.

John Vetterlein petitioned the Council for the priviledge of moving his machine shop from 119 Exchange alley to 109 East Front street. It was referred to the proper committee and later granted.

A communication from Michael Watson through his counsel, Lawyer Geo. W. DeMeza, stated that Mr. Watson was willing to pay all the cost of his suit now in litigation in the courts up to date if the city would stop proceedings. The matter was referred to the Finance Committee and later referred to the Corporation Counsel.

The bond of Collector-elect E. H. Bird was presented as approved by Corporation Counsel, received and filed. The usual budget of claims were presented and later ordered paid.

The Board of Engineers appointed Joseph Wyckoff to membership in Zepher Hook & Ladder Company, and the Council confirmed the appointment.

A. J. Gavett recommended the payment of Honan & Sons bill, less $109.15, which was due the city for repairs. It was so ordered. Honan & Sons presented a bill of $179.15 for extra work done on Wutchung avenae between Front and Second streets, in laying a new trench. Consulting Engineer F. W. Farquar reported aversely in the matter, and it was referred to the Sewer Committee.

Mr. Fisk, of the Street Committee, made an extended report of the work done on the streets during the past year. He recommended the paving of the principal streets in the centre of the city with asphalt, also that Sycamore avenue be improved, and that money for next year's work be raised by the appointment of commissioners or the issuing of bonds. The streets should be looked after at once. He also suggested that all matters coming under the title of public works be put under one head as superintendent of streets. He thought that $20,000 would be needed for next year's work. Eollowing the above report, Street Commissioner Meeker's report was presented and read. It is as follows:

The work the past year has consisted of street cleaning, necessary repairs, grading on streets not touched by the sewer trenches and in general preparing for permanent improvements when the sewer trenches have had sufficient time to settle.

No permanent work is possible before next Spring and then only, if we have a severe Winter, or a very wet Spring, so that the dirt may become thoroughly settled in the trenches.

Most of the mounds in dirt streets will disappear and hollows will be left which will have to be filled. The greatest trouble will be found in macadamized streets where the macadam has formed an arch over the soft dirt and the latter settling away will leave it unsupported and liable to give away when any unusual weight is placed upon it. Fortunately the steam roller purchased last Fall will prevent a great deal of this danger. In other cases the macadam will be so thoroughly mixed by gradual settling into the soft dirt beneath that there will be only a remnant of the stone left.

Therefore, to put our streets back in the condition they were two years ago, it will be necessary to pick up the whole surface, level off the hills and fill in the hollows, roll with the steam roller and spread at least two inches of one inch stone over the whole surface and thoroughly water and roll the whole; at the same time it would be advisable to extend this topping of two inches of stone to the curb on each side, thus adding much to the durability as well as the appearance of our residential streets.

The above is recommended for that class of streets only. In the business portion of the city the traffic demands something more substantial of which we will speak more in detail later on.

The streets in the business portion of the city demand prompt attention and should be put in proper condition as soon as the frost is out of the ground in the Spring.

Park avenue from Front street to the railroad should be thoroughly overhauled and all the old plank and other refuse material removed and a good stone foundation laid so that it will be ready at any time for asphalt or whatever surface pavement the common council may decide to employ.

But before this is done an eighteen inch sewer should be built from the present catch basins under the railroad bridge to Green brook; first, to releive the flooding of sidewalks and cellars in the vicinity; second, to do away with the two gutters across Second street; third, to enable us to increase the grade between Second and Front streets which is too light at present to properly carry off the water.

An eighteen inch pipe is recommended rather than one of smaller size because the greatest damage is done by the sudden heavy down pours of Spring and Summer, and hence we require a pipe of sufficient capacity to carry off the water before it has an opportunity to do any damage.

Front street, between Grove street and Watchung avenue, should also have the surface removed and the Telford foundation already laid thoroughly rolled and compacted and should be finished with asphalt, preferably.

If any permanent pavement is laid on Front street beyond the points mentioned above, it will be necessary to lay a stone foundation first, as the present surface is only a light macadam.

North avenue, between Park and Watchung avenues, has a good Telford foundation and requires only surfacing. Asphalt is on the score of cleanliness and noiselessness the ideal pavement, but on the other hand it is quite expensive.

Our main residence streets should all be macadamized to the curb on each side, thus doing away with much unsightly mud in wet weather and unpleasant dust in dry.

It is very desirable that all the cross streets in the heart of the city should be macadamized for the preservation of the main thoroughfares, as the amount of mud and dirt drawn upon them by the horses and vehicles coming from those side streets is surprising and causes the main streets to be much more muddy or dusty than they otherwise would be.

Curbing should be insisted upon wherever permanent improvements are undertaken, as there is no one thing that so assists the flow of water in the gutters, and the consequent good drainage of the streets, as a well set curb; it also serves as a shoulder to the pavement, and materially aids in keeping it in place.

There are certain portions of the city that demand sewers for the purpose of carrying off the surface water:

First—Washington and Sixth streets at their intersection. At this point it is impossible to carry off the water in any other way without entailing great cost, and, though it is very bad, the area drained is not so great but that a 12-inch sewer will be ample.

Second—Grant avenue should be relieved from the great body of water that rushes down it during every rain; this can best be done by building a sewer through Plainfield and Girand avenues from the railroad bridge to Green brook.

The drainage from nearly eighteen acres would thus be diverted from Grant avenue, and as this area is quite thickly built up, and some of the streets macadamized and graded, a greater percentage of the water runs off immediately than would if it was sparsely settled, for in the latter case the ground would absorb much of the rainfall; this fact is often overlooked and sewers and culverts, that were ample for dirt streets running through sparsely settled sections, become entirely too small. For the reasons stated above, I would recommend a twenty-four inch sewer through Plainfield avenue, West Front street and Giraud avenue from the C. R. R. of N. J. to Green brook.

Third—East Second street, between Washington and Richmond streets, is so very flat that it should have a sewer to relieve it. This should be a twelve-inch pipe and be run down East Second street to the Peace street sewer, in which there is an intake already built to receive it.

Another advantage of storm-water sewers is that they do away with culverts and thus permit of a much better finish of street intersections and curb corners, thus adding materially to the appearance of our streets.

One branch of our work that has progressed without much interference is that of flagging and curbing, as the following list will show:

Name of street or avenue	Lineal Feet. Flagging.	Curbing.

CAMPAIGN FOR CHRIST.

A Religious Revival Soon to be Started in This City.

The arrangements are about completed for the union evangelistic services soon to be begun in Plainfield. The committee having the matter in charge have thought it best to keep the public informed as to what is being done, and what is intended. Some time since, the Young People's Societies requested the ministers to take charge of them in a forward movement. This was promptly and favorably responded to, and a committee appointed, consisting of Drs. Barnes, Yerkes and Richards. The committee representing the young people are Messrs. Cornwell, Anthony and Travell. A joint meeting was held about three weeks ago, and the work of preparation vigorously taken up. Committees were appointed to provide music, to see that a thorough canvass of the community is made, and to look after other preliminary matters. The services will be begun in the First Methodist church on Front street, on Monday evening, January 13th.

It is not the intention to engage any evangelist, as it was thought that a combined and earnest effort on the part of the ministry and laity would secure the approval and co-operation of all who are desirous of seeing the work of God revive.

The committee are fully alive to the fact that human efforts will not secure the desired results unaided by the Holy Spirit, and they, therefore, earnestly ask that prayer be offered for the Divine blessing.

SHOT THE BURGLAR.

But the Wounded Robber Got Away. Taking With Him Valuables.

The house of Charles Yingling, sr., was entered at Metuchen, Monday night, by thieves. Mr. Yingling, his wife, and his son Robert went to Baltimore on Saturday to spend a few weeks. Yingling is known to have large sums of money in his house at times, besides other valuables.

Charles Yingling, jr., a younger son, is bookkeeper for George Tobin in this city. He was to come home every night to watch the house while his parents were away. When returning from church, at nine o'clock, he saw two men prowling around, he got David T. Marshall, to stay with him.

At midnight Marshall was awakened by noise downstairs. He ran down with revolver in hand. He saw the window open and a man on the front stoop. Marshall shot at him, but by the time he got outside the man had disappeared. The stone walk in front of the house was covered with blood.

Events at the Y. M. C. A.

The following is the programme for New Year's day at the Y. M. C. A. building. 2 to 4 p. m., instrumental music; 4 p. m., basket ball contest, Juniors, Plainfield vs. North Plainfield; 5 p. m., bowling match; 8 p. m., entertainment, Jere M. Cobb, elocutionist, assisted by musical talent, admission 10 cents; 9:15 p. m., basket ball contest, Spartans vs. High school; 3 to 8 p. m., refreshments.

From Substitute to Regular.

Substitute letter-carrier D. J. Shea goes on as a regular tomorrow. He takes the route in the West End now being covered by William Demarest. The other changes at the postoffice, reported exclusively in this paper, will go into effect tomorrow.

Entertained at Euchre.

Mrs. J. Frank Raymond entertained a party of friends at euchre at her home on Madison avenue last night. The first lady's prize was captured by Mrs. E. M. VanBuren and second by Mrs. Joseph W. Sanford. The first gentleman's prize was won by L. G. Timpson and the second by Howard Tracy.

Amatuer Theatricals.

Rehearsals are now being held twice a week for "Confusion," the comedy drama which is to be given by the dramatic club of the Plainfield Catholic Club at Music Hall on January 16.

Pushing the Freight House.

The cellar for the new freight house has been completed and a large force of masons are now at work putting up the foundation.

The wife of Mr. D. Robinson, a prominent lumberman of Hartwick, N. Y., was sick with rheumatism for five months. In speaking of it, Mr. Robinson says: "Chamberlain's Pain Balm is the only thing that gave her any rest from pain. For the relief of pain it cannot be beat." Many very bad cases of rheumatism have been cured by it. For sale at 50 cents per bottle by Reynolds' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T. S. Armstrong, Manager.

FIGURES AND OBSERVATIONS

EX-MAYOR SAUNDERS INTELLIGENTLY DISCUSSES CONSOLIDATION.

He Contends That the Consummation of the Movement Would Result in Many Benefits—Comparison of the Tax Rates.

Ex-Mayor William L. Saunders, of the borough, furnishes the following facts, figures and observations with reference to the consolidation of city and borough:

I regret that your correspondent who signed his letter "Borough Taxpayer" did not give his name. I am averse to newspaper controversies, especially with anonymous writers. He is doubtless honest in his statements, but he is mistaken in his figures, and if he will give his name it will afford me pleasure to compare figures with him. The interests of Plainfield and North Plainfield being identical it follows that each will be benefited by consolidation. This is true from an economic standpoint, as well as from considerations of public safety and welfare, good government, peace and prosperity.

There is, I think, little difference between the taxes of Plainfield and North Plainfield. A tax rate is a very deceptive thing. No comparison of tax rates is just that does not consider the assessed valuation. Based on equal valuation the figures show that taxes in Plainfield are somewhat lower than in North Plainfield. In 1890, we had a low valuation in the Borough and a high rate. This rate was about $2.31 on the hundred, including the special school tax. The year following the valuation was put up and the rate down. The figures are as follows:

1891. tax rate	$1.50	on 100.	special	school	inc'd
1892. " "	$1.79	" "	"	"	"	"
1893. " "	$1.86	" "	"	"	"	"
1894. " "	$1.98	" "	"	"	"	"
1895. " "	$2.06	" "	"	"	"	"

It will be seen that our tax rate has shown a steady increase during the past five years. It is true also that our valuations have fluctuated considerably, but this only shows the mistake of comparing taxes in two places based on rates alone.

Elston M. French, who is interested in property on both sides of the brook, favors consolidation and produces the following figures which show that taxes are higher in North Plainfield than in the city:

North Plainfield—Year 1894.

Valuation at time sale	$1.000
Assessed valuation—60 cents	600
Rate at $1.98	11.88

Plainfield—Year 1894.

Valuation at time sale	$1.000
Assessed valuation—50 cents	500
Rate at $2.66	12.36

If North Plainfield were assessed at 50 cents valuation, as Plainfield is, the rate would be 2.376 per $100, which is higher than the rate in Plainfield by .156 per $100. Comparing the year 1895 we have:

North Plainfield.

Amount of property	$1.000
Assessed valuation	500
Rate $2.32	11.60

Plainfield.

Amount of property	$1.000
Assessed valuation	500
Rate $2.32	11.60

When based on equal valuation the comparison is as follows:

North Plainfield	$2.472
Plainfield	2.320
Excess in North Plainfield for each $100	$ 1.52
" " " " " 1,000	1.52

In comparing tax bills it must be borne in mind that the item "city" tax which is .50 on the $100, can not be compared with "borough" tax which appears at .20 on the $100. To the "borough" tax should be added:

Board of Health	.03
Road tax	.20
Light "	.23
Total	.46
Adding "borough" tax	.20
	.66

We have .66 on the hundred as compared with .50 in Plainfield. These figures show that even with the borough's higher valuation her tax rate for actual municipal expenses is higher than that of Plainfield. Were it not for the county and school taxes, the fire department and the library there would be no question about the fact of lower taxes in the city. The county tax even at the unequal valuation is only 11 cents to the $100 higher in Plainfield. This is probably due in part to the good Union county roads which we all enjoy, and of which we should be proud. Plainfield school taxes are but 10 cents per $100 higher, a figure that hardly represents the advantage of a High School which the borough does not possess. The library tax is but 5 cents on $100. Fire department and poor taxes are slightly larger in the city. We have a good fire department in the borough, but it is not equal to that in the city. Our police are all right as far as they go, but they are "like angel visits, few and far between."

—There is no denying it, Edward Love keeps good wall paper and understands the putting it on the wall.

AN ART EXHIBITION.

The Monday Afternoon Club Show a Florentine Collection.

At the regular meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club yesterday in the Casino, an additional attraction was furnished in the exhibition of quite a large collection of Florentine pictures, mosaics, pottery, old majelica, plaster casts, etc. The study of the club is "Some Great Florentines and Their Times," and the fifth Monday in the month is devoted to a discussion of club topics, and is followed by a tea. The exhibition yesterday was perhaps one of the best, if not the best, that has ever been witnessed in Plainfield. The collection was loaned by the following persons: Mrs. C. W. McCutchen, Mrs. David Pond, Mrs. David Rowland, Mrs. Edward McCarthy, Mrs. Souther, Mrs. Haff, Mrs. Stephen Krom, Mrs. F. D. Warren, Mrs. W. D. W. Miller, Mrs. Edward Perkins, Mrs. L. H. Grace, Mrs. John Ludlum, Mrs. John Erskine, Mrs. Isaac Miller, Mrs. G. W. Edwards, Mrs. Charles Ellis, Mrs. F. O. Herring, Mrs. A. D. Shepard, Mrs. John Harman, Mrs. E. B. Clark, Mrs. W. H. Stirling, Mrs. D. E. Titsworth, Mrs J. E. Tracy, Mrs. G. C. Evans, Miss Munger, Miss Anthony, Miss Lloyd, Miss Kenyon, Miss Scribner, Miss Lizzie Cook, Miss Newton, and Julian Scott.

Previous to the exhibition vocal selections were given by Mrs. C. F. Abbott, Mrs. Robert Lowry, Mrs. Geo. Chapman, Mrs. Irving Brown, Mrs. Wm. L. Saunders, Mrs. M. I. Cooley. Miss Marion Dumont was the accompanist. Mrs. C. W. McCutchen and Mrs. Geo. C. Evans presided at the table and poured tea.

One of the exceedingly interesting articles on exhibition was a shield, a copy of the original, by Benveunuto Cellini, a celebrated metal worker of the Sixteenth Century, and it was loaned by Mrs. W. H. Sterling.

BLOWED A GALE.

The Heavy Wind Early This Morning Did Considerable Damage.

England did not bombard Plainfield last evening, but Dame Nature did with her mighty weapon, the wind. The wind howled and shrieked with delight as it sent the few stray pedestrians chasing through the rain after their hats. It sprang in all its fury against the windows in the Voehl building on West Front street and smashed two of them. The windows of Central Hall also suffered. At the North Avenue station the wind went fairly wild with joy. One of the cupolas on the station was blown over, while Plainfield came down with a crash, at least a sign with "Plainfield" on it did. Limbs of trees were twisted and broken all over the city, while the wind played all sorts of mischievous pranks on residents of the city and borough.

The heavy wind last night did considerable damage at Bound Brook. The roof on the three-story brick building near the railroad station was lifted bodily from the building and carried across the street, over the top of trees, into a large vacant lot. A large amount of glass was also broken in several houses and stores.

A large stone chimney in the course of erection on East Ninth street, owned by J. E. Martine, was blown over by the gale. The loss was $250.

Cadmus' Mills on South Second street felt the force of the tornado and part of the tin roof was ripped off.

Out in the country the wind swept along in all its glory. Fences, haystacks and corn-shocks, all went down before the tornado.

A carriage shed, in the rear of Smalley's butcher shop on Somerset street, lost its roof in the melee.

A Mothers Death.

Peter Hodge, of Plainfield avenue, received word yesterday afternoon from Bayonne bearing the extremely sad news of the death of his mother. Mrs. Hodge's son, Goyne Hodge, has been critically ill with pneumonia and last Wednesday his mother went to Bayonne to look after him. She was taken ill with pneumonia and rapidly grew worse till she passed away yesterday.

—Unity Lodge, No. 102, Knights of Pythias, meet tomorrow night.

When most needed it is not unusual for your family physician to be away from home. Such was the experience of Mr. J. Y. Schenck, editor of the Caddo, Ind. Ter., Banner, when his little girl, two years of age was threatened with a severe attack of croup. He says: "My wife insisted that I go for the doctor, but as our family physician was out of town I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which relieved her immediately. I will not be without it in the future." 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Reynoldss' Pharmacy, Park and North avenues. T S. Armstrong, Manager.

EXPECTED BOND ISSUE

Several European Institutions Ready To Step In.

Those Who Are Naturally Looked To for Support Still Holding Back —Reported Agreement with J. Pierpont Morgan—No Announcement Looked for To-day.

New York, Dec. 31.—A London correspondent of an evening paper in a special cablegram says: As regards the placing of a United States loan, I understand that one London bank and several small institutions have agreed to participate in any issue that may be made, and that certain firms on the continent have expressed their willingness to join in. But those who are naturally looked to for support still decline to step forward, and so the negotiations are not likely to make much headway at present.

READY TO SELL BONDS.

No Announcement of an Issue, However, Expected To-day.

Washington, Dec. 31.—It is stated authoritatively that there will be no announcement of a bond issue to-day. There is no reason, however, to change the previous statements that an issue is considered certain in the very near future. There is now no reasonable doubt that another issue has been fully agreed upon, and that the details of a contract with a syndicate of which J. Pierpont Morgan is the head have been arranged, so that nothing remains to be done to carry it into effect but for the secretary of the treasury to sign his name thereto. The president is prepared for any emergency, and should withdrawals of gold for export again set in another issue would be announced. The fact that there have been no withdrawals for export for several days, although sterling exchange has ruled at or above the shipping point, give credence to an opinion held in treasury circles that the market has already begun to feel the syndicate's influence against exports. The amount of the next issue, it is almost certain, has been fixed at $100,000,000, and it is believed that the terms of the contract are rather more favorable to the government than those under which the last issue was made.

Money Hard To Get in Boston.

Boston, Dec. 31.—It was impossible to borrow money here yesterday. The banks would not accept Pullman stock as collateral at 8 per cent. Several banks have applied to the clearing house for certificates. There is a suspicion that money is being hoarded to buy the expected new government bonds.

THE LAW IS VOID.

Railroads Cannot Compel Colored People To Ride in Inferior Cars.

New York, Dec. 31.—In the case of Ella Carry against Samuel Spencer, as receiver, and others, tried before Judge Bartlett in Brooklyn, he has rendered a decision holding that the law of the state of Tennessee, requiring conductors to compel colored persons to ride in an inferior car is void. The plaintiff bought a first-class ticket from New York to Knoxville, and as she passed into the state of Tennessee at about midnight, she was compelled to leave the first-class car with her small children and ride in the "Jim Crow car." The judge awarded $500 damages besides costs against the defendants.

HAD A RAPID CAREER IN LYNN.

Alleged San Francisco Blackmailer Well-Known in the East.

Lynn, Mass., Dec. 31.—Mrs. Mary A. Davidson, arrested for alleged blackmail in San Francisco, had a rapid career in Lynn, in 1880-1-2-3-4, when she conducted a piano agency. She was finally arrested for selling mortgaged property and served one year in the woman's prison at Sherburn. A sensational controversy with a minister and a host of creditors seeking her were other incidents in her Lynn history.

Confirmed by the Senate.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The senate in executive session confirmed the following nominations: Robert S. Chilton, jr., of the District of Columbia, to be chief of the consular bureau of the department of state; Thomas H. Craven, assistant appraiser of merchandise at New York. Postmasters—New Hampshire—R. E. Bean, Franklin; John O'Loughlin, Laconia; W. F. Hardy, Ashland. Vermont—D. C. Spaulding, Morrisville; Oscar McGregor, Richford; C. N. Brady, Newport; E. A. Ayres, Swanton.

Gift for Chicago University.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—Mrs. Elizabeth G. Kelly of this city, who has already endowed the University of Chicago with a woman's dormitory costing $60,000, has decided to erect on the university campus a chapel to cost $100,000 to be known as the Kelly memorial chapel, in memory of her brother.

Binghamton Academy of Science.

Albany, Dec. 31.—The Binghamton Academy of Science of the city of Binghamton has been incorporated with the secretary of state. The objects are to promote scientific study and research.

Meeting of Supervising Inspectors.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Gen. Dumont has issued a call for the annual meeting of the supervising inspectors of steam vessels to convene in Washington January 11, 1896. The meeting will continue for two weeks or more.

CHARGED WITH ARSON.

Benj. Steiner and Mrs. Chapman Committed to Prison.

Philadelphia, Dec. 31. — Benj. F. Steiner and Mrs. Lucy M. Chapman have been committed to prison, without bail, on the charge of setting fire to an apartment house at 212 South Eighth street for the purpose of obtaining $1,000 insurance. Mrs. Chapman conducted a corset manufactory in the place and she induced Steiner to set fire to it. Steiner saturated a mattress with coal oil and set it afire on Friday morning last. The flames were soon extinguished but seventeen inmates of the house who were asleep when the fire started, were forced to make a hasty exit. Steiner was arrested while trying to pawn articles which he is alleged to have stolen, and he made a confession of the arson plot in which he stated that he was to receive $100 of the insurance money. Mrs. Chapman was then arrested. The woman is the divorced wife of "Dr." John Buchanan, who, in 1880, in this city, furnished bogus medical certificates to aspiring "doctors" and whose exploits created a sensation.

NEW BOILERS RECOMMENDED.

The Tubulous Pattern for Cruiser Chicago and Gunboat No. 10.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The naval board on construction has decided to recommend to Secretary Herbert that tubulous boilers be placed in the cruiser Chicago, whose machinery is being replaced, and in gunboat No. 10, now in course of construction by the Crescent works at Camden, N. J. The full complement of the gunboat boilers will be of this type, while those of the Chicago will be of the Scotch, or older kind, and the other half of the tubulous. The board also considered a proposition submitted by the chief constructor to place another conning tower on board the flagship New York for the use of the admiral in action. With the admiral and the commanding officer of the flagship in separate shelters there would be less liability to confusion in orders for the fleet and orders for the flagship coming from the same place.

NOT A SUPERIOR VESSEL.

Report of the Naval Board of Inspection on the Texas.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The report of the naval board of inspection on the result of its trip on the battleship Texas last week has been received at the navy department and it is said that it indicates that the Texas has not proved herself to be a superior vessel. Secretary Herbert declines to say anything about the contents of the report. It is known, however, that the report recommends many changes. In firing the turret guns the hydraulic gear for moving the turrets worked so badly that in one instance it took two hours to discharge the gun. The bottom of the ship was also considerably shaky. It is said at the department that it is not unlikely that the Texas will be placed out of commission and extensive repairs made.

THAT GOLD LOAN STORY.

Consul-General Karol's Report on the Russian Policy.

Washington, Dec. 31.—John Karol, United States consul-general at St. Petersburg, has made a report to the state department which has some interest in connection with the utterly unsupported rumors about Russia having recently tendered gold to the United States. After giving the value of Russian gold currency under a recent adjustment of the Imperial bank, Mr. Karol concludes his communication thus: "I understand that the object of the minister of finance of the Russian empire is to accumulate into the imperial vaults as much gold as possible, with a view of establishing in future the Russian finances on a gold basis."

COREAN KING IN DANGER.

Constantly Surrounded by Japanese Spies—Assassination Feared.

St. Petersburg, Dec. 31.—A dispatch to the Novoye Vremya from Vladivostock says that the situation of affairs in Corea is very serious. The king is constantly surrounded by Japanese spies, as he fears that he will be assassinated. The dispatch also says that the king is guarded nightly by the American missionaries.

NEW YORK MARKETS.

Wheat—Spot prices are higher, checking trade. December, 66¾c.; March, 66⅝c.; May, 66¼c.

Corn—Spot higher, checking trade. December, 34½c.; January, 34½c.; May, 34⅝c.

Oats—Spot is quiet, but held strong. December, 23½c.; January, 23½c.; May, 24¼c.

Pork—Spot firm; demand moderate. Extra prime nominal, short clear, $10.75@$12.25; family, $10.00@$11.00; mess, $9.00@$9.50.

PLAIN TALK IN SENATE

Heated Debate Over Committee Reorganization.

The Trouble Caused by the Free Silver Men Securing Control of Committee on Finance—Review of the Venezuelan Boundary Question by Mr. Lodge.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The reorganization of the senate committees was effected yesterday by the adoption of a resolution offered by Mr. Mitchell, rep., Ore., the vote on which was yeas, 30; nays, 28. The populist senators withheld their votes, with the exception of Mr. Lyle, S. D., who voted with the democrats. The vote was followed by a debate in which Mr. Gorman, dem., Md. gave expression to the regret felt by the senators of his party at losing the control of the senate and in which some plain and heated talking was done on both sides on the subject of giving to the free silver men a majority on the committee of finance. Earlier in the day a historical review of the Venezuelan boundary question was delivered by Mr. Lodge, rep., Mass., who insisted on the importance and necessity to the United States of the maintenance of the Monroe doctrine. In summing up his speech Mr. Lodge said that he did not believe that the people of England had the least desire to engage in hostilities with the United States any more than the United States desired hostilities with England. Nor did he believe that the English people took any very serious interest in the disputed territory. The people of the United States, he asserted, had no desire to interfere with any rightful possession of Great Britain in South America, but they could not allow Great Britain to set up claims to American territory and then seize and hold that territory by force. If Great Britain could do that successfully in Venezuela she could do it in Mexico and Cuba; and if she could do it, other nations could do the same. At 4:30 the senate adjourned till today, when it is intended to have both houses take a recess till Tuesday, January 7.

ALARM IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Women and Children Fleeing from Johannesburg.

Johannesburg, South African Republic, Dec. 31.—The political crisis here, brought about by the efforts of the foreign population to obtain equal political rights with the Boers, has now reached an acute stage. The exodus of women and children is increasing. All trains leaving this place are crowded, and food stuffs have become very dear. War rumors are current, and the government has notified the burghers to be ready for active service in case of an emergency. The Mercantile association has formed itself into a town bodyguard, for the purpose of preserving order and protecting life and property. Its members will not take part in a revolution or riot of any kind, and they have asked the government to supply them with arms and ammunition. Several of the leading mines are expected to close to-day. President Kruger, in an interview with a press representative, expressed regret at the present agitation and said: "If the situation does not improve many disastrous consequences are to be apprehended, especially in mining and commercial enterprises. The present attitude of the Uitlanders does not conduce to calm consideration of their alleged grievances. The government will give them an opportunity for free speech on their grievances, such as does not incite to rebellion, but is fully prepared to accept any movement aiming at a disturbance of law and order."

The Only

Great and thoroughly reliable building-up medicine, nerve tonic, vitalizer and

Blood Purifier

Before the people today, and which stands preeminently above all other medicines, is

HOOD'S Sarsaparilla

It has won its hold upon the hearts of the people by its own absolute intrinsic merit. It is not what we say, but what Hood's Sarsaparilla does that tells the story:—

Hood's Cures

Even when all other preparations and prescriptions fail.

"As a blood purifier we cannot find the equal of Hood's Sarsaparilla. When any of our family complain of headache or tired feeling we get Hood's Sarsaparilla, and in a short time we are in good health." RUTH R. MATHER, 250 Short St., Aurora, Illinois.

(ESTABLISHED 1830.)
Volume CXXXII begins January, 1896
During 1896 Godey's Magazine will contain
TALKS WITH SUCCESSFUL WOMEN
Valuable hints about various branches of industry which are open to women, by women who have succeeded in them.
MUSIC IN AMERICA.
Discussions of musical subjects or people. Illustrated each month with portraits, autographs, and one or more pages of music. This music alone will make a valuable collection. This series of articles is a unique feature among monthly magazines. The papers are interesting to all readers, and are of positive value to those who play and sing.
THE STAGE.
Illustrated articles upon the best and newest plays and the foremost actors, particularly the best American productions. These are much more than gossip of players. They are entertaining discussions of the dramas that are talked about. Such treatment is not found in any other magazine.
ILLUSTRATIONS.
The Magazine will be well and thoroughly illustrated from cover to cover. Competent artists and improved methods of making and printing the plates will be employed.
THE COVERS.
The covers are different every month. They are designed by popular artists, and the covers for a year will be valuable as an art collection in themselves.
THE FASHION DEPARTMENT
which for years has given the latest fads and fashions, is of particular interest to women.
A HOME MAGAZINE.
Godey's is a magazine of this country and of today. It is a family magazine, with a larger scope than it had as the "Lady's Book." It is a monthly feast of wholesome, interesting reading, fit for every member of the household.
In addition to the features mentioned above each number will contain a liberal amount of fiction, by the best writers, articles on subjects of general interest, book reviews, etc.

ARE THEY RETREATING?

Insurgents Said To Have Entered Santa Clara.

A Strong Government Column Starts Out To Intercept Them—A Disastrous Engagement for the Spaniards Near San Luis—Col. Macius' Command Routed.

Madrid, Dec. 31.—A dispatch to the Imparcial from Havana says that the main insurgent army has recrossed the Hanabana river, re-entering the province of Santa Clara at a point a short distance north of the Cienaga Oriental de Zapata. Gen. Marin, in command of a strong force, has started from the city of Santa Clara to intercept them on their retreat eastward.

Joining the Rebels by Hundreds.

Santiago de Cuba, Dec. 20, via Key West, Dec. 31.—Since Lieut.-Gen. Pando began his campaign here the imprisonment of prominent persons of this city has increased considerably. In consequence of this harshness men join the insurgents by hundreds, thus strengthening the Cuban army, which is already large in this region. The Spanish army has lately received a terrible blow. Col. Macias, who left San Luis for Palma Sorrento on Dec. 18, with 900 men, had a disastrous engagement that day between the two towns with the insurgent leaders Demetrio Castillo and Pancho Sanchez, commanding 500 rebels.

Left 40 Killed; 114 Wounded.

The insurgents' attack was so impetuous and they so fiercely used the terrible machete that the Spanish colonel ordered a hasty retreat, leaving on the field forty killed and 114 wounded. The Spaniards also abandoned ten mules laden with provisions and munitions. Seventy Spanish soldiers deserted to the Cubans. The Spanish wounded were cared for by the rebels, whose loss was insignificant. The burning of sugar plantations in this district and Guantanamo is increasing in a most alarming manner, and the planters have abandoned all hopes of grinding sugar cane.

SPANIARDS ON THE RUN.

Campos and His Whole Army Fleeing Before the Rebels.

New York, Dec. 31.—A morning paper to-day publishes the following Havana dispatch dated December 23: The excitement in this city is almost beyond description. For the first time the blind supporters of Spanish rule in the island realize that it is seriously threatened by the revolution. The shock has been most severe as it was expected by those who have faith in the military abilities of Martinez Campos that the moment had arrived when the Cuban forces, if not entirely crushed, would meet with such a sudden check as to demoralize, scatter and send them back flying to Camaguey. Instead of that anticipated result of Gen. Martinez Campos' plans, it is he and his whole army who are flying before the victorious enemy, whose progress seems to find no opposition and no obstacle. It is impossible to ascertain how many times and to what extent the Spaniards have been defeated. The government has so far succeeded in suppressing the news which may have reached Havana.

BLIZZARD IN OHIO.

Worst Storm Since February, 1894. Snow in Other States.

Toledo, O., Dec. 31. — A blizzard rivalling in intensity the snowstorm of February, 1894, when Toledo was snowbound for three days, raged all last night over northwestern Ohio. Street car and railroad traffic is greatly impeded and the prospects are that few trains will get through here to-day.

28 Inches Deep in Indiana.

Bloomington, Ind., Dec. 31. — The worst snowstorm in recent years began yesterday afternoon and last night it became a blizzard. The ground is covered to a depth of twenty-eight inches and railway traffic is greatly interfered with.

Heavy Snowstorm in Illinois.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 31.—The heaviest snowstorm experienced for years is sweeping over the southern part of this state, blocking railroad and other traffic. At Shelbyville, a foot of snow has fallen and at Odin there is eight inches of snow. The storm has also prevailed in parts of Missouri.

Indianapolis Snowbound.

Indianapolis, Dec. 31.—A foot of snow covers the ground here this morning. The storm continues and traffic is almost blocked. The suburban service had to be abandoned practically and most of the incoming trains are late from the same cause.

Physician for Epileptics.

Albany, Dec. 31.—Leon P. Clarke of Naples, Ontario county, has been appointed from the civil service eligible list to be junior assistant physician in the Craig colony for epileptics at Sonyea, Livingston county, at a salary of $1,200 per annum.

Col. Thomas Cluney Dead.

Jamestown, N. Y., Dec. 31.—Col. Thomas Cluney, chief of the Jamestown fire department, died yesterday afternoon, aged 59 years. He was well-known throughout the state. During the war he served in the 49th New York infantry.

An Earthquake Shock Near Vienna.

Vienna, Dec. 31.—A violent shock of earthquake was felt yesterday at Weiner, Neustadt, thirteen miles south of this city.

THE VENEZUELAN COMMISSION.

Justice Brewer Accepts the First Place on It.

Washington, Dec. 31.—Judge Brewer of the United States supreme court has been tendered and has accepted a place on the Venezuelan boundary commission.

David Josiah Brewer was born in Smyrna, Asia Minor, in 1837, and was the son of a missionary. He was educated at Wesleyan university, Connecticut, and at Yale college, where he was graduated in 1856. He studied law in the office of his uncle, David Dudley Field, in New York city and at the Albany law school, and was admitted to the bar in New York city. He finally removed to the west, and began the practice of his profession in Kansas City, Mo., afterwards removing to Leveanworth, Kan. In 1861-64 he served as a United States commissioner; in 1862-65 as judge of probate and judge of the Leavenworth county criminal court; in 1865-69 as judge of the first judicial court of the state, and at the same time was superintendent of public schools. In 1869-70 he filled the office of city attorney, and in 1870 became a judge of the supreme court of Kansas. He was twice re-elected to that position, the term of office being six years. He also filled the office of vice-president, and subsequently that of president, of the state board of education. In 1884, when Judge Brewer had entered upon his third term as supreme court judge, and held the position of chief justice, he was appointed by President Arthur United States circuit judge for the eighth circuit, comprising the states of Arkansas, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri and Nebraska. He was nominated to the supreme court of the United States in 1889.

London Newspaper Comment.

London, Dec. 31.—The Daily News in its issue to-day says that the appointment of Justice Brewer of the United States supreme court as a member of the Venezuelan high commission is a sign that President Cleveland wishes for a fair report to be made.

AGAIN REMANDED.

Preliminary Hearing of the Hyams for Conspiracy To Murder.

Toronto, Dec. 31.—The preliminary investigation in the case of Dallas and Harry Hyams, charged with conspiracy to murder Martha Wells Hyams, wife of Harry Hyams, commenced yesterday before Police Magistrate Denison. Over thirty original telegrams bearing on the case were filed as exhibits, but their contents were not made public. Evidence was also taken on an application made by the prisoners for the insurance on Mrs. Harry Hyams after which the case was adjourned for another week, certain witnesses for the crown having failed to appear. Four charges of forgery were brought against the prisoners, all the cases being alleged to have taken place in April, 1893, and involving in all $3,050. The prisoners pleaded not guilty on all charges and were remanded until January 6.

MUST STAND TRIAL.

Judge Elmer Refused To Quash Indictment Against Olney.

Willimantic, Conn., Dec. 31.—Judge Elmer has filed with the clerk of the Windham county superior court his finding, denying the motion to quash the indictment against Jeremiah Olney, made by defendant's counsel at the October term of court here. Olney, a former state school fund commissioner, was charged with the misappropriation of the funds of the state to his own use. He will probably be tried at the March term of the superior court.

DIVORCE FOR MRS. WEISS.

The New York Woman Wins Against Her Husband's Strong Defense.

Guthrie, O. T., Dec. 31.—Mrs. Isabella Weiss has secured a divorce from Joseph Weiss of New York city, alleging cruelty, neglect, etc. The husband made a strong defense, charging that the wife had arranged to marry Dr. Abram Mayer, a prominent occulist of New York, as soon as divorced, but he had no proof and the case went against him.

Ohio Coal Miners' Troubles Settled.

Columbus, O., Dec. 31.—Late yesterday afternoon the Ohio mine operators adopted a resolution agreeing to pay their employes twice a month in cash, but refusing to abolish the company stores. The miners claim that if stores are allowed at all, employes who do not patronize them will be discharged. The men accepted, however.

Awful Suicide of a Dying Man.

New York, Dec. 31.—Despondent because he was so ill with consumption that his physicians had told him he could not live only a few days longer, Richard Henry Lee Waters, a dentist, 64 years of age, leaped from the front room of his house on Second avenue, yesterday, and falling head first, was almost instantly killed.

Smallpox Epidemic Over.

Martins Ferry, O., Dec. 31.—The smallpox epidemic in this city, Bridgeport and Bellaire is about at an end. The Wheeling quarantine against Bridgeport was removed last night. The situation in the three towns is growing brighter every day.

Blackburn Is Confident.

Louisville, Dec. 31.—Senator Blackburn says there is no doubt of his reelection if the republicans do not capture the house. He says his nomination in the caucus is certain and he has positive assurance of one populist vote.

Abbott and Daly Fight a Draw.

Washington, Dec. 31.—The fight last night between Stanton Abbott of England and Jack Daly of Delaware resulted in a draw in the 37th round.

FIFTY DEATHS A DAY

Turkish Soldiers at Zeitoun Suffering Terribly.

Condition of the Army Everywhere, Except at Constantinople, Deplorable—In Tattered Clothing and Without Sufficient Food—Brigandage from Desertions Feared.

Constantinople, Dec. 31.—The Turkish soldiers who are investing Zeitoun are suffering terribly from the cold. On an average, fifty deaths from exposure occur daily among the troops. The condition of the army everywhere, except that portion of it stationed in Constantinople, is deplorable. The men have not received any pay for months. Their clothing is tattered, and their food is poor and inadequate. The sixty thousand troops serving in Syria are being decimated by disease. Numbers of the reserves are daily deserting, taking their arms and ammunition with them. This means that these deserters will take to brigandage in the near future. All the Christian gendarmes in Asia Minor have resigned owing to the fact that they have not been paid.

UTAH LEGISLATURE.

Bitter Fight Promised Over the Election of U. S. Senators.

Salt Lake, Utah, Dec. 31.—In accordance with the call of Governor-elect Wells the first legislature of the state of Utah will meet on the first Monday after President Cleveland shall have issued the proclamation admitting Utah to the union of the states. The proclamation is expected to issue on Saturday next and the members of the legislature are making arrangements to convene on Monday, Jan. 6. Among the first acts will be the elecion of two United States senators. The house will be composed of forty-five members, of whom thirty-one are republicans and fourteen democrats. The senate has eighteen members, twelve of whom are republicans and six democrats, giving the republicans a majority of forty-three on joint ballot. The most prominent candidates for senators are Col. Isaac Trumbo, George Q. Cannon, Judge C. W. Bennett, Judge Goodwin, attorney C. S. Varian, attorney Arthur Brown and Frank Cannon. The contest is likely to be bitter and prolonged and although the democrats are in a hopeless minority they may hold the balance of power between the opposing forces. If they decide after the first few ballots to give up voting for the two nominees of the democratic party and throw their strength to any particular candidate it would result in settling the contest. Summing up the whole situation, the chances seem to be in favor of George Q. Cannon and Col. Trumbo.

A BARBAROUS CRIME.

Kentucky's Governor So Characterizes the Marion County Lynchings.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 31.—Gov. Bradley was seen at his home and when asked what action he would take in the lynching of William Dever and the cremation of Mrs. T. J. West in Marion county Sunday morning, gave out the following statement: "I regard it as the most outrageous and barbarous crime that was ever committed in Kentucky. I shall spare neither labor, money or force to bring its perpetrators to that punishment which they so richly deserve. I believe that the good people of Marion county and the state at large look with the same horror upon this crime and will not be slow to give me their unflinching support in the execution of the law." Gov. Bradley will offer a reward of $500 for one or all parties concerned.

LADD COMPANY FAILS.

Forced to the Wall in the Face of a Large Holiday Trade.

Providence, R. I., Dec. 31.—The H. W. Ladd company made an assignment late yesterday afternoon to James M. Scott. The Ladd company is widely and favorably known to the people of Providence, the state and to this portion of New England. Ex-Gov. Ladd, the head of the company, gave these figures relating to its financial standing: Assets, $333,497.63; liabilities, $206,005.70. Excess, $126,491.93. The failure, he stated, was forced by a peculiar series of circumstances in the face of the largest holiday trade in the firm's history.

Civil Service Commissioner Resigns

Albany, Dec. 31.—Willard D. McKinstry of Watertown has forwarded his resignation to Gov. Morton as a state civil service commissioner. Mr. McKinstry is a republican and was appointed a civil service commissioner by Gov. Flower. His resignation is to take effect upon his successor qualifying.

France and Russia Offer Aid

No Daily Press tomorrow.

Will it be consolidation, annexation or formation?

Plainfield has prospered materially the last twelve months.

Well, will the balance be on the right side of the ledger tonight?

Happy New Year! The Press wishes this to everyone, whether or not they read The Press.

Again we remark, how nice it would be if we could only start the New Year without the cider joints.

Here is one resolution you can depend on: The Daily Press will be a better newspaper the coming year than ever before.

Have the petty desperadoes hereabouts been froze out, or are they just tired of making lonely pedestrians hair bristle up? At any rate they are non est.

The New York Herald has contributed $10,000 to start to a fund to bring the Democratic National Convention to New York. If New York's invitation comes in chunks of that sort it will be hard to resist.

At the close of the Common Council meeting last night the Republican councilmen who hold over and those who take their seats after January first, closeted themselves in the anteroom and talked of matters other than the weather.

The sad ending of the weary existence of Mary Mack, of Westfield, is a warning to the sweet sixteen girls that they had better wait until the leap year of 1904. Early marriages, and runaways ones at that, are not happy ones as a rule.

The annual report of Street Commissioner Meeker, presented to the Common Council last night, and printed in the Press today, is worthy of the perusal of every citizen, whether or not he is a taxpayer, because every citizen is interested and in favor of good roads. The recommendations inculcated in the report are timely and practical. Good work is being done on the thoroughfares of the city and a continuance of the present policy would bring them to the state of perfection to be desired in a few years. The streets that most need immediate improvement are those in the business section of the city.

Mr. Fisk had obtained the opinion of Foster Crowell, of New York, who is an expert on matters pertaining to streets and the City Clerk read the same. Mr. Crowell had inspected the Plainfield streets and made many suggestions, including the use of asphalt, wide tires and the dividing into four classes the streets for different grades of macadam etc. The report was received and filed.

Mr. Fisk made another motion that $20,000 be fixed as the appropriation for next year's street work. After Mr. Dumont had demonstrated the fact that it would be impracticable to place the amount so high on account of the taxes coming in so slow, also that it would not be advisable to raise the tax rate, the matter was then referred to the Finance Committee. Mr. Fisk moved that when Council adjourn it be to meet Saturday evening January 4th, at 8 o'clock. It was so ordered.

Mr. Dumont offered a resolution that $13,000 be drawn to meet the work on the sewers. The resolution provailed. Mr. Dumont reported on the Madison avenue extension, stating that the report of the Commissioners appointed showed that $16,800 damages were assessed and $2,900 benefits. He thought the figures were out of proportion and moved that it be returned to the Commissioners for correction which was so ordered.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution that notice be given all property owners that they can now connect with the sewers by securing an order from A. J. Gavett. The resolution was adopted.

Another resolution by Mr. Frost was adopted that gives the Sewer Committee power to employ such help as is needed to operate the sewage beds. Council then adjourned.

THE PLUG CAME OUT.

And a Flood of Dirt and Water Flowed Into the Press Room.

The Press employes this morning realized the truth of that line in the topical song which was written "Oh, what a difference in the morning." When the employes of the paper left the office last night the atmosphere inside was all right. It was warm and comfortable. But this morning the mercury in the thermometer was hovering around the freezing point, and everybody was remarking: "My, but isn't it cold." Even the composing room representative of Mephistopheles admitted that it was. This condition affairs was the climax to relegating the North avenue sewer to the past and using the city sewer. It all came about this way:

Sometime ago A. Vanderbeek made a contract with William Addis & Son to make the connection with the new sewer as soon as permission was granted, from the building in which The Daily Press is located. Mr. Addis got the permission at 9:30 o'clock last night and by dint of hard work had the connection made and water running into the new system at 12:15, this being the first connection made. The sewer is tapped from the boiler room of The Daily Press pressroom, and when the connection was broken with the old North avenue sewer, the end of the pipe was stopped up with an old coat, so as to prevent any overflow from the pipe into the building. This would have been all right under ordinary circumstances, but when the heavy rainstorm occurred at two o'clock this morning the water filled the sewer pipe and created such a pressure as to drive the plugging out of the pipe. A five inch stream of water rushed in, and in a half hour the boiler was almost inundated with murky water, and before the stream could be stopped the floor of the pressroom was covered with five inches of a combination of mud and dirty water.

William H. Addis, Jr., was sent for and after a little difficulty stopped the flow. Evan Jones' men were on hand early this morning and pumped the water out of the room, the fire was started in the boiler, warmth brought to the fingers of the reporters and compositors, and now you are reading The Press just as though nothing had happened.

"The Fair Lillian Coming."

The favorite soubrette, Miss Lillian Kennedy, supported by an exceptional strong company, will appear at Stillman Music Hall, for two nights commencing Wednesday, January 8th, in the great play, "She Couldn't Marry Three," with all the original scenic effects, and on the second night will play the great new play, "The Little Rebel." These plays are full of the latest songs, medleys and dances of the day. Notwithstanding that this is an exceptional strong and expensive attraction the prices will be popular, 10, 20 and 30 cents.

HORRIBLE VISIONS.

An Uncharitable Woman's Attitude Towards a Male Boarder.

Visions of jails, blue-coated policemen, dark cells and the like have been haunting the mind of an innocent citizen of this city for the last two days. About three months ago he boarded with a woman on West Third street. His boarding house keeper had purchased her house fittings on the installment plan and as she was not able to keep up the payments, away went the goods. The boarder did not know that, however, and came to the house one night to find it locked. He spent the night with friends and in the morning found a note directing him to enter through the window and get his property, which he did. Coming out he found a package of pawn tickets on the floor and picked them up. After several days he sent them through Constable Mattox to the exboarding house mistress. She promptly threatened to have him arrested for stealing them. The matter was dropped until yesterday, when one of the police force notified the man that he might prepare to go to jail. And now the sight of an officer sends a cold chill down his back.

A bowling match between the Y. M. C. A. five-team and a similar one from the Crescent's has been arranged for Thursday evening.

The Plainfield Catholic Club bowlers will roll their next game against the T. A. B.'s of Newark, next Monday evening, on the latter's alleys.

While the Park Club holds the high score for Plainfield, last evening, on the Park Club alleys Mrs. Charles A. Reed made a record for her sex. Bowling against William M. Mc Cutchen, the holder of the high score, she defeated him three times with scores of 217, 206, and 180, making an average of 201 for the three games.

The bowling tournament of the Diocesan Union is now half completed and the Catholic Club, of Jersey City, is in the lead with five victories. Four out of the five games have been played at home, and so they may be expected to lose somewhat during the next half. The Plainfield Catholic Club bowlers have also played four out of their five games at home, and will have to bowl well to hold their own. The Orange Valleys have been away most of their games and may be expected to show up strongly in the next half.

VARIOUS SPORTS.

The college sports have always been governed by a parent body, and it seems but right that the scholastic athletes should also have some regularly organized governing body. The movement, which first took definite shape Saturday in the organization of the National Interscholastic Athletic Association, promises to be a far reaching one. The Plainfield High School, since the organization of its athletic association four years ago, have gradually taken a high place in athletics. At the meeting of the National Association, Saturday, it was decided that only associations of at least two clubs could join, so the New Jersey Interscholastic Association was organized, composed of the Plainfield High School and the Stevens Preparatory School. The delegates were then admitted to the convention, George Proctor Smith representing the High School. When the committee to draw up a constitution was appointed, Plainfield was recognized in the appointment of G. P. Smith on that committee. New Jersey, and incidentally Plainfield, was remembered in the election of officers when G. P. Smith was placed on the executive committee. The duties of that committee are to sanction all scholastic meets, receive applications, decide protests, and last, but not least, arrange for the National Interscholastic meet which is to be held at New York on June 27th. Each association will hold a field day, and the best in these will meet in five sectional field games. The first and second in these will be the contestants in the National meet. A meeting of the New Jersey I. S. A., will be held in this city about the middle of next month for complete organization.

WHIST.

Nine successive victories and only one defeat, but that defeat lost the New Jersey Challenge Whist trophy for the Park Club. The team from the Orange Whist Club, composed of Messrs. Lethbridge, Hirshgeld, Herring and Otis, came to this city last evening and met the heretofore victorious Park Club team, which is composed of Messrs. McCutchen, Rogers, Howell and Reed. But the Parks had met their masters, and were defeated by a score of 20 to 14. They took their defeat gracefully, however, and assisted the Orange players to wrap up the trophy so that it might return to Orange with them. The first round was the one in which the visitors gained their lead of nine points, and that was too much to be over come. While the visitors were resting after their victory, and enjoying the sandwiches and coffee which were served, a challenge was immediately written by George T. Rogers, of the Park Club, for another try. The challenges of the Elizabeth and Montclair Whist clubs are already waiting and must be played off before the Park Club is met again. Of course there is a fair chance of either of the challenging clubs capturing the trophy from Orange.

BASKET BALL.

Two games of basket ball will be played at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium on New Year's Day. In the afternoon the Junior teams from Plainfield and North Plainfield will contest, while in evening the High School team will meet the Spartans.

Physical Director D. A. MacPhie received a challenge yesterday morning from the basket ball team of the Twenty-sixth ward branch of the Brooklyn Y. M. C. A. for a game to be played on Saturday evening, January 25th. It will probably be accepted.

HER OPPORTUNITY.

I had known her since June.
I had learned to love her dear.
I was going to ask her soon,
I—but time had flown too fast.
For she did it—it was leap year.

Noble Grand Hicks.

There was an unusually large attendance at the meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., when the election was held last evening. It resulted as follows: Noble grand, D. P. Hicks; vice grand, L. DeCamp; recording secretary, Richard Neal; permanent secretary, H. H. Hoffman; treasurer, J. P. Allis.

Ask Central for the Weather.

Manager Charles Runyon, of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, has made arrangements whereby he will receive official weather reports three times a day—morning, noon and at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Subscribers will therefore be able to get the indications at any time by calling up the central office.

Not Sufficient Evidence.

Justice Newcorn held a hearing yesterday afternoon in the case of Daniel Schenck against H. M. Staats, charged with stealing wood belonging to Irving Smally. There was not sufficient evidence to hold Staats and accordingly the case was dismissed.

A Valuable Horse Dead.

The valuable trotter of August Trust, of Somerset street, died yesterday afternoon. He slipped on the car track several months ago and had never recovered from his injury. His owner killed him to put him out of suffering.

Santy's Soliloquy.

"Right here I'll pause," said Santa Claus,
A glow of warmth his face revealing,
"No chill is here, but heat and cheer,
To give a guest a welcome feeling."
A card he spied, he cutely eyed the same,
While came a smile's renewal,
"The reason's clear, this tenant here
Of George O. Stevens buys his fuel."

THEATRICAL.

The attraction at the Stillman Music Hall, New Year's night will be the great comedy drama success "Temptation of Money," by Alma Earle and Willis E. Boyer. It is a play of today and is said to contain more interest than the average melodrama, and is spoken of by some excellent critics, as being an exceptionally fine production. The management has endeavored to make "Temptation of Money" an artistic, as well as a financial success and they have succeeded admirably. The story is very interesting and has been dramatized in a most effective manner. The piece abounds with plenty of comedy, new music and clever specialties. The cast is an excellent one, headed by the favorite little soubrette, Alma Earle.

Not even the villian was killed in Music Hall last night. This is a novelty in melo-drama, and "The Cotton King" would be good if it had nothing else to commend itself to the audience. But inasmuch as it had some good actors, realistic scenery and an interesting plot, it may be said to have been a good show for those who like the melo in histrionic efforts. And judging from the applause that descended from above, there was lots of people there who thought it was all right. In fact, it was a pretty good show.

Odd Fellows Elect.

Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., held an election of officers last evening which resulted as follows: Noble grand, W. Williams; vice-grand, Henry Nitchwitz; recording secretary, J. F. Shepard; permanent secretary, Elias H. Bird; treasurer, James Clarkson. The other officers will be appointed next week. They will be installed early in January.

ABOUT DIAMOND DRUNKARDS.

People Who Become Infatuated With the Scintillating White Stones.

"Do you know that there are thousands of men and women in this country who are victims of the diamond habit? They are known in professional circles as 'diamond inebrietes.'

"You will find them bargaining in the shops of the fashionable jeweler. Outside, others, with pinched faces and cheap clothes, crowd about the show windows and feast their eyes on the diamonds displayed behind the glass. Let one of these drunkards get possession of a valuable stone and he will sacrifice almost all of his earthly possessions before he will part with it.

"I've known actors, athletes and gamblers to positively suffer for the lack of food when big diamond studs adorned their shirt fronts. The men are as bad, if not worse, than the women in this respect. I knew a broken down actor of the old school. In his day he acquired the diamond habit and invested the bulk of his earnings in diamonds and emeralds. When the dark days came, he was forced to part with his expensive collection. A year ago all that was left to him was one choice solitaire, worth at the lowest estimate close on to $2,000.

"I have seen times in the last six months when that man has lived on one cheap meal a day, but the beautiful stud still adorns his weather stained bosom. Every day he saunters up Broadway, stopping for 20 minutes or more before the windows of the diamond shops that line the way. His only amusement is to make a mental inventory of the stones displayed and his own. If the result proves satisfactory, a gleam of triumph kindles in the eye, and he moves on with a springy step and a light heart. If, on the other hand, his diamond fails to compare favorably with its rivals, he heaves a sigh and shambles off with the air of a thoroughly broken man."—Jewelers' Review.

ITS NAME IS NAMELESS.

How a Georgia Town Came to Get Its Queer Title.

J. R. Shepard, a prominent citizen of Nameless, Laurens county, Ga., was in the city yesterday, and while here told how his town got its queer name.

"After the postoffice authorities at Washington decided to give us a postoffice," said Mr. Shepard, "the question of naming it arose. I had interested myself in getting the office, and, therefore, it was by common consent left to me to suggest a name to the authorities. Accordingly I sent on a name that I thought was a beauty, and while awaiting a reply I pictured how some day that same name would be known all over the country and that the town would grow and blossom as a rose, for I believe that there is much in a name. Finally the answer came back that, while the name I had suggested was a good one, it was too similar to another postoffice in Georgia.

"Then I put my brain to work on another name. I just knew they would accept it, but the same answer came back as before. Still another and another name was sent, and each time the authorities would write back that there was either another postoffice in the state by that name or that it was so much like some other name that if it was adopted there would be confusion in the mails. At last I sat down and wrote out a list of several hundred names and told them if they could not find one in the list to suit them the office would remain nameless, for I had suggested every name I had ever heard of. In due time the answer came back. 'Let it remain Nameless,' and ever since then it has had that name, which, while a little odd, is not such a bad name after all."—Macon (Ga.) Telegraph.

The Honeybird.

The honeybird, of which we saw several during our travels in Somali land, is well worthy of mention as a natural curiosity. It is a little gray common looking bird about the size of a thrush. It first forces itself upon the notice of the traveler by flying across his path, uttering a shrill, unlovely cry. It will then sit on a neighboring tree, still calling and waiting for him to follow. By short, rapid flights the bird will lead its guest on and on till after awhile the traveler notices that the bird has stopped its onward course and is hanging about among a certain half dozen trees. These being visited one after another and carefully examined, the search will be rewarded by finding a nest of bees in one of them. The probability is that there will be honey in it, but I have known the bird mistaken. It is a matter of honor with the natives to set aside a good portion of honey for the bird. Although this action of the honeybird is an established fact of natural history, it is none the less unaccountable, and it would be interesting to know whether he ever tries to entice quadrupeds also to assist him in obtaining his much loved honey.—

DYSPEPSIA THE CHIEF CAUSE OF CONSUMPTION.

Facts With Which Few Are Familiar.

Dyspepsia or ordinary indigestion is seldom regarded as a dangerous disease, yet doctors now realize that any disturbance of the digestive function is but a stepping stone to the most dangerous and fatal of all diseases—dread consumption.

This appears very clear when we consider that consumption, as the name implies, is but a consuming of the body's substance. Weakness and emaciation naturally result.

The body of a person who does not properly digest food undergoes wasting, and you may safely assume that every pale, thin person of your acquaintance is not properly digesting and absorbing food. In other words, the substance of the body is being consumed and when the cough puts in an appearance they will be regarded as consumptives.

The symptoms of consumption and those arising from certain forms of indigestion are practical identical. Therefore don't despair even if you think your lungs may be affected. First try to repair your stomach and put it in order. This is best done by a very harmless though very ingenious remedy—the Shaker Digestive Cordial.

This product, prepared by the Shakers of Mount Lebanon, aids the digestion of food in the stomach, and when food is once digested, it is quickly absorbed.

If you are dyspeptic, don't wait until some more dangerous disease has appeared. Correct the trouble at once.

A single 10 cent bottle of Shaker Digestive Cordial will be sufficient to convince you of its merit, and its continued use is almost certain to effect a cure. All drugggists keep it and can supply you with an interesting descriptive pamphlet.

Coughing irritates the delicate organs and aggravates the disease. Instead of waiting, try One Minute Cough Cure. It helps at once, making expectoration easy, reduces the soreness and inflamation. Every one likes it. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St

Nothing Like It.

Time brings many changes, but the climate of California, "The Italy of America," and the attractions of the many famous health and pleasure resorts, are the same yesterday, today and forever.

Tourists never will tire of speaking in praise of the soft and balmy air, the profusion of flowers, the magnificent display of fruits, the luxury of seabathing and the beautiful walks and drives.

Then, too, it must be conceded that with such excellent equipment, consisting of Reclining Chair Cars, Pullman Palace Sleepers and Pullman Dining Cars, all heated by steam and lighted with Pintsch Light, the Union Pacific, "The Overland Route," is the tourists favorite. Ask your agent for tickets via this route.

A loud ring of your doorbell in the dead hours of night is alarming. So is the first hollow sound of a cough from one's husband, wife, son or daughter. It is disease knocking, with perhaps a certain silent visitor waiting not far away. Arrest that cough. Stop it. Stop it at the start. A few day's use of Ely's Pineola Balsam and the danger is past. Relief is immediate; a cure certain. This remedy is rich in the curative principles of the balsams and also contains certain ingredients that are new.

If suffering with piles, it will interest you to know that DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve will cure them. This medicine is a specific for all complaints of this character, and if instructions (which are simple) are carried out, a cure will result. We have tested this in numerous cases, and always with like results. It never fails. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front st.

Keeping Clean

As Far as One's Person is Concerned, is Easy Enough - -

Keeping one's clothes clean is quite a different matter. The most careful man will accumulate grease spots—they're a mysterious sort of thing, as to their coming. They leave just as mysteriously when we clean your your suit. We take them out, and those particular spots stay out—a whisk broom, a sponge and a hot iron will make a grease spot disappear—that's not the way we do it. We get 'em out by the roots, so to speak. When your suit needs dyeing, we do that too. Maybe give it a color that you'll like better than the old one. We do either sort of work, very reasonably.

Laundry drivers will receive your bundle.

MR. LITTLE'S STORY INSPIRES CONFIDENCE.

Munyon's Dyspepsia and Stomach Remedy Cured Him Completely — Equally Successful Cures for Rheumatism, Catarrh, Kidney, Blood and Nerve Diseases—At All Druggists 25 Cents a Bottle.

Mr. P. M. Little, New Waterford, O., says: "Two years ago I was attacked by typhoid fever, which left me with a very distressing form of stomach trouble. I also had irritation of the kidneys and spine, and enlargement of the spleen. My stomach was so weak that all I could take was toast bread, rolled oats and milk, and even this caused intense suffering in the stomach and bowels from the food not digesting. Two prominent physicians treated me without giving relief, and I was ready to give up in despair, when a friend advised Munyon's Remedies, saying he had been cured by Munyon's Kidney Cure. I obtained Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure, Nerve Cure and Kidney Cure, and in three weeks after beginning this treatment I was able to eat without suffering from indigestion and by continuing a short time longer I was entirely cured of all my troubles."

Munyon's Dyspepsia Cure is guaranteed to cure all forms of indigestion and stomach troubles. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Kidney Cure speedily cures pains in the back, loins or groins, and all forms of kidney disease. Price, 25c.

Munyon's Vitalizer restores lost powers to weak men. Price, $1.00.

Munyon's Remedies are absolutely harmless and effect positive and permanent cures. A separate specific for each disease. At all druggists, mostly at 25c a bottle.

Matildy Perkins' Opinions

By GERTRUDE F. LYNCH.

[Copyright, 1894, by American Press Association.]

CHAPTER III

A few months elapsed; then the white house at the foot of the hill was reopened. Matildy Perkins had returned.

Once more she resumed her forfeited position, took charge of Dorcas meetings and quilting bees and became as before the advisor and confidante of young and old. If there was an added line of anxiety or despair on her countenance, no one noticed it, so profuse had nature been in that respect. There was a stern dignity in her bearing which prevented the officious inquiries of her neighbors from being too closely pursued. That she had failed was evident, but the details of her failure, the long dreary days among a people who seemed an alien tribe, so different were they from the bright remembrances of her childhood and her own personality. The little stuffy room and the ill cooked food, which was all her meager capital could furnish, the sense of bewilderment which never forsook her day or night, the shock she had received at the news of the death of her benefactress, and, above all, the longing for her village home, where every face was familiar and friendly—all this was locked securely in her own breast.

Little time, however, was left her for lamenting. The realities of existence faced her. The little farm, which in her father's lifetime had furnished them by his unceasing efforts with a scanty sustenance, now lay barren and unproductive. The only thing she could do was to dispose of the land at a sacrifice, which she did, and with the meager sum obtained lived on frugally while she weighed plan after plan for earning her daily bread To go about from house to house sewing, nursing, etc., was repugnant to her. She hated to place herself in a position of dependence to those who were her inferiors, but she must live, and day after day she sat with hands stightly clasped waiting for inspiration.

One morning, with a smile of satisfaction, she hung a huge square of white pasteboard outside her front room window. On it was printed in legible characters:

OPINIONS BY MATILDY PERKINS.
10 cents.

Soon after an excited group of neighbors gathered on Mrs. Stoddard's front doorstep to discuss its advent. After a season of fruitless conjecture Mrs. Stoddard volunteered to investigate in person.

"She'll never tell yer," hazarded one skeptic. "Yer know she's so sort o' queer about tellin things."

"Waal, I guess," said Mrs. Stoddard aggressively, "thet I ain't skeered at a 'no,' an, what's more, I don't believe she'll be so all fired mean as to hang that air sign out and then refuse to splain its meanin."

Accordingly Mrs. Stoddard hurried down to the foot of the hill and rapped at Matildy's door. Matildy, having seen the conclave, knew that the moment of explanation had come.

Her air of dignity and laconic "Mornin, Miss Stoddard" rather awed her interlocutor, but the thought of the party she represented moved her to a new trial. After a little pause she commenced, "I thought I'd like to know, Matildy, what thet air sign means?" pointing as she spoke to the flapping pasteboard. Matildy's thin lips tightened, then unclosed abruptly. "I've come to the conclusion, Miss Stoddard," she said, "thet ef my opinions is wuth askin for they're wuth a-payin for. Ten cents won't break no bones, an you know as well as I know thet for years ef anybody's got inter any muss or mess they've jes put on his'n or her hat or bonnet an run right over to me, an I've done by 'em to the best of my ability. Now times is changed. I've got to get my bread an butter, an I guess thet's as good a way's any. Leastwise I'm goin to try it, an ef yer ever want my advice you can get it for 10 cents."

Matildy's thin lips tightened.

Mrs. Stoddard was staggered for a moment by this harangue, but recovered rapidly.

"Do yer mean to say, Matildy Perkins, thet ef a neighbor came in to ask yer for a little friendly advice thet ye'd charge fur it?"

"Thet's jes' what I mean, Miss Stoddard. Ef I ask anybody fur anything, I expect to pay 'em fur it, an thet's what I want done ter me."

Mrs. Stoddard took her way back with excited talk and gesture. "I s'pose thet's what she learned in Bostin," she ended, after the dialogue had been duly rehearsed. "I've heerd said thet yer see an hear strange sort o' things there, an I guess it's so ef that's a sample."

"She'll wait a long time before she'll get my money," said another.

"Mine neither," was ejaculated on all sides.

For days nothing was spoken of over hoe and rake and across currant bushes and dilapidated rails but Matildy Perkins' opinions. For days Matildy sat in her scantily furnished sitting room waiting for possible customers who never came, they being for the most part engaged in querulous dissertations upon her rapacity and egotism.

Suddenly one night Johnny Brown was taken with the croup. Matildy was near at hand, the doctor far, and Matildy had already brought him through the measles and whooping cough. Mrs. Brown hesitated but a moment. She had been Matildy's most bitter opponent in this new venture, but motherly love carried the day, and Matildy was summoned.

Thus the first step was taken, and the rest was easy. Soon after Johnny's convalescence came preserves and pickling time, and her recipes were in constant requisition. Then came the question of winter cloaks and hats. Her taste was constantly required. She had been to "Bostin." That, in her neighbors' eyes, was the open sesame to all knowledge and all experience.

Pretty soon it became evident in the village that nothing could be done without the sanction of Matildy's opinions. Best rooms were furnished, children doctored, Dorcas societies planned, carried on and entertained under her supervision. It was so much easier when a difficulty presented itself to take the requisite 10 cents or its equivalent in "garden sass" to Matildy's and have the question settled decisively than to oscillate hour after hour on the horns of a dilemma.

Matildy bore her honors meekly. The failure of her life's ambition had been great enough to lessen all subsequent successes. She realized and appreciated the trust that was reposed in her and never took an undue advantage of her position.

CHAPTER IV.

No priest of the Roman Catholic faith, restrained by the vows of silence which protect the confessional, could have more zealously guarded the secrets entrusted to him than did Matildy. Many a time she was perplexed by the inquiries of her customers, but her native wit and shrewdness stood her in good stead, while her natural sympathy and practical experience made up all deficiencies. An answer was always ready, though no one but herself knew how wide from the mark she often came or how much more easily the question might have been settled without her assistance. Her two visits to Boston, the experience and knowledge of life she was supposed to have acquired and the mystery surrounding her reappearance in the village were the foundations of her success.

In her sitting room hung a motto outlined and worked with care by her busy fingers. The glazed white surface formed a striking background to the neat black text, irregular in form, but showing extreme care in the precise details of the work. "Semper Parratus"—"It's Latin, yer know," she explained to her curious visitors, "an it means, 'Always here.' Nobody talks that language now. Yer only see it in copy books an in the city stores." "The city" was always pronounced with a slight elevation of the head, at which her audience was always duly impressed.

This slight addition to her furniture greatly increased the reputation she had already secured for progress and the adoption of new ideas.

By and by her fame spread. Visitors came from neighboring towns to see the quaint woman whose originality piqued their curiosity and oftimes, half in jest, half in earnest, would ask her opinion in love matters or other equally important topics. Little by little she bought back the land she had been forced to dispose of, hired an indigent neighbor to look after her farm with his own and commenced to lay by for a possible rainy day.

In spite of her success, however, she was not happy. She was alone in the world, without kith or kin, her present unenlightened by the domestic joys so dear to the feminine heart, her future uncertain. At any moment a new prophet might arise and dispossess her.

Her fear was born of humility. Scarcely a household in the village but regarded her with affection and gratitude, scarcely a family but owed her what money could not repay. Sickness, sorrow and disgrace were all brought to her and relieved by her womanly care.

Across the meadow which separated the two farms was the home of Daniel Macquirk. He had never visited her since the eve of her new departure. He had resented her independence and spirit, had sneered unfeelingly at her pasteboard sign and been exasperated at her success. He had even in the bitterness of his scorn printed a sign, which on second thoughts had been destroyed, stating that Daniel Macquirk's opinions could be obtained free. He never omitted an opportunity of ridiculing her and was angered that his ridicule only acted as an incentive to the faith of the credulous.

Of his animosity Matildy was not ignorant, but for a time she treated it as the necessary accompaniment of success. By and by she attempted to soften his unreasonable displeasure, all to no purpose. Finally she recognized the futility of her efforts, and irritated by her failure assumed a like demeanor. Many a bitter word was spoken back and forth until at last they eyed each other hostilely and passed by without uttering a syllable of greeting.

Like her, he was alone in the world, a hardworking New England farmer, with the bitter prejudices and deep feelings of his class. In their hearts they would like the old relations to be restored, so like were they in loneliness, so near in situation.

After her father's death he had braced himself to the point of asking her to be his wife, but the coldness of his reception and the preparations for departure showed him conclusively how little thought she had given to the matter so important to him.

thinness

The diseases of thinness are scrofula in children, consumption in grown people, poverty of blood in either. They thrive on leanness. Fat is the best means of overcoming them. Everybody knows cod-liver oil makes the healthiest fat.

In Scott's Emulsion of cod-liver oil the taste is hidden, the oil is digested, it is ready to make fat.

When you ask for Scott's Emulsion and your druggist gives you a package in a salmon-colored wrapper with the picture of the man and fish on it—you can trust that man!

About a Tea Country.

Since the recent war between China and Japan, the interest in the latter country has greatly increased among the people of this country. A very interesting lecture was given on the "Island Kingdom" last evening at the Y. M. C. A. hall. It was the third entertainment in the Y. M. C. A. star course and was attended by a fair sized audience of members and their friends. The lecture dealt more especially with old Japan and was handsomely illustrated with stereopticon views. The stereopticon was under the management of the Plainfield Camera Club.

City Court News.

There were two prisoners in the City Court this morning. James Ward was charged with being drunk on Front street yesterday. Sentence was suspended. David Thompson, for being drunk and disorderly, paid a fine of $5 in preference to going to jail for twenty days.

Emancipation Anniversary.

The thirty-third anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's emancipation proclamation will be celebrated at Bethel chapel with appropriate ceremonies next Thursday evening. The public are invited. Rev. W. A. Alexander will deliver the address.

A Short Shutdown.

The Potter Press works expect to shut down for sometime during the holidays to place new machinery in position, make necessary alterations on shafting, repair boiler and engine, take inventory of stock and make other repairs to the shop.

Skating Afterwards.

A business meeting of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church will be held Friday evening after which a social will be held. If there is any skating at that time, those attending are requested to bring their skates.

Funeral of a Railroad Victim.

The funeral of Louis B. Menger, the man who was fatally injured on the Central New Jersey railroad last week, took place this morning at the home of his son-in-law, Mr. Dabriskie, of East Fifth street.

Damage to Wires.

The linemen of the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company were at work early this morning repairing the wires broken in last night's storm. The Postal telegraph men were also on hand.

Officers to be Installed.

The Independent Fife and Drum Corps will meet this evening to install the newly elected officers. The invitation of the Columbia Fife and Drum Corps of Perth Amboy for their dance tomorrow evening was not accepted.

A Clothesline Robbery.

The clothesline in the yard of John Fellows, of Putnam avenue, was quietly cleaned of all its load by some unknown thief last evening. There is no clue to the thief.

EARLY INTELLIGENCE.

—All the drug stores will be closed tomorrow afternoon from 1 until 6 o'clock.

—The W. T. A. S. will hold a sewing bee in Reform Hall Thursday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

—A meeting of the Christian Alliance will be held this evening in the W. C. T. U. rooms.

—There will be "Sylvester Feier" tonight at 8 o'clock in St. Peter's German Lutheran church on Grove street.

—The Woman's Foreign Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will meet at 829 Park avenue, Tuesday afternoon, Jan. 7th, at which time a Plainfield woman will read a paper on India.

—A large flagpole standing on Somerset street near Greenbrook road was broken off this morning by the heavy winds, causing it to fall across the electric light wires near by. It should be looked after at once before an accident occurs.

—A social entertainment was provided for the sewing school at Reform Hall Saturday afternoon. Singing and recitations were rendered by the scholars, after which lemonade and cake was served to all. As they were dismissed a stocking full of candy was given each scholar. The school meets every Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock, instead of 3, as formerly.

Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Couenhoven, of Jersey City, will spend New Year's Day at the home of Mrs. Couenhoven's brother, J. H. Leggett, of West Front street.

While practicing the running high jump at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium yesterday Wilbur F. Cornwell, '96, of the High School, cleared the bar at five feet.

One Minute Cough Cure is rightly named. It affords instant relief from suffering when afflicted with a severe cough or cold. It acts on the throat, bronchial tubes, and lungs and never fails to give immediate relief. L. W. Randolph, 143 W. Front St.

CHASE OF THE BUFFALO.

How the Indians Brought Down the Big Game With Arrows.

The chase of the buffalo was the Indian's chief amusement as well as one of his means of livelihood and was carried on usually on horseback, formerly with bow and lance, latterly with rifle also. In this exercise they became wonderfully expert. Mounted upon his strong, fleet "Indian pony," well trained for the chase, he dashed off at full speed among the herd and discharged his deadly arrows into their heart from his horse's back. This horse was the fleetest animal of the prairie and easily brought his rider alongside of his game. Both the horse and the rider had been stripped beforehand of everything—shield, quiver, dress and saddle—which might in the least incumber or handicap the horse for speed, the Indian carrying only bow and quiver, with half a dozen arrows drawn from it and held lightly and loosely in his left hand, ready for instant use. With a trained horse the Indian rider had little use for the line, which was fastened around the horse's neck with a noose around the under jaw, falling loosely over the horse's neck and trailing behind, passing to the left side of the rider. This was used for a great variety of purposes—to stop, to guide, to secure the animal, to throw him and bind him when down. All this the Indians did with great skill.

The approach was made upon the right side of the game, the arrow being thrown to the left the instant the horse was passing the animal's heart or some vital organ, which received the deadly weapon "to the feather." In fact, Indians have been known to send their arrows with such force as to drive them completely through the buffalo.

The Indian generally rode close in the rear of the herd until he had selected the animal he wished to kill. He then separated it from the throng by watching for a favorable opportunity, and, dashing his horse between, forcing it off by itself and killing it, thus avoiding the danger of being trampled to death, as he was liable to be if operating within the massed herd.—General N. A. Miles in North American Review.

SWEARING IN THE NAVY.

Some Old Heroes Renowned For Their Command of Strong Language.

How the army swore in Flanders is historic, and the profanity of some old salts of high rank in the United States navy is proverbial throughout the service. Once a month at muster on a Sunday, when the articles of war are read, the youngsters grin to hear the eloquent denunciation of profane swearing as conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. The younger men of commanding rank are less given to strange oaths than a few crusted old fellows some grades higher. A subordinate now and then surprises such a superior by making complaint by communication to the department touching specific instances of the habit, but even a reprimand from the highest source cannot break up the manners of a lifetime, and nobody expects permanent amendment in the case of the men 40 years in the service.

There are amazing stories of the language commonly used by grizzled heroes, often the idols of the navy. One venerable officer with a wife and a family of daughters is famous for his seemingly inadvertent lapses into the most sulphurous oaths at his own table and in the presence of guests. The stranger first hearing it catches his breath with astonishment, but the ladies have learned to hear without seeming to understand. As these outbursts occur in the old gentleman's blandest moments they come with the additional shock of the unexpected.

There is a story in the service of the way in which a renowned admiral received a young officer's suit for the hand of the old sea dog's daughter. Just what the old gentleman said may not be set down here, but it was a brutally profane and insulting outburst. The youngster had tact fitted to the occasion, for, instead of flinching or speaking the old man fair, he replied with equal profanity and won his future father-in-law's heart and consent in the same instant.—New York Sun.

St. Columba.

On one occasion the saint blessed a knife so that it never could hurt any creature afterward. His blessing produced exactly the opposite effect on a stake. A very poor peasant brought it at the saint's bidding. St. Columba sharpened it with his own hand and then blessed it. "Keep it," he said. "It will hurt neither man nor beast, only wild animals and fish. So long as you keep it you will never lack flesh food." The peasant fastened it in the ground, and the very next day found a very fine stag impaled. Not a day passed without some wild creature being thus captured. The wife was frightened. "Some one will get hurt," she said. "Then we shall be either killed or sold as slaves." The peasant removed it and laid it by in his house. The next day his dog was killed by it. He put it in the river and found a marvelously big salmon on it. The next place was on the roof, where it proved fatal to a crow. Persuaded by his wife—"per sociam, ut Adam," says the biographer—he cut it up and burned it and was as poor as ever all the rest of his life.—London Spectator.

Derivation of "Electricity."

There is something strange and weird, when one comes to think of it, in the familiarity and commonness of so ancient a rosin, the indurated gum of mighty forest trees that flourished and fell ages before man had set foot upon this planet. How little we think, when we put the mouthpiece of the matutinal pipe to our lips, that the amber which forms it exuded drop by drop 1,000,000 years back from the stems of great pines in a world whose very shores and seas are now forgotten. The plants which composed those vast woodlands where the Baltic now stretches have been driven southward long since by the slow coming on of that secular chill in the world's dotage which we call the glacial epoch.

Of the pine which chiefly yielded amber not a single specimen now survives on our earth, and even the great Wellingtonias, which towered over the rest, have dwindled away in our own time to two solitary and dying groves in the uplands of California. The trunks themselves are gone or reduced to lignite, but the gum that flowed from them in such strange abundance is still a common object of commerce the world over and familiar in our mouths as the pipe it holds there. Nay, more. It has supplied our language with a whole group of words—"electric" and "electricity" and "electrotype" and so forth—and in all probability it has given us the sole clew without which we might never have possessed the telegraph and the telephone or the unknown wonders of the next generation.—Cornhill Magazine.

Not Born Precisely There.

The precocious frankness and simplicity of a class of 6-year-olds has been forcibly impressed upon one of the teachers in the new Blaine school at Thirteenth and Norris streets during the past few days. Preparatory to opening the school the children are being registered, and their answers to the questions put to them are often quite ludicrous. One of the teachers asked a youngster what was his father's name.

"Baxter," was the reply.

"What is his full name?"

"Mr. Baxter," said the boy.

"No, no," the teacher continued rather impatiently. "What is his first name?"

A gleam of comprehension brightened the lad's face, and he blurted out:

"Ma calls him 'Bill.'"

In order to determine another little fellow's place of nativity he was asked:

"Were you born here?"

With all seriousness he responded:

"Nome. I was borned on Tyler street."—Philadelphia Record.

An Encourager.

"My cake is dough," complained the dejected husband.

"Well," responded his energetic wife, "all cake is more or less dough. All you need is to brace up and cook it."—Detroit Free Press.

Social Equality Rules.

Whenever men are remanded to a situation where personal worth has sway, social equality reappears among them. In danger of any kind, in times of great hardship, in periods of struggle or suspense, in moments of patriotic emotion, equality again characterizes life, and one man is as good as another. In new countries, where people live in the need of neighborhood and kindliness, equality is the rule; they laugh at the notion of anything else. That is the reason why equality was so long the ideal of America, for here we were everywhere emancipated from the old classifications by the necessity which knows no etiquette. We were forced to simplify ourselves. The new world, while it was new, had no use for the distinctions and differences of an older civility, and the easterner, even now, when he goes west finds a whole section incredulous of claims which his own sophistication has admitted.—From "Equality as the Basis of Good Society," by W. D. Howells, in Century.
